Cairo, Sept. 19 (AP) — Allied bombers attacked a 2,000-ton merchant vessel in the central Mediterranean Thursday, bringing it to a halt with a heavy port list, and the same night torpedo-carrying planes scored hits on one large ship and smaller vessels off Tobruk, a communique said today.

On the El Alamein desert front the only activity yesterday was that of patrols and artillery gunners. Air activity over the desert was reported on a "small scale."

Letter To The Editor

To the Editor of The Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir,—

I have looked in vain through our paper to find an expression of opinion by someone who is sufficiently concerned in our city management anent the proposal to reduce the number of Aldermen. It is a sad reflection on our system of democratic government that it does not inculcate in us a greater interest in what it is supposed to be doing on our behalf and at our expense. Surely no private enterprise, no matter how extensive is in any way as top heavy as our various governing bodies are and especially today, when it becomes essential to effect every form of economy. The reduction of Aldermen and other civic officials might well be considered. Of course this would mean that fewer men would draw the extra $5.00 for an evening's entertainment, but considering that this money comes out of the ratepayers' pockets, I do not think that many of us would mind so very much. One of our ablest jurists expressed it well when he stated that an ideal committee was one that consisted of two members with one of them at home sick.

Reliance A. C. Holds Social Evening

Officers and members of the Reliance Company Athletic and Social Club held a social evening and a dance at the Hume Arena, Friday evening, during which time Jimmie Yokum and his band provided the music. The customary prize dances were featured and an evening of fun and frivolity was enjoyed by the club members and their invited guests. Upwards of 400 enjoyed the event. The prize winners were:—Pearce Armstrong, Louise Glenning; Mrs. Dalyrimple, Sgt. Heoghan; Mr. Gene Lebonne and Miss Vera Knox; Mrs. R. Colden and E. Kirby; Mr. and Mrs. James McGuire; Miss Elsie Post and Mr. Fred Regensburg; Miss Evlyn Cook and Mr. Joe Boyle; Miss Helen Ward and Sgt. Major Law; Miss Kay White and Anna Wilson; Mrs. H. Mallard and Mr. Groselle.

WOUNDED IN SEA BATTLE

The U-boat gunner who "winged" Ordinary Seaman Stanley Ballant (above) was later brought on board H.M.C.S. Assiniboine as a prisoner. The ships were so close during the engagement that gunners could see the enemy's faces clearly. Gallant was hit in the arm as he was reaching for ammunition. He is a native of Prince Edward Island.—R.C.N. Photo.

SAVE ELECTRICITY

In addition to the restrictions ordered by the Power Controller, in the use of electricity, it will be necessary to have the co-operation of ALL THE USERS in the conservation of electricity.

The anticipated shortage will be from 250,000 to 300,000 horse power.

It is anticipated that the restrictions of the Power Controller WHICH GO INTO EFFECT ON SEPTEMBER 20th., will curtail the use of electricity by 100,000 horse power.

The voluntary saving therefore will be 150,000 horse power.

From time to time during the next few weeks we will be advising you through the press of ways and means of conserving electricity.

PLEASE READ THEM, and do what you can to help conserve the electricity available for war purposes.

September 19th., 1942

TO THE CITIZENS OF BELLEVILLE AND DISTRICT—

I feel it a most urgent duty at this time to lend my voice to those who are attempting to solicit funds for three worthy organizations.

From my position as Mayor of Belleville, I have been able to see, perhaps a little more than the average person, the dire necessity of this HOME FRONT SERVICE. In a world torn by strife, we are fortunate in having amongst us such organizations as the Y.M.C.A., the Salvation Army and the V.O.N. It would be useless for me to go on and stress the individual work done by any of these three. You know what it is. You hear of it every day. So let us get behind this campaign and see that it goes over the top.

Let Belleville and District show their appreciation by giving the canvasser the utmost courtesy together with your three-fold contribution. Help these organizations carry on their splendid service for the next year.

SERVE ON THE HOME FRONT, TOO.

G. E. Thompson
MAYOR.

Young Men's Christian Assoc.——Victorian Order of Nurses——Salvation Army

CAMPAIGN SEPT. 21st. to 28th.

PERSONALS

Mrs. R. G. Rodgers, Cedar Street, is a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Mr. P. H. Gillespie of Toronto, is spending the weekend at the home of his mother at 11 Harvey Street.

Miss Evelyn Coulter, 149 George Street, left on Thursday to spend a two weeks' holiday in Halifax.

Sgt. Pilot Gordon Williams and Mrs. Williams, are visiting at his home, 23 Everett Street. The former, who received his wings at Hagersville, a week ago Friday, was a chum of the late Arthur Redner, both of whom signed up in the R.C.A.F. at Kingston at the same time.

A.W.2 Frances Lesier, R.C.A.F., (Women's Division), was a member of the squadron which has completed a four weeks' initial training course at No. 7 Manning Depot, Rockcliffe. The occasion was marked by a graduation dinner at the Chateau Laurier on Thursday evening when the officers and N.C.O.'s under which they trained were honored by the airwomen. The squadron will soon be posted throughout Canada.

WEDDINGS

LOGAN—EWENSON

A quiet wedding of local interest was solemnized at 5538 Gatineau Street, Montreal, Quebec, on Tuesday, September 8, 1942, at 11.30 a.m., when Lena Roberta Ewenson of Montreal, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Ewenson of Brighton, and William Allan Logan, B.S.A., of Arvida, Quebec, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Logan of Walkerville Ontario, were united in marriage the Rev. George Donald of St. Andrew's and St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Montreal, officiating.

The bride was becomingly attired in an ensemble of blue and her attendant, Miss Pauline Langille of Montreal, wore old rose.

Mr. C. Reginald Ross of Montreal was groomsman.

The bride resided in Belleville until recently.

SMITH—LEE

Marmora, (Special.)—With Rev. David Gray officiating the wedding was solemnized at St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, on Tuesday afternoon, September 15th., of Mabel Frances Lee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Lee of Madoc Township and Private Thomas Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Smith of Marmora. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Fleming of Crookston.

CHARLTON—McINROY

The marriage was solemnized in All Saints' Church, Peterborough, on Wednesday, September 16, of Vera Letitia McInroy of Peterborough, daughter of Mrs. William McInroy of Marmora, and Samuel Bruce Charlton, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Charlton of Lakefield. Rev. H. N. Bracken officiated and Mrs. W. Logan, organist, played the wedding music.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Murney McInroy of Bonarlaw, wore street-length frock of white sheer with embroidery trim and matching accessories. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

Miss Marie McInroy attended her sister, wearing a frock of pale blue sheer with white accessories, and a bouquet of pink roses. Mr. Frank Payne of Lakefield, attended the groom.

For travelling the bride wore a dark red suit with a white blouse and black accessories. After their wedding trip they will live in Lakefield.

DULMAGE—WIGHT

A pretty wedding took place on Monday, September 14, at the home of the bride's parents, Wellington, when Iola Marian, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wight, became the bride of Gordon Hubert Dulmage, Cherry Valley, son of Mrs. Cooper Dulmage. The bride's uncle, Rev. L. S. Wight, Belleville, performed the ceremony and Mrs. Roy Wight of Hillier, played wedding music.

Fall flowers decorated the house for the occasion. Given in marriage by her father the bride was charming in her gown of white silk sheer with lace veil. She carried roses and gladioli. Miss Beatrice McCullough in pink sheer, with matching hat, was bridesmaid, and the groomsman was Mr. Robert Lett of Cherry Valley.

Luncheon was served on the lawn at the brides' home after the ceremony. Mrs. Wight was attired in navy sheer and Mrs. Dulmage in blue crepe.

The bride and groom left on a wedding trip to Ottawa, the bride travelling in a beige and brown suit. Upon their return they will take up residence in Niagara.

SPRINKLE—O'CONNOR

St. Michael's Church was the scene of an interesting wedding at nine o'clock this morning, when Catherine Anita elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. O'Connor, became the bride of Flying Officer William A. Sprinkle, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Sprinkle, Seattle, Wash. The ceremony was performed by Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G. Mrs. James Grant played wedding music and Mrs. Gerald Clapp was soloist, singing Gounod's "Ave Maria" at the Offertory and "Because" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was a lovely picture in her gown of white French velvet, designed on lines of classic simplicity, with sweetheart neckline and long sleeves ending in points over the wrist. A finger-tip veil of tulle fell from a fez headdress of tucked velvet and she carried a bouquet of gladioli in cyclamen shades.

Miss Mary Trualsch was bridesmaid wearing cyclamen velvet fashioned with long torso waistline and high neckline. Her headdress matching her gown was similar in design to that of the bride, with a shoulder length veil and she carried white roses.

Miss Agnes Marie O'Connor was her sister's junior bridesmaid and she wore a Kate Greenaway frock in apple green, and carried a nosegay of white, mauve and yellow blossoms.

Mr. John O'Connor, brother of the bride, was groomsman and the ushers were AC2 Joseph Hunter, Mountain View and Mr. Gerard O'Connor, brother of the bride.

A reception was held at the Country Club which was beautifully decorated with Autumn flowers. Mrs. O'Connor received her guests wearing a floor length crepe dress of Australian green with accordion pleated skirt and corsage of Ophelia roses.

Later, Flying Officer and Mrs. Sprinkle left on a wedding trip to Montreal, the bride choosing for travelling a melon pink wool crepe frock with brown Harris tweed coat and brown accessories. They will take up residence at 57 Kains St., St. Thomas, Ont.

Out of town guests attended the wedding from Brockville, Toronto and Midland.

Rev. Alex Cameron Addresses Meeting Of Y. W. Guild

The Young Women's Guild was most fortunate in having the Reverend Alex. Cameron as guest speaker at their opening meeting on Thursday evening. The meeting took place at the home of Mrs. H. R. Gibson, Foster Avenue, with Mrs. M. Buck in charge. Miss Thompson conducted the worship service.

Mr. Cameron spoke on the "Post War Order", and, while having no desire to pose as clairvoyant, for no one knows just what will happen after the war, yet he felt certain that there will be a complete exhaustion. Many groups will be clamouring for recognition of their views. We must lay the foundations for a post war order now. If we wait till the war is over it will be too late.

Many people feel that the real struggle lies between privileged power and power in the hands of the majority. Shall democratic power be extended or trimmed and limited?

Some events which are taking visible direction were noted: In Germany it is the privileged groups who back up Hitler. In Great Britain certain ruling groups feel that there is no civilization unless it maintains their position, although appeasement may have been only half conscious. Industrial magnates in the United States have stated that the Twentieth Century is the American Century and that the centre of trade will be in Wall Street. Certain groups intend to control the peace. Prominent American industries hope to balance the books with Germany after the war. In fact it has been stated that Germany may have lost wars but German industry emerges more strongly entrenched. Our Government itself does not always interest itself in all groups. For instance, Labour was not consulted in forming the Selective Manpower Service. The National Association of Manufacturers tried to get some control of church policies by appointing representatives to the Delaware Conference to establish a Just and Durable Peace. Even certain comic strips create undue respect for some groups.

The speaker mentioned many interesting developments but said that this was a war to destroy tyranny. The post war order should include: job security, educational euality, adequate housing and adequate health services.

All that we can do to strengthen democratic forces or people's demands is all to the good. We are moving towards the end of an era. Christians have something to bring to the change by being identified with the democratic struggle. If people go forward without the benediction of religion the results will be most unfortunate. We should not seek simply redistribution of wealth, or better wages, and so on, but more community spirit and brotherhood. The present order fosters disunity and hatreds between peoples.

In the discussion which followed Mr. Camerons' talk, it was asked how women's groups might help to lay the foundations of a better world. It was suggested that they could become informed and spread knowledge. Public meetings have been found useful. Health Insurance schemes could be studied. They could strive to create a democratic community, immune to bullying and prepared to protest against what is wrong.

The subject of organization of labour came up for discussion. The speaker felt that organization and collective bargaining was necessary for winning the peace, as it increases production and strengthens morale.

Mr. Cameron was given a sincere vote of thanks and the meeting closed with a social half hour.

Reynolds, Quentin— Only the Stars are Neutral.

The winter of 1941-42 in the war zones of Europe is described in the latest book by the popular war correspondent. His account of raids in London, three months in Russia, his flight to Cairo with the Litvinoffs and his return to America by freighter are told in his inimitable style, a blending of drama and humour.

Miller, Charles—Black Borneo.

Here is an excellent picture of that storehouse of trouble and wealth which the Japanese have acquired in the Southern half of the fabled island formerly owned by the Dutch. Author of "Cannibal Caravan" describes an expedition as photographer-explorer in wild and virtually unknown districts of Borneo.

Deul Wallace—People Under Hitler.

The author, for many years Berlin correspondent of the Chicago Daily News, gives a graphic picture of everyday life of the Germans under Nazi rule. Resident in Germany, both before and after the rise of Hitler to power, he explains the philosophy underlying Nazi domination and gives accounts of all the leaders of the Nazi movement.

As exciting as a Jules Verne tale, is this story of the fantastic career of an undersea diver. For nearly twenty-five years the author has searched for the wealth that was lost in hundreds of ships at sea over a period of four centuries. He has salvaged gold from sixteenth century galleons, filmed a monster octopus and deep sea creatures and made discoveries that revolutionised salvage operations.

Tattooing Treatment for Pruritus Found to be Effective, Safe

Certain North African natives treat painful neuralgia by tattooing along the course of the pain. This treatment, in a way not understood, seems to deaden the nerves. The same idea is used to treat the unbearable itching around the lower opening of the bowel, known as pruritus ani.

Treatment for pruritus ani consists of tattooing the area in which the itching occurs, using a substance known as mercury sulfide. Just how the mercury sulfide acts has not been determined but it seems probable that it has some effect upon the endings of the nerves in the tissues.

Doctors Robert Turrell and A. W. Martin Marino of Brooklyn, state that any conditions present which may contribute to the disturbance should be cleared up before carrying out the tattooing treatment. For example, there may be some general skin disease, such as ringworm, which may have to be treated. In women with itching in this area, it is suggested that injections into a muscle of a glandular substance, known as estrogen, be employed. If this treatment fails, then the tattooing with mercury sulfide is carried out.

Before the tattooing treatment is used, a "patch test" is made to determine whether or not the person is sensitive to mercury sulfide or mercury compounds. This test is carried out by putting ammoniated mercury on a piece of gauze and fastening it to the skin with adhesive tape, leaving it on for twenty-four hours, and then noting if any reaction occurs. If a person reacts to the patch test, showing redness of the skin, the tattooing treatment is not given, nor is this treatment used when there is inflammation or infection around the lower opening of the bowel.

If hemorrhoids are present, these should be cleared up before the tattooing is used. In many instances it is found that after the removal of hemorrhoids, the itching disappears so that the tattooing need not be carried out.

The treatment requires from 45 to 60 minutes and is usually best carried out in a hospital. One treatment is usually all that is necessary. A local anesthetic is used, that is, an injection into the tissues which will deaden the sensation of pain.

After the tattooing process is completed, the skin is covered with an ointment, usually one containing an anesthetic. Some swelling and tenderness may occur and last for from one to two days, but this can be relieved by using an anesthetic ointment or hot, wet dressings. No harmful effects have been seen as a result of this treatment, but the effects in getting rid of the itching have been noteworthy in every instance reported.

Victory Recipes Planned For Canadians' Health

By LAURA C. PEPPER
Chief Consumer Section
Department of Agriculture

Once again Canadian housewives are asked to do their patriotic duty by conserving every scrap of fat they can. Fats are precious because they are important tools of our war machine—i.e. they are needed in the manufacture of explosives, bombs and other munitions.

Prior to the war, the need for individual economy was not of national importance but in these days of total warfare each housewife must consider herself as an integral part of 12,000,000 people and realize that her individual waste multiplied by 2,000,000 reaches a staggering total.

The war in the Pacific has reduced the importation of vegetable oils so housewives must make use of Canadian produced fats. Lard falls in this category and, being home-produced, has the advantage of not requiring foreign exchange or shipping. Our mothers and grandmothers used it almost exclusively and who can deny that the pies, cakes, biscuits and cookies they made were every big as good as our own concoctions?

Lard is a 100 per cent fat—that it, it is unlike butter which contains moisture and other substances, therefore it has greater shortening power and yields more calories per pound. In addition, it is 97 per cent digestible which makes it suitable for use in practically all types of cooking.

Fortunately, owing to our increased hog production, there has been a corresponding increase in our supply of lard, so housewives should plan to use this Canadian produced shortening in their cooking. Just how can it be used? In practically every recipe calling for butter or shortening.

The purpose of using fat in pastry, biscuits, muffins, cakes, etc., is to make a tender product. The differences in the shortening power of various fats show more clearly in making pastry than in the other products. Since lard has about 15 per cent more shortening value than other fats less lard is needed, in substituting lard for butter in baking—in other words use about 2 tablespoons less lard per cup of butter called for in recipe.

Lard is an ideal frying fat. Its clarity, whiteness, pleasant odor and flavor are all attributes that contribute toward producing A1 products. While all frying fats will smoke if heated to extremely high temperatures, lard will withstand the heat necessary for deep-fat frying for long periods of time. Furthermore, it has superior properties of foam resistance and, if strained and clarified after each using will retain its sweet, delicate flavor for some time.

And now for some recipes tested in the experimental kitchen, Consumer Section, Department of Agriculture. All of them use good Canadian lard as shortening and we assure you the flavor of the products is excellent.

Pastry

3 1-2 cups pastry or 3 cups all purpose flour.
3-4 teaspoon salt.
1 cup lard
6 tablespoons cold water (about)

Sift flour and salt. Cut in shortening with pastry blender or two knives. Make a well in the centre of the mixture and add water gradually, working it in by using a cutting motion with a knife. Lift dough onto pastry board pat and roll out.

Doughnuts

1 cup sugar
5 tablespoons lard
3 eggs
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 1-2 teaspoons salt
1 cup milk
Flour to make a soft dough
(about 4 1-2 to 5 cups)

Sift flour before measring. Cream lard and sugar thoroughly. Add well-beaten eggs and mix well. Sift dry ingredients (use about 4 1-2 cups flour) and add alternately to egg mixture. If 4 1-2 cups flour is not sufficient add a little more flour but keep the mixture as soft as possible. Roll out and cut with cutter. Fry in hot lard (365-375F). Drain on crumpled paper, then brush with honey. Yield: about 60 doughnuts.

If, after cutting, doughnuts are allowed to stand for about an hour before frying, they will be less likely to crack.

Spice Cake

1-2 cup lard
1 1-2 cups honey
2 eggs
3-4 cup sour milk
2 1-2 cups flour.
2 tablespoons baking powder
1-2 teaspoon baking soda
1-4 teaspoon ground cloves
1-2 teaspoon vanilla
1-2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1-2 teaspoon ginger
1-2 teaspoon ground nutmeg
1-4 teaspoon salt.

Cream lard well and add honey gradually (honey has been melted). Add well-beaten eggs. Beat well. Mix and sift all dry ingredients and add alternately with the milk. Bake in two 9 inch layer pans at 375F for 30-35 minutes or in a loaf pan (9" x 9") for about 65 minutes at 350F.

WAR Comes to a Classroom

Far removed from the shock of battle, a boy in Windsor studies his lessons. His growing skill means growing strength for Canada and the Empire.

In a quiet, glass-enclosed room in the midst of a roaring factory, he attends Ford of Canada's trade school—learning to shape metals according to blueprint specifications. He studies the art of tool and die making or develops skill in machine operation.

War has come to this important classroom—and slanted the lessons to the grim necessities of today. These students are the craftsmen of tomorrow. They will help to build new power and speed and ruggedness in Canada's future fighting machines.

Meanwhile, in battle manoeuvres, another young Canadian directs the attack. Fresh from intensive training and eager for battle, he has complete confidence in the modern vehicles which carry his men into the fight.

The skill that is born in the Ford of Canada trade school, and the skill that directs the battle—both are part of the same irresistible drive towards victory. The trained craftsman and the trained soldier are vital to victory. Canada will be proud of both.

"The test of a nation, as of a man, is its conduct in the face of danger. Today we must use our brains as well as our brawn, our foresight as well as our natural resources . . . so that we shall grow stronger even while the battle rages."

Farmer Shoots 500-Pound Bear Near His Home At Highland Grove

Bancroft —(Special)— Mr. Wm. Herbert Ayotte, farmer, of the Township of Cardiff, County of Haliburton, residing near Highland Grove west of Bancroft, sent his two sons, Joe, 10, and Nicholas, 9, for the cows on a recent evening. The cows were in a near-by orchard some one hundred and fifty yards from the house. It wasn't very long until the both boys came running to the house telling their father that they had been chased by a prowling bear. Mr. Ayotte grabbed his rifle and set off with the two boys in search of the animal and although he covered the orchard very thoroughly he was unable to find any trace of the animal. The next evening the farmer, having a hunch that the bear might make a re-appearance, set off once more through the orchard with his rifle. About fifteen minutes after his arrival in the orchard he heard the brush cracking and presently bruin poked out into the clearance. Ayotte fired three shots before he brought the animal down and even at that it turned on its back pawing the air in anger, only to die a few minutes later. Mr. Ayotte stated that the bear appeared to be six or seven years old and weighed close to five hundred pounds. He brought the pelt into Bancroft Tuesday evening, making application for bounty. Another bear appeared in their fields just last week but they were unable to kill it as it was too far distant when sighted.

Burned by Blazing Wax

Miss Viola Woodcock of the village is suffering quite badly from burns received while preserving fruit. Miss Woodcock had her fruit preserving nearly completed and was melting paraffin wax on the stove when the utensil containing the wax ignited and the flames soared up, burning Miss Woodcock on the hands, arms, face and searing some of the hair on one side of her head. Dr. S. S. Lumb of the village was summoned and rendered medical treatment.

Wm. Davis Loses Barns, Sheds

Mr. William Davis of Papineau Lake, twenty-five miles northeast of Bancroft lost his main barns, stables and drive sheds by fire of unknown origin about five o'clock Sunday afternoon. Livestock were not stabled at the time but Mr. Davis lost most of his year's crop.

Field Tactics Held

"A" Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment (R) under command of Lieutenant Alec Scott of Bancroft demonstrated the importance of tactics used in field manoeuvers on Sunday when the Company made a complete day of it some miles on the outskirts of Bancroft. After a co-ordinated scheme was put into action and carried out the boys received considerable practice with rifles and Lewis guns and were given talks on mechanical parts of the Lewis gun as to assembling and dismantling the unit. Dinner was served on the field. Everyone took a keen interest in the day's program.

Personals

Miss Winnie Thompson of Toronto returned home Thursday having spent a two-week vacation with her sister Selina at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wiggins of Bancroft.

Lieutenant Clifford Broad of Simcoe, Ontario, and R. Q. M. S. Ronald Maxwell and C. S. M. Earl Haley of Kingston, spent the weekend at their homes in Bancroft.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Mather and family left Sunday morning for Finch, Ontario, where they are spending several days at the home of the latter's parents.

Sergeant Fred Delyea, an instructor with an Eastern unit returned Monday having been on furlough leave with his family in Bancroft.

Mr. Jack Anderson left Wednesday morning for Belleville where he will enter Albert College for another term.

Miss Aileen Plumley motored to Belleville on Tuesday.

Mrs. C. O. Fuller and Miss Patricia Fuller motored to Belleville on Wednesday.

The Rev. and Mrs. H. A. Bracken of Toronto were in town Wednesday calling on friends while on their way on a motor trip through Algonquin Park.

Not One Man of Canadian Army Who Took Part in Dieppe Raid Failed To Perform His Duty

Ottawa, Sept. 19 (CP)—Spotted through today's defence Department statement on the Dieppe battle are brief bits of unqualified praise for the Canadian soldiers, sailors and airmen who took part.

These are the ones that stand out, aside from those refering to individual acts of gallanty:-

conduct of all ranks of the Canaconduct of all ranks of the Canadian military forces engaged, and their determination to capture their objectives at whatever cost, were beyond all praise."

"Although they . . . confronted situations comparable to the most dangerous tasks assigned to troops in the last war, there was not the slightest hesitation, and all ranks evinced the keenest desire to come to grips with the enemy.'

"In one of these (documents on the operation) is there the slightest suggestion that so much as one man of the Canadian army failed in his duty.'

"The Royal Hamilton Light Infantry—attacking with great dash—had succeeded in capturing the casino, which was . . . most heavily fortified."

"The men of this unit (the Essex Scottish from Windsor, Ont., advancing with great courage to close with the enemy — were exposed to heavy fire from enemy mortars and suffered very numerous casualties."

"Although . . . The ships and craft lying off Dieppe . . . suffered sporadic attacks by dive-bombers the (Royal) navy most gallantly went into the beaches again and again to take off the troops, and officers and other ranks of the military force ashore performed many acts of gallantry in carrying wounded men to the landing craft."

"The naval forces ran all risk to assist the troops."

"Numerous cases of gallantry on the part of such personnel (Canadians serving with the Royal navy) were recorded."

"Two army co-operation squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force attached to formations of the Canadian army overseas participated in the operation. Both did gallant work and suffered losses. Canadian fighter squadrons likewise played a brilliant part."

Former Napanee Editor States The Observer Has 34,000 Circulation

Former owner and editor of the Napanee Beaver, and minister of St. Andrew's Church in Napanee, the Rev. Dr. A. J. Wilson, Toronto, editor of the United church Observer was one of the commissioners at the General Council of the United Church which concluded its functions in Bridge Street United Church yesterday.

During the sittings of the Council, Dr. Wilson addressed that body in the interests of the Observer, the official church publication.

The circulation, he reported, was 34,000. The paper, he said, was becoming more generally recognized as an organ for creating a church consciousness and binding the church together. It was also a means of carrying on a crusade for moral and social reform.

Dr. Wilson is well known in the Bay of Quinte district. One of the most popular ministers in this area, he has spoken in several pulpits in and around the city.

He is still associated editorially with the Napanee Beaver.

Stirling

Stirling— Sgt. O. Desmond Jackman, son of Mrs F. Jackman, Stirling, was among those who received their wings at Malton Air Observer School last Friday and is at present enjoying fourteen days' leave at his home in Stirling. Popular at Stirling High School and later as clerk in N. E. Eggleton's grocery store, and also the Dominion Stores Ltd, he has many friends in this district who join in congratulating him.

Rt. Wor. Bro. George F. Little of Brighton, District Deputy Grand Master of the Prince Edward District, made his official visit to Stirling Lodge A.F. & A.M. No. 69, on Thursday evening, Sept. 17.

Friends and neighbours of Miss Phyllis Vance, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Vance, Rawdon Township, gathered at her home on Wednesday afternoon to bid her farewell as she leaves to continue her academic training at Queen's University, Kingston. Miss Vance, graduate of Stirling High, was one of the most popular students, and her friends presented her with a lovely travelling bag. Following a short program of musical numbers, readings, etc., the presentation of the gift was made by Miss V. Sutherland and the address accompanying it read by Miss Mary Morrison. Miss Vance expressed her deep appreciation of the kindly gesture and the affair climaxed with a dainty luncheon and social period.

Messrs. W. C. West, T. W. Solmes, F. Sprentall and Roy Eggleton, all members of the Stirling Hydro Commission, were in Brockville on Wednesday attending the Eastern Ontario Municipal Electric Association held in the Manitonna Hotel.

Mrs. George Drewy, Front Street resident was recipient of several messages of good wishes from friends near and far as she marked the passing of her 82nd birthday quietly at her home on Tuesday of this week.

Cards Drive Recalls Boston Braves 1914 Pennant Drive But This One More Difficult

Redbirds Ten Games Off Pace on Aug. 5 They Have Won 33 and Lost Eight

DODGERS WEAKEN

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The strangest pennant race of all time was in 1914 when Boston Braves paraded from last on July 4 to first and undying fame in a few weeks—but St. Louis Cardinals will have accomplished a feat in some respects more difficult if they come home in front next week.

Everybody remembers that the Braves were last in mid-July that year and that they spurted to the top. Most people have forgotten the details.

Actually it was one of the tightest races from top to bottom in Major League history and even though the Braves were in last place on July 18, when they started to spin, they were only 11 1-2 games from the lead.

It was a battle Royal with every club trampling on every other club and Boston made its climb to the top by winning 35 games and losing 10 between July 18 and Sept. 8.

This year the Cardinals were 10 games off the pace as late as Aug. 5, even though they were in second place. And when they made their move they delivered the most punishing blows themselves with a minimum of help from the other clubs.

Playing Real Ball

Between Aug. 5 and Sept. 13, when they took over first place exclusively, the Cardinals captured 33 games and lost eight. They have won four more without an interruption since then and have earned themselves a lead of three full games.

To make their achievement complete, of course, they must keep on until they win the pennant. They have eight more games to play—two today and tomorrow at Chicago and two each at home next week against the Cubs, Pittsburgh Pirates and Cincinnati Reds.

If the Redbirds win seven out of these eight, which is not too much to expect from the spirited St. Louis kids, they can clinch the pennant no matter whether the Dodgers win all their remaining 10.

Both teams were idle yesterday—the Cardinals having a day off and the Dodgers running into inclement weather for the first installment of their series with the Phils. The postponed game will be played Monday on what was to have been an open date.

Only one other Major League contest was on yesterday's program and in it Cincinnati Reds smashed Pittsburgh Pirates 5-1 with a four-run rally in the ninth inning.

SIX TEAMS READY IN QUEBEC LOOP

Shawinigan Falls Out Until Quebec City Makes Decision

Montreal, Sept. 19 (CP). — Six teams will operate definitely in the Quebec Senior Hockey League this season, it was decided at a league meeting last night.

Ottawa, Cornwall, Montreal Royals, Montreal Canadiens, a team representing Military District No. 4 and another representing the Royal Canadian Air Force will operate. Quebec Aces have until Oct. 1 to decide whether they will play in the league again this year.

The meeting shelved an application from a Shawinigan Falls team until Quebec makes a decision. The Shawinigan team won the championship of the Montreal District League last year.

The Cornwall team will be made up mainly of members of the armed forces from the Basic Training Centre No. 31. The Ottawa team also is expected to represent a military unit.

Officials of the Quebec teams said that the return of Aces to the league hinges on the securing of a rink and also on the possibility of an Air Force team taking over the franchise. The Quebec arena, home of the Aces, was destroyed by fire this summer.

Announcement was made at the meeting that a committee has been appointed to decide for what honor the Lady Byng trophy, donated to the League last year, should be awarded.

Plans to have a toll of honor of players from the Q.S.H.L. who have joined the armed forces were approved by the meeting.

A resolution was passed expressing regret at the death this summer of Gurdy Miron, an executive of the Cornwall team.

SYRACUSE CHIEFS FAVORED TO WIN

Play Jersey City Giants for International League Title

(By The Associated Press)

Those white-washing experts of the International League Syracuse Chiefs and Jersey City Giants, are at it again today—this time with a cheque of $8,000 going to the winner.

They collide at three p.m. in the Jersey City stadium in the first game of the final round in the Shaughnessy playoffs with the right to represent the League in the Little World Series also going to the winner of the best four-of-seven games.

The loser will get $2,000.

Syracuse advanced to the final round by taking four of five games with the second-place Montreal Royals in the semi-finals while Jersey City, after dropping the first two, won four straight from the pennant-winning Newark Bears.

During the season Jersey City and Syracuse tied for third place and the deadlock was broken in a single game which the Chiefs won, 2-0, behind the one-hit pitching of Charles (Red) Barrett.

That shutout was one of eight the Indians dished out to the Giants during the year. The Giants, in return, blanked Syracuse six times.

Although neither manager made a definite pitching selection in advance, it is believed Bobby Coombs will start for the Jerseys and either Nate Andrews or Clayton Lambert for Syracuse.

GOOD RACING PROMISED FOR BELLEVILLE FAIR

Free-for-All Will be Raced Wednesday for Purse of $350

PLENTY OF HORSES

Fair time is just around the corner and the lovers of the horse are waiting anxiously for the harness racing program. This has been an annual feature of the fair since its inception with the exception of one or two years but such a protest was raised that horse racing was resumed by the Fair Board. This year the number of horses available will be extensive and although the entry list is not completed some of the fastest sidewheelers in the Province will show their wares before district fans. The free-for-all will be raced on the final day, (Wednesday) along with a 2.20 class, while on Tuesday the 2.27 and 2.17 class will be raced.

Although the track has not been used this summer, workmen will have it in grand shape before race time. The weeds, which have grown profusely, have all been eradicated with a heavy scrapper and drag, while the earth has been softened to make good footing. The horses are racing at Lindsay the last three days of this week and will come on to Belleville for the Tuesday and Wednesday meet of next week. It is expected that Bert Patch, owned by Sted Craig of Kingston, will have plenty of opposition in the free-for-all with the possibility of Lastic Grattan, and other horses owned by "Chappie" Chapman starting in this feature. Vic Rowntree and Wes Litt will also be on hand with a couple from Western Ontario and there is a possibility two or three colts, that raced in the futurities will also be on hand. There are a number of district horses that will provide plenty of opposition for the Western contingent, chief being Widower Grattan, owned by Joe Payne of Bloomfield.

Despite the fact that rationing of gas has severely cut down transportation, the horsemen have banded together to transport their animals to and from race meets and there will be no dearth of horses for the Belleville meet according to Dr. Wellbanks, chairman of the race committee. The purses are quite inviting with $350 being offered for the free-for-all and $300 each for the 2.20 and 2.17 classes and $250 for the 2.27 making a total of $1,200 in all.

CONN AND LOUIS GET $134,451

Both Have Obligations and These Will be Liquidated by Committee

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)—Even though uncle gave them—and all other fighting nephews—a raise recently, Sergt. Joe Louis and Pte. Billy Conn will get $135,451.53 from the gate receipts of their Oct. 12 scrap in Yankee stadium to pay old debts.

The Sports Writers' Committee handling the bout, originally arranged with Army Emergency Relief as the sole beneficiary, decided late yesterday that Louis' obligations of $100,951.53 should be paid and that Conn's debts of $34,500 also should be wiped out.

Under the new pay scale adopted for the army this summer sergeants, to which rank Louis was promoted last week, get $78 a month and privates are paid at the rate of $53.

The committee said that Louis owed Mike Jacobs' club $34,500.

The committee made no mention of whittling Louis' $117,000 indebtedness to the U.S. government for his 1941 income tax.

The money which the two fighters draw in the Oct. 12 bout, in which Louis will defend his heavyweight title against the Pittsburgh youth who almost succeeded in winning it a year ago, will be regarded as "income" on which they must pay a tax next year.

Toronto, Sept. 19. (CP)—One of the most successful coaches in the country is Tommy Hays of Edmonton, who has succeeded PO. Bob Fritz as coach of the University of Alberta Football Bears.

Tommy is 29. He wasn't much of an athlete himself, but has that elusive quality of character which makes men trust him, do their best for him. He's practically a rookie in the coaching line, but took Edmonton Maple Leafs to the Alberta Junior Football Crown in 1940 and 1941, and coached the same club into the Western Junior Hockey Finals last year.

He may pick off another championship with Bears this season. Western Intercollegiate sport has been curtailed in wartime, but not snuffed out. Present plans call for a four-game series between University of Alberta and University of Saskatchewan, in Saskatoon Oct. 17 and 19 and in Edmonton Oct. 24 and 26.

Oh, Yeah? Dept.

Umpire Stan Saysky of Regina officiated in Moose Jaw several games this summer, said at season's end he had never heard a squawk from anyone during the season. . . . Either he's a positively amazing umpire, or he's deaf, too.

Incidentally:

Lester Patrick once called Sub-Lt. Russ McConnell, who went down with H.M.C.S. Raccoon, the finest natural hockey player the world has ever known. . . Vancouver football fans, as well as professional circles, knew Lt.-Col. Cecil Merritt well. . . .Col. Merritt, who has been reported a prisoner of war after Dieppe, was a standout in the Vancouver Big Four about a decade ago. . . He was a lawyer in civil life. . . Bill (Kingston Whig-Standard) Walshe reports that Kingston won't lack for football this year, with service players filling many of the gaps. . . . Freddie (Fort William Times-Journal) Edwards writes that Frank Sargent, C.A.H.A. president, is a good golfer, too. . . Sargent won the Port Arthur Golf and Country Club championship with a 73 . . . Plans are being pushed for football in Regina this Fall, with Father Athol Murray of the Notre Dame School for boys one of the prime movers. . .Here's an athletic organization actually progressing in wartime: The Ottawa New Edinburgh Canoe Club, which had a deficit of $500 in 1941, a profit of $3,500 in 1942.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Sept. 19 (AP)— That $135,000 plus that Joe Louis and Billy Conn will be allowed to extract from the championship fight to pay their private debts is only about a quarter of what they'd be paid if they were civilians fighting for the usual 40-20 cuts . . . Still, a lot of folks will be wondering why they're getting even that much after the original announcement that nobody would make a cent out of the scrap . . . We can imagine the howls that will go up from people who objected to suggestions that Joe be allowed enough to pay his income tax debt when they hear he's paying almost as much to Mike Jacobs and John Roxborough . . . Nearly as we can figure it now, the Army Emergency Relief will collect about half the estimated $1,200,000 receipts, if the fans will kick in that much . . . That ain't exactly hay, but neither is $135,000.

Recovered Fumbles.

Look for plenty of speed from California this season, Harold Davis and Grover Klemmer, the fastest guys on Jeff Cravath's track team, are wearing football uniforms now . . . Another moan: Michigan State's Charley Bachman lost a promising sophomore halfback because something in the air around East Lansing made Paige Christiansen sneeze so much he decided to stay home in New Mexico . . . Monk Simons, Tulane's trainer for 23 years, is barred from practice sessions conducted by his son, little Monk. He has been warned not to get excited, but he always does.

Philadelphians still are trying to get used to seeing the pro football standings—with a Philly team on top.

WARNEKE SLATED TO HURL AGAINST OLD TEAMMATES

Former Cardinal Hurler Asks for Chance to Tackle Cards

HAS NO GRIEVANCE

By CHARLES DUNKLEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Chicago, Sept. 19 (AP).—Lean Lon Warneke, for several years one of St. Louis' top-ranking pitchers, was definitely ready to take the mound today and strive to upset the pennant-bound Cardinals in the first of an all-important two-game series with the Chicago Cubs.

Warneke's assignment was anything but a soft one for opposing him will be Morton Cooper, ace Cardinal hurler who is seeking his 21st victory of the season. Warneke, who started the Brooklyn Dodgers on their downward plunge, pleaded for the job to pitch against his former teammates.

It was just a few weeks ago that Warneke was a member of the Cardinals who sold him to the Cubs for the $7,500 waiver price, cutting him out of a possible world series split that may reach $6,000.

But Warneke says he has no grievance against the St. Louis club.

"That's just a part of baseball," he explained. "I'm not sore, never was at the Cardinals for selling me, but I will try like hell to beat them.

"I visited the Cards the day before I pitched against the Dodgers and told them I would take care of Brooklyn. Well, I did. At the same time I told them I hoped I had a chance to lick them, too. Now I'm getting it."

The amazing Cardinals, who have won 34 out of their last 40 games, the last five in a row, are taking today's battle as just another ball game. Manager Bill Southworth refuses to worry, and is adhering to his policy of playing one game at a time.

The Cardinals, leading the Dodgers by three games, intend to do all within their power to at least hold their margin before returning to St. Louis tomorrow night. They can chalk up an even 100 victories for the season by winning today. The Cards hope to have the services of outfielder Terry Moore, who has been laid up with a charleyhorse.

MEET IN SPECIAL RACE AT 'GANSETT'

Purse is for $25,000 at Mile and Three-Sixteenths, Winner Take All

WHIRLAWAY FAVORED

(By SID FEDER)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Pawtucket, R.I., Sept. 19. (AP)—Unless Al Sabath has a nightmare the "dream race" between Whirlaway and Alsab comes off at 5.30 p.m. E.D., at Narragansett Park today.

Sabath is the Chicago lawyer who owns Alsab and the only reason this collision of the four-year-old Whirly and the three-year-old Alsab didn't come off a week ago in the Narragansett Special was because Sabath decided his colt had arrived at this little Rhode Island racing plant too late to carry out his training schedule.

Narragansett immediately put up $25,000 for a match race to be run today, with Whirly packing 126 pounds and Alsab 119 on the weight-for-age scale. They'll travel a mile and three sixteenths and the first one home picks up the whole purse.

The race brings together the top two stretch-runners of recent years Whirlaway, out of the Calumet stable of Warren Wright, the Chicago and Lexington (Ky.) sportsman, is the turf's top money winner, with $491,136, and unless most of the experts are wrong, he'll become the first $500,000 breadwinner in history today.

Alsab was picked up by Sabath for $700 at the Saratoga yearling sales a year ago and already has won more than $270,000.

Georgie (The Iceman) Woolf of Cardston, Alta., the No. 1 "Money Rider" in the business, will handle Whirly in this one, as he did a week ago in piloting Little Mr. Big Tail to his $24,000 triumph in the Narragansett Special. Carroll Bierman has the assignment on Alsab.

The track's share of the betting on this race will go to Army and Navy relief.

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

DID YOU KNOW . . . The record for the most games ever won by a major league pitching rookie is held by Grover Cleveland Alexander . . . The sidewheeling "Big Alex" won 28 games for the Philadelphia Phillies back in 1911 . . . Johnny Beazley, the St. Louis Cardinal rookie, is headed well for better than 20 victories in his first year in the bigtime right now . . . He had 19 in the bag up to Thursday . . . Professional ball players are seeking employment in United States war-producing defence plants, contending they can make more dough working for Uncle Sam than thumping the horsehide in the moneyed ranks . . . Pie Traynor, former manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates and now scout for that club, has been offered $10,000 a year to manage a defence plant baseball team . . . We suppose he might have to punch a time clock in order to draw such a stipend . . . So serious has war work cut into minor league baseball that the Brooklyn Dodgers are toying with the idea of taking over a war plant team as a farm club . . . Trust Larry MacPhail to get in on the ground floor . . . In case you are interested Joe McCarthy, of the Yankee McCarthys, has managed eight pennant-winning teams . . . This is only two less than the all-time champion manager, John McGraw . . . Statistics show that September 24th and 27th are favorite dates for clinching the National League crown . . . Three flags have been assured on each of these dates . . . Doff your chapeau to Dave Castilloux, former Canadian champion boxer now in the Air Force . . . As a ringsider at a fight in Montreal the other night Castilloux refused to be introduced from the ring because lightweight Johnny Greco wasn't given the same invitation as a spectator . . . Buff Horton's Trenton R.C.A.F. senior "B" softball team is in Toronto today and play the return game in the provincial senior "B" semi-finals at Trenton Tuesday evening . . . Brrrrrrr, feel the cold? . . . Well you should, because Jack Adams has called his Detroit Red Wings to report for fall training on Oct. 8th.

AND NOW THAT THE IDEA of putting the World's Series on wheels and staging the classic from coast to coast apparently has been discarded, Whitney Martin of the Associated Press comes up with a suggestion the players, themselves, put on a barnstorming trip for the benefit of the men in the service, thus showing they appreciate the privilege of playing under present conditions.

"They might make up an all-star team of their own after the season ends and make a tour of the service camps," Martin suggests. "Baseball has done very well in raising funds for service charities, but it has been the front office that has been responsible. The players have played in the charity games, but they have just been doing what they were told to do. If, by their own initiative, they did something to show they would like to do something for the service men, you can bet the service men would appreciate it.

"Not that the players aren't pleased to take part in the charity games. It's just that in such cases they have no alternative. If they did something voluntarily, without league and club officials pulling the strings, their prestige would rise tremendously.

"Many of them have barnstormed in the past for their personal gain. Now they have a chance to barnstorm for a cause, accepting nothing but expenses. They would not miss the three or four weeks it would take them from their hunting trips. There are plenty of players capable of organizing such a tour. The investment in prestige would be well worth the effort."

BELLEVILLE wrestling patrons have contributed nearly $1,100 towards Canada's war effort since the grunt and groaners opened at the Hume Arena last May. Professional sports in general are contributing large sums to Canada's exchequer as the government assesses every professional gate take exactly twenty per cent. And that is twenty per cent of the gross receipts, not the net. Professional baseball, hockey, boxing, wrestling and such like have all met the tax with a smile and glad to help, which is more than can be said of some amateur sports across the Dominion. For the greater part the usual run of professional wrestlers are Americans or foreigners like Ali Adali, the "Terrible Turk." However, Canada has contributed many top-ranking grapplers to the business, men like Scotty McDougall, Frankie Hart, Billie Watson, to say nothing of John Katan, and Earl McCready, who meet here next Wednesday night in the British Empire eliminations. McCready and Katan staged a 60-minute thriller for the fans this week and can be depended upon to repeat.

REMEMBER WHEN after a season of complaints from players, fans and officials Manager Fred Mitchell, of the Boston Braves, was suspended by the National League for continual infraction of baseball rules 19 years ago today? Successor to "miracle man" George Stallings, he gave place to Dave Bancroft.

JOE LEGAULT AND TOMMY Carruthers have advanced to the finals in the Bay of Quinte Country Club golf championships. Joe beat C. L. Jewell in the semi-finals, while Tommy advanced to the championship round when Jack Hartwick defaulted in the other half of the semi-final qualifying round.

PRIVATE DEBTS MUST COME high in the boxing realm. Today it was announced that Joe Louis and Billie Conn would be creditted with $135,451. from their charity fight. "This amount is only to help them pay private debts, remarked one high-ranking United States Army Officer. It seems Louis is indebted to the fight promoters to the tune of $100,951.00, while Conn got into Mike Jacobs for a cool $34,500, so we repeat—"boxing obligations come rather high." Incidentally both Louis and Conn start heavy training next week.

THIS AND THAT—UNDER THE watchful eye of PO. Bob Hunter a detachment of athletes from No. 5 I.T.S. left early today for Toronto where they will compete in the No. 1 Command R.C.A.F. track and field meet.....It is estimated that upwards to 500 athletes will take part in the march past...It's Whirlaway and Alsab at Pawtucket, R.I. in the Narragansett feature today.. Mister Big-tail will go from the inside while Alsab drew the outside position, but this should make little difference as both horses like to come from behind.....Minutes after they were placed on sale in St. Louis yesterday, world series tickets were at a premium.....They've enlarged Sportsman's Park to seat 40,000 for the series.....All eyes are focused on Brooklyn and Chicago over the weekend.....It's this way—the Cardinals meet the Cubs in the Windy City, while the lowly Phillies invade Brooklyn for three weekend games and the Dodgers are really jittery.....In the meantime the Yankees are home for six of their remaining seven games before engaging in the world series....

AT THE BELLE

Radio's No. 1 comedian, Jack Benny as "Charley's Aunt," is the funniest picture you've ever seen. Kay Francis, James Ellison, Anne Baxter and Arleen Whelan are featured in the new comedy, now on the Belle Theatre screen.

AT THE CAPITOL

Leo Gorcey, irrepressible little toughie, has plenty to worry about when he spends a night in a haunted house with Bela Lugosi in "Spooks Run Wild" coming next to the Capitol with "Hold Back the Dawn" starring Charles Boyer, Olivia DeHavilland and Paulette Goddard as added feature.

AT THE McCARTHY

Ilona Massey and Jon Hall featured with an outstanding cast in today's most amazing screen sensation, "Invisible Agent" now at the McCarthy Theatre. Don (Red) Barry in "Stagecoach Express" is the second feature.

AT THE BELLE

"CHARLEY'S AUNT"

She arrived today! She is the funniest thing in skirts! And most important of all—she is a HE!

Yes, it is Jack Benny, the number one comedian of the air, who coyly steps across the screen of the Belle Theatre wearing a dress in the title role of "Charley's Aunt" now at the Belle Theatre.

Public and press alike unanimously agreed that this is the comedian's funniest role to date. From the moment the picture opens until the final fade out there are laughs, laughs and more laughs.

All the charm and humor of the Brandon Thomas farce which has been played upon the stage in all parts of the world for the past forty-four years, has been retained in the film. The situations which have convulsed audiences all over the globe have been brought to the screen faithfully. In addition, the irrepressible Benny has added several "twists" of his own that are immeasurably to the enjoyment of the film. Swift and sure, the droll humor of the master comedian tops every other screen comedy.

The story is that of the fellow who helps out a friend in his romance by posing as his aunt. He chaperones two girls and is himself pursued and proposed to by two gentlemen who are unaware of his true identity. Then the real aunt comes upon the scene. How he gets out of his predicament makes for one of the funniest climaxes ever screened.

Jack Benny is funnier than ever before as "Charley's Aunt". His reputation as the man who can get the more laughs out of comedy lines and situations is enhanced by his superb comedy performance.

Kay Francis, as Donna Lucin, the real aunt, handles her role smoothly, and James Ellison is excellent as Jack Chesney, the friend who needs help. Fine support is given by Edmund Gwenn, Ann Baxter, Reginald Owen, Arleen Whelan, Laird Cregar, Ernest Cossart, Richard Haydn and Morton Lowry.

Director Archie Mayo has kept the action and clever dialogue of the fine screen play by George Seaton moving at a rapid pace. It was produced by William Perlberg.

For guaranteed laughs, be sure to see "Charley's Aunt".

The latest pictures of the Dieppe Raid and other events from Home and Abroad will be exhibited on the same program with a color fun cartoon. "Neck and Neck" and a new edition of the March of Time, "America At War".

Chapter eleven of the "Sea Raider" serial will be exhibited on Saturday. Continuous shows will be presented today.

AT THE McCARTHY

"INVISIBLE AGENT"

One of the most remrakable technical productions ever filmed, now you see him: now you do not see him: is the best description we can give you about "Invisible Agent" which is based on a story by H. G. Wells and the current presentation at the McCarthy Theatre.

To give you an inkling of the story, would in our estimation be unfair, first because it is something practically new in film production and second the story is so full of suspense that to give a review of it in this column would be an injustice to all. So different and out of the ordinary, "Invisible Agent" should be the talk of Belleville, before its showing ends. The cast includes lovely Ilona Massey, Jon Hall, Peter Lorre, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, J. Edward Bromberg, John Litel and Albert Basserman, each of whom deserve the highest praise for their excellent performances. The second feature is one which also has been well produced and holds interest through the medium of a good story background "Stagecoach Express" featuring Don (Red) Barry, Lynn Merrick, Al St. John and Robert Kent. This western was made by the studio who also make the Gene Autry productions. An amusing comedy cartoon in technicolor adds extra enjoyment to the program.

Abbott and Costello.

Three hours of laughter and shivers are promised to McCarthy patrons next week when the program Abbott and Costello in "Hold That Ghost", Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard in "The Ghost Breakers" and the special cartoon "A Hunting We Will Go" will be presented. It's a ghost-to-ghost hookup, with more laughs than you've dreamed were possible. Remember this fun show is coming to the McCarthy Theatre next week.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Spooks Run Wild"

Thrilling horror and shrieks of laughter are combined in "Spooks Run Wild," the Monogram mystery comedy which comes next to the Capitol Theatre and co-stars Bela Lugosi and the "East Side Kids."

Unmindful of the fact that a vicious killer known as "The Monster" is at large in the vicinity of the boys' camp at which they are staying, Leo Gorcey, Bobby Jordan, Huntz Hall and the other members of the gang venture out at night, and become lost in the woods. Finally they blunder into an abandoned old mansion which has just been occupied by the leering Lugosi and his dwarf companion, and go through a night of terror which is filled with passages of unconscious hilarity.

Eventually the breath of terror touches Lugosi himself, and it is then that the involved motives of the characters produce a welter of cross-purposes and hilarious situations. Dark hallways, trap doors and coffin-strewn cellars play their part in creating an atmosphere of horror, and the picture reaches its climax with a young woman in real danger of her life.

"Hold Back the Dawn"

In "Hold Back the Dawn," the Capitol's added feature, the handsome Charles Boyer is a suave European scoundrel whose interest in women is in direct proportion to the size of their bank accounts. With the once gay spots of the Continent gone, perhaps forever, he turns to new lush fields in America but finds the United States closed to him by a small matter of the quota.

Marrying an unsuspecting American girl just to get across the border, and then planning to toss her aside in favor of a former dancing partner, doesn't worry the Boyer conscience any in this fast-moving romantic drama. Miss de Havilland plays opposite Boyer as the little school teacher, his victim and Paulette Goddard is the glamorous and worldly wise dancer.

Albanian Patriots Blow Up Factory

Ankara, Sept. 17 (delayed), (AP). — Albanian authorities in refuge here said today patriots had blown up a tank and machine repair factory near Tirana, capital of the Italian-occupied country, destroyed a Tirana hotel and set fire to a Fascist wool warehouse at Durrazzo in July and August.

Bomb-wielding guerillas were reported to have damaged severely an Italian military convoy on the Kruja-Burrel road last month.

The greatest destruction in all the forays apparently was in the tank and repair factory near Tirana July 8, the Albanians said.

COXSWAIN PRAISED BY COMMANDER

Although shells were whistling all around him and the wheelhouse was a fiery furnace, Chief Petty Officer Max Bernays, H.M.C.S. Assiniboine's coxswain, stood by the helm and carried out to perfection every order from the bridge. Thus the skilful manoeuvring of the Canadian ship was, in the end, responsible for the destruction of the U-boat. Bernays wins great praise from his commanding officer. TEN PUPPIES

Brantford, Ont., Sept. 19 (CP).—Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Fitzgerald, of Brantford, claim some sort of record for their fox terrier, "Glory", which recently gave birth to ten puppies. Nine of the litter survived.

COL. GUINDON TO COMMAND

Montreal, Sept. 19 (CP).—Major Arthur Guindon, Ste. Agathe, Que., has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant-colonel and is appointed officer commanding the second battalion (R) of Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal, Brig.-Gen. E. Deb. Panet, officer commanding Military District No. 4, announced yesterday. Lt.-Col. Guindon is 45 and has been associated with the regiment for 19 years.

CLOSE RANGE

Acting Lt.-Cmdr. John W. Bonner of Halifax was killed when his ship, the Charlottetown, was torpedoed, but the commander of the Assiniboine, Lt.-Cmdr. J. Hamilton Stubbs of Halifax, formerly of Victoria, sailed his craft into an eastern port to report the loss of one man and the wounding of 14 in the battle with the U-boat.

The navy's official historian, Dr. Gilbert Tucker, was aboard the Assiniboine, and on reaching port had this to say of the action:

"For many years naval warfare on the surface has normally been long-range warfare. The very unusual feature of this action was the extreme shortness of range. Every movement of a German on the submarine's deck was clearly . . . from the destroyer and the opposing gunners were almost glaring into each other's faces.

"This condition governed the manoeuvring and the use of the armament from beginning to end and called for a considerable amount of improvisation.

"It was a difficult situation to be in and the whole ship's complement well deserved the warm praise which they have since received. Although nothing but light stuff came over there were remarkably few casualties, considering the range, intensity and duration of the U-boat's fire and the almost total lack of cover on a destroyer's decks."

Battle of Manoeuvre and Gunfire.

The Assiniboine lost the U-boat in a curtain of fog after first sighting it but kept hunting. Suddenly out of the mist, only 50 yards away, the submarine re-appeared and the fight was on.

It was a battle of manoeuvre as well as of gunfire. The destroyer had an advantage in speed but the German craft was shorter and could turn more quickly.

Fire broke out on the destroyer's deck and interfered with its fire control but the guns were fired individually and a fire party got the blaze out.

After the ramming survivors of the U-boat crew climbed on deck with their hands up and jumped into the sea as their ship took its last dive, to be rescued by the Canadians. Their commander was killed when a Canadian shell hit his conning tower.

RUSSIAN RESERVES

sinking of four merchant ships, shows that the U-boats, believed to have swung northward when hunting became less happy than before in southern waters, are attacking Canadian-escorted convoys with some effect.

fighting which cost the lives of 400 Finns.

(The Berlin radio, referring to a region which the Russians call the Kalinin front, reported that the Red army had launched big attacks against German positions along a four-mile section southeast of Lake Ilmen.)

Germans Concentrate Tanks

Ominous concentrations of German tank strength were noted in the Battle of the central Caucasus but official accounts said the invaders were hammered hard in the Mosdok area of the Terek River valley.

Unable entirely to oust a wedge driven into Stalingrad's streets yesterday in the third of a series of Nazi drives from the northwest, the Russians fenced off their holdings with gun and bayonet and Red Star said they gave no further ground in the city.

The mid-day communique emphasised the repulse of attacks by the Russians, who are fighting through a din of shellfire and bombing threaded with the wail of Stuka sirens.

Spirits of the Soviet reserves newly-ferried across the Volga to the embattled city are high, said a dispatch to the newspaper Pravda. They are among the troops organized and trained in Siberia.

Field reports said night skies were bright with explosions, burning buildings and the light from thousands of flares. Tons of bombs were showered down by German air force squadrons.

Seen Recaptured Position.

Red Star said that at one place, after planes had strafed and bombed a group of buildings, the Russians were forced to retire before a charge of two regiments of infantry and 100 tanks. But the Russians were declared to have regrouped quickly and won back their positions.

With the same violence the Germans assaulted a hill which commands the centre of the city and important traffic arteries, the army newspaper said.

Nazi planes loosed several hundred bombs in a 45-minute preparatory bombardment. Fifty tanks then rumbled up the hill, their guns pounding at the defenders.

Several tanks were camouflaged as Russian, even bearing Red army insignia, and many of the German troops were dressed in Russian uniforms instead of their grey-green, Red Star declared.

Nazi automatic riflemen, some of them also reported in Russian garb, swarmed into the fighting and the Red Army troops were forced from some positions around the hill.

All Attempts Fail

The Russians counter-attacked, however, Red Star said, and restored their positions in a five-hour battle.

The Soviet Information Bureau apparently referred to this hill in a midnight report on fighting for "a commanding height".

"All German attempts to capture this valuable position have failed" the Information Bureau said.

Perhaps referring again to the same area, it announced at mid-day that the Germans "made repeated attempts to capture our positions which covered the approaches to an important objective".

"The defenders of Stalingrad, with hand grenades, destroyed six tanks and then, in a hand-to-hand engagement, killed 170 German officers and men", it was d state. "The enemy was compelled to retreat".

Fierce fighting was declared continuing on the northwestern outskirts of Stalingrad.

Fighting Unparalleled

"Our 'N' unit repulsed several enemy attacks, destroyed four German tanks and three anti-tank guns and wiped out over 200 Hitlerites", a communique said.

Dispatches said the street fighting was so bloody it probably was unparalleled in the German-Russian war.

The government newspaper Isvestia said many streets and yards were littered with German dead. It said 400 in gray-green uniforms were counted in the yards along one short street after the Russians had driven back an attack.

The invaders were reported fortifying houses as swiftly as they moved up, digging ditches and erecting street barricades. Many of these positions have been retaken, the newspaper said, but some are still in Nazi hands.

Field dispatches said three tank divisions and two infantry divisions had been defeated as they tried to expand German holdings in the Mosdok area.

The mid-day communique announced that one Soviet unit engaged in the Mosdok area "destroyed seven German tanks, six guns and 13 trucks with infantry and wiped out about 300 enemy officers and men."

The Red Army men of Stalingrad, who fight, eat and cat-nap on sodden earth jarred by the crump of Nazi explosives, were within 24 hours of matching the record of Sevastopol, where Russian forces held out 27 days against the Germans' climatic Crimean offensive.

Drawn and battle-soiled Soviet detachments gave ground before a powerful Nazi drive from the northwest again yesterday, the Russians said, and again they counter-attacked with a fury that inches the invasion machine back along debris-cluttered streets.

But their task was incomplete at nightfall and axis transports loaded with Nazi parachutists were reported interspersed among the German bombing squadrons sent against the tortured Volga River city.

CHAPTER 30

Reconciliation

The nearest hospital was an hour's drive from Hillsacres, and while Greg piloted his car down the road like a veritable demon, Steve knelt in the back of the car over Linda's unconscious figure. Over and over again he reproached himself, Diane, who had no idea that Steve had confessed his love to Linda, said nothing to relieve his mental suffering.

Diane urged Greg to hurry faster and faster until the car approached the hospital, when she broke into sobs of relief.

"She'll be all right," Diane was saying as internes bore Linda away on a stretcher. "I know she'll be all right."

Waiting in the lounge for news, the trio was strangely quiet. Hunched in a chair, Steve stared at an unopened magazine. Greg paced back and forth across the room, smoking one cigarette after another. Diane tried unsuccessfully to keep from thinking of that brightly-lighted operating room where Linda was under observation.

At last a nurse appeared, and the three sprung up. Steve implored her for news. Diane held her breath.

"Mrs. Baridon is feeling much better now," the nurse said, smiling. "It was a slight concussion, but she'll be all right after a day or two in bed."

"Thank God," Steve said, turning away to hide tears of relief that streamed down his face.

"Then—it isn't serious?" Diane wanted reassurance. Linda had been so still. So white—

"Absolutely not. She'll be just fine."

Another nurse appeared then smiling first at Steve and then at Greg. "Mrs. Baridon is asking for her husband, please."

Steve started forward, dazed by this surprising information, unable to believe his own ears. "But—that's me," he said hesitantly. "She—she wouldn't want to see me."

"No, of course not," Greg blustered, but without conviction. "You must be mistaken. I'm the one she wants."

The pretty nurse was obviously confused. The idea of two handsome young men fighting for the attention of her patient was almost too much.

"Mrs. Baridon is asking for Mr. Baridon." She was slightly nettled. "If you're both named Baridon—"

Triumphantly, Diane shoved Steve toward the door. "Go on, you big goof," she ordered happily. "It's you Linda wants, and you're going if I have to drag you there."

After Steve had followed the nurse into the wide corridor, Diane turned to Greg. The meeting between Steve and Linda she had so carefully planned had been carried out, although it had nearly ended in disaster. Her work was done. Any tenderness her eyes might have contained as they rested on Steve were gone now.

"Will Greg," she said, on a voice that was cool and cynical, "that's the last curtain. Shall we go?"

Dull-eyed he stared at her. "Then—Linda doesn't intend to—to marry me? It's Steve, after all?"

Diane felt a surge of pity for Greg. After all, it was hard for the man to realize he had been only a pawn in a game too big for him to understand. She knew with certainty that Greg had learned his lesson. Never again would he be the insolent, audacious playboy, but a sadder, wiser man.

"Yes," she answered, "it has always been Steve for Linda, but neither of them realized that until it was nearly too late." Shivering a little as she remembered how near Linda had come to never revealing the truth, Diana glanced up at Greg, admiring his courage despite the fact that his weak, handsome face was set in lines of suffering.

"Cheer up, Greg," she said. "It's just like a story-book romance. Boy loses girl. Boy gets girl, and there are two people left on the outside looking in." She put her hand through his arm in a gesture of companionship. "Shall we go?"

Slowly, silently they turned and walked down the wide stone steps from the hospital to face the bright autumn sunshine. Here, Diane knew, an understanding world awaited. Here, together, they would find solace.

Meanwhile, Steve followed the pretty nurse through the long hospital corridors, unaware of the comments of passing nurses as they stared after the handsome, sober-faced man in immaculate, well-fitting riding togs. Steve's thoughts were chaotic. Even now it was hard for him to understand that he, not Greg, had been summoned.

The nurse paused outside a closed door, suddenly aware that this was no ordinary meeting between husband and wife, but something too precious to be spoiled by the presence of a stranger.

"Mrs. Baridon is in this room," she said. "I'll wait out here."

For a moment Steve hesitated, his heart pounding. Then, resolutely he opened the door and entered the room where Linda was waiting. For a moment she did not see him, and Steve melt a lump in his throat at sight of the tiny figure in the bed. There were bandages over her forehead and her eyes were closed.

Steve moved nearer, until he was standing at her side. Then Linda's eyes opened slowly—slowly until she saw him.

"Steve, dear," she whispered happily, her arms reaching up to him. With a sob Steve sank to his knees beside her. Tenderly, hungrily he pressed her against him.

"Oh, my dearest," he whispered brokenly, "I thought I had killed you."

"And would that have meant so much to you?" she asked, her eyes like stars, now that misunderstanding had been forgotten. She felt a swift thrill of happiness as his arms tightened around her.

"How can you ask me that when I love you so much?" he demanded huskily. "Linda—am I dreaming, or is this really you? I've wanted to hold you like this for so long."

"And I've wanted you, too," she answered. Gravely she told him the entire story, sparing no detail in her confession until she reached the point where she had returned from Prairievale to find Steve lunching with Brenda.

At that point she felt his arms tighten around her and she finished softly. "So I decided that I had been wrong—that I had misunderstood what you said when I went away. I—I didn't want you to feel you were tied to me, Steve. That was why I pretended I was dissatisfied when all the time—" She could not finish, but listened with glowing eyes while Steve explained.

"I told you the truth about being unable to meet your train," he said, "and I did meet Brenda. She asked me to take her to lunch, and naturally I had to agree. She—she told me a great many things about you that I never would have believed under ordinary circumstances, but when I came home and found you telephoning Greg, all the things she had said came back to me. I was half crazy with jealousy. From then on—"

"From then on, each of us misunderstood everything the other did," Linda murmured gently. "Oh, Steve, how foolish we've been. Think how much we've missed by our blindness!"

"We shared a great many things in the past," Steve whispered as he bent to kiss her soft lips. "Now we can begin to live for the future."

After a long time they drew apart, and Linda gazed shaken, into Steve's eyes.

For them it was a magic moment, when misunderstanding and doubt were cleared away by a simple caress. Linda made a gesture of helplessness. "I was thinking of Diane, Steve. She's done so much for us—bringing us together again. I want her to find happiness."

"I think she will, my darling," he assured her gently. "Diane pretends to be hard, but her heart is made of gold. She'll be all right."

Again they were silent.

"You'll be a very rich young lady, Mrs. Baridon." Steve whispered gravely, "and a very popular one now that our book is going to be a moving picture. Will a honeymoon in Hollywood answer the purpose?"

"Hollywood?" Linda was surprised "Then, you aren't taking your horses south?"

Steve shook his head. "Of course not. Dad takes them every year. What made you think I was going? I'm to be a consultant on the new picture."

For Linda the last vestige of doubt had been swept away by that simple declaration. Brenda was forgotten now, a vague, shadowy figure of her past that could never touch Linda's newly-found happiness. Linda realized she had taken Brenda's planned trip to Saratoga as evidence that Steve would be there too.

Now she drew Steve's head down to the pillow beside her own.

"I'd love a honeymoon in Hollywood," she assured him, "but only on one condition."

"And that?" he urged.

"That after the picture is finished, we can go home—to Hillsacres."

Slowly Steve turned his head until his lips touched hers in a kiss that held a promise of the happy future they would share.

"Hillsacres it is, darling," he whispered. "Together."

IN MEMORIAM

STORMS — In fond and loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Olive Lena Storms, who died September 19th., 1941.

What is home without a Mother,
What are all the joys we had,
Where her smiles no longer greets
The coming of our feet?

Through those years she travelled on,
And those dear hands are now resting.
To those who have a Mother,
Cherish her with loving care.
There will never be another to take her place.

—Sadly missed by Husband and Family. S19

Wednesday Set For Children's Day at the Fair

Wednesday is to be Children's Day at the Belleville Fair. The decision came about following Friday night's meeting of the Belleville Board of Education when that body and the public school principals were requested to select whatever day of the fair suitable for the children to attend without interfering too much with their studies. The Board and principals agree upon Wednesday when young Belleville will view the wonders of the Fair, announced Mr. L. A. Kens, secretary-administrator of the Board of Education today. Originally the Fair Board had requested the Board of Education to set "children's day" through the public school principals. The "big nickel" will reign supreme on Children's Day.

NAZI EXPLANATIONS

London, Sept. 19 (CP)—The Germans, who have offered rain and a colossal defence system as explanations for their inability to crack Stalingrad's 26 day old resistance to Nazi seige, added today also that smoke gets in their eyes.

"Great clouds of smoke and flame render the operations of the attacking troops still more difficult," a German military spokesman said in a Berlin broadcast.

"Torrents of blood have flowed through the streets of the city for the past two days."

Strong Farm Policy Urged By United Church Council

'Subsistence Farmers' Called "Forgotten People Because Least Articulate"

SOUND FARM CREDIT

United Church General Council Commissioners in the closing moments of the session recommended a strong farm policy that includes farm credit, parity prices, agrarian marketing, the family farm and an all-out endorsement of farm organization.

Dr. J. R. Mutchmor, Toronto, presenting the report stated that the subsistence farmers of Canada are the "forgotten people because they are the least articulate in agrarian society." He termed the family farm "the bedrock of agrarian economy" and urged measures of conserving the family structure in farming as compared to that of urban industrialism.

The report recommended that the United Church support the efforts of farm organizations to secure adequate marketing legislation, both provincial and federal, to give Canadian farmers the protection afforded other citizens of Canada.

Farmers' Credit Unions.

Recommending that farm credit be placed on a sound basis and where possible and practical, farmers themselves organize credit unions, Dr. Mutchmor stated that where economic conditions create an emergency in which credit-debtor relations arise, the state should set up the necessary debt adjustment machinery.

The Canadian people were urged in the report, to be prepared to accept now and in the immediate future a sane collectivism, and further that this attitude be taken in the interests of agriculture wherever the need clearly indicates.

The type of collectivism is one that non-farmers should neither fear nor deprecate, Dr. Mutchmor pointed out. In some cases the state has helped bolster farm incomes and in other cases has spent public money on agrarian rehabilitation programs.

Farmers' Efficiency.

Farmers' efficiency in reducing costs of goods has in many periods been much greater than manufacturers' efficiency in reducing costs of goods farmers must buy, the report stated in urging parity prices. The farmer is limited in his purchase of goods to the amount he receives for the commodities he sells.

The farmer would agree, Dr. Mutchmor said, that not only he as a worker and owner should receive this parity price but also his hired man, and all who serve in rural districts. In other words the farmer is asking for equal justice for all services of the country.

The report recommended that the justice of this claim be recognized and the United Church urge upon governmental authorities the necessity of this measure of economic justice, for those who make their living from the soil.

Egg Prices Firm Three to Five Cents on Market

The price of Grade "A" eggs strengthened three to five cents per dozen on the local produce market this morning with vendors quoting as high as 45 cents, although the majority of eggs were sold at 43c. Mediums were quoted at 38 and 40 cents while pullets brought 30c to 35 cents per dozen. Chickens sold generally at 30 cents the pound with well-finished birds bringing as high as $1.75, while the general price asked ranged from $1. to $1.25. A few vendors offered dairy butter at the usual 40 cents per pound.

Special grade Elberta peaches were quoted up to 65 cents the six quart basket, while other grades ranged from 35 cents and up to 55 cents. Grapes were quite freely offered at 55 cents the six quart basket, with Damson plums bringing 40 cents the basket and Rene Claudes 65 cents.

Many Apples

Apples were offered in considerable quantity with St. Lawrence variety bringing $1.75 per hamper, McIntosh, $1.50 per hamper, and cooking varieties $1 per bushel.

The largest quantity of melons, both varieties, to be seen on the market this season was in evidence with prices ranging up to 26 cents each for muskmelons and up to 45 cents for watermelons.

Corn sold at 25 cents the dozen ears, with tomatoes bringing 20c the six quart basket or from 75c to 90c the bushel. Potatoes brought the usual 45 cents the peck and $1.50 per bushel. Cauliflower up to 30 cents each and seasonal vegetables at the usual prices. Cucumbers sold from 25 cents to 50 cents the basket, according to size.

Whitefish brought 30 cents the pound while pickerel sold at 25c the pound.

Young porkers were plentiful with farmers asking from $6 to $8 each, according to age and quality.

Officer Tells How Lt. Col. Merritt Carried Him to Safety at Dieppe

Peterborough Lieutenant Says He Hears Col. Merritt Has Been Recommended for the V.C.

Peterboro, Ont., Sept. 21 (CP) — Lt.-Col. Leslie England, in a letter received by his father, Roy England of Peterboro, related how after being wounded at the battle of Dieppe, he was carried to safety by his commanding officer, Lt.-Col. C. C. I. Merritt of Vancouver. Lt. Col. Merritt has been reported officially as a prisoner of war.

A member of the South Saskatchewan Regiment, Lieut. England said: "Col. Merritt is posted as missing and I have heard he has been recommended for the V.C. I hope he gets it and I hope he is alive. He was very instrumental in getting me back.

"It was he who arranged for my stretcher-bearers, one of whom was shot, and I was left in the open field for some time. Then the Colonel picked me up and carried me about 100 yards, then I walked a bit with his help, and then he and his batman carried me to the regimental aid post."

Lieut. England told how he was taken to the beach wall and there after a time he heard a shout and saw everyone heading for the barges. He managed to get across the beach and into the water where he was picked up.

Weekly War Commentary

By Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Gwynn

London, Sept. 19 —(CP Cable)— Another week has passed without any slackening in the German attack or in the tenacity of the Russian defence at Stalingrad.

The Germans still are able to bring up fresh reserves and maintain their density of air concentrations. The Russians also have received reinforcements, presumably from the north.

Field Marshal Fedor von Bock's main drives seem now to have been switched to the northwest sector of the city and the Nazi forces appear to be closing in on this section as well as in the southwest.

Von Bock is making his greatest effort at the points where he has achieved the greatest previous success and using his maximum concentration of bombers to break down Russian resistance.

Nazi Casualties

German casualties must be terrific but the troops, seeing their goal so near, evidently are prepared to face them in the hope that success may bring them a respite. Should they achieve this success, there may, however, be a reaction and it is doubtful whether they would respond with the same determination if called upon to make another major effort with a new objective this year.

Possibly this is one reason why the German people are being warned the decisive results should not be expected and that another Russian winter must be endured.

Caucasus Drive

On the Cacasus front, the Nazi drive along the Baku railway toward Grozny has made little progress although the enemy has gained a footing across the Terek River. No bridgeheads of sufficient size to permit the deployment of large forces seems to have been established. With snow falling in the mountains, there now seems no probability that the Nazis will attempt this year to attack southward by the military road crossing the higher passes of the Caucasus.

RUSSIANS AT NOVOROSSISK

Although the Russians were forced to evacuate Novorossisk, they appear still to be clinging to the southern outskirts of that town and even to have counter-attacked. It is therefore not certain that the Germans will find it easy to advance along the coast road toward Tuapse and any use they will be able to make of Novorossisk must depend largely on how far Tuapse and Batum will go toward providing operation bases for the Black Sea fleet.

AIR WAR

The fact that the Russians have been able to persist in their long-range bombing attacks is encouraging. Their dislocation value must be considerable and they appear, like the recent R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. raids to be making German transportation focal points their principal objectives.

If the reported attack on the Rumanian oilfields succeeded in damaging refineries, its effect will be of great importance.

In Egypt, since Marshal Erwin Rommel was forced back to his original positions after his short-lived offensive, routine patrol activities and artillery exchanges have been resumed while both sides wait, and receive, reinforcements.

Rommel's Losses

Rommel's losses must be considerable. In addition, raids like that on Tobruk, are often worth trying to test the enemy's precautions. Repetitions, however, are not justified unless there is a wide choice of targets which would cause the enemy to disperse his forces.

Far East.

The attempts made by the Japanese to land reinforcements for their parties still at large in the Solomon Islands suggest that this move was made with the object of preparing the way for a definite attempt to recover the base they lost to the United States Marines. They appear now to have initiated larger operations and they may develop these still further.

The Owen Stanley Mountains have not proved to be an insurmountable obstacle to the Japanese. With increased familiarity with the enemy's tactics and with shorter and better lines of communication, the Australians now have checked the Japanese advance.

GRAPHIC PICTURE GIVEN OF HIGHWAY INTO ALASKA

John Archer of Beaverlodge, Alberta, Tells Chamber of Commerce Directors of Gigantic Undertaking

PEACE RIVER COUNTRY

Interesting particulars in regard to the new Alaskan military highway were given at the Director's luncheon of the Chamber of Commerce by Mr. John Archer, barrister of Beaverlodge, Alberta, and delegate to the convention of the General Council of the United Church which has been in session here.

Mr. Archer had the privilege of looking over a section of this wonder highway just prior to his departure for Belleville.

It was only in February last, stated Mr. Archer, that a party of American surveyors and engineers arrived to map out the route and determine the plan of construction. In a few months this thousand-mile road will be open for traffic from end to end. Considering the tremendous difficulties which had to be met and overcome this gigantic undertaking will, when completed, surpass all other world-records in roadway building.

The new route will take the traveller over powerful and swift-flowing rivers, mountain defiles of breath-taking depth, dizzy heights where wild animals find insecure footing, forests of timber such as British Columbia alone can produce and muskegs whose depths have never been sounded. All of these barriers to progress have been met and overcome by men and machines and a work, which would ordinarily have taken half-a dozen years to accomplish, will be turned over to the government, in as many months.

The new road to Alaska is not to be a mere mountain trail. It will be a grand example of road-making science. The grades will be easy and the curves wherever possible will give 500 feet of clear vision ahead.

Bowl Over Huge Primeval Giants

The valleys between the mountains are, in the main, occupied by forest trees of the size and height used to provide masts for great ocean liners. But the construction gangs have herculean machines which bowl over these primeval giants in much the same manner as a mower lays low a timothy meadow.

Mr. Archer spoke enthusiastically of the vast wealth of minerals and other natural resources that the new road will make accessible to Canada. Enormous deposits of coal and iron of the highest quality have already been located. Other minerals of great importance are known to exist in quantity. High octane gasoline is now being refined not far from the southern entrance and the fabulous riches of the tar sands of the Mackenzie River valley are within easy travelling distance to the east.

Sees Future Development

In fact, Mr. Archer envisions a future development for this north-western territorial expanse such as will add another enormous area of industrial, agricultural and home-making possibilities away beyond anything Canadians have ever experienced. Here he believes will be found the ideal place of settlement for the great armies of Canadian soldiers when they return from the war.

The new highway will not be the only means of access to this unspoiled empire. The United States government already has a great staff of engineers on the ground, and working out from Prince George, B.C., to locate the route for a new railway that will extend the present system into Alaska. The party had completed the survey of part of the proposed route for the new line at the time of Mr. Archer's departure for the east. The railway will parallel the new road, but will be nearer the Pacific coast.

Peace River Country

Mr. Archer regards the Peace River country as the best and most reliable farming area in all western Canada. That district has never had a crop failure. In that terrible decade of drought and famine, between 1930 and 1940, Peace River never had a general average of less than ten bushels of wheat to the acre. Often it was twice that amount. This year it may average thirty bushels.

It is now twenty-six years since Mr. Archer became domiciled in western Canada. He is of English birth but completed his education in Canadian schools and colleges. He is a strong believer in the Chamber of Commerce movement and has been personally responsible for the organization of a number of boards of trade and chambers of commerce in the Province of Alberta. He has also proved his faith by his works by serving as secretary of the board of trade, for many years, in his own home town.

The General Council has brought many interesting and widely informed visitors to Belleville and in those important respects the town of Beaverridge should be proud of its own genial representative.

Single Nazi Raider Over S. E. Britain, No Casualties

London, Sept. 19 (CP)—A single German air raider bombed and machine-gunned an area on the southeast coast of Britain in daylight today after sweeping low across the English Channel and dodging through heavy anti-aircraft defences.

First reports indicated there were no casualties, however.

There was no aerial activity over Britain during the night and the R.A.F. presumably was grounded by bad weather over the continent, although reports from Stockholm said a number of planes—later described by the German-controleld Paris radio as British—had crossed the west coast of Sweden.

The Stockholm dispatches said Swedish anti-aircraft batteries had fired warning shots at the planes. Shortly before their appearance observers on the Swedish coast reported hearing heavy explosions in the direction of Denmark, 15 miles away by sea.

THRESHING RECORD

St. Thomas, Ont., Sept. 19 (CP).—A threshing record is claimed by Stanley B. Cook, South Yarmouth farmer who reports harvesting 602 bushels of oats and barley from six measured acres. The oats run close to 40 pounds to the bushel.

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 19 (CP)—Shipment of Canadian wheat to Russia takes on added significance in view of a widespread belief here that Russia faces a threat of famine this winter.

It has been estimated that Russia has lost 40 per cent of her food-producing regions to the Germans, including more than 50 per cent of her wheat acreage. The Russians, it is realised here, will require every pound of food that Canada, the United States and, to a lesser extent, Britain, can ship her this winter if famine conditions are to be averted. The Middle East and Africa may also contribute food but the bulk may have to cross the North Atlantic.

Zero Pins

The Japanese have started to add armor to their Zero fighter which up to now, because it has had no protecting steel for the pilot, could climb and manoeuvre faster and more easily than American fighter planes in the South Pacific, particularly the P-40. In many instances Japanese pilots, to conserve the last ounce of weight, did not carry parachutes.

The Zero was a dead duck whenever it was hit in a vulnerable spot but it was tough to catch. American pilots, flying slower ships, have made up the difference in better training, deadlier shooting and tactical superiority but back in Washington there has been an ever-increasing wail because some American fighter planes are not standing up to world competition.

News Notes

Liudmila Pavlichenko, the Russian girl guerilla and sniper, officially credited with killing 309 Nazis, may go to Canada to take part in the next Victory Loan campaign. She has been attending the International Student Assembly here... Ellis G. Aarnall, 35-year-old lawyer who beat Gene Talmadge for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Georgia, is ambitious politically and, according to his friends, has his eye on the White House some day.

Boston Light, set up on little Brewster Island at the mouth of Boston harbor in 1716, has been doused for the duration. It is the oldest lighthouse in the United States and probably on the continent... Vice President Henry A. Wallace converses easily and fluently in Spanish.

The United States army air force, taking to heart the lessons of the battle of Crete, is using a glider designed to carry 15 men with full equipment and a smaller one with a nine-man load.

It must be a record. There are nine staff members, four secretaries and one telephone girl in the press division of the office of censorship. They handle censorship for all United States newspapers on an annual budget of $140,000. Washington has never seen anything like it and still doesn't believe it's possible.

Remembering that happened to the Versailles Peace Treaty after the Democrats lost control of Congress in 1918, leading to United States isolation and President Wilson's premature death, the Democrats are leaving no stones unturned in preparation for the November congressional elections. The odds favor them retaining control of both houses.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull's health is much improved but he still takes things easy, that is, easy for him... The United States still buys gold to bury in the ground at Fort Knox, Ky., and one of the reasons is that to end the practice might have serious political and economic repercussions in many of the United Nations, including South Africa.

Illustrating what is meant by "Washington, Hubbub World", they say that any girl can get a job here as a government stenographer who can enter a room containing a typewriter, a washing machine and a Garand rifle and successfully pick out the typewriter.

'Cigs' Continue To Flow Overseas

Cigarettes continue to flow overseas through the medium of the Belleville branch of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, unit 201 assuring Belleville and district boys much-needed smokes. Secretary James Lazenby, of the Army and Navy Vets., announced today that since the inception of the fund a few months ago upwards to 178,000 fags have been dispatched from the local veterans club to members of the armed services. Statistics showed that the organization has expended $592.00 for this particular cause since the first of the year. The fund is purely voluntary and carried on by public contributions and subscriptions from the veterans' association.

Those shipped individal packets of 300 cigarettes each by the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada this week included: Eric Law, J. A. Sine, J. W. Hanna, N. F. Hardwick, L. P. Stephens, S. P. LaFontaine, Geo. Diminie, J. E. Samaih, H. McDougall, H. E. Allemang, Adam Hill, D. R. Hays, G. G. Gregory, K. H. Baker, L. A. Boyle, P. Van Dusen, J. Capital Closeups

Ottawa, Sept. 19 — Right now the worst problem for the Director of Selective Service and his staff is to find more than 100,000 men for winter work in the forests. That is a purely domestic problem but there is one related to it with tricky international angles.

Down in the Maritimes Canadian workers are flocking across the border to work in the Maine woods, an annual event. But this year the home labor situation is so desperate they can't be spared in the normal numbers.

The outlook is for a Canada-United States agreement cutting the border-crossing quota by a sizeable margin. There ought to be an announcement soon.

Mixed up with its tough problems, though, selective service has its lighter side. For instance there's the French-Canadian down Riviere du Loup way who wants them to find him a "real good job" so he can "take girls out at night."

The army has always been fair game for the young fallow who made out he was a couple of years older than his actual age so he could get past the recruiting sergeant. Now the army thinks it has things fixed so they'll stay fixed.

Before the lads even see the medical officer in the distance they have to produce a registration card which has been issued to all Canadians over 16.

"Beat that," says the army, happily.

An intriguing subject for discussion—in hushed voices always—is the progress of the Alaska highway being built from Fort St. John, B.C., by United States troops. Government officials know as much as anyone about what goes on and they come back from northern expeditions with big, round eyes and expressive "ahs!"

But when you ask about United States reports that some kind of road will be through to Alaska before the year-end they mutter that "It's a United States show" and not for Canadians to talk about, for publication anyway.

All they do say in private is good; that the Americans are pretty competent people when it comes to building roads—and other things.

Maybe you didn't believe those short stories about overcrowded Ottawa? This corner reports that even Premier Bracken of Manitoba here this week, spent the first hour or so of his stay looking for a hotel room.

And a sign-off note: Those A.R.P. sandbags stacked through the corridors of the parliament buildings are out of sight now. They've been provided with the neatest little red boxes, marked "Public Works Department."

SQUEAKY SHOES FASHIONABLE

New York, Sept. 18 —(AP)—What's that squeaking on the floor? It may be noisy, but it's fashionable. So says Mrs. Esther Tufty, newspaperwoman just back from England.

"The war has made squeaky shoes fashionable in London. A poor grade of leather used is responsible—but it's patriotic," she said.

SEMINARY STAFF, STUDENTS HELP TO PICK APPLES

Gettysburg, Pa., Sept. 18 —(AP)—The president, faculty and students of Gettysburg Lutheran Theological Seminary will don overalls Monday and help neighboring farmers harvest a bumper apple crop. Dr. Abdel Ross Wentz, 55-year-old president, said the school will close at noon daily until the crop, threatened by a labor shortage, is in. They will receive eight cents for every bushel picked.

Third Destroyer And 10th Ship Lost Since Start of War

Five Officers, 65 Canadian Ratings And Six Royal Navy Ratings Survive

THIRD LOSS IN WEEK

Ottawa, Sept. 21. (CP) — The Canadian Destroyer Ottawa has been sunk by enemy torpedo, her commanding officer, four officers and 107 ratings are missing and believed killed, and one other man died of wounds, Navy Minister MacDonald announced today.

Naval Services headquarters released only meagre information in the initial announcement, relayed to the press by telephone.

Commander of the Ottawa, one of the Navy's older destroyers, was Lt.-Cmdr. Clark Anderson Rutherford.

Five officers, 65 Canadian ratings and six Royal Navy ratings were listed as survivors.

It was expected a fuller statement on the sinking, including lists of casualties and survivors, would be issued about noon, E. D.T.

It was the third navy loss to be announced in about a week—a heavier toll than Canada's fleet ever before suffered in such a short time.

Scene Not Specific

Scene of the action was not specified.

The Ottawa was one of the destroyers which escorted the King and Queen between Vancouver and Victoria during the 1939 Royal visit. She was stationed on the west coast for some time before the war.

The Ottawa is the third destroyer—and 10th ship—lost by the Canadian Navy since the start of the war. The Destroyer Fraser was sunk in June, 1940, off the coast of France during the evacuation of French ports after the fall of that country, and the Margaree which replaced the Fraser was sunk later that year in a collision, while on Atlantic convoy duty.

Last week the Navy disclosed the sinking of the patrol vessel Raccoon and the corvette Charlottetown.

All three recent losses, as well as the spectacular victory of the Destroyer Assiniboine over a German submarine, are conducted with a recent increase in enemy submarine activity directed against the northern Transatlantic route on which the Canadian Navy does a major share of the convoy escort duty.

Other vessels lost by the Navy since the start of the war were the corvettes Levis, Spikenard and Windflower and the patrol ships Otter and Bras D'Or.

NAVAL TUG RELEASED

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 21 —(CP)— The United States naval tug L T 54, which went aground at Wickett's Point, Prince Edward County Thursday while on its way to an Eastern Canadian port, was released late Friday by the Pike Salvage Company of Kingston, it was learned today.

Eight hundred barrels of oil were pumped out of the tug into a lighter taken to the scene of the grounding. The tug proceeded under its own power after the mishap, apparently none the worse.

2 New 35,000-Ton Battleships Now Ready for Action

London, Sept. 21 (CP) — The naval correspondent of The Daily Herald, commenting upon remarks made by First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander in a speech at Sheffield Sunday, wrote that it can be assumed that Britain's newest 35,000-ton battleships, the Anson and the Howe, are now ready for action.

The correspondent so interpreted a statement by Alexander that British losses in capital ships, aircraft carriers and cruisers had been matched by new construction, a reiteration of statements in a speech of September 3rd.

The correspondent estimated that around 200 destroyers, including the 50 over-age United Ships, had been added to the Royal Navy since the war began. He also said it was known that 200 corvettes are in service with the Royal Navy.

Fires Visible 30 Miles Started at Tobruk

CAIRO, Sept. 21 — (AP) — Fires visible 30 miles were started by R. A. F. heavy and medium bombers which attacked the Axis supply port of Tobruk, more than 300 miles west of the Egyptian battlefront, Saturday night, a communique said today.

The raid was the principal feature of the weekend in the North African theatre as the opposing ground forces remained inactive except for minor patrol skirmishes and artillery exchanges.

British fighters and bombers also were active over the battle lines yesterday, shooting down at least two enemy planes. Two other Axis planes were shot down over Sicily by fighters operating from Malta and schooners east of Tripoli were attacked with some success.

Commando Dagger Symbol for Loan

Ottawa, Sept. 21 (CP).—The Commando dagger, weapon of the ruthless, all-out warfare, will be the symbol for the $750,000,000 third Victory Loan campaign opening Oct. 19, it was announced today by G. W. Spinney, chairman of the National War Finance Committee.

"Canadians who buy third Victory Loan bonds next month will participate personally with Gen. McNaughton (Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Canadian Army Commander) and the Canadian army overseas in pointing the dagger at the heart of Berlin," Mr. Spinney's announcement said.

Moscow, Sept. 21 (AP)—Thwarted in their efforts to take Stalingrad by storm, the Germans began a mighty bombardment with heavy long-range guns that shook the city from end to end today, but still the Soviet defenders held firm and even gained ground at some points in hand-to-hand street fighting, the Russians announced.

Shells screaming into the city tore gaping craters in streets and squares and the thunder of the cannonading all but drowned out the clatter of machine-guns, rifles and mortars manned by opposing forces locked in close-quarter fighting in the suburbs, Pravda reported in a Stalingrad dispatch.

The bloody struggle increased in ferocity by the hour and Pravda said German dead were piling high in the streets, with the frantic Nazis not even taking time to remove their seriously wounded from the battlefield.

In the northwestern suburbs, locale of the heaviest fighting, the Russians and Germans were fighting it out house by house with the Soviet forces putting up the same valiant resistance that saved Moscow and Leningrad.

But despite frightful losses in dead the Germans hurled new divisions of tanks, armored cars and infantry and swarms of planes into the battle.

In the haze of smoke from flaming buildings and bursting shells and bombs the Germans were "at times able to advance," Pravda reported, but only a matter of yards at a frightful price in blood.

The countryside around Stalingrad was littered with piles of scrap metal which once were German tanks, trucks and cannon, the newspaper said.

On other fronts, Soviet dispatches sketched this situation:

Mozdok, in deep Caucasus: the Russians repelled several attacks and took some prisoners.

On the Black Sea coast southeast of Novoroshisk: The Nazis made no progress against the Russians holding the shore road and skirting heights to the Caucasus

POSSIBILITY IS FORESHADOWED

New Yor, Sept. 21 (CP.)—The Australian raido said today the possibility of conscription of women there ware foreshadowed by the War Organization Minister, John J. Dedman, who said that within the next six months 80,000 more women will be required for war work in Australia.

He added that while a compulsory call-up of women is not considered necessary now, it might be at some future date.

Australia and Netherland Troops Defy Japs in Mountains of Timor

Melbourne, Sept. 21 (AAP)—High up in the mountains of Portuguese Timor in the South Pacific a force of Australians well stocked with good food and tobacco is still defying the Japanese who announced occupation of the island February 19.

A mixed force of native troops from Netherlands Timor, the western half of the island, and Australians moved into Deli in the Portuguese colony ten days after the Japanese attack on the United States to forestall an expected Japanese invasion. Portugal protested against the Allied action and it was agreed the Allied troops would leave when Portuguese reinforcements arrived.

The first Japanese landing was made by 4,000 troops. The Australians were quartered outside the city of Deli, which fell easily to the Japanese February 19. The Australians, with The Netherlands troops which escaped Deli, moved into the interior.

Reports reaching Australia say the Japanese repeatedly have sent strong searching parties into the interior after the Australians and each time the Japanese have been ambushed and suffered severely.

The Australians are well armed and have ample ammunition and food beyond reach of the Japanese. They are reported to be in the best of health and have a medical officer with them.

The Japanese apparently have come to realize the futility of trying to drive them from their stronghold. Whenever they become too daring in seeking to find the Australians, the latter usually add a few more Japanese to their score.

Rail, Road Junction Of Brickaville Taken By Another Column

London, Sept. 21 (CP) — The Madagascar radio said today that British forces now are within 37 miles of Tananarive, the island capital. The broadcast was heard at Port Louis, on Mauritius Island.

The British column was said to be advancing from Majunga, northwest of the capital.

The force which landed at Tamatave on the east coast was said to be about 90 miles from the capital.

British East Africa headquarters announced that to the east of Tananarive the important rail and road junction of Brickaville had been occupied. From the northwest British troops were advancing south of Ankazobe, which was taken Sept. 17 after a short engagement. Ankazobe is about 50 miles airline from Tananarive.

On the northwest coast rain was failing, softening the earth, and the French had demolished roads extensively. But despite these difficulties the southward movement of the British forces was reported continuing. In this area Befotaka, south of Maromandia, was occupied and British advance units were moving toward Antsohihy, the communique said.

A column moving down the northeast coast reached Sahambava yesterday, it added.

MAY BE FORCED TO RATION BEEF SAYS D. GORDON

Allocation of Supplies and Placing of Ceilings Other Methods Proposed

SHORTAGE APPARENT

Ottawa, Sept. 21 (CP)—Canada's acute shortage of beef may lead to consumer rationing, Donald Gordon, Chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, said in a statement last night.

He announced two other methods of dealing with the situation were under consideration—allocation of supplies, and placing of ceilings on the prices of livestock in addition to existing ceilings on the prices of meat.

The announcement was the latest in a series of moves by the Board designated to overcome a dearth of domestic supplies of beef and to regulate marketing.

Earlier this month the board—which administers Canada's price ceiling system—made public a plan under a government agency, Wartime Food Corporation, becomes the only cattle exporter, and will buy only when Canadian prices fall below certain levels.

At that time it was said beef supplies were sufficient to meet only 25 to 30 per cent of the civilian demand and Foods Administrator J. G. Taggart predicted it would take "a couple of weeks to a month" to overcome the shortage.

May Require Further Action

Mr. Gordon said: "The situation with respect to the supply of beef and other fresh meat in the domestic market may require further action by the board along lines similar to those already announced in the United States. These would include allocation of supplies and consumer rationing.

"The Board is also studying methods of establishing ceilings on the prices of livestock in addition to the present ceilings on the prices of meat. Cattle prices at present are substantially higher than the appropriate seasonal level and must be expected to decline this autumn."

The Wartime Prices and Trade Board has appeared to be somewhat in conflict with the Agriculture Department on the beef problem.

Abundance of Feed

Imposition of a sliding-scale of price ceilings on beef, varied seasonally, which was announced two months ago, was expected to provide a regular flow of the existing supplies. Wholesale prices were staggered to bring the producer a better return in the spring, after expensive winter feeding, and somewhat less in summer and fall when cattle are pastured.

This fal lcattle raiders find themselves with an abundance of feed and farmers are reported not only holding their cattle but buying new stock, in competition with butchers, to fatten for the spring prices.

KINGSTON WANTS MORE COACHES

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 21 (CP) — Kingston City Council intends to ask the Transit Controller at Ottawa to allow the Kingston City Coach Company to purchase more coaches to transport munition workers to and from their work in this city. The number of passengers carried by the buses in the Kingston area has increased by 169 per cent since the war started.

RUSSIANS KEEP SPIRITS HIGH SAYS WILLKIE

Claims Front at Stalingrad Just as Much British and U. S. as Russian

TO DELIVER LETTER

Moscow, Sept. 21 (AP) — Wendell L. Willkie said today he hoped to have a long, straightforward and frank talk with Joseph Stalin because "I understand he is a man who likes frankness and I like frankness too."

Willkie arrived here yesterday and rose at 6 a.m. today, spending his first morning in the Soviet capital walking the streets before breakfast. He encountered columns of Russians on their way to work.

After breakfast he saw Red square for the first time, walked around the Kremlin and talked with the British ambassador, Sir Archibald Clark Kerr.

He had an appointment later in the day with Vyacheslaff Molotov, Soviet Foreign Commissar.

Before coming here Willkie toured Russian factories and collective farms. He said he had been asked some fifty times about a second front and said: "I want to check a lot of things here."

Willkie said he planned to deliver to Premier Stalin a written message from President Roosevelt and that he already had asked to visit the front.

He said he thought the "front down in Stalingrad is just as much an American and British front as it is Russian."

President Roosevelt's special representative said he did not find any letdown in spirits or the war effort in Russia in talking to as many persons as possible during his tour of plants and farms.

"We all pride ourselves on little things of life," he said. "I pride myself on the thought I know how to ask questions. I asked plenty and I found nothing to indicate there is the slightest letdown."

Willkie said he wanted to "talk to as many people as possible in and around Moscow."

He said the Russians appreciated the aid they have received from Britain and the United States "but they didn't think our aid has been enough."

Almost a Symbol

Noting how often he had been asked about a second front, Willkie said: "They think that is the kind of aid they are entitled to. The second front has become almost like a symbol to them."

Russian workers are "grim in their determination, they are grimmer than our people in the factories, but they have no idea of quitting."

He said the Soviet government had permitted him to go through factories without limitation and "allowed me to question anyone I wanted to."

"I could find no signs or indications of a weakening of the spirit in this country," he went on. "I found a universal devotion to the homeland."

He said he had looked for any sign that the Russians might think of giving up the struggle, but found "no intimation of it."

"I also found skill in industry. If I hadn't known I was in Russia, I might have been in Detroit, Los Angeles or Hartford."

Willkie flew to Moscow from Kuibyshev. The foreign office guest house was placed at his disposal.

BURN 5 BARGES AND A TUGBOAT IN LAE ATTACK

Jap Supply Lines Extending Inland From Buna Given Heavy Pounding

JAPS STILL STALLED

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Sept. 21 (CP)—Operating without interference from enemy planes Allied fighters yesterday attacked the vital Japanese base at Lae on the northeast coast of New Guinea for the third successive day, burning five barges and a tugboat and damaging shore installations.

A communique announcing the raid said Allied fighters and bombers also had blasted Japanese supply lines extending inland from Buna, 175 miles south of Lae, to Kokoda, on the route of the Japanese drive toward Port Moresby.

The assault on Buna, which touched off fires and heavy explosions, was the thirteenth on that target since August 25th.

On the New Guinea ground front Allied headquarters reported "no change in the general situation", indicating the Japanese still were stalled at Ioribaiwa, a hamlet on the southern slopes of the Owen Stanley Mountains, 32 miles airline from Port Moresby, which they reached early last week.

Extensive Patrol Activity

Extensive patrol activity was reported in that sector, however, and a resumption of bitter fighting at any time was regarded as likely.

An Allied spokesman, meanwhile, announced elimination of another threat to Port Moresby with the completion of "mopping-up" operations in the Milne Bay area on the southeast tip of New Guinea, where the Japanese set troops ashore during the last week in July.

All enemy forces engaged in that abortive thrust have been disposed of, the spokesman said.

The sweeping assaults carried out by the Allied air force yesterday represented the continuation of a co-ordinated program to smash the bases through which the Japanese are supplying their troops trying to push overland toward Port Moresby.

Eight tons of bombs were unloaded in the previous day's attack on Lae—also carried out without enemy fighter opposition.

FISH IN BATH TUB

Los Angeles, Sept. 21 (AP)—Mrs. Elsie Joseph splashed out of the bathtub, screamed for her husband and sprinted into the living room. Sure enough, there was a fish in the tub. It was about an inch long—just tiny enough to wriggle out of the faucet. The water department declined to comment.

71 YEARS IN ONE SHOP

Hornell, N.Y., Sept. 21 (AP)—A. H. Howard, 81, today started his 71st year of continuous employment with the Hornell Evening Tribune. Howard started as a printer's devil on the weekly Hornellsville Tribune, and became mechanical superintendent of its successor, the Evening Tribune.

U. S. Building World's Best Planes In 7 Out of 12 Major Categories

London, Sept. 21 (CP). — The United States is building the world's best warplanes in seven out of twelve major categories, Peter Masefield, Air Correspondent of the Sunday Times, said yesterday.

Masefield, who is considered one of the best informed of Britain's aeronautic writers, rated Britain tops in three categories and gave the Germans and Italians each one first in his rating.

Here are his selections:

Single seat fighter—British Spitfire.

Long-range night fighter—British Beaufighter.

Heavy bomber—British Lancaster.

Medium bomber—German Dornier 217E2.

Land-based torpedo bomber—Italian Savoia Machetti 84.

Army co-operation scout—United States North American Mustang.

Long-range patrol boat—United States Consolidated Cornado.

Transport land plane — United States Douglas DC4.

Transport seaplane—United States Boeing Clipper.

Naval fighter — United States Vought Sikorsky Corsair.

Naval torpedo bomber — United States Grumman Avenger.

Naval dive-bomber—United States Curtiss Hell-diver.

Masefield gave the United States first place in all five naval classifications but the United States did not rank first in any of the five land combat classes.

Birthplace of Nazi Party Devastated By Heavy Attack

Returning Pilots Claim Fires Seen 100 Miles From The Target

'BLOCK BUSTERS' USED

London, Sept. 21. (CP)—Broad sections of Munich, birthplace of the Nazi party and site of important German war industries, lay devastated today under the weight of a smashing R.A.F. attack which returning pilots said touched off fires so vast they could be seen 100 miles away.

Details of the assault were unfolded last night after the Air Ministry had analyzed reports of bomber crews who winged way homeward after dawn yesterday from the daring 1,300-mile round trip foray—the 11th night raid on Germany this month.

The attack on Munich was accompanied by another raid on the oft-bombed Saar industrial region in Western Germany. Two bombed squadrons of R.C.A.F. participated in the Saar Valley pounding.

While the exact number of planes participating in the Munich raid was not announced, official reports indicated the destruction caused rivalled that sown in other German cities which have been the targets of some of the R.A.F.'s mightiest assaults.

Loss of ten planes during the night was announced. Assuming that these losses amounted to five per cent, observers reckoned that upwards of 200 aircraft took part.

The Air Ministry said the raiders were over Munich for thirty minutes and loosed tons of big bombs as well as many incendiaries.

Dispatches hinted strongly the R.A.F. had employed some of its heard far inside the Swiss borders. new 8,000-pound bombs as well as the 4,000-pound "block busters" used in many previous massed assaults.

Advices from Switzerland, where several border cities had air-raid alerts, said the detonations of bomb blasts in southern Germany were so great the blasts could be

RAIDS ON JAP INSTALLATIONS

Chungking, Sept. 21 (AP) — American airmen made 23 bombing raids on Japanese installations in occupied China, French Indo-China and Burma in July and August, shot down 28 Japanese planes and probably six more and destroyed 30 enemy craft on the ground without the los sof a single bomber in combat.

These figures were given in a summary today by headquarters which listed the loss of five American fighters during the two-month period. The pilot of one fighter is known to be safe, it added.

NAVAL TRAWLER SUNK

London, Sept. 21 (CP).—The Admiralty today announced sinking of the naval trawler Waterfly. No details were given.

Canada's Daily Expenditure For War $5,600,000

Ottawa, Sept. 21 (CP).—Canada's daily expenditure for war purposes averaged $5,600,000 in August, it was shown in figures issued by the office of the comptroller of the treasury.

This is exclusive of expenditure under the United Kingdom War Financing Act (the $1,000,000,000 gift-to-Britain measure), which amounted in August to $100,000,000. Addition of this sum makes daily war expenditure approximately $8,826,000.

War expenditure in August totalled $173,404,422 compared with $98,922,813 in August, 1941. At that time average daily war expenditure was $3,190,000.

Total Dominion government expenditures in August amounted to $301,363,381, the treasury figures showed, compared with $124,122,025 in August of last year. This represented an average daily expenditure of $9,720,000, against $4,003,000 a year ago.

Ordinary expenditure in August was $26,266,913 against $23,586,774 in August, 1941.

Receipts last month totalled $164,1181,335 compared with $106,814,580 in the same month last year.

Expenses in the first five months of the fiscal year 1942-43 totalled $1,699,311,915, nearly three times as much as in the same period of 1941-42, $563,156,482.

(The Canadian Press in a story Saturday erroneously referred to expenses, including war expenditure and ordinary expenditure, and receipts for the first eight months of 1942).

Receipts for the first five months of this year totalled $906,313,179 against $590,864,948 in the same period of 1941.

Port Moresby Remains 'Bastion Of Australia'

New York, Sept. 21 — (CP) — The Australian external affairs minister, Herbert V. Evatt, said today that "whatever happens, Port Moresby will remain Australia's bastion," the Australian radio reported in a broadcast heard here by CBC.

"Defeat in New Guinea would be defeat for Great Britain and the United States as well as Australia," he said.

"In fighting the Japanese in the Pacific we are also fighting for the United Nations. Australia will play an even greater part than before in the future of the world.

"Port Moresby was in greater danger last February than it is now."

Says Hitler Plans Meeting to Settle Transylvania Dispute

Ankara, Turkey, Sept. 21 (AP).—The Turkish press reported yesterday that Hitler would meet Mussolini, Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Regent of Hungary; King Boris of Bulgaria and Marshal Ion Antonescu, leader of state in Rumania, some time next month in Vienna to settle the Hungarian-Rumanian dispute over Transylvania.

This report was linked in some quarters with the departure of the German ambassador to Turkey, Franz von Papen, who left Turkey to accept Regent Horthy's invitation to a hunting party in the Carpathian Mountains of Transylvania, after which he is to go to Berlin, ostensibly to see his son, who was wounded on the Russian front.

BRIGADE ANSWERS TWO FIRE ALARMS

Two alarms were answered by the Belleville Fire Department over the weekend, both for minor blazes with no damage being reported in either instance. The first alarm was Sunday morning from 47 Howard Street, the call being turned in as a fire alarm but on arrival of the firemen it was discovered only to be a chimney blaze. The second alarm was for a brush fire in the quarry on Coleman Flats.

BRIERSTONE CLUB HOLDS EUCHRE

Brierstone Community Club held a well-attended euchre at the home of Mrs. Walter Way on Friday evening. Prizes donated by Mrs. Markle were won by the following: Ladies' first, Mrs. Reddick; second by Mrs. Sid. Galpin; men, first, George Bellis; second, B. Lucas. Little Pauline Van Dusen drew the lucky ticket for the doll which was donated by Mrs. Max Peoples and won by Mrs. J. McMurter. This community club has just been formed by residents north of College Street, for the purpose of raising funds to assist in providing boxes for Christmas for the boys overseas.

STORE DOOR WINDOW FOUND BROKEN

While patrolling his police beat at the upper end of Front Street shortly before 1.30 o'clock Monday morning, P.C. Ellis found a store door window had been broken. The tennant, Mr. James Trakos, was notified and after investigation it was discovered that entrance had not been effected. The premises are unoccupied at present and it is believed some person leaned too heavily against the glass panel of the door.

MRS. C. WHYTOCK FRACTURES ANKLE

Stepping unsuspectingly into a concealed hole in the ground while out walking on Sunday afternoon with Miss Alice Wood, Mrs. Charles Whytock of Madoc suffered a fractured ankle. Mrs. Whytock was assisted to the office of Dr. Beatty who ordered the woman to the Belleville General Hospital to have the injury X-rayed. Dr. G. H. Stobie is in attendance.

YOUTH IS KNOCKED FROM BICYCLE

While riding his bicycle on Front street in the vicinity of the upper bridge Sunday, Allan Marvin, Marshall Road, was knocked to the pavement by a passing motor car. Although he did not sustain serious injury, the knee of young Marvin's trousers was torn as he struck the pavement. The motorist stopped and said something about "watch where you're going" and drove away, the Marvin lad reported to Constable Thomson. The lad also obtained the licence plate number of the vehicle and police are probing the matter further today.

Belleville Boy Now Training As Paratrooper

Sgt. O. A. Arnott Went Overseas With the 34th Battery in 1941

One of the first local youths to enlist with the 34th Field Battery when this unit started recruiting in June, 1940, Sgt. Ormond A. Arnott, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Arnott, formerly of this city, is now training as a paratrooper at Helena, Montana, it has been revealed.

Sgt. Arnott proceeded overseas with the 3rd Division in 1941 and after taking a special course in England was returned to Canada in March of this year to be stationed at Petawawa as an instructor.

Craving adventure, however, and with little prospect of his obtaining it in the course of his duties as instructor, he volunteered with many other Canadian soldiers when the call came for paratroop recruits. He was subsequently posted to the Helena training base where he is now undergoing training.

Heavy Armor Feature Of New German Plane

Moscow, Sept. 21 — (AP) — A new, more heavily armored German fighter plane, the Messerschmitt 109-G, which the Russians describe as an "aerial hunter," has made its appearance in the battle for Stalingrad, Red Star reported today.

The army newspaper said the new plane is powered with a 1,700-horsepower motor developing a speed of 250 miles an hour at 3,000 feet altitude and 325 miles at 12,000 feet.

It was said to be armed with three cannon and two machine guns and to differ from the Messerschmitt 109-F in that it has armor plate behind the cockpit and gasoline tank.

The speeds listed are considerably more than older models of the Messerschmitt fighter, perhaps a result of the armor.

FIT FOR SERVICE

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 21 (AP)—Ralph Anderson, 41, who has been drawing government compensation for 24 years as a permanently disabled veteran of the First Great War, is joining the army today. Lewis, holder of the Purple Heart Medal awarded to wounded soldiers and the Silver Star for gallantry in oction, was passed by army doctors as fit for military service.

"WORLD'S FAIR" AT SHANNONVILLE WELL PATRONISED

Almost Record Crowd Witnesses Fine Exhibits and Good Racing

MANY CONTESTS

Favored by good weather through the morning and early afternoon, directors of Shannonville Agricultural Society again scored for their season's efforts when on Saturday thousands of district residents attended the "World's Fair" to assure another financial success.

Despite gasoline rationing and other restrictions upon free travel of other seasons, the fair grounds by the banks of the Salmon River were attended by what directors claimed "an almost record crowd". The grounds were crowded with autos and every one of them came filled as agriculturists and urban dwellers took the afternoon off to renew acquaintances and meet their neighbors.

Agricultural exhibits at the fair were posibly not as great as in some other years, but what lacked in volume and variety was made up by the more important factor of quality. Hand picked grains and vegetables, as well as flowers and counters of ladies' work, bespoke of many hours concentrated effort to attain the highest quality of exhibits and were viewed by a constant stream fair patrons throughout the afternoon.

Fine Midway Attractions

Rated one of the best country fairs in Central Ontario, the "World's Fair" again had its usual fine midway attractions with its multitude of games and contests to whet the appetite of a sporting holiday crowd.

One of the feature attractions of the afternoon was the parade of approximately 100 of the personnel of No. 5 I.T.S. from Belleville under the command of Flying Officer R. G. Douglas. The airmen paraded from the post office in the village to the fair grounds where they gave an exhibition of precision drill before a large crowd of spectators.

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental Band under the baton of Lieut. W. F. Ketcheson of Frankford, provided musical entertainment through the afternoon, the announcement of the various numbers being broadcast throughout the grounds by an efficient speaker system.

Mothers showed considerable interest in the baby contest for infants one to six months. It was the first show of its kind ever attempted by the directors of the fair and assurance was given that hereafter it would be an annual event. Winners were Robert Cummings, Velma Jean Hill and Ronald Sherman.

Interested in Stock Exhibit

As is the case in any country fair, however, the primary interest of the patrons was in the stock exhibits and in the horse show. The grounds about where the animals were stationed was crowded by admiring crowds all through the afternoon with many fine teams of heavy draught horses and drivers being put through their paces before discriminating judges. The horse and cattle exhibit was easily the largest of any fair held at Shannonville, according to directors.

With Dr. H. Wellbanks, Belleville, as starter for the races, the directors of the fair again won the approval of the many hundred of patrons with the fine harness racing card offered. Two classes a free-for-all and classified, were offered for the approval of the racing fans with good competition being afforded in each heat.

In class "A" Widower Gratton, owned by Mr. Herb Payne of Bloomfield, showed a clean pair of heels to the other entries in the race and took first position in each of the three heats run. Jimmie Grattan, owned by Barney Grant of Wesport, was second in all three heats, with Cactus Star, owned by Cy Garrison of Frankford, coming in third position. Times for the heats were 2.14, 2.14 and 2.12.

Real competition was provided in the classified Class "B" race however, with Peter Strange, owned by L. Hess of Kingston and Earl Dickson, owned by H. Dickson of Sunbury, Ontario, making a real battle for the honors in all heats. Peter Strange took the first heat at 2.12 with Dickson being second horse, Lillian Gratton, owned by B. Davey of Wesport, 3rd and Esa Henly, owned by G. L. Reid of Thomasburg, 4th.

Dickson came home in first position in the next two heats to haul down first prize, while Peter Strange ran second in No. 2 and third in No. 3 heats. Lillian Gratton finished third in the first two heats and took second in the third while Esa Henly brought up fourth position in all heats.

No racing card would be complete without the ever-popular running race and Saturday's card was no exception. Mildred Royal, owned by N. Bassett of Trenton, was an easy winner over the half mile route, with Topsy Mae 2nd, owned by Clifford Sheppard, Wooler, taking second position. Rex owned by J. Doyle of Marmora, was third and Dixie, owned by N. Bassett, fourth. Time for the half was 62 seconds.

In the pony race, Rex, a Bassett horse, took the honors, with Minnie, also Bassett, second and Queen, owned by J. Hinchey, Shannonville, third.

Judges for the races were C. R. Turley, Frankford, J. H. Cowan, Belleville and Sandy Lummiss, Belleville. Timers were Adam Palmer and Frank Cowan of Belleville. Lorne Lazier was clerk.

Appeal For Recruits

In a special appeal for recruits for the armed forces, Lieut. G. P. Brook of Ottawa told his listeners under present conditions there was no room in Canada for slackers.

"I ask you," stated Lieut. Brook as he appealed from a patriotic standpoint, "does the Union Jack mean anything to you. Does the National Anthem mean anything to you?" He warned that the German people were one hundred per cent behind Hitler and asked if Canadians were showing the same faith in General MacNaughton or in Prime Minister Churchill.

Canadian soldiers were fighting for the best army in the world, continued Lieut. Brook. They were the best paid army in the world, they wear the best clothes and were fighting for the best country in the world. "Are we going to fight for our country and hold it as a democracy?" he asked. "Canada has no room for slackers."

In conclusion the officer made a special appeal for 2,500 veterans of the last Great War for the 13th Active Service Company, Ottawa, and also for 10,000 girls and young women to enlist with the C.W.A.C.

Memorial Window Unveiled Sunday To Late Mr. and Mrs. S. B. McClung At St. Andrews Presbyterian Church

Trenton, Sept. 21 (Special). — A most impressive service was held at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday morning when a memorial window to the late Mr. and Mrs. S. B. McClung was unveiled by members of their family. The window was accepted on behalf of the congregation by the minister, the Rev. R. C. MacLean. Mr. McClung was an elder of St. Andrew's for many years and Mrs. McClung president of the Ladies' Aid and both keenly interested in all other branches of church work. Attending the service on Sunday along with the McClung families were several employees of the McClung Hardware Co. who had been with the late S. B. McClung for many years and are still with the firm which is now headed by Mr. H. McClung and Mr. W. B. McClung. Miss Helen McClung of Toronto and Mrs. (Dr.) E. R. Evans of Utica, N.Y., were also present for the unveiling of the memorial window.

Name Added.

At the same service the name of Charles Vaughan Wilkins was added to the already beautiful memorial window in the front of the church in memory of the Wilkins family. The late Charles Wilkins who passed to his great reward last October was an elder for a number of years, superintendent of the Sunday School and a faithful and valuable member of the choir. His father, the late Rev. W. T. Wilkins was minister of St. Andrew's for many years.

New Officers' Mess Opened.

The Headquarters Company, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, second battalion, opened their new officers' mess on Sunday afternoon with invited guests attending from town and several points outside. The guests were received by Lt.-Col. and Mrs. B. C. Donnan, Col. and Mrs. E. A. Bywater and Capt. F. W. Sherbert, Officers Commanding Headquarters Company. The parade hall was beautifully decorated with evergreens and masses of flags and bunting. Music for the occasion was provided by the company's band under the leadership of Lieut. Ketcheson of Frankford.

Col. Bywater, who is honorary colonel of the regiment, presented a plaque to the Headquarters Company, and this was received by Lieut. Ahern on behalf of the company. Lieut. Ahern made a few fitting remarks giving special thanks to Col. Bywater for this most appreciated gift, also to various citizens who had contributed both material and funds for the new mess. Col. Bywater in presenting the plaque traced the history of the regiment and pointed out that all officers present had volunteered to serve in any theatre of war and might be called upon to fill the gaps in the First Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment now overseas.

The lounge room was beautifully furnished with blue rugs and upholstery against a background of pale cream walls.

Refreshments were served by wives and friends of the officers, the table being artistically decorated with red roses, white gladioli and white taper sin silver holders.

Harvest Services

St. George's Anglican Church was most appropriately decorated on Sunday for the annual Harvest Services. Fruits, vegetables and flowers were extensively used with the traditional bread and grapes adorning the altar.

The morning service was in charge of the vicar, the Rev. J. L. Hutchinson. The evening congregation was addressed by Flt.-Lt. Rev. A. J. Jackson of the R.C.A.F. The choir, under the direction of the vicar, with Miss Dorothy Gaina presiding at the organ, sang in the morning Maunder's "Praise the Lord Oh Jerusalem," and in the evening "Harvest Home," by Havens.

Both services were largely attended by members and friends of St. George's.

Returns to Duty

Marine Engineer J. R. Robinson whose home is at 9 Francis Street, Trenton, has returned to his duty on the lakes after having been at home for a week recuperating following a harrowing experience of being torpedoed in the North Atlantic recently. Mr. Robinson had great praise for the Red Cross officials whom he said met the rescued men and after making them warm and comfortable with good food and drink, completely outfitted them with new clothing before they were sent on their way to their various homes.

Discuss Sending Comforts to Trenton Boys

Some fourteen citizens gathered at a meeting in the Town Hall on Friday evening to discuss the idea of sending comforts of all kinds, including smokes, to all Trenton boys in the armed forces. Those attending included Messrs. Geo. Spencer, Lorne Foster, Fraser Fairman, D. T. Fraser, K. Cunnell, Geo. LaBrash, R. F. McInnes, Claude Wallace, N. Sprague, Fred Collins, Herb. Allison, Buster Alyea, Ben Joyce, Geo. Jordan, W. D. Cooper and William Bain.

After considerable discussion it was decided to merge all organizations formerly sending comforts to the boys into "The Good Cheer Club," the president to be William Bain, treasurer L. D. Foster, secretary R. F. McInnes, with all others present acting as a committee.

The business of this club is to find ways and means of obtaining funds whereby comforts may be purchased and shipped. The public generally is asked to kindly assist in any way they can and it is suggested that any scrap (rubber, paper, fats, metals, etc.), may be left at the police station daily except Saturday and this will be sold and the proceeds added to the fund. The club is open, too, for any suggestions as to ways and means of raising funds for this worthy cause. It is expected the present committee may be enlarged at any time.

Husband Injured

About 8:30 P. M. on Saturday, Trenton police were called to 27 Baptiste St., and upon investigation found that Fred Vardy had arrived home slightly inebriated. It is alleged he had seized his wife by the throat and had threatened her and for protection she grabbed hold of a butcher knife with which she threatened her husband if he came near her. At this gesture he made a lunge for her and the blade of the knife entered his side. He was rushed by the police to the office of Dr. W. J. Johnson where several stitches were required to close the gaping wound. He was later removed to his home and police are making further investigations.

R. J. Holmes driving a car owned by Burgess Weeks narrowly escaped serious injury on Saturday night when he turned out to pass another car and as he hit the soft shoulder of the road turned his car over, doing extensive damage to the right side of it. Fortunately he was not injured.

Capt. Bowen Home

Another of Trenton's seafaring men, Captain Walter Bowen is spending a leave with his family on College St. Captain Bowen told of his latest narrow escape when a torpedo from a German submarine was seen by the Captain to be racing towards his ship. The Captain gave the quick command to change the course of the vessel, the torpedo missed by a narrow margin, and sped on towards the shore where it struck with terrific force, smashing the windows in the houses for some distance around. Some months ago Captain Bowen had the harrowing experience of having his ship torpedoed under him and sunk in the Caribbean Sea. He was rescued at that time, along with most of his crew.

Personals

Mrs. N. McKee, Marmora, has returned after spending an enjoyable holiday with friends and relatives in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lindsay of New York City are visiting Chief Constable and Mrs. William Bain, Shuter St.

Big Market

The Trenton market on Saturday was completely flooded with all the late fall produce, an abundance of apples and other fruit being offered. Several varieties of cookers were displayed as well as the MacIntosh which is with most people the favorite of all eating apples. Prices ranged all the way from 25c per six quart basket to $2.00 per hamper. Flemish Beauty pears sold at $2.25 per bushel and green gages and plums brought 50c per small basket. Blue damsons were plentiful and sold for as low as 20c per peck. Green and blue grapes brought 35c per basket, and canteloupes and watermelons were extremely plentiful and were sold from 5c up.

Fowl held a very firm price and some of the larger ones sold as high as $1.90, with the smaller ones ranging from $1.15 up. Broilers were mostly $1.25 per pair. Eggs were slightly higher, some vendors asking as high as 47c for Grade "A" others from 40c up. Butter mostly 40c per pound.

Jonathan Barlow, 94, Director Of Shannonville Fair for 55 Years Still Does Share of Work on Farm

Director of the fair for 55 years and never in that time having missed attending, no man at Shannonville "World's Fair" on Saturday was any more interested in the success of the venture than 94-year-old Jonathan Barlow, grand old man of Tyendinaga Township, and one of the oldest men in the county.

More active than many men twenty years his junior, Mr. Barlow has always taken a very keen interest in the Shannonville Fair with the day calling for a special effort on his part. "Why I got up at four-thirty this morning and milked six cows before coming to the fair," stated Mr. Barlow. As director of the fair he still has charge of the agricultural and other exhibits in the exhibition hall.

Merely milking a few cows night and morning does not comprise a full day's work for Mr. Barlow. Throughout the summer months every fine day saw him assisting in the harvest, cocking hay and stooking grain. During the summer of 1941 he visited relatives in Western Ontario and worked steadily in the fields.

"They wouldn't believe I was 93 years old," laughed Mr. Barlow. He assured them, however, that he "felt better when he was up and around."

Born on Bleecker Farm

Mr. Barlow was born on the old Bleecker farm on the exact spot where Belleville now stands. He remembers when there was a toll gate on what is now Dundas St. at McDonald Avenue. He helped draw stone for some of the oldest buildings in the city, including the local city hall, which was built "about 1874."

He also remembers the construction of the old Grand Trunk Railway and still recalls the names of the crew who ran the first train through Belleville.

A farmer all his life, he sees disaster in the present trend of young rural people leaving the farm. "The boys who leave the farm will be sorry," he warned. "If I had it to do over again, I would take the farm."

Harvesting without the convenience of modern machinery is not strange to Mr. Barlow who claims to have cradled as much as four acres of wheat in one day. "And that is no mean day's work," he claims. One spring Mr. Barlow sowed 102 bushels of grain by hand. "I'd still rather sow by hand," he said. "I can sow broadcast more evenly than they can with a seed drill."

One year after Mr. Barlow married Elizabeth Johnson of Melrose, in 1872 he moved to Tyendinaga township where he has resided since. Two sons were born to the union, Fred, at home on the farm, and James, a retired railway engineer, residing in Belleville. Mrs. Barlow passed on in 1919.

Lord Provost of Glasgow Sets Fine Example in Art of Hospitality

The splendid hospitality shown by prominent families of the Old Land to Canadian soldiers on leave from their various units has been demonstrated many times over since the start of the present war, but seldom has the host been as thoughtful as to write parents of the soldier boy in Canada informing them of the pleasure it afforded to entertain their son during his leave.

Such, however, has been the experience of Mr. William Woods, Foxboro, who recently received a letter from The Lord Provost of Glasgow, informing him that his son George had spent leave with the prominent Scotch family.

"Dear Mr. Woods," stated the letter, "I have pleasure in informing you that your son George has been on leave in this city this week, and my wife and I had the pleasure of giving him hospitality at our home, Iairfad East Kilbride.

"I write to tell you that your son is very fit and he enjoyed being with us. We live amongst a rural milk producing population, and he did appreciate living in the country in home conditions instead of being immured in the city and living in dormitories provided in the hostels here.

"It was a delight for us to have him. We enjoyed his company and will look forward to a return visit when he gets further leave.

"With kind regards
"John M. Biggar
"Lord Provost."

Mr. Woods has three sons in the armed services, a son Everett having been overseas for two years while George has been in the United Kingdom since July. He enlisted while in Edmonton, Alberta, with the 12th Army Tank Corps. A third son Francis, has recently been accepted in the R.C.A.F.

Main Streets Turn Dark as New 'Dim Out' Regulations Take Effect

Belleville's main thoroughfares assumed a "four a.m." appearance early Sunday night as the new "dim out" regulations went into effect.

Gone was the sparkle and brilliance of cafe and other outside electric signs and window lights. There was a funeral appearance to Front and Bridge Streets that was relieved by the gay chatter of Sunday night pedestrian crowds.

Street lights, however were not dimmed. Officials of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission stated today that their workmen had not been able to accomplish the complete dim out preparations.

This, however, is expected to be done tonight. One hundred 300-watt lights will be extinguished for the duration, it is expected, on Dundas East and West Bridge Streets, Victoria Avenue, Station Street, North Front Street, Catherine Street, Highland Avenue and Pinnacle St. The general public is asked not to communicate with the Utilities when these lights are discovered "out."

Bridge Lights Dimmed

Lights on the two city bridges will also be dimmed, Utilities officials stated.

Approximately ninety-eight per cent co-operation was given last night when the order to dim street signs and window lights went into effect. Only a few forgot to put their lights out, but this is expected to be remedied tonight.

The general public took the dim out good naturedly. While a few expressed complete ignorance of the order. Others laughingly referred to the more humorous side of the order. One out-of-town party went home hungry, thinking a Bridge Street restaurant had closed due to the almost complete darkness of the front of the cafe.

Tonight the city will assume an even darker appearance when the dim out of street lights occurs.

Yugoslav Patriots Kill 300 Italians

Moscow, Sept. 21 —(AP)— Yugoslav patriots, carrying on warfare against the Italian army of occupation, have killed or wounded aproximately 300 of Mussolini's soldiers in the past few days near Banjaluka, 150 miles west of Belgrade, the Soviet Information Bureau said today.

They also captured an Axis ammunition train bearing 250,0 0 cartridges and many hand grenades and shells, the Bureau said.

It added that in the last two weeks Yugoslav machine-gunners and riflemen brought down six Axis planes.

STREET FIGHTING

valley, where the Soviet's greatest oil fields and refineries are located.

North and south of Voronezh: The Russians continued to attack furiously, killing 3,000 Germans in three days, 950 of them in one battle. The Germans attacked six times in one place and failed to advance.

On the Volkhov front southeast of Leningrad: The Russians broke into a heavily-fortified forest in the Sinyavino district, after an attack from the south and northwest in which they blew up an ammunition dump and captured prisoners and trophies.

At Stalingrad the Russians were battling for the 28th. day against German masses which had breached the northwestern ramparts several days ago.

They even recaptured some of the lost streets, according to advices to Moscow, but the Germans were moving in new reserves, and were making some slight progress elsewhere, yard by yard.

While the Germans were thus seeking to widen their penetration in the city, they still were checked in the valleys and ravines on the approaches to the city in other sectors, dispatches said.

The mid-way communique said only that in the Stalingrad area "fierce fighting continued. Our units annihilated about two regiments of German infantry, destroyed 11 tanks and 89 trucks and silenced two artillery and eight mortar batteries."

The Russians also threw back German attacks in the Mozdok region of the Caucasus and southeast of the German occupied Port of Novorossisk on the Black Sea, the communique said.

German Bodies Pyramided

In a burst of pride Izvestia said yesterday "the Hitlerites are forced to recognize that never before have they met such difficulties in their offensive as near Stalingrad."

Pyramids of German bodies marked the way to the Volga, the newspaper said.

Seeking an early decision in the Stalingrad battle, the Germans sent a new Messerschmitt fighter, the 109-G into the air for the first time to protect the swarms of dive bombers. The army newspaper Red Star said the new plane, with a 1,700-horsepower motor, developed 250 miles an hour at 3,000 feet and 325 at 12,000 feet. The plane is outfitted with armor plates not found in the older models and is somewhat slower.

A communique described how one Soviet unit in the streets of Stalingrad destroyed six German tanks, 14 motor vehicles, two guns and 7 machine guns and killed 300 Germans.

Other German troops, stalled for days in the drive on the Grozny oil fields at Mozdok, were battling fiercely with the Russians. Soviet cavalrymen were reported to have dispersed a company of enemy infantry.

In another sector of the Mozdak area, the Russians turned back a German attack launched with about 100 tanks, a communique said. More than 200 German tommy gunners were reported killed and 18 tanks destroyed.

Germans Deny Story

It was in the Mozdok region that German Field Marshal Ewald Von Kleist was reported killed Saturday by the Russians. (The Germans denied yesterday that Von Kleist had fallen.)

Southeast of Novorossisk, the Black Sea naval base now in the hands of the Germans, the Russians said two companies of German troops were annihilated in a fierce battle with Russian marines.

At Voronezh, 300 miles northwest of Stalingrad, the front was alive with battle. German counter-attacks were reported repulsed with severe losses for the Germans. In three days, the Russians said officially, more than 3,000 German officers and men were wiped out in one sector.

In the far north, too, the Russians dug at German positions. Forces of Soviet marines, the communique said, landed behind the German lines, demolished to bunkers, an ammunition dump and five dugouts and killed 150 Germans.

But these successes were only side clashes to the battle which all Russians watched with anxious eyes, the struggle for Stalingrad.

(The German high command yesterday said briefly the fighting at Stalingrad "continued with unabated fierceness." German dispatches claimed, however, that the Germans had reached the Volga at several points. The action was said to be "narrowing down.")

Russian reports said the heaviest fighting was in the northwest suburbs where the opposing forces faced each other from behind barricades and buildings.

BIRTHPLACE

Lancaster who was over Munich for 20 minutes said the city was rocked by one of the greatest explosions he had ever heard shortly after midnight.

"There were no flares just then," he said, "but in this sudden flame the whole city was revealed in a red and smoky light. For a full minute the blaze stayed like that—then black smoke rolled up and hid it."

Other R.A.F. crewmen reported that when they headed for home fires set in the early stages of the raid were "taking a firm hold and spreading."

The Rome radio said British planes also were active over Italian territory during Saturday night, bombing several localities in Sicily.

There was no immediate indication the R.A.F. was over Germany again last night and British sources said unsuitable weather over the continent presumably had limited operations to patrols.

No German activity was reported over Britain during the night, but Saturday night a few Nazi planes attacked scattered places on the English east coast, causing some casualties.

Two German raiders dived out of clouds this morning and dropped high-explosive bombs on a residential area in a southeast coast town, reports to London said. An apartment building suffered a direct hit but there was no immediate statement concerning possible casualties.

Route of Parade Tonight Changed

One of the most colorful military, air force and naval parades held in the city will precede the official opening of the Belleville Fair tonight.

The various units will assemble at the Armouries lawn and move off at eight o'clock sharp.

The route of parade has been changed and the parade will march from the Armouries north on Pinnacle Street to Station Street, down Front Street to Bridge Street, thence west to the Fair Grounds.

Units moving with motor vehicles will report at the Market Square at 7.30.

Participating units will include a detachment of R.C.N.V.R. ratings from Kingston which will arrive via the training ship at five o'clock; detachments of the R.C.A.F., the Argyll Light Infantry, (Tank); the 34th Battery R.C.A., Belleville; 2nd Battalion Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, which will give a Commando demonstration in front of the grandstand; detachments of the C.W.A.F., and C.W.A.C., the O.V.C., and Air Cadets.

The parade will march past in front of the grandstand where the salute will be taken by General F. L. Armstrong, O.B.E., officer commanding Military District No. 3.

Fire Destroys D. Sutherland Home in P. E.

Thought to have started as the result of faulty electric wiring, fire completely destroyed the fine brick farm residence of Mr. David Sutherland on the Rossmore-Rednersville road early on Monday morning.

The fire had gained considerable headway and had already eaten through several partitions when it was discovered by members of the family at about one o'clock. All members of the family got safely from the building but all household contents were a complete loss.

Neighbors quickly gathered to help fight the flames and although the residence was doomed by the flames, other buildings were saved through the efforts of the volunteer fire-fighters. The building was partially covered by insurance.

Sidney Schools Hold Fine Fair at Sidney Town Hall

Over three hundred enthusiastic supporters thoroughly enjoyed Sidney School Fair on Friday directed by capable committee workers in the school house school grounds and Sidney Town Hall. Important events of the busy day's program were marked with the ringing of the school bell. Sports events including various types of races, etc., were directed by Messrs. Sam Nicholson and Clarence Woods. Local musical appreciation was in evidence to full scope as large audiences eagerly listened as the talented school children presented choruses, choral readings, pantomimes and operatic choruses in the hall. These events were not officially judged but each group displayed splendid tuition and training. Mr. H. J. Clarke, B.A., acted as chairman for this part of the program. A large display of prize winning entries filled the booths erected in the church shed and the entire fair was given a real touch of patriotism in keeping with the times. Throughout the county, school fairs have been discontinued as a project of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and Sidney Schools carried the major part of the responsibility themselves.

The official opening exercises were impressive and started a successful day with the raising of the Flag with all present participating followed by the salute and the National Anthem. Reeve Fred Wilson of Sidney Township gave the official opening address. Judging of entries took place in the church shed. Naming contests were conducted in the school and also boys' crafts. Throughout the day parents of pupils displayed keen interest in the project display in the church shed which were explained by the teachers and senior pupils.

Fine Program in Hall

With Mr. H. J. Clarke B.A. acting as Chairman a spendid program was presented to the large audience in the hall where each school directed by their teacher presented two numbers in the following order. Cornish May. Song chorus and choral reading "Two Frogs." No. 2A, Miss Irene Murphy; Chorus "The Birds' Song," Choral reading, Poor Old John Bing, No. 12 Miss Marion Bedford; Chorus, "Hasten O Hasten Away"; Choral reading, "The Streamlet", Miss Euna Foster No. 5; Choruses, "Six Little Mice"; "The Pony Ride'; "The Farmer With a Hundred Pipers". Choral reading, "The Brave Old Duke of York" No. 23 Mrs Mabel Hayton; Chorus, "A Sailor's Life"; Reading, Old Zip Coon, No 24 Mrs. Bert Reid; Folk dance, "Old Roger is Dead"; Chorus "Dear Harp of My Country", Mrs. H. S. Campbell No. 20; Chorus, "I Love Your Canada," No. U22, Mrs. Helen Park; Rythm Band and Chorus Mrs. Helen M. Jones No. 4; Pantomime and two part chorus, Miss Verna Bennis; No. 20 Chorus and reading; Choral reading and chorus No. 6G Mrs. I. Ruckstuhl; Chorus and reading No. 19 Miss Phyllis David; Chorus and rhythm band No. 6J, Miss Beulah Keene; Chorus and band, Mrs. Mabel Wickens No. 17; Chorus and reading, Mr. Lewis Bird No. 7; Chorus and opperetta ..No. U16 Miss Edith Cook; Reading and chorus No 10, Miss Helen Wallis; Chorus and Rhythm Band No. 13, Miss Nama Sine. Each of these numbers was well prepared and created a great deal of interest as an enthusiastic audience expressed their approval in hearty applause.

John Parks Dies

Bancroft, Sept. 21 (Special). — Stricken with a sudden heart seizure following having helped his wife from their motor launch, John Parks, 68, Ormsby, died almost instantly at Salmon Lake at noon on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Parks were proceeding to their summer home on Salmon Lake to spend the afternoon and had docked in front of their cottage to begin unloading the boat. Mr. Parks assisted his wife, who is totally blind, from the boat and had turned to tie the launch when Mrs. Parks heard a thud and a splash. She called to her husband twice and receiving no answer felt around and found the body of her husband across the gunwales with his arm and head in the water.

Hearing Mrs. Parks' call for assistance Mr. C. E. Stephens quickly went to the scene and called a doctor. Provincial Constable S. W. Palmateer, with County Constable F. Delyea and Coroner Dr. O. W. Anderson proceeded to the scene and determined death was due to heart seizure. There will be no inquest.

Mr. Parks is survived by his wife and one daughter, Tressa, of Pickering, and one son, Arnold of Long Lac, Que. Two brothers, Mackenzie and William of Ormsby, also survive.

BELLEVILLE POLICE ISSUE WARNING

Warnings that persons are soliciting advertising under false pretenses for the Ontario Safety League were issued here by Acting Chief Harman this morning. According to circulars received from Federal Criminal Investigation Board, Ottawa, persons have been obtaining advertising for the Ontario Safety League magazine without authority. "Such persons have no authority to obtain such advertising and should be reported to police as rapidly as possible," said Acting Chief Harman and he added, "that in some instances the operators stated they had the authority of the local chief constable to solicit such advertising, which also is false."

Meal Planning In For Hard Time

"This little pig went to market," says the old jingle, but Canadian pigs are bound for Britain's markets, rather than Canada's, today. Canadians are asked to refrain from buying pork in order that the meat that Britain so urgently needs may be sent to her. Our shipments of pork must average 11,500,000 pounds per week if Canada is to fulfil her obligation to the people of Britain.

It's true that with pork off the bill of fare entirely and beef none too plentiful, meal planning will be a little more difficult in the next few weeks, but there is a bright side to the picture too says Laura Pepper, Chief of the Consumer Section of the Department of Agriculture.

Chicken and fowl are plentiful and more will be coming on the market in the next few weeks. There are large supplies of turkeys in storage, with more on their way to market. Fish is available in areas close to the source of supply.

There is more cheese for home consumption now because the British quota is almost filled. Fresh vegetables are abundant and cheap, and eggs can be substituted for meat in many parts of the country.

For the main dish at dinner serve something which makes a little meat go a long way:—spaghetti in tomato sauce, with cheese and little meat balls, accompanied by a salad of mixed vegetables; split a vegetable marrow lengthwise, remove the seeds and stuff with a savoury mixture of breadcrumbs or rice mixed with a little ground meat and moistened with gravy, bake in a moderate oven for about an hour. Small squash, eggplant or green peppers may be prepared in the same way, except that the peppers should be parboiled for 5 minutes before stuffing. Stews, croquettes, hash, meat casseroles and chili con carne are all prime favorites, and in all of them the proportion of meat to other ingredients is small.

Fish, cheese or eggs can "stand in" for meat two or three times a week, as their food value is similar to that of meat. When you buy fish, get a little more than is needed for one meal and use what is left for a made up dish or salad the next day.

Cheese is a highly concentrated food and should be combined with bulky foods such as fresh vegetables or cereals. A scalloped dish combining several cooked vegetables in a cheese sauce, a fresh vegetable plate with a cheese sauce over one of the vegetables, scalloped potatoes and cheese, cheese ring with creamed vegetables, all make excellent meatless main dishes. Remember the rule about low cooking temperatures for all cheese dishes.

The experts say there are as many ways to cook eggs as there are days in the year. Omelettes and souffles are easy to make and permit of many variations, meat, fish, vegetables, cheese or herbs may be added. Eggs like cheese, should be cooked at low temperatures.

Dried peas and beans, being high in protein, can also pinch hit for meat and baked beans may be made, substituting dripping or lard for the salt pork usually used. Be sure to make good use of the oven while the beans are baking, by planning other oven dishes that can be baked at the same time, remembering that fuel is also one of the commodities that must be conserved.

With the wide variety of healthful and nutritious foods still available no one is going to hear a word of complaint from the Canadian housewife at the temporary absence of pork and pork products from our shops and tables.

The Lights Are Going Out All Over the World

but may the light that brings the hope of a brighter future and a better world never flicker and die because you failed to lend your hand to those in need.

We are all making great sacrifices to help win this war. But . . . . there is another cause of sacrifice also . . . one that goes on in peacetime just as in war. A greater need is at present manifest for public welfare and community service than ever before.

Could you stand idly back and see someone in this city and district going without help, all because you didn't give . . . or didn't give enough . . . to the Belleville Community Service Funds? These three organizations find ever-increasing demands on their services. They need $15,000. Let's . . . every one of us . . . . keep the light of faith, hope, and charity burning brightly!

Lower Gas Ration

Lower gas rationing has had to come. It will reduce non-essential driving. Economy in the use of gasoline becomes more and more imperative. Many drivers have done well this year by limiting their travels and pleasure. They have not used up the amount of gasoline they might have used. They are fortunate ones for they have learned how to ration themselves and limit their pleasures. But there are some others who have not tried so much to conserve. They will feel the extension of restrictions the more. The many who have voluntarily shut down a great deal on their driving have the satisfaction of knowing that they have helped to save when gasoline has been precious.

But Canadians will still have gasoline to use in their cars. The amount is further restricted, of course, but they will still have gasoline. For this they may be thankful that there can be gasoline for driving. Over in Britain there is no gasoline for non-essential driving and this condition is one of the burdens the British people bear. Over there they have had to put their cars up. But there is no complaint.

In Canada the reduction of rations will be accepted in the proper spirit.

After October 1st "A" ration books will be recalled and a book "AA" issued which will allow 16 units for the six months to March 31st next in the class of drivers who use their cars for personal transportation and not for business.

Reflects the Community

Busy fair days are here. Signs are not lacking of the solid support by the people of this agriculturally rich community of the Belleville autumn exhibition which is a reflex of the life of the surrounding countryside, the rural centres and the city.

The fair is a cross-section, representative of the achievements of agriculture and industry. The maximum of effort is now being poured into the two fields of interest under the impetus of the war's demands.

The military demonstration will be an inspiration of the militant spirit of the fighting forces, the great essential factor in wartime.

The farms have bumper crops and these will be reflected in the contribution which this district can make through the agency of these harvests. And in industries men and women, boys and girls work on an unprecedented scale.

These facts will stand out as the Belleville exhibition, representative of the life of the community, will and can show them. Today practically everyone is at work for the times make or should make men and women anxious to serve by working, by service in the forces, or in some essential task.

The fair provides a wealth of interest for all. The interest extends to cattle and hogs (so much in the news of late), to the production of the cheese factories, to the fowl which provide the harvest of eggs for the feeding of the nation and of the people overseas, to the sturdy horses which turn their energy into harvests and into transportation of the wealth of the field and other parts of the farm into granaries and industries where these are stored and processed, to the sheepfold which must provide lamb and mutton. In fact, in wartime the individual, community and national interest is heightened to the maximum. All is harnessed and there must be team work everywhere.

Life is pulsating in wartime. The interest in everything is increased. Hence there will be a deeper interest in everything at the fall fair. In these days everyone sees and hears more of what is going on than he ever felt inclined to see and hear in other times. So the patrons and visitors will see more in the exhibition halls of industry and business, in the cattle sheds, horse stalls, pig pens, sheep runs, in the dairy exhibits of cheese and butter, in the work of those who labor on the farms of the district and bake and cook in the rural kitchens or work deftly in city or in the country with their hands in the manufacture of comforts for the troops.

There is a national spirit, an international spirit felt as everything is part of the warp and woof of the effort of this part of the nation in time of war.

The fair will bring a wartime crowd which is keen with interest.

BACKWARD GLANCE

The Battle of Prague! Did you ever hear
How Fred'rick the Great came horning in
To burn and slay and to strike with fear
The Austrians who were starved and thin?

Old Zisca's Hill was a brute to take
With fortifications ev'rywhere.
And Fred'rick's centre was like to break
And his flanks too often were in the air.

But he drove his Prussians against the place
Till he reddened a good square mile of grass,
For they fought like paladins face to face
And never had heard of poison gas.

So he got the town, but his force was spent
When of ev'ry fifty he had but ten.
Prague wasn't the worth of a copper cent
For he had to march straight out again.

Now when you hear of a salient gone
And when the future you dare not guess
Just sit for a while and muse upon
The hill of Prague, and a vain success.

V. C. SALUTED BY GERMAN CAMP CHIEF

Lieut.-Commander R. H. S. Beattie, V.C., hero of the St. Nazairre raid, was called to a special parade in his German prison camp and saluted by the commandant because of his V.C.

The commandant read out the full citation to the paraded British officer-prisoners and then joined in their cheers.

A fellow prisoner-of-war tells of the incident in a letter home. He says:

"We had a very exciting ceremony this week. A special camp parade was called, and the little commandant, in full regalia, called out Commander Beattie.

"'He read the official news of his V.C., and saluted him, which was gentlemanly."

Commander Beattie was in command of the destroyer Campbelltown, which blew up the main gate at St. Nazaire in the raid in March. — Daily Mail.

THE LAND MINE

The land mine is playing an important part in this war, particularly in the desert. Once a minefield has been located it is the task of sappers to detect and remove the mines before troops advance.

The electric mine detector is not unlike a vacuum cleaner. The detector is passed over the ground with a sweeping motion.

A low buzz is transmitted to the earphones and it increases to a shriek if the detector is over a mine.

When the sound has reached its loudest the sapper calls up the man crawling behind him who then marks the position of mine to be rendered harmless.

The sapper also probes the ground before him with a wire carried in his left hand. This is to detect any trip wires, which are sometimes strung across the minefield to trap the unwary.

The detector when fitted with a longer handle can be used from the walking position. — Daily Mail.

50 YEARS AGO

SEPTEMBER 21st, 1892

It was a great race—one of the grandest ever seen on fresh water—such was the expression of yachtsmen concerning the race for the Fisher cup (emblem of the championship of sloops on fresh water, which was sailed here between the Norah of this city and the Onward of the Rochester, N.Y. Yacht Club. The Norah is the fastest yacht of the two, but a sudden cant of the wind to the eastward headed off and freed her antagonist, thus depriving her of a gallantly earned victory. At the start the American boat led, but the Norah passed her; then the Onward through superior power in carrying sail went to the front; then the Norah by skillful handling regained the lead and increased her advantage; then a shift of wind deprived her of part of her lead and although she still continued to gain she could not make up sufficient to concede her time allowance. Such is the story of the race in brief. The judges were: Dr. Saunders, Rochester, for the Onward; S. A. Hyman, Belleville, for the Norah; J. Case, Albany, referee. Scrutineers, Geo. P. Thompson, Belleville, on the Onward, and Henry Miller, Rochester, on the Norah. The course was the usual triangle on Big Bay. Mr. John Bell, the owner of the Norah, requested that the yachts be measured as the result was so close. This was done and the remeasurement resulted as follows: Norah 57:50; Onward 54:07. Norah allowed 3M 19S Onward won by 46S. Mr. Corby had a large party on his steam yacht Ometa, and Mr. Carman had a party on his steam yacht the Carmana. The sailing yacht Dauntless accompanied the racers over part of the course. The steam yacht Moira took a private party to the point. Mr. Bell and family viewed the race from Mr. Rathbun's steam yacht Norah. We regret the loss of the cup but we are glad that it has fallen into the hands of true sportsmen and gentlemen such as those of the Rochester Yacht Club.

PLEA FOR UNITY

EDGAR A GUEST za, ...

This is no time to be little! We are periled by sky and by sea
And the pagans will rush to destroy us, unless we shall vigilant be.
The hordes of the Huns will surround us. Our women and children will die!
The altars we've cherished are threatened! The creeds we have taught they defy!

This is no time to be little! Our churches and schools may go down
When the arrogant German will drive us like cattle from city and town.
And the horrible Jap will come gloating and stalk us by night and by day.
For they've sworn to their gods to destroy us, and if we stand idle they may.

This is no time to be little! They are driving to slaughter our sons
While our bravest and finest are waiting for us to supply them with guns.
For planes and for ships they are pleading, and dare we to say in reply
That unless some small favor be granted we are willing that freedom shall die?

The Crisis of Our War

New York, September 21.—What this column pointed out a fortnight ago is now so glaringly in the open that it may as well be discussed without restraint.

We have reached the most dangerous point in this war—a point that can determine defeat or victory, and on both fronts. We are fighting a war of coalition, and the crucial question is the unity of the Allies. This is so well recognized by our enemies, that sowing division amongst the Allies is the almost exclusive strategy of their political warfare.

It is now clear that there is an open conflict between the Anglo-American world and Russia.

In every conflict between Allies the question arises: Which is dissatisfied with the other, and who is making demands on the other?

Are we, in this case, asking anything of Russia?

No. Russia's resistance far surpasses anything expected by any of the military commands. At this moment, Stalingrad is being defended inch by inch, behind kitchen tables if nothing else.

Is Russia, in this terrific moment, asking something of us?

Yes. She is asking that we at least divert from 30 to 40 divisions.

Has she, during the last months, been encouraged to think that we would do this?

Yes, she has been. This column pointed out, at the time, the ambiguity in the phrase, "the urgent necessity of opening a second front this year" with which the President in May summarized his conversation with Mr. Molotov.

The ambiguity promised as much as it failed to promise; an international war of nerves was conducted on that basis; our own official propaganda to Europe and the world made the most of it; and that propaganda was noted by the people of Russia—thus bolstering their confidence and at the same time, preparing for the most profound disillusionment should we fail.

The same is true of all the peoples of Europe. And it must be said now and said strongly as possible: We have got to stop playing fast and loose with peoples' lives and peoples' faith. This war is not a fight between political machines, to be conducted with smartness and shrewdness, and the propaganda of "selling" tactics. This war is a matter of life and death for states, for nations, and for every individual. It requires the most scrupulous purity and honesty in its conduct. If we fake, and if we disillusion the masses of the people of this world, then God help us.

Are the Russians asking too much of us? Is it too much to divert thirty or forty additional divisions.

Let us push aside all the details, important as they are—details of how and where; details of shipping and transportation. The peoples of the world are no military experts. They are asking: Are Britain and America strong enough to divert thirty or forty divisions; and, if not, do they rule the waves or do they not. This is what they ask in Moscow and Stalingrad, and Paris and Rotterdam, and Belgrade, and also in Berlin, Tokyo and Rome.

It is extremely important to understand the difference in the strategy of our enemies and in our own strategy.

The leadership of our enemies plans definite objectives to be gained — alternative objectives, sometimes, but definite ones. The high commands are instructed to accomplish one or the other, and to overcome the obstacles in the way. The technical planning of the campaign is the secondary factor. The prime question is: What must be accomplished, within a certain time.

We—the Anglo-American forces—go at it in the opposite manner. The political leaders ask their military advisers what we have and what we can do with it. Surveying their means of warfare, they either plan a campaign or drop the project. Meanwhile, we give publicity to a tenative idea and then have to concentrate our propaganda to ourselves and the world on explaining our failures.

Thus, this week the fact that we lost 67 per cent. of the forces engaged on the Dieppe raid is published in order to justify our failure to open an second front, and our propaganda is directed not against our enemies, but against our allies, the Russians.

In the same manner we are forced to underline our shipping losses in order to explain to our Allies and our own people why we are impotent.

The effect on morale is devastating. We do not believe that the Anglo-American world is weak That if it was weak, then this war is being badly conducted and badly organized. That is the reaction of the ordinary man.

We now know that the Germans and Japanese are no supermen, that their industries are not superior, and that the alignment of forces, if properly organized and used, is on our side, not theirs.

And we don't need experts to tell us why we are weak, but to organize our strength. Above all, we are tired of being told one thing one day and another thing the next, as though the people of the Allied Nations were the chief target of the "war of nerves."

To a by no means detached observer of this war, it looks as though we had better start it—and start it over again.

Start it by setting definite objectives to be accomplished in a definite area of time; start it by establishing a united command to accomplish these objectives; start it by stopping a system whereby every little detail has to be considered by two or three committees; start it by having a political as well as a military policy—and sticking to that political party, instead of explaining why we have none.

The Germans and the Japanese will not defeat the Anglo-American world, but it is by no means certain that the Anglo-American world will not go the way of other powerful democracies and defeat itself.

Collision Causes Critical Injury To One Passenger

Two persons were injured and 17 others miraculously escaped unscathed when a trailer-tractor jack-knifed on Highway No. 14, seven miles south of Belleville, and was in collision with the Belleville-Mountain View bus late Saturday night. The more serious injured man was 51-year-old Hilliard Aide, of Hartsmere, Ont., a passenger in the bus and who is reported to be in a critical condition in the Belleville General Hospital suffering from a fractured skull. The other injured person removed to the hospital was P.O. G. T. Sayre, 26, of the Mountain View R.C.A.F., who sustained severe facial and eye lacerations to such an extent that concern is felt over the possible loss of his right eye. Aide and Sayre were riding directly behind the driver.

It was raining quite heavy at the time of the accident when the trailer of a truck driven by Clifford Hineman of Picton, is believed to have jack-knifed and whipped sideways into the left front of the oncoming Bellevile-Mountain View bus driven by John McCullough, 140 Burnham St., Belleville. The force of the impact was so extensive that the bus careened into the ditch crashing against a small culvert, while the trailer rolled over on the highway, strewing the highway with fish for many hundreds of feet.

Traffic Officer J. H. Hatch investigated and was informed that damage amounting to $500.00 resulted to the bus, that is owned by Frank Smith of this city. It is estimated that the damage to the trailer and cargo of the truck would be well over $1,100 as it was practically impossible to salvage any of the fish strewn along the highway. The boxes containing the fish were broken beyond repair. Fish were even found in the bus.

Steak for Breakfast

(By Allen M. Trout in the Louisville Courier Journal)

Every time a big-shot reporter writes about a man who likes steak for breakfast he invariably goes out of his way to mention it. The latest example I have seen was in Noel F. Busch's personality sketch of Donald M. Nelson in Life.

"Nelson's tastes are extraordinary," Mr. Busch wrote. "He likes travelling in upper berths, eating steak for breakfast, and driving his own Cadillac sedan."

Fried beefsteak was a breakfast dish in West Tennessee when I was a boy. I imagine it also was a breakfast dish across the Mississippi river at Hannibal, Mo., when Mr. Nelson was brought up.

One of the most pleasant boyhood recollections is riding Old Blaze over to the slaughter and bringing back my father's share of the beef killed that morning. It usually amounted to one-half a quarter.

I know it for a fact my mother and the other women of the neighborhood never thought of serving friend beefsteak except for breakfast. The dinner dish was a roast, and the supper dish was cold leftover.

For that neither was fried chicken ever served at our house except for breakfast. The dinner dish was either chicken and dumplings boiled in an old iron pot, or chicken and dressing, baked in the oven.

My mother was an old-fashioned country woman. She thought any fried dish was beneath the dignity of a midday meal. Breakfast to her meant fried food, and dinner meant boiled food.

Her rule even extended to small game, such as rabbit, squirrel and quail. If we ate it for breakfast, it was fried. But if it came to the table at dinner, the game was stewed with dumplings.

CABINET MEETINGS

The Cabinet of the President of the United States has no legal existence.

Under the Federal Constitution the President is under no obligation to consult his Cabinet.

The Cabinet is the name given to the heads of the ten executive departments.

No mention whatever of the Cabinet as a separate entity is made in the constitution.

The only reference to the subject in the constitution is in Article II, Section 2, which says: "He (the President) may require the Opinion, in writing, of the principal officer in each executive department."

For the first two years of his first administration President Washington called on the Secretaries of State, Treasury and Navy, the Attorney General and the Postmaster General for written and oral opinions.

It was not until 1791 that he began to call the heads of the departments together for consultation and to hold meetings somewhat like modern Cabinet meetings.

Even then, for some reason or other, he did not ask the Postmaster General to these meetings, and that official did not attend Cabinet meetings until the time of Andrew Jackson.

Regular Cabinet meetings are held in the cabinet room in the White House.

The Secretary of State occupies the seat of honor to the President's right, the Secretary of the Treasury sits to the President's left, while the Vice-President sits across the table apposite to the President.

What takes place at these meetings generally is not revealed.

Thomas Marshall has been the only Vice President to preside at a Cabinet meeting. He presided over the Cabinet meetings while President Wilson was abroad the first time.

Henry A. Wallace has not been the only man to hold the same position in the President's Cabinet that had been held by his father before him. James D. Cameron, of Pennsylvania, Secretary of War in Grant's second administration, was the son of Simon Ceremon, Secretary of War in Lincoln's first administration.

On March 7, 1809, there were three men named Smith in the President's Cabinet.

James Wilson, of Iowa, who served as Secretary of Agriculture from 1897 to 1913 (under McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt and Taft) holds the record for the length of service in the cabinet.

The undersecretaries and assistant secretaries of the ten executive departments are known collectively as the "Little Cabinet."

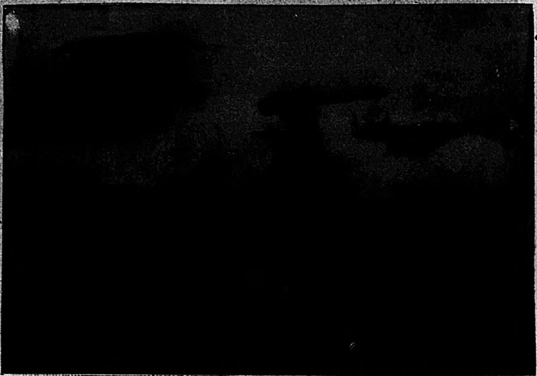
German U-Boat Rammed, Crew Captured By Canadian Destroyer in Fierce Duel



The above photograph, one of the most graphic taken during the present war, shows the U-boat slithering away from the bows of H.M.C.S. Assiniboine as the Canadian destroyer attempted to ram her. The action at some stages, was fought at extremely close range — often no more than a few feet. Assiniboine just missed ramming the raider when this photo was shot by a member of the crew, but her accuracy was deadly later, and the sub was crashed by Assiniboine's bows. The raider stood suspended in the ocean for a moment after it was rammed, then was swallowed up by the waves. Her survivors were picked up, some of them being taken on board the Canadian destroyer. — R.C.N. Photo.

Malcolm Ardenne of Forestry Branch Tweed, and Mrs. Ardenne Leave for Toronto

Tweed — Tweed citizens have learned with regret that Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Ardenne will move to Toronto in a short time. Mr. Ardenne has been on the staff of the local Forestry Branch for the past sixteen years and has been transferred to the Research Division of the Lands and Forests Department. He was born in England came to Canada in 1913. When the war broke out he enlisted in the Canadian army, twice being wounded in France.

On returning to Canada he entered The Faculty of Forestry, graduating in 1924. During his stay in Tweed Mr. Ardenne has been active in Tweed Tennis Club, and the Army and Navy Veterans. Both he and Mrs. Ardenne are artists of no mean order, and the walls of their home are adorned with beautiful water colors which they have painted.

Mrs. Ardenne was active in the work of the United Church. She was president of The Evening Auxiliary and aided in establishing First Aid classes in Tweed a year ago. Their son, John Ardenne, a recent honor graduate of Pickering College, is enrolled at Queen's University having won a scholarship valued at $675.

The Ardenne family will be greatly missed in Tweed where they have made many friends.

Mr. C. Edward Way has been named General Chairman of the Salvation Army Drive which will open in Tweed on Monday, September 21st.

The most recent donation to the British War Victims' Fund was a $15.00 contribution from the Catholic Women's League, proceeds of a bingo held a few days ago.

Tweed High School will open on Monday, September 21st. There are two new members on the staff, Mr. John F. Burns and Miss Geraldine Trimble. The other members of the staff are Mr. T. E. Moffatt, B.A. and Miss Hazel Grindell and Miss Maude Hammett.

A truck load of blood donors, 30 in all, jammed Mr. C. C. Thompson's truck on Sunday to make the trip to the Blood Clinic in Belleville. They are all residents of Northbrook and were contacted by Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Thompson who arranged their transportation to Belleville.

Mr. Ken Callahan, popular local representative of a large insurance company, was the recipient of a coffee table, presented to him by seventeen of his friends prior to his marriage. The presentation was made at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John DeMarsh by Wilfred LeSage and Percy Blakely. Following the presentation cards were played and at midnight a delicious chicken dinner was served by Mrs. DeMarsh and Miss Kathleen Doran.

The local branch of The Bank of Montreal will occupy the north half of Kerr and Co.'s store as soon as changes can be made. The remodelling of the building which will alter it into a modern banking institution has already begun and it is anticipated it will be ready for occupation by November 1st.

Kerr and Co. will continue in business in the south half of the block. At present the Bank of Montreal is doing business in the Mather Block, now owned by Mrs. A. C. Locke, Belleville.

Capt. Hillier "Jake" Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Thompson, of Northbrook, has been made Chief Instructor of the R.A.F. Ferry Command, Montreal. Captain Thompson has ferried bombers from Canada to England and to Australia via California and the Hawaiian Islands.

PRESENTATION

White's District — On Wednesday evening a large gathering of friends assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Rush, Bayside, to honor their daughter as she leaves to attend Normal School in Toronto. After a social hour of singing and visiting, Rev. J. M. Spence asked Miss Mary Rush to come forward and after a few complimentary remarks called upon Miss Grace Jeffery to read an address. Mr. L. Hunt then presented two travelling bags and a fancy pair of slippers. Mary, although taken by surprise, capably thanked her friends for their kindness and thoughtfulness. After singing "For she's a jolly good fellow" all departed for their homes.

Master Garnet Jones and Master Bruce Westfall enjoyed a short holiday by motoring with their uncle to Simcoe.

Sunday School and Church Service were held on Sunday afternoon. In the absence of the superintendent, Mr. G. Saylor capably supplied. At the conclusion of the Sunday School, Rev. Mr. Moore of Toronto, a former minister of Trenton, spoke to the young people on Temperance, illustrating with stories easily understood by the smaller children. He also assisted in the church service with an address on Temperance considered from financial, physical, social and moral standpoints.

The pupils from this district and surrounding districts gathered at Wallbridge on Friday for their annual School Fair.

"DEAD ON TARGET!
S-t-e-a-d-y---bombs gone!"

Hurtling along at 300 miles an hour, the Air Bomber directs the plane—aims at the target. Down go the bombs! Right across the target! "Bombs Gone!" he cries, and another crushing blow lands on the nerve centre of Axis production.

These Air Bombers have been trained for months in R.C.A.F. training schools for moments like this. If they miss their mark, their bombers' flights are in vain. Small wonder, then, that the Pilots await their directions at the critical moment of attack.

The Air Bomber is but one of the members of an R.C.A.F. air crew. His job is a vital one, but so are each of the others. Because of their team training and team spirit, these groups of red-blooded young Canadians are scoring success after success in their devastating attacks on the enemy.

R.C.A.F. training in Canada is expanding steadily. More planes, more schools, more instructors are now available. At present applications are being accepted for air crew at R.C.A.F. Recruiting Centres throughout Canada.

If you are physically fit, mentally alert, over 18 and not yet 33, you are eligible. Lack of formal education is no longer a bar to enlistment.

WOMEN TOO—join "that men may fly." Canadian women fill vital jobs in the R.C.A.F. Women's Division, releasing men for air crew duties. Recruits are needed, age 18 to 40, physically fit, with at least High School entrance. Many useful and fascinating jobs await you. No experience needed. The Air Force will train you quickly to take your place with Canada's airwomen. Full information at any R.C.A.F. Recruiting Centre, or write address below for explanatory booklet.

WEDDINGS

SWACKHAMER—ERWIN

Dovercourt Road Presbyterian Church, Toronto, was the setting for the marriage of Miss Madeleine Joan Erwin, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Erwin, and the late Herbert Erwin, Georgetown, to Sergeant Armand B. Swackhamer, Mountain View, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Swackhamer, Georgetown. Flight Lieutenant R. K. Cameron, padre of No. 6 Bombing and Gunnery Station, Mountain View, officiated.

Mr. A. G. McDonald, Toronto, gave his niece in marriage. She wore a gown of romance blue suede jersey, wine accessories and corsage of Briarcliffe roses. Miss Hilda E. Erwin was her sister's attendant, wearing a suit of wine wool, black accessories and corsage of Talisman roses. The groomsman was Sergeant Cairns, Mountain View. The couple will live in Belleville.

FILSHIE—ANKENMANN

St. John's United Church, Chesley, was the setting on Saturday, for the marriage of Miss Doris Helen Ankenmann, daughter of Mr. Christian Richard Ankenmann and the late Mrs. Ankenmann to Mr. Ian Stewart Filshie of this city, son of Mrs. Filshie and the late Archibald Filshie, Toronto. Rev. W. G. Prosser officiated, and Mrs. Howard Vincent accompanied the soloist, Mrs. George M. Morrow.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a graceful gown of shell-white satin with Peter Pan collar, shirred bodice and full skirt. From a halo of white orange blossoms fell her finger-tip veil, and white roses formed her bouquet. Mrs. Albert E. Krug, matron of honor; Miss Mary Louise Ankenmann, sister of the bride, and Miss Marion Filshie, sister of the bridegroom, were gowned alike in gold silk jersey, with halos of lace and brown shoulder veils. Their flowers were bronze chrysanthemums. Sub-Lieutenant Richard D. Ankenmann was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Allan B. Extence and Lieutenant G. Kenneth Langford.

STIRMEY—BELANGER

On Saturday night, September 19, Beulah Gertrude Belanger of Eastview, Ont., became the bride of Leslie John Stirmey, of Three Rivers, Que. The ceremony was performed in Bridge Street United Church vestry by Rev. Dr. James Semple.

Sergt. Douglas Robertson and Mrs. Robertson attended the bride and groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Stirmey will reside in Three Rivers, Quebec.

WANNAMAKER—GALPIN

The marriage took place on Saturday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock in the Salvation Army Citadel, of Alice Elizabeth Elsie Galpin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Galpin, North Front Street and Blythe Truman Wannamaker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Wannamaker. The ceremony was performed by Adjutant J. Smith and wedding music was played by Miss Dorothy Mitchell. During the signing of the register, Misses Margaret Stebbins, June Wardle, Dorothy Green and Daphne Mason sang "I Love You Truly". Gladioli were used in the decorating of the church.

The bride given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a floor-length gown of white sheer over taffeta with a floor-length veil caught with a wreath of tiny white roses. She carried a bouquet of white Killarney roses.

Mrs. Arthur Fudge, as matron of honor, wore pink lace and carried an arm bouquet of Summer flowers in mixed shades.

The flower girls Gwendolyn Galpin and Marilyn Bird, wore floor-length organdy dresses in yellow and blue shades with matching wreaths in their hair and carried baskets of gladioli.

Mr. Arthur Fudge was groomsman and the ushers were Messrs. Sidney Galpin and Cyril Major.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride, North Front Street, for one hundred guests. Mrs. Galpin, mother of the bride, received in a dress of Royal blue crepe with black and white accessories and Mrs. Wannamaker in lavender with accessories of black and white; each wore a corsage of white lilies.

For travelling the bride chose a dress of heaven blue, beige coat and blue accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Wannamaker will take up residence in Belleville.

COLLEGE HILL GROUP

Mrs. G. S. Stanton, Donald Street, opened her home to the College Hill Women's Group on Wednesday September 9th. The meeting opened with use of Hymn 125, followed by the Lord's Prayer. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Fred Burley conducted the meeting. The devotional period was taken by Mrs. Storms and Mrs. Wagg, followed by theme song. Forty-three articles of clothing were received for Red Shield. Plans were discussed for the Fall work, including the bazaar in November. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction and a social half hour spent.

Food and Rest for Career Girl

Film star Teresa Wright guards health by wise living.

By HELEN FOLLETT

JUST A FEW words of warning to the career girl; she must guard against four-o'clock-itis which is a distressing trouble. A few hours before it is time to beat it home she has an all gone feeling. Hasn't strength enough to move her little finger, yet she has to go right on with the job which she hates at that particular moment. What's the why of all that? She ought to know. She isn't eating properly, or she isn't getting enough sleep, or maybe both causes are present.

Nobody can run an engine without fuel or power of one kind or another. If she is like many other busy young ladies she doesn't take time to eat. Breakfast is a gulp of coffee and a couple of nibbles of toast. She hurries to car, bus or train. She hadn't had anything to eat since the previous night.

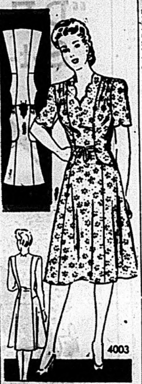
Luncheon time comes and she has a soda fountain snack so she can do a bit of shopping or have her hair set. She is continually using her energy, which she can't have to any marked degree if she doesn't give her digestive factory something to work on. It just doesn't make sense.

At luncheon she should have a maintenance meal and include a glass of milk.

The girl who neglects to provide herself with proper nourishment will be beset with all manner of beauty griefs. Hair, teeth, skin and fingernails, as well as tissues, blood streams and every cell of the body are dependent upon provisions. There should be a variety of foods, so no necessary elements will be omitted.

This business of stoking up properly three times a day is important. You can't sidestep it if you want to be strong, well and efficient. Furthermore, one should enjoy good groceries, make each meal a festive occasion.

Slenderizing Frock



Of course you can be SLIM—in a simple frock like Pattern 4003 by Anne Adams! Long side bodice sections, curved in front, together with back and front panelling, make you seem taller; narrower. Scallops at the neck and sleeves are optional.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beecman,

My son, a sergeant, expects to have a military wedding the middle of October. At the wedding will be the bride's parents, my husband and I, the members of the wedding party, close friends of my son.

1.—The bride is to wear a white wedding dress and bridal veil. The bride's mother and are perplexed about how we should dress. Should we dress formally? Also do you think that velvet would be too warm-looking for the South at that time of year?

L.B.

1.—Since the bride is to wear formal bridal attire, you and the bride's mother should dress consistently with this formality. Since weather is unpredictable the wedding day might very well be a warm October day when velvet might be uncomfortable. The new soft velveteen, which is to be so popular for Fall, might be a safer choice. If you must consider future use for this costume, you might seriously consider choosing an excellent quality of silk crepe—a very safe choice for all-year wear and for a great variety of occasions.

If the wedding is in the morning, you and the bride's mother would wear street-length costumes—dress and matching jacket, or dress and coat—with hat and gloves. If the wedding is in the afternoon, the bride may prefer that you and her mother wear floor-length dresses of a simple dinner type, long sleeves, perhaps with a matching jacket. At a wedding of this kind, it would be appropriate for you to wear a street-length costume for the afternoon wedding.

You and the bride and the bride's mother should consult together about the shades of the mothers' dresses. Each mother should, of course, wear a shade becoming to her; the shades should be not too vivid or not too sombre. The shades of the two dresses should harmonize, particularly if there is going to be a reception, with the two mothers standing together in the receiving line.

Corsage, Not Bouquet

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—When both the bride and her matron of honor are wearing suits, what flowers are proper for the matron of honor to carry?

2.—Also which side of the church is the proper side for the bride's parents to sit during the ceremony?

N.D.

1.—With a suit it would be more appropriate for a matron of honor to wear a corsage, rather than to carry a bouquet.

2.—The bride's parents sit in the first pew on the left side of the aisle. The right side of the aisle is the "bridegroom's side".

From College Gown To Overalls

..Last year Sheila Moffatt, left, was a school teacher and before that she graduated from the University of British Columbia where she was prominent in music circles. Now, like hundreds of college girls, teachers, society girls, stenographers and librarians, she is a war worker, busy checking parts in a western aircraft plant. Sylvia Anderson, another west coaster, was a student at University of British Columbia last winter. Now, like many of her friends, she is on the job in an aircraft factory, having answered the urgent call for help in war industries.

WHITE'S W.A.

September meeting of White's W.A. was held at the home of Mrs. Walter Jones. A few ladies went early and quilted before dinner, then each ate her own lunch while the hostess served tea, grapes and tarts. Following this quilting was resumed.

Mrs. F. Sanderock opened the meeting, all singing Hymn 456 with Mrs. R. Jeffery as pianist. Mrs. Nicolson responded to a request for a few words of prayer. Mrs. Young read the Scripture lesson, Psalm 56. The minutes were given and the roll call was answered by a verse of Scripture. There were 12 members and 6 visitors present. Collection $3.25.

It was decided to send a card to Mrs. D. Moore, who is ill. A discussion concerning the usual fowl supper followed and it was decided to collect from each home. It was moved by Mrs. W. Jones and seconded by Mrs. Young that Mrs. C. Ketcheson, Mrs. R. Ketcheson, Mrs. G. Meyers and Mrs. R. Jeffery be the collectors. The meeting closed by singing Hymn 501 and repeating the Mizpah Benediction. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. Jones for opening her home.

Several of the ladies returned in the evening to complete the quilt, and this was an effort considering the extreme heat.

WHITE'S RED CROSS

White's Red Cross was held at the home of Mrs. Walter Jones on Thursday, September 17th. In the absence of the president, Mrs. W. Jones capably conducted the meeting. The opening hymn was 499, followed by the Lord's Prayer. The Scripture reading, Peter II. verses 19-25 was given by Mrs. G. Meyers. Mrs. Nicholson volunteered to take a quilting for the Red Cross next week. A few promised to take sheets for the Russian refugees. Twenty sheets have already been handed in. Collection $2.20. The meeting closed by singing Hymn 263 and the National Anthem.

HEALTH CHATS

By Dr. Herman N. Bundesen President, Chicago Board of Health

MANY ERRONEOUS THEORIES ABOUT CANNED FOODS

Of course we should eat as much fresh fruits and vegetables as possible. They contain, among other things, many necessary vitamins. But where the housewife improperly cooks vegetables or fruits, the canned foods are often preferable, for they are richer than the home-cooked foods in which the vitamin values have been destroyed.

By carefully controlled conditions, vitamins are conserved in the canning factory. Vitamins are often destroyed in home cooking by too high cooking temperatures, too long working periods, and by open cooking vessels.

There are more mistaken ideas about canned foods than about almost any other thing connected with the diet. Canned food is, as a rule, carefully selected. It is canned almost at once so that there is no chance for it to lose much of its nutritive value. Fruits and vegetables are often canned within a few hours after picking. The canning process is controlled scientifically, much more so than is the cooking in the average household.

Many persons have an idea that perhaps the fruit or vegetables may contain acids which will attack the tin of the can, but whenever there is such a possibility, the food is packed in a laquered container. From the standpoint of contamination with germs, this is far less likely to happen with canned foods than with fresh ones that are allowed to remain for several days at a temperature which helps the growth of germs.

All canned food is sterilized after it is canned and then the cans are carefully tested to make sure that they are airtight before they are released for sale. Canned foods keep well. However, it is a good idea to store the cans in a cool, dry place because dampness may mean rusting and rusting may lead to the formation of an opening in the can.

Canned fruits keep for a year or longer in excellent condition. Vegetables keep well for two years or more. Honey and jams keep for three years, and some meat products for five years. Canned fish also keeps for five years or longer. Condensed milk lasts well for two or three years.

If a canned product has an unusual smell or color, it is a good idea to discard the contents. If one or both ends of the can bulge, it is a sign that gas-forming germs have been active in the food and, of course, such cans of food should be rejected without any hesitation. Then, too, if there is a puncture in the can, the food in it should not be eaten. Any can that is markedly rusty should be carefully inspected, as tiny holes may be present.

There is an idea among some persons that as soon as a can is opened it is necessary to empty the contents immediately, but there is no basis for this belief, and no good purpose is served by emptying the food from the can at once. However, the food that is left in an open can should be given the same care as is given to any other food not to be used at once—that is, it should be kept in a clean, cool place, such as a refrigerator. It is a good idea, in fact, with a can of milk which is not to be used at once to make only two small punctures in the lid. Then these punctures may be sealed by using two pieces of clean paper. The can of milk thus may keep sweet for an appreciable length of time if kept in a cool place.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

QUARREL CONSTANTLY

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been engaged to a young man for a year and a half and we quarrel constantly over little things. Now and then we break up, but only for one evening and then he's back again. He says he loves me and I think as much of him. We are both very jealous and each one wants his own way. I think he is too bossy, as he even tries to tell me to whom I must speak on the street, especially when it refers to other boys.

Friends and relatives have told me that our marriage would never be happy. Would you advise us to break up now rather than become too deeply involved?

A young man who feels it's up to him to tell a girl to whom she may speak strikes me as too immature to consider marriage. You haven't said anything in your letter about this boy being called to service. If he's too young for that, he's certainly too young to consider marriage.

A PROBLEM OF THE TIMES.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My problem is similar to one that confronts thousands of young people today, and I can't solve it without your help.

I'm 25 years of age and have been going with my fiance for six years. He is in the army now. Before he left we became engaged, and that was almost two years ago. We're both very much in love, but he's afraid to take the serious step of marriage because of what might happen to him. He doesn't want to be a burden to me if the worst happens, and has no means of supporting a wife.

My position is steady and I can support myself and even save a little money. I have no interest in anything and nothing to look forward to, and feel as if he's trying to back out. Do you think we should or should not get married?

— ENGAGED.

OMNIPOTENCE

My Father God how great Thou art
Thou ruler of the countless spheres
And yet Thou hover'st o'er my bed
Of pain—and calmest all my fears.

Thy greatness overawes my soul
Thy gentleness is balm divine
Sweet touch of healing from above
Oh let Thy rays upon me shine.

Thou comest in the morning hours
Refreshing dew from Heaven above,
And when the sun sets in the west
I feel my Father's shielding love.

Thy blessing raised the widow's son,
Made lame to walk, op'd eyes of blind;
Oh touch us with Thy gracious hand,
In Thee alone our health we find.

As knelt the lepers at Thy feet,
We kneel, confess, we plead Thy word
Our faith is strong, though weak our frame
Thy power's the same Thou Mighty Lord.

If strong Thy hand to raise the dead,
To keep the mighty worlds in course,
Speak but the word, Thy will is done
My heart obeys Thy Sovereign force.

Redbirds Can Clinch Pennant With Any Five Victories Or Five Defeats of the Dodgers

Cardinals Have Six Games Left to Play and Brooklyn Has Eight

HOLD 2½ GAME LEAD

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

If St. Louis Cardinals are doing any worrying today it must be about how to get world series tickets for their friends or how to keep their wives from buying any new furniture before the end of the week.

The struggle for the National League pennant now has been reduced to the point, where the Redbirds can clinch it with any combination of five victories of their own or five defeats for Brooklyn Dodgers.

Since the Cardinals have six games left to play, that means they can lose one of them and still win even though the Dodgers capture all eight of their remaining tussles.

There doesn't seem to be much prospect of Brooklyn bagging eight straight. The best they could do against the futile Phils yesterday was halve a doubleheader and all that saved them from winding up even deeper in the rut than their present 2 1-2 games was a truly great pitching performance by Claude Passeau.

The ace of Chicago Cubs pitched a five-hit 3-0 shutout over the Cardinals in the second game of a doubleheader for his 19th victory of the year after Morton Cooper had administered a four-hit white-washing to the Cubs in the opener 1-0.

Cooper's feat came in an airtight duel with his former teammate, Lon Warneke, who scattered seven safeties but was defeated on a double steal, which brought Johnny Hopp home in the fourth inning. This was the 100th triumph for the Cardinals and Cooper's 21st.

Passeau's performance in the second game gave St. Louis its first blanking since May 24.

Wyatt Knocked Out

Brooklyn was beaten the first game 7-3 and the defeat was all the more humiliating because Whitlow Wyatt, the Dodgers' No. 1 star, was knocked out in less than four innings when Danny Litwhiler and Nick Etten hit home runs the latter with two aboard. Credit for the victory went to Tommy Hughes, who a week ago Sunday stopped the Cardinals on three hits.

Buck Newsom self-styled pennant insurance for the Dodgers, pitched six-hit ball to win the nightcap 4-2 and keep Brooklyn's pennant hopes from dying a natural death. Even so the Dodgers were unable to score after the first two innings.

Today Brooklyn has another date with the Phils at Ebbets Field and the Cardinals return home to Sportsman's Park for the first of two encounters with Pittsburgh Pirates.

Like the headline engagements, all the other major league action yesterday involved doubleheaders and all were divided except Cincinnati's clash with the Pirates. These rivals battled 13 innings in the first game before the Pirates won 2-1 and then they played a 3-3 tie in the second game, which was halted at seven innings by Pennsylvania's Sunday curfew.

The New York Giants' games at Boston were postponed.

In the American League New York Yankees beat Boston Red Sox 2-1 and then lost 3-2 in eight innings when darkness halted play. Gerry Priddy batted in all New York's runs in both games, a long fly scoring the deciding tally in the ninth inning of the first affair. Lou Finney drove home all Boston's runs in the second game.

Athletics Close Schedule

Philadelphia Athletics closed their season a week ahead of time, by a quirk of the schedule but no doubt to the relief of all concerned. Washington beat the A's in the first game 11-9 with a seven-run rally in the ninth, and Philadelphia salvaged the nightcap 2-1 with the help of four errors by the Senators.

Old Mel Harder pitched a two-hit 2-0 shutout against Detroit Tigers but Cleveland Indians dropped the second session 6-5 to leave their dispute over fourth place unsettled.

Chicago White Sox took advantage of four errors by St. Louis Browns to win their first game 6-5, but the Brownies copped the afterpiece 4-2 with effective seven-hit hurling by Bob Muncrief.

The Dodgers Saturday beat the Phils 5-4 in 11 innings while the Cards' game with Chicago was postponed. Mel Ott clouted his 28th homer with the bases loaded in the seventh inning to give the Giants a 7-6 victory over Boston Braves. Cincinnati downed the Pirates 4-3.

In the American League the Senators swept a twin bill from the Athletics 6-3 and 11-9. The Red Sox took advantage of Bill Dickey's wild throw in the 10th inning to score three runs and beat the Yankees 9-6 for their 90th straight victory of the season — their greatest number in 25 years. Cleveland at Detroit and Chicago at St. Louis were postponed.

'High Pockets' McCabe Ends Successful Year With Harrisburg Senators in Class 'B' Baseball

LOCAL PITCHER

RALPH McCABE

Belleville's contribution to professional baseball, Ralph "High-pockets" McCabe, who has returned home after having a successful year pitching for the Harrisburgh Senators of the Interstate Baseball League. McCabe boasts of an earned run average allowed of 3.00 runs per game and won ten and lost eight during the Interstate League schedule. He is the property of the Toronto Maple Leafs and is expected to be a starting moundsman for one of Canada's two entries in the International League in 1943.

It was Bob Shawkey, former manager and pitcher for the New York Yankees, who saw a tall slender six-foot-four youth pitching for the Malartic Baseball Club of the Northern Mining League, in the late summer of 1940. Shawkey watched the elongated youth for two games before he approached him something like this—"What's your name young man?"

"Ralph McCabe, why do you ask", replied the youth, who had never seen Shawkey before but idolized his pitching prowess.

"Well, my name is Bob Shawkey, I'm interested in a gold mine near here and also am scout for the New York Yankees. Are you interested in baseball as a career?" continued Shawkey.

This was too good to be true, was he to at last become one of the great New York Yankee baseball enterprise, the zenith of all professional baseball players' ambitions? No, he was not, but that meeting started out here towards a goal, which he some day hopes will land him a pitching berth in the major leagues.

Signed First Contract

It's Ralph "High-Pockets" McCabe, son of Game Warden and Mrs. Herb McCabe of this city, who Shawkey talked to that fine August day in Malartic, Que., and who subsequently signed a contract with the New York Yankees in the Spring of 1941 and was immediately farmed to the Norfolk, Va., "Tars" of the Virginia Baseball League.

Young McCabe, but 22 summers old, has returned home from a successful season this year with the Harrisburgh "Senators", of the Interstate League boasting of a pitching record of ten games won as against 8 defeats with a third-place club in his first season in Class "B" professional baseball. McCabe finished the season with the remarkable pitching record of 3.00 in his earned run average, which simply means his runs permitted while pitching for the Senators was exactly three runs per game, a figure, which is considered better than average with a third-placed team in a class "B" league.

Four to Three is Jinx

"Of the eight games I lost for the Senators this season, five were by a four to three reverse and to make matters worse for that figure I lost my only league play-off game by the score of four to three, allowing only seven hits, but two errors helped Hagerstown beat us that night", McCabe told The Ontario Intelligencer at his family home over the week-end.

Last winter before leaving for Spring training with the Toronto Maple Leafs, young McCabe appeared before a Canadian military examining board and was given an "E" category. "Before I talk further baseball terms with the Toronto Leafs I intend to appear before the Military Examining Board as soon as possible. If they want me I'll postpone any further baseball aspirations until after the war", explained McCabe as he stated that no less than seven members of the Harrisburgh Senators are today in the United States army or navy.

Won 9, Lost One

Ralph McCabe received his free agent's papers from the New York Yankees in the late fall of 1941, after being shipped from Norfolk to Butler, Pa., in the Penn. State League, where he did most of his baseballing in 1941. At Butler he enjoyed the remarkable pitching record of nine wins and only one defeat in his first year in professional baseball. The Penn League was a class "D" organization and not as speedy company as the Interstate League, where he plied his mound chores in 1942.

He commenced his pitching career with the Belleville junior club in the O.B.A. six years ago, but feeling there was little opportunity in the Quinte City for a baseball future, "High-Pockets" moved to Oshawa, where he enjoyed two seasons as a pitcher before migrating to Sudbury, where he hurled senior amateur ball in 1939. This year and in 1940 when he jumped to the Malartic Miners, a semi-pro outfit, McCabe pitched against the now famous Phil Marchildon, who was with the Copper Cliff team at that time. Marchildon is considered one of the best pitchers in the American League being one of the League's leading pitchers despite the fact he is pitching with the tail-end Philadelphia Athletics. It was while at Malartic that McCabe met Bob Shawkey and commenced his professional baseball career in organized ball.

McCabe is still the property of the Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League and providing he is not inducted into the Canadian armed services before next Spring, "Big Ralph" will again trek south for Spring training with the Leafs and following his successful year with the Harrisburgh Senators has every reason to believe he will be a starting pitcher for the Maple Leafs during the 1943 season.

Belleville's gift to a professional baseball feels he made a drastic mistake in 1939, when the Pittsburgh Pirates and Toronto Maple Leafs held a baseball school for a week in Peterboro'. "I was asked to attend that school but passed it up. Bob Coleman, the London pitcher now making his debut in the major leagues as a slugging outfielder with the Pirates, attended that school in Peterboro' and look what it did for him pointed out McCabe, who is quite optimistic about his baseball future, except for possibilities of having to help his country in a far more important game—the game of beating Hitler and his crowd of cut-throats.

SYRACUSE CHIEFS TWO GAMES UP IN THE PLAYOFFS

Win First One in 13 Frames 1-0 and Second by 4-0 Count

HOMERS DECIDE

(By The Associated Press)

An experienced guide, compasses, eye glasses or direction finders that will show Jersey City Giants how to reach home plate is in immediate demand by Manager Pancho Snyder of the Giants.

Syracse Chiefs haven't permitted a Giant spike to cross home plate in the last 31 innings of play between the two clubs and the Giants now trail two games to none in the International League final playoffs.

Charles (Red) Barrett began the dilemma when he blanked the Jerseys in the tie-breaking game for third place Sept. 10. He took up yesterday where he left off, white-washing the Little Giants in the second game of the Governors Cup playoffs, 4-0. It was the second straight shutout for the boys from Syracuse in the playoffs as Clayton Lambert hurled a 1-0 13-inning job Saturday.

There was thunder hidden in the usually quiet Redmen bats for three of their Sunday runs came as the result of homers. Roland Van Harrington, rookie second sacker, won the contest in the first frame with a circuit smash. Albert (Dutch) Mele insured the victory with another in the eighth inning with one man on.

The teams move to Syracuse tonight for their third game of the series, scheduled to start at 8:30 o'clock.

MINOR LEAGUE HOCKEY TO BE ON REDUCED SCALE

Springfield and Philadelphia Dropped From the American League

New York, Sept. 21 — (AP) — Professional hockey, given an okay by Canadian and United States officials last week, did a bit of remodelling of its minor league structures at a series of meetings during the weekend in preparation for the coming season.

The American League, meeting in New York City, announced the dropping of Springfield and Philadelphia. Springfield lost its arena to the army and Philadelphia, in last place all the way during the 1941-42 program, quit because of inability to get seasoned talent.

The circuit will continue as an eight-club affair.

The league said it had lost about 25 per cent of its personnel to the armed forces of Canada and the United States. It will continue its policy of keeping only 16 men in uniform in each team.

In another New York City meeting, the RiverVale, N. J., Skeeters, Atlantic City Gulls and the Johnstown, Pa., Blue Birds gave up their franchises in the Eastern Amateur League. The four remaining clubs were joined by the Baltimore Coast Guard club to complete the circuit.

Kansas City and Dallas received permission to withdraw from the American Association but the league's future still is in doubt. Tulsa withdrew at the end of last season and it is unlikely the Fort Worth club can continue as the only Texas entry.

Owners of the National League will meet sometime during the coming week to put their own house in order.

Belmont Officials Work on Possible Whirly-Alsab Rematch

New York, Sept. 21 (AP)—If racing had a Mike Jacobs, you would probably be hearing today how Whirlaway and Alsab have been rematched for a mile-and-a-quarter "bout" for the year's match race championship.

This one is a "natural" after Saturday's spine-tingler in which Alsab hung it on Whirly by half a lip for a $25,000 pot at Narragansett, and, in the fight game, Uncle Mike never lets the gravy grow cold on "naturals."

But Uncle Mike usually sticks to his knitting. So the chances are the impetus for the return of one of the real thrillers of turf history probably will come from the fellows who are trying to arrange Belmont Park's special "week of champions" Nov. 5 to 12, for Army and Navy Relief.

In that case, the return between the $700 bargain baby and little Mr. big tail would be the big headliner. And the word today is that if matters can be ironed out a purse of $25,000 or higher will be offered to put it on again.

Plain Ben Jones, Whirly's trainer, is "hot" for the return shot, although he isn't taking a thing away from the way Alsab hung it on Whirlaway under Carroll Bierman's classy piloting. So it depends on how Al Sabath feels about it.

Right now, however, both horses have a couple of other earlier dates to keep. The Sab still has to convince Shut Out that he's as good a three-year-old as Mrs. Payne Whitney's Kentucky Derby winner. The Lawrence realization during the current Belmont meeting should straighten out all confusion in this division, and Shut Out will be pointing for that one in a $3,000 overnight "prep" on today's program.

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

"I LEARNED MORE ABOUT pitching and playing baseball under Danny Taylor at Harrisburgh this season than I had acquired in the diamond game before," Ralph McCabe admitted over the weekend upon his arrival home from a successful season as a pitcher with the Harrisburgh Senators of the Interstate League. Just to show how hard they work pitchers in a class "B" League McCabe admits he lost 25 pounds in the last six weeks of the league scedule.

"We were having a tough time trying to get into the play-offs and it was up to the pitchers to shoulder the burden, as our club's team batting average was a healthy .183," admitted Ralph who had to pitch two shut out games in the last week to help the Senators wind-up in third place. Ultimately they were eliminated in the league play-offs by the Hagerstown Md., club, three games to one. However, Ralph is quite satisfied with the knowledge he picked up with the Senators and unless he is inducted into the Canadian armed forces before spring, he entertains high hopes of sticking with the Toronto Maple Leafs in 1943. Ralph already has a military category "E" and is the property of the Toronto club.

INCIDENTALLY HE HAD AN amusing experience while returning from Harrisburgh last Friday. At the International border he was questional by American immigration authorities, who, upon learning he was but 22 years of age and had been pitching baseball for Harrisburgh all season, wanted to know why he wasn't in the United States armed forces. Ralph tried to explain he was a Canadian citizen, but it was no soap. Fortunately he had his Canadian military exemption papers of class "E" on his person, or he might have been lining up with Sergt. Joe Louis today. McCabe is high in his praises of Danny Taylor, ex-big leaguer, who guided the destinies of the Senators. "He taught me much about ball," stated Ralph, who won ten and lost eight this season and had an earned run average of 3.00.

THE CURRENT ILLNESS OF Daniel M. Casey pitcher for the Philadelphia National from 1886, to 1889, in hospital at Washington, D. C., has received an old argument regarding the poem "Casey at the Bat," which De Wolf Hopper, the noted comedian, made famous through frequent recitation. The authorship of the poem long was questioned, but it finally was established to the satisfaction of most experts that E. L. Thayer, who died in Santa Barbara, Cal., August 21, 1940, wrote it, publication first appearing in the San Francisco Examiner, which he joined after graduating from Harvard.

Dan Casey always has asserted he "was the original Casey," although he was a pitcher and never known as a slugger, but Thayer maintained the character was mythical and had no reference to any individual and scouted Casey's claims.

After leaving the game, Casey went to Binghamton, N. Y., where he was a street car conductor. He moved to Washington in 1933, and more recently has been living at Four Corners, Md., from which town he was brought last week to a Washington hospital, seriously ill.

JUST WHY PROMOTER F. Tunney signed Jerry Monnahan and Nanjo Singh as curtain-raisers for Wednesday night has the majority of the grunt and groan addicts scratching their noggins. However, for once patrons will be on time because with the pugacious Monnahan and the mad Hindu, Singh, in a 30-minute scrap most anything is liable to develop. Neither has any ring ethics and it is doubtful if either ever read the rules and regulations (just as if there was any such thing) of modern wrestling. As an introductory for his return bout between John Katan and Earl McCready, Matchmaker Tunney went afar for talent as he also has Pedro Marinez, the mad Mexican, who held Billie Watson to a draw last week, in against one Don McIntyre, one of Paul Bowser's pets from Boston. Incidentally if McCready doesn't get more protection Wednesday night there is going to be many an irritated fan at the Hume Arena.

ATHLETES FROM THE BAY OF Quinte R.C.A.F. stations did better than alright in the No. 1 Command R.C.A.F. track and field meet at Varsity stadium in Toronto. As a matter of fact they walked off with the day's honors headed by AC2 Jack Parry, outstanding athlete from No. 5 I.T.S. Parry won the 100 yard dash and running broad jump and was also on the No. 5 I.T.S. relay team, winners of that event. PO. Bob Cope and McHenry, the latter also placing in the pole vault. FO. Archie Green informs us it rained nearly all afternoon in Toronto and Parry had to remove his shoes to win the broad jump at 21 feet 10 inches. There were 105 entries in the field. Sgt. Norm Blais of the Trenton R.C.A.F. station placed first in the shot putt and discus throw, while Mountain View athletes crowned themselves with glory also. As Parry was a member of the No. 5 I.T.S. relay team and winners, officials at the station feel their station champion should also have been crowned champion of the No. 1 Command Saturday, as Parry had two firsts and was on the winning relay squad. Others to compete for No. 5 I.T.S. included Reynolds in the 880; Mason in the 440 and McKinley the Quinte area airmen were just about the cream of the crop in Toronto Saturday

THIS AND THAT — SERGT. Marynouski, of Trenton, was also one of the honored athletes Saturday, winning one event..The Dodgers gained half a game on the Cardinals over the weekend as Brooklyn won two out of three from the Phillies while the Cardinals won and lost with the Cubs and are now 2 1-2 games out in front....Ted Williams hit his 35th home run as the Yankees and Red Sox split, while Phil Marchildon took a pasting at the hands of the Senators....On Sept. 2nd last the Harrisburgh Senators beat the Philadelphia A's 2-1 in an exhibition game played at Island Park in Harrisburgh....Ralph McCabe pitched part of that game....Lee Handley, who was sold by the Pirates to the Leafs last week, says he won't report next spring..Lee intimates he's through with baseball following an arm injury in a motor car accident last winter....His wing did not respond to medical treatment..In the event the National League race ends in a tie between the Dodgers and the Cardinals there will be a three-game play-off series arranged .... Thanks for the buggy ride.

Jack Parry, I.T.S., Wins 100-Yard Dash and the Broad Jump

I.T.S. WINS RELAY

Toronto, Sept. 21. (CP)—More than 4,000 spectators Saturday saw close to 500 athletes, representing all three branches of the Canadian armed services participate in a huge track and field championship program sponsored by No. 1 Command of the Royal Canadian Air Force at Varsity Stadium here.

So close was the competition that only two men gained more than one victory. They were AC2 Jack Parry, former Windsor, Ont., high school star, now stationed at Belleville, and Sgt. Norman Blais of Ottawa, stationed at Trenton. Parry won the 100-yard dash and the running broad jump, while Blais took the shotput and discus throw events.

AW. Winnifred Rudge, St. Catharines, provided one of the surprises of the day by besting AW. Bernice Martin, Winnipeg, a former Canadian titleholder, in the 75-yard dash for airwomen.

Sgt. Larry O'Connor of Newmarket basic training centre, a former Canadian Olympic competitor, anchored his unit to a neat victory in the 880-yard invitation relay.

Win Relay Race

In the R.C.A.F. relay race the No. 5 I.T.S. quartette romped home to an easy victory. As Parry was a member of the winning relay team in the Air Force section, No. 5 I.T.S. officials feel their station track and field champion won the day's honors at Toronto also. Running with Parry in the relay race were Cope, Suaro and Sgt. McHenry, who also entered the pole vault.

Other entries from the No. 5 I.T.S. included Reynolds in the 880; Mason in the 440 and McKinley in the low hurdles. Mountain View and Trenton R.C.A.F. athletes also covered themselves with track and field glory as athletes from the Bay of Quinte area dominated the sports meet that was held in a drizzling rain.

FRACTURES ANKLE WHILE PRACTICING

Herbie Moore Lost to R.C.A.F. Football Team for the Season

Toronto, Sept. 21 (CP) — The Royal Canadian Air Force team in the Ontario Rugby Football Union lost one of its brightest stars during the weekend, when Herbie Moores, former Balmy Beach halfback, fractured an ankle in practice.

Moores was carrying the ball during tackling drill and suffered the injury when his cleets caught in the turf as he attempted to pivot away from a tackle. He was admitted to hospital.

Balmy Beach gained added strength during the week-end when Len Staughton, veteran inside wing of Argonauts, decided to play with the team. It will be his 14th season of senior football and be the first time he has played for any other team but Argonauts.

HULL VOLANTS BEAT ORDNANCE

Hull, Que., Sept. 21 — (CP) — Hull Volants made it two straight in the best-of-three finals of the Interprovincial Baseball League Sunday, defeating Royal Ordnance Corps 2-1.

Wally Driscoll relieved Lefty Barbaro, pitching the last three innings and winning his second game of the series. Bill Leader turned in a good pitching performance for the R.C.O.C.

Red Murray's double in the eighth was the game-winning blow for Hull.

Score by innings:		r	h	e
Hull Volants	000 000 020—	2	7	2
R.C.O.C.	000 100 000—	1	7	0

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SCOTT YOUNG

Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, Sept. 21 — (CP) — One armed services outfit which has struggled along well enough without the benefit of overpowering publicity is the United Services boxla team from Victoria ... this club is in the British Columbia finals with New Westminster Salmonbellies, but probably won't get any farther than that ... it combines army and navy athletes, most of them boxla stars in civilian life ... a couple of the better-known players are George Urquhart, formerly of St. Catharines, Ont., and Nibs Chambers, an Owen Sound, Ont., product.

The Mann Cup champions, St. Catharines Athletics, still look best in the Ontario boxla final ... Mimico-Brampton Combines, the opposition, haven't quite the polish.. Montreal Shamrocks are getting more opposition than expected from Lachine-Ville St. Pierre in the Quebec final ... New Westminster and St. Catharines probably will wind up in Maple Leaf Gardens here about two or three weeks from now, in the Canadian final.

Incidentally:

Lou Davies, visiting racing potentate from the west, informs me that the daily double had its introduction to this continent at Calgary ... this bureau said last week it's North American birth was under the auspices of the Quebec Racing Association ..... it originated in England ... Ottawa's football day plans still are on the march, although Rough Riders and Uplands Air Station are the only definite entries so far in the Ottawa City League....

Freddie (Fort William Times-Journal) Edwards suggests that the N.H.L. match the C.A.H.A. grant of $9,000 to promote bantam, midget and juvenile hockey ... he argues that these minor leagues have contributed plenty to professional hockey in the past, writes that if the N. H. L. made such a grant Canadian playoffs would be possible in the minor divisions ... Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson reports that Jean Pusie, who needs no further identification, expects to play hockey next year ... I can hardly wait ... pin-boys on some Vancouver bowling alleys refuse to set the heavier ten-pins, forcing fold-up of several leagues ...

AT THE CAPITOL

"Hold Back The Dawn"

The year's most unusual picture, "Hold Back the Dawn," which is now showing at the Capitol Theatre stars Charles Boyer, Olivia de Havilland and Paulette Goddard in a romantic melodrama replete with excitement, thrills and comedy. A Paramount picture, "Hold Back the Dawn" was produced by Arthur Hornblow, Jr., and directed by Mitchell Leisen.

In this film Boyer has the most colorful role of his career, as a suave, cynical, worldly-wise European emigre who weds a trusting American girl just to get into the U.S. Once over the border from Mexico, he intends tossing her aside. His plans are thwarted by his own heart when he find himself, for the first time in his life, really falling in love. A woman from his past attempts to break up the romance and is indirectly responsible for a motor crash in which Boyer's bride, played by Miss de Havilland, is injured. The picture's smashing climax comes when Boyer, in mad desperation, crashes through the United States immigration barrier in a speeding automobile in order to reach his wife's side.

"Spooks Run Wild"
(First Belleville Showing)

Bela Lugosi, the screen's most menacing character, and the East Side Kids, headed by Leo Gorcey, Bobby Jordan and Huntz Hall, are co-starred in "Spooks Run Wild," the hilarious Monogram comedy, now playing at the Capitol Theatre. Their adventures take place in surroundings which are strongly reminiscent of the original "Dracula," with its coffins, cobwebbed corridors, trap doors and eerie shadows.

In the news pictures of Dieppe Raid and lates rites for its heroes.

AT THE BELLE

"Charley's Aunt"

Jack Benny is starred in the new 20th Century-Fox comedy hit, "Charley's Aunt," the funniest comedy ever written, now at the Belle Theatre. Kay Francis and James Ellison head the featured cast of the hilarious film.

"Dr. Kildare's Victory"

There is a new girl in the life of young Dr. Kildare, as presented in "Dr. Kildare's Victory," latest of the medical dramas, which is next at the Belle Theatre.

She is Ann Ayars, an extremely attractive and talented young actress who bids fair to equal the popularity of her predecessor in the series, Laraine Day, whom the script writers removed from the pictures when they involved her in an untimely death in "Dr. Kildare's Wedding Day."

Another newcomer to the series is Robert Sterling, last seen with Greta Garbo in "Two-Faced Woman." It is Sterling, who, as Dr. Winthrop, precipitates the crisis in which he, his nurse fiancee, Jean Rogers, and Drs. Kildare and Gillespie find themselves involved.

"The Vanishing Virginian"

Bringing to life the memorable biography, "The Vanishing Virginian," by Rebecca Yancey Williams, the film adaption from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer opens as the companion feature attraction.

Frank Morgan appears in the title role as Cap'n. Bob Yancey, father of the author, Spring Byington is the wife and mother. The writer is portrayed in her girlhood by Kathryn Grayson.

The featured cast includes Natalie Thompson, as the older sister, and Elizabeth Patterson as grandma. The two young Virginia swains are portrayed by Douglas Newland and Mark Daniels. The Yancey children are played by Juanita Quigley, Scotty Beckett and Dickie Jones. Louise Beavers and Leigh Whipper are the faithful negro servants on the old plantation.

The Belle Movietone News, described by Lowell Thomas, completes the program.

AT THE McCARTHY

Abbott and Costello

Joining forces to give you three hours of hilarious laughter the program presentation opening next at the McCarthy Theatre brings to Belleville the screen's greatest comics, Abbott and Costello and Bob Hope.

Abbott and Costello in the feature "Hold That Ghost" and Bob Hope in "The Ghost Breaker." The special short subject also on the program is the technicolor cartoon "A Haunting We Will Go."

The setting for Abbott and Costello's rib-tickler is a haunted tavern and ghosts pop out of dark corners, mysterious rappings are heard within the walls and hair-raising shrieks are part of the regular routine. The picture is all in good fun and although you will shake and shiver, you'll scream laughing. With Abbott and Costello the cast includes Richard Carlson, Joan Davis, Mischa Auer, The Andrews Sisters and Ted Lewis and his entertainers. The musical selections include "Isn't She a Pretty Thing," "Sleepy Serenade," "Me And My Shadow" and "When My Baby Smiles at Me."

Everyone knows what to expect when Bob Hope is the star of the picture and co-starred with Paulette Goddard just adds double the laughs and romance ... and mystery .... one minute you hold your breath in suspense and the next moment you let it go in a side splitting laugh. In "Ghost Breakers" Bob 's at his best and of course Paulette is something to see. In case you don't know what ghost breakers are, they clean out haunted houses at the drop of a hat.

That will be all for now folks; just don't miss "Hold That Ghost." and "The Ghost Breakers" and the cartoon 'A Haunting We Will Go" Altogether it's the funniest shiver show you'll ever see.

Congress Starts Drive to Give FDR Powers Needed

Washington, Sept. 21 —(AP)—Administration leaders opened a drive in Congress today to deliver to President Roosevelt by the end of the week legislation delegating to him broad, new statutory powers to control the cost of living in the United States.

The Senate prepared to start debate during the day on a measure authorizing and directing the President to act before Nov. 1 to stabilize prices, wages and salaries at Sept. 15 levels, so far as practical.

The House of Representatives, awaiting a decision by its rules committee on the length and scope of its prospective debate, scheduled consideration of a somewhat different version tomorrow with leaders counting on a final vote late Wednesday or Thursday.

A speedy adjustment of Senate-House differences would be necessary to put the measure on the President's desk Saturday, five days before the Oct. 1 deadline he set in his you-do-it-or-I-will message to Congress of Sept. 7.

With this rapid-fire timetable in mind, the administration mustered forces in an attempt to beat off expected farm-bloc amendments which would boost by 4.6 per cent the lowest level at which price ceilings could be applied to agricultural products.

Under terms of both House and Senate measures, the President would be authorized to suspend present provisions of law which prevent the fixing of farm prices at less than 110 per cent of parity. (Parity is a standard calculated to equalize the prices of things the farmer sells with those of what he buys.)

Persistent or Chronic Hoarseness May be Due to Cancer

Notwithstanding the warnings given by throat specialists regarding persistent hoarseness, many individuals neglect to consult a physician until real damage to the throat structure has been done and in some cases actual danger to life is present.

Why is chronic or persistent hoarseness a danger sign?

"Hoarseness is the earliest symptom of cancer of the throat due to its effect upon the vocal cords. 82 per cent of early cases of cancer of the larynx, that is affecting not more than the front two-thirds of one vocal cord, are curable. For this reason any patient with hoarseness is entitled to a careful examination of the throat."

I am quoting Dr. George Tracewell, Okmulgee, Oklahoma, in the Journal of the Oklahoma State Medical Association. Dr. Tracewell states that in cases of chronic laryngitis every possible cause should be sought because the cause may be cancer.

It is in the case of chronic hoarseness that physicians do not take the symptom seriously enough and the patient himself is likely to put off consulting a physician until it is too late to operate or the tissues have been extensively damaged by syphilis or tuberculosis. The fact that there are no other symptoms present—pain or cough—may mislead the patient. Hoarseness may be the chief and only symptom of syphilis.

In tuberculosis, however, the throat is not usually the starting point. It is generally conceded that tuberculosis of the larynx nearly always "follows" tuberculosis of the lungs.

However, cancer, syphilis and tuberculosis are not the only causes of hoarseness. There are other causes including goitre, injury, polyps (soft fleshy growths), overuse of voice, swelling of blood vessels, hysteria and others.

In the treatment of hoarseness due to tuberculosis, the treatment given where the disease occurs elsewhere in the body is given, that is rest (of the voice.)

In cancer of the throat, operation, X-rays and radium is the treatment.

I have spoken before about the danger of neglecting hoarseness that has persisted for two weeks or longer. As in cancer elsewhere in the body, early treatment cures cancer of the throat.

Little Benny's Note Book

door smoking to himself, and arguing with Glasses Magee and Shorty Judge about different subjects such as whether we'd rather be lost down a well or up in a runaway balloon, me claiming a well and Shorty claiming a balloon and Glasses claiming he'd have sense enough to keep out of both of them, and Shorty said, Aw, you think you know it all ever since you went to the mountains for vacation, you 4 eyed jerk.

Sure, what do you know, you old gogle puss? I said, and Glasses said, I know more than either of you two jerks, and what's more just because I happen to feel like wearing glasses, that dont prove I can see more, too.

Aw, who do you think you're kidding? Shorty said. Look down there in the next block, he said, and Glasses said, Okay, I'm looking, and Shorty said, Well if you can see so good, what's that thing on the window ledge of the 4th house from the corner on the other side of the street?

It's a thimble with the initials J. T. on it, Glasses said, and Shorty said, Like heck it is, it's a cent. Oh, you mean the 2nd floor window ledge, why didn't you say so? Glasses said. Sure it's a cent and the date on it is 1939, Glasses said, and Shorty said, Like fun it is, it's 1941, I'll leave it to Benny.

Absolutely, 1941, I said, and pop said, Young Magee is correct, the date on that cent is 1939, although I admit it's a trifle hard to make out because there's a fly standing on it, partly obscuring the last figure. And now if you 2 geniuses will admit that a boy with glasses can be as truthful a citizen as anybody else, you can all go and bury the hatchet with ice cream cones at my expense, he said.

The result being me and Shorty admitted it like lightning.

WILLKIE AND EGYPT'S PREMIER

HE WANTS TO CALL OFF THE WAR

This spirited battle took place at Port Washington, N.Y., when the Women's Defence Cadets of America fought off a force of "invaders" composed of members of the New York State Guard. The cadet lost her gun, but that didn't hamper her fighting one bit. By the time she got through with her male opponent he was more than ready to declare an armistice.

V FOR VICTORY AS THEY WORK

V for Victory is the sign these signallers make as they climb a pole and fix signal wires. Signalman G. N. Serediuk, Fort Francis, Ont. looks after the right terminal and Signalman Wm. Leschyson, Winnipeg handles the other, at a Canadian Signals reinforcement unit.

MARINES GET A BOXER

Smiling Tommy Loughran, boxing's retired undefeated light heavyweight champion, has joined the marines as a buck private. Wearing a marine tropical hat, Tommy tries on the gloves once more with the aid of Colonel Dudley Smith. The onlooker is Joe Schmidt. Tommy says he would like nothing better than to meet up with the Nazi parachutist, Max Schmeling.

NO DAMAGE DONE BY WHITE FROST

Although fences and roofs were covered with a liberal coating of white frost at an early hour this morning, according to farmers visiting the city, no appreciable damage was done to vegetables and other tender produce, it is reported. Official low temperature at the Belleville Water Purification Plant was 38.2 degrees, six degrees above frost, but away from the influence of the bay water the thermometers went considerably below that level. Canning factory officials reported they had not heard of any tomatoes being damaged.

MRS. HOMAN, OF CORBYVILLE, HAS BROTHER MISSING

Sgt. Norman Sargent BBall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Ball, of Magog, Quebec, and brother of Mrs. Seldon Homan of Corbyville, is reported missing and believed killed as the result of aerial activity over Germany it has been announced from Ottawa. Born in Magog, Quebec, 24 years ago, Sgt. Ball was educated in Magog schools and enlisted with the R.C.A.F. in 1940. He trained at wireless school in Montreal and graduated from Jarvis. He had been on bomber operations over Europe for six months before he was reported missing on August 27th.

MISS ETHEL SMITH SINGS FOR TROOPS

The sweet soprano voice of Miss Ethel Smith, daughter of Mrs. J. C. Smith, Ann Street, popular Belleville vocal artist rang through the assembly hall at No. 1 Manning Depot, Toronto, on Friday evening as the local girl delighted the station personnel with several solos during the regular weekly concert. Appreciation by the airmen was shown by the fact Miss Smith sang three encores before she was permitted to leave the stage.

Miss Smith was visiting her brother, Alan, who was then stationed at Manning Depot. He has since been transferred to Long Branch and is expected shortly to enter Initial Training School.

TIRPITZ REPORTED PATROLLING SEA LANES OF ARCTIC

Leaves Refuge Of Norwegian Port Under Cover Of Nazi Warplanes

INACTIVE SINCE JULY

London, Sept. 21 —(CP)— The German super-battleship Tirpitz was reported today to have left her refuge in the Norwegian port of Trondheim and to be patrolling Arctic sea lanes under the cover of Nazi warplanes in search of Allied convoys.

The report was the first intimation of activity by the warship since last July 9, when the Russians announced that one of their submarines had scored two torpedo hits in Arctic waters, thus foiling a Nazi attempt to smash a big Allied convoy.

The Tirpitz was said to have holed up in Trondheim Fjord after this attack, hiding there during the long summer days when her movements could easily have been checked by aircraft carrier had she ventured forth.

With the longer nights of autumn, however, the battleship would have a better chance of slipping undetected along the Norwegian coast and thence into the Arctic shipping lanes leading to Russia.

Observers here said the Germans obviously are calling upon every means at their disposal in an attempt to smash Allied convoys taking vital war materials to Russia.

Claim 38 Ships Sunk

Only yesterday the German High Command claimed that Nazi planes and submarines had sunk 38 merchantmen in a six-day running battle with a 45-ship convoy in the Arctic.

While the German claims were characterized here as exaggerated, unofficial sources believed that losses on the Russian supply route undoubtedly have been heavy.

Thus far the Tirpitz — the mightiest, most costly unit in the German navy — has played an entirely negative part in the war.

Much of the time she has spent in hiding from assaults by Allied bombers and submarines.

In June, 1941, she was reported damaged during a Russian aerial attack on the once Free City of Danzig. She did not again appear in the news until March, 1942, when she was spotted off the Norwegian coast, attacked by British planes and driven to shelter in a fjord.

It was believed on that occasion she was sallying forth for an attack on Allied supply lines.

Launched in April 1939

The Tirpitz was launched at Wilhelmshaven April 1st., 1939. She has been listed officially as a 35,000-ton ship, but British sources say she probably is 40,000 tons or more.

The reported reappearance of the Tirpitz followed by only 24 hours a statement by the First Lord of the Admiralty, A. V. Alexander, which was interpreted by unofficial naval experts as indicating that Britain's newest 35,000-ton battleships, the Anson and the Howe, now are ready for action.

In a speech at Sheffield yesterday, Mr. Alexander said all Britain's losses in capital ships, aircraft carriers and cruisers have been matched by new construction.

Britain's naval losses in the last 27 months have included four capital ships, four aircraft carriers, 22 cruisers, between 80 and 90 destroyers and 38 submarines, he said.

Harness Racing and Livestock Judging Features of Farmers' Day at Belleville Fair

Tuesday, the second day of Belleville Fair, has been designated as Farmers' Day and agriculturists from all parts of the district are certain to find among the many fine exhibits of livestock and other displays, many points of interest.

All poultry and swine will be judged on Tuesday with prize tickets and other classifications pertaining to the standing of the exhibitors' display being allotted. The large swine entry is also scheduled to be judged on Tuesday.

During the afternoon the judges will commence judging of certain classes of horses, with carriage teams, road teams, registered pony teams scheduled to go before the judges' stand. All horses on halter as well as light horse teams will be judged with the allotment of prizes certain to attract the attention of many district horse lovers.

Judging of cows will also commence on Tuesday with Holsteins, Shorthorns, Herefords and Aberdeen Angus scheduled to go before the judges.

Speed trials will of course be the centre of attraction for many of the fair patrons and officials have promised a really attractive harness racing entry. On Tuesday afternoon harness racing in the 2.27 and 2.17 classes will be run off for attractive purses, while on Wednesday the free-for-all and 2.20 classes will have their innings.

Dim Out Begins in Cities, Towns In Effort to Conserve Power

The sparkle left the streets of cities and towns in Ontario and Quebec Sunday night as new dim out regulations went into force and centres turned out all but essential lights in an effort to conserve hydro.

The order, which went into effect at midnight Saturday, left once-brightly lighted streets in wartime darkness, perhaps for the duration of the war.

Store windows were black and only a few electric signs were left burning. Downtown streets in all municipalities presented a picture of drabness, compared with the blazing illumination a week ago.

Toronto streets were almost at the blackout stage and only a few lighted display signs were visible. There was almost a complete absence of the usual crowds of Sunday night window shoppers.

St. Catharine Street at Montreal was only a shadow of its former sparkle. The dimout regulation made a dull glow out of the brightly-lighted thoroughfare.

Downtown Hamilton was almost black and at London the streets were dark as many lights were turned off. At St. Thomas there were no lights on one side of main business streets while at Windsor streets in the once brightly lighted border city were plunged into near darkness.

Every other light on Guelph streets was ordered turned off by the Board of Light and Heat.

Savings as high as 21 per cent of the municipalities' regular consumption will be effected by the dim out order, officials estimated.

THE WAR TODAY

By De WITT MacKENZIE

The Finnish Minister to the United States, Hjalmar J. Procope, has dropped a bomb big enough to reverberate in many capitals, both Axis and Allied, in his announcement that "Finland wants to cease fighting as soon as the threat to her existence has been averted and guarantees secured for her lasting security."

If we label this extraordinary move as a fishing expedition for a peace offer, we probably shall encounter an official denial from Helsinki. Still, that's exactly what it looks like—a trial peace balloon. Between the lines there seems to lurk the hope that the United Nations will overlook that Finland is an ally of Hitler and persuade Stalin to make some proposal.

It might seem that it didn't matter a great deal whether tiny Finland waged war or not. But the sturdy land of lakes in a mighty atom in this conflict. The safety of Russia's whole right flank from Leningrad to the Arctic is involved.

Peace would be calculated to relieve the pressure on the Red lifeline port of Murmansk, which the Nazis are attacking from Finnish soil, and the railroad which runs southward. It would ease the whole situation in the Gulf of Finland around the long beleaguered city of Leningrad and the great Red naval base of Kronstadt.

Made a Tough Route

It's likely, too, that Finnish peace would help the Allies meet the Nazi menace to vital shipping through the Arctic Ocean to Murmansk. That's a big item, for the Germans are making that a tough route. Only this weekend Berlin claimed the sinking of 38 merchantmen and the destruction or damaging of six warships (a claim not confirmed in any Allied quarters.) At the same time London announces that the Nazi battleship Tirpitz is reported to have been repaired and on the prowl again along the Arctic route.

Of course, we can't say in advance whether the Nazis might not be able to circumvent peace in some manner, since they have troops in Finland. However, a passive or unwilling country would place one more obstacle in Hitler's way.

Why should the Finns suddenly decide to get from under? It's only fifteen months ago that they cast their lot with the Nazi all highest in the face of British and American warnings. That was when Hitler's troops were grinding all Europe under the hob-nailed boots and there was nothing in sight to stop them.

Finnish Field Marshal Baron Mannerheim's chest even now is jangling proudly with metal which Hitler and Mussolini awarded him recently as an honored ally. The Nazi Fuehrer went to the extreme of visiting Finland in June for the express purpose of congratulating the commander-in-chief on his birthday.

Well, one can see several reasons why the Finns might want peace. One of them is that the tinkling of Mannerheim's decorations can't drown the sound of the hurricane which is rising to destroy the Nazi anti-christ. In short, the Finns allied themselves with a loser.

Lidice, Name Of Czech Village, Taken By Quebec Town

Frelighsburg, Que., Sept. 21 (CP). —Approval of provincial authorities has been granted, and beginning on Sunday, Oct. 25, this town 50 miles south of Montreal near the Vermont border, will be known as Lidice. Lidice, a Czecho-Slovakian village, was "wiped off the map" by the Nazis, who either killed or removed the citizens to other sections of the country.

Frelightsburg, a municipality of approximately 500, has also agreed to the adoption of the new name, perpetuating that of the Czech town. Premier Adelard Godbout who has a farm in Frelighsburg, will attend ceremonies on Oct. 25, when the change of name is made.

Disorders Crushed By Planes, 'Chutists

NEW DELHI, Sept. 21 — (CP)— Airplanes sprayed incendiary bombs on the dens and encampments of the fanatical Mohammedan Hurs in Western India in suppressing recent disorders in which they tore up railways and killed many Indians, Sir Alan Hartley told a council of state today.

Parachute troops also were used.

The outbreak, which had no connection with disorders attending the Congress Party's civil disobedience campaign, reached a peak last spring with the derailing of a frontier mail train and the butchery of a number of passengers.

Sir Alan, Deputy of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, Commander-in-Chief in India, said that more than 200 Hurs were arrested, 45 killed and 30 injured and that the area of martial law has been gradually extended as the Hurs fell back into the Western Indian wastes.

The Council of State will debate the Congress Party's "rebellion" tomorrow along with the assembly.

Seated at the session today were 32 members, of whom 21 are elected and the others either government officials or appointees of the Viceroy.

Caring For Civilian Sick in Germany Presents Problem

New York, Sept. 21 (AP).—Caring for the civilian sick in Germany is a problem of increasing acuteness seriously influencing the efficiency of the Nazi home front, it was stated by trustworthy dispatches reaching the United States today.

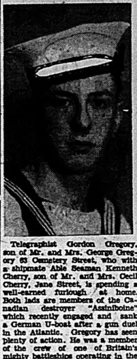
Inadequate care for civilians who become ill is adding to the difficulties of keeping war-factories running full tilt and of producing food and other commodities needed by the population, the reports said.

Most hospitals are crowded with war-wounded, and over-worked physicians have little time for civilians.

The dispatches said there had been a marked increase in the number of cases of dysentery, spotted typhus, tuberculosis and of physical exhaustion.

Two Belleville Boys on Assiniboine Shared in Excitement of Sinking Sub

GORDON GREGORY



Telegraphist Gordon Gregory, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Gregory 63 Cemetery Street, who with a shipmate Able Seaman Kenneth Cherry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Cherry, Jane Street, is spending a well-earned furlough at home. Both lads are members of the Canadian destroyer "Assiniboine" which recently engaged and sank a German U-boat after a gun duel in the Atlantic. Gregory has seen plenty of action. He was a member of the crew of one of Britain's mighty battleships operating in the Mediterranean and has been fighting around Taranto, Bardia and Genoa. He has seen over two years' service at sea.

"When the boys on the machine-guns spotted the Germans on the deck of the submarine, it was the best duck-shooting I ever saw. The gang just mowed 'em down".

And Able Seaman Ken Cherry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Cherry, Jane Street, smiled as he recalled the gun-battle between his ship, the destroyer "Assiniboine" and a Nazi submarine that ended with the Canadian boat sending the sub to the bottom after ramming and shelling the craft.

Ken is spending a few days at home on furlough with a shipmate Telegraphist Gordon Gregory, son of Mr. and Mrs George Gregory, Cemetery Street.

One Canadian gunner was killed and thirteen other members wounded during the action that saw the majority of the submarine crew taken prisoner.

The "Assiniboine" sighted the submarine after it had attacked a convoy.

Sight U-Boat

"We dropped a few depth charges and searched through a light fog that covered the ocean," Cherry said. "Suddenly we sighted the U-Boat rising on the surface. We immediately let go with our heavy guns and machine-guns. The Nazis were lined up on the deck going to their guns when our lads got the range. They toppled off the sub into the water like ducks in a shooting gallery".

Some of the Nazi sailors, slipped their lifebelts and sank rather than be taken prisoner. It appears they were afraid of being shot as they had been told Canadians took no prisoners. This belief was substantiated later on the Assiniboine, when groups of five of the prisoners were taken on deck for exercise. When the first group was removed the remainder huddled in a corner and said good-bye to each other. But when their comrades returned and told them the truth, smiles broke out over their faces.

"One look-out bore a charmed life", Cherry said. "I was hoisting ammunition between decks but came up occasionally to see how the scrap was going. There was a heavy shock when we struck the sub, and some of us thought the ship was hit. The look-out stood at his post grinning cheerfully. Machine-gun bullets pelted all around him, but all he got was a scratch.

Hit His "Drinking Arm"

Gunner Stanley Gallant, of Prince Edward Island, operating one of the guns, reached out for more ammunition and received a bullet in an arm. He looked at the blood streaming down his sleeve, and sang out to his mate, 'Hey, Bill, they got my drinking arm'.

The members of the Nazi sub, were mostly young men, a few of whom could speak broken English. Some of them were surly, but cheered up when they were given white bread and butter and all the water they wanted for drinking and washing purposes.

Telegraphist Gregory, a youthful Canadian naval veteran with over two years of sea service to his credit, added his story to that of Cherry's. He told of an arrogant Nazi officer forcing his men to come up the conning tower at the point of a gun. Battle weary Nazi seamen seeing the game was up, wanted to surrender, but the officer would not permit this. Suddenly one the seamen drew a knife and stabbed the officer.

One of the Germans lived in Canada previous to the war, and was called back to Germany. He spoke English well and said he came from Western Canada.

At Close Quarters

"At one time the submarine was so close to us that we could have jumped to his deck from ours. We thought he had surrendered and everyone started to cheer. Then a machine-gun started to bark and bullets began to fly. The boys dashed back to the stations and took up the fight where they left off".

"One German officer after being stripped of his clothing, as were all the prisoners surlily complained when given a clean dry suit of good Canadian grey underwear. He demanded his uniform, but one of the boys politely informed him, 'if it's good enough for me, it's good enough for you'.

Gregory was on duty in the wireless office when the action started and consequently did not see much of the action.

The ship had seen another submarine previous to the one sunk, and ship's officers believed they had disturbed a rendezvous of the undersea wolves. Later events proved this.

Did Noble Job

This was the first time most of the boys had been in action. True they had seen plenty of depth-charge activities but the most of them had never been under fire. They did a noble job and to quote their commanding officer, "They stuck by their guns and everytime they scored a hit they set up such a roar of cheering I couldn't hear myself giving orders."

The crew of the "Assiniboine" worship their commanding officer Lieutenant Commander J. Hamilton Stubbs, R.C.N. "He is one of the grandest chaps I ever sailed under", was Gregory's tribute. "He is quiet, never gets excited and best of all knows at all times what the score is. He was on the bridge and on deck during the action quietly giving orders and was as cool as a cucumber.

Gunner Killed

The crew of "A" gun was one of the main targets of the sub's guns. Of the seven men, one was killed. Three others were wounded but the crew continued pounding the U-Boat with only three men left.

Gregory likes the destroyer life. For over eighteen months he was on board one of Britain's big battleships in the Mediterranean and saw action at Taranto, Bardia and Genoa. A brother was also on duty in the Mediterranean and spent a few hours in the water after his ship had been damaged by Stuka dive-bombers. He at present is in England.

25 PICNICKERS DROWN IN GEORGIAN BAY

VINSON SEES U. S. TURNING CORNER AT SEA

Sixteen Rescued As Boat Swamps In Heavy Sea

Bert Corbeau, Former Pro Hockey Player and Owner of Boat Among Missing

POLICE INVESTIGATE

MIDLAND, Ont., Sept. 22 (CP) —A gay picnic party to celebrate completion of a war contract was turned into sudden tragedy Monday night when the 75-foot motor launch carrying 41 men of the day shift of the Midland Foundry and Machine Shop sank in Georgian Bay with only 16 survivors.

The boat went down swiftly and suddenly after taking water when it came out into the main steamer channel leading to the open bay between Beausoleil and Present Islands.

The boat foundered 1½ miles from the closest shore of Beausoleil Island.

Most of the dead were believed to have been trapped in the big cabin of the powerful, Diesel-engine launch, owned by Bert Corbeau, of Midland, superintendent of the foundry. Corbeau, former National Hockey League star defenceman with Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal teams, was among the drowned.

Elmes Shaw, president of the company, was among the survivors. J. N. Bicknell, Toronto lawyer and a partner in the firm, was drowned.

Saved by Finding Shoal

Finding of the long shoal that runs for about a quarter-mile into the bay from Beausoleil Island was credited with saving most of the 16 who got away from the boat.

One of the survivors—his name was not learned immediately—said he had been swimming in the cold water until he was exhausted and ready to give up when his feet touched the shoal. He called to the others in the water around him and they made their way up the shoal to the Cincinnati Y.M.C.A. camp on the island.

They got in touch with Peter Tonch, superintendent of the Beausoleil Island National Park, who took them in a launch to Delawana Inn at Honey Harbor, ten miles across the bay from Midland and 30 miles by road. The survivors were brought here about 9 o'clock this morning.

Corbeau Believed at Wheel

Corbeau was believed to have been at the wheel of the launch. The boat took some water as it came into the gap and Corbeau, survivors related, attempted to turn around. The boat took more water then and suddenly it sank.

Al Miller, of Midland, one of the survivors, said the boat "seemed to list and ship a lot of water. Then it sank."

"I had to swim about a mile to get ashore," he added. "If anyone had told me I could swim a mile I'd have thought they were crazy."

Celebrated Completion of Contract

The picnic at Corbeau's cottage near Whalen's Island in the Thirty Thousand Islands group was planned to celebrate the successful completion of the war contract. The party left Midland about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, had supper at Corbeau's cottage and started back after dark.

Harbor men said there had been a moderate wind but only a small swell on the bay. After the bright sunshine of the afternoon, the night was bitterly cold and this was believed to have been a factor in the large number of drownings.

Every available boat of the district was pressed into the search today for the bodies of the drowned.

Launch One of Largest on Lakes

Corbeau's launch was one of the largest of its kind on the Great Lakes. Before it came into Corbeau's possession, it had been owned by N. L. Nathanson, motion picture company executive, J. P. Bicknell, mining magnate, and E. L. Ruddy, who sold it to Corbeau.

A fast and powerful craft, Corbeau had used it for years to take fishing parties over the bay and it had come through far worse weather than that prevailing last night.

The survivors who reached Beausoleil Island broke into the Y.M.C.A. camp, which was closed for the season recently, to escape the cold.

First word of the tragedy was received here this morning when Dr. T. J. Johnston and Inspector Hugh Gibson of the Provincial Police at Midland, got a telephone call that Tonch had brought survivors to Honey Harbor.

Survivors told of helping Shaw, the company president, after they were thrown into the water. Unable to swim a stroke, Shaw was held up until the lucky finding of the shoal.

Survivors said one of the two lifeboats trailing the launch was upset when one man jumped into it from the launch. Tom Davidson, of Midland, one of the survivors, told of the boat slanting in the gap as Corbeau changed its course, and of the men aboard being thrown to the one side as the launch dipped.

Davidson was asleep just before the boat went down. He was thrown from his bunk by the list and before he could get out of the cabin the water was up to his armpits. Davidson stripped of some of his clothes and plunged into the bay. In the water he kicked off his shoes and struck out for shore, 1½ miles away.

Provincial authorities arrived here this morning to open an investigation.

Dr. Smirle Lawson, supervising coroner for Ontario; Deputy Attorney General C. L. Snyder and Prof. W. L. Robinson, provincial pathologist, were among the officials sent to the scene by Attorney General Conant.

At Toronto Mr. Conant said an investigation would be opened immediately to determine whether there was any negligence in handling of the boat.

Attorney General Conant in directing Dr. Lawson to conduct an inquest, said such an inquiry would find out whether any negligence in the condition or operation of the boat occurred, or whether any action should be taken to prevent similar situations in the future.

"This question of operation of small pleasure boats has given us some concern and we have considered it frequently from the standpoint of safety and speed," Mr. Conant said. "We have been confronted with the difficulty that they come under the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa. We will consider if the inquest makes recommendations whether it is proper for us to make suggestions in their operations."

FIVE PERSONS INJURED

Bombay, Sept. 22 (CP).—Five persons were injured today as a homemade bomb exploded in front of the Bombay cotton exchange building.

Putting Cargo Aboard RAF Bombers For Export to Germany Delicate Chore

(By ALAN RANDAL)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, Sept. 22 (CP) — This business of putting cargo aboard R.C.A.F. bombers for night time export to Germany is a delicate chore. It's something like putting the notes into a piano.

And then, says George Rennie of Powell River, B.C., the bomb aimer becomes the piano player when Canadian aircrews get over the target. With his bomb selecting apparatus he picks out and releases whatever note he wants.

Sometimes it's the crescendo of a 4,000-pound bomb. Or it may be something less, like a 500-pounder or a bunch of incendiaries which Rennie's crew called "unsanitaries."

Rennie is a leading aircraftman, a general armorer. He looks after guns and bombs and the bomb racks, and helps load the planes up with high explosives and incendiaries whenever the aircrews are down for a trip into enemy territory.

Some armorers just look after bombs. Some just look after guns. But Rennie, typical of hundreds of ground crew men from Canada who are helping the R.C.A.F. fly in Britain, does everything in the armorer's trade.

He is attached to a Canadian bomber squadron flying out of the Midlands.

Other armorers at this station include Lac. George Plumb of London, Ont.

While other chaps take the bombs from the bomb dump to the planes the armorers load up their trucks with the equipment they need for bombing-up, mostly holders for bombs and pulley apparatus.

A Regular Drill

For a big raid on Saarbrucken, Rennie was loading a Wellington with 500-pound and 250-pound bombs and quite a bunch of incendiaries. The bombs don't look as big as you'd think. For loading a 4,000-pounder there is a regular drill the loading-up crew go thru' after wheeling the bomb under the aircraft's belly.

George's head and shoulders were hidden in the bomb hatch but you could hear him whistling "Send it to the One I Love" as he made a 500-pounder secure in its place.

Then Rennie ducked out from under, knelt down and showed he had the bomb placed. At night they were to go down on Saarbrucken in what fliers call a "stick" or one after another, precisely placed.

"We've got this kind here," said Rennie, pointing out a 500-pounder, "and this kind (250-pounder) here and we're going to lay the incendiaries on the bottom."

He explained out the bomb aimer's apparatus would show just what bomb is so he'll know just what kind of a bomb he is selecting.

The technique in loading these particular bombs is to run a bomb, on its little underslung tractor car under the belly of the plane. Then it is hoisted into the aircraft by means of a winch and wires and a couple of things like fingers hold it there until the bomb aimer lets it go sometime during the night when a certain German target is down below.

DREISER REFUSED PERMISSION TO GIVE ADDRESS

Justice Department Acts Because of Anti-British Statements In Interview

RETURNS TO U. S.

Ottawa, Sept. 22. (CP)—Theodore Dreiser, 71-year-old American novelist, was understood to be back in the United States today following a brief visit to Toronto during which he was banned under Defence of Canada Regulations from making a scheduled public address there.

Justice Department officials said the address was ordered cancelled because of certain anti-British statements Dreiser was quoted as making in an interview with a Toronto newspaper (Telegram) yesterday.

Under Section 21 of the Regulations, on which the ban was based, the Justice Minister is empowered to issue an order to restrict in any way the "dissemination of new or propagation of opinions' prejudicial to the public safety or the safety of the State.

Dreiser, who checked out of his Toronto hotel room late yesterday, had been scheduled to address a meeting of the Town Hall Forum Committee in Eaton Auditorium in Toronto tonight on the subject "Democracy on the Offensive".

The statements ascribed to Dreiser caused Toronto City Council to pass a resolution asking that Hon. Louis St. Laurent, Federal Minister of Justice, be informed of anti-British remarks. Council also asked the Police Commission to discuss whether the Eaton Auditorium should be closed.

Both Mayor Fred Conboy of Toronto and Attorney-General Conant of Ontario, brought the matter to the attention of Mr. S. Laurent, following which John Chisholm, Toronto Chief of Police, told a special session of the Police Commission he had been instructed to take any steps he considered advisable to "prevent the holding of any meeting in Toronto for the purpose of being addressed by Mr. Dreiser".

The Town Forum Committee then cancelled the meeting, Chairman D. Ross saying the statements attributed to Dreiser had been "widely interpreted as a hindrance rather than a help to that better understanding" of the United Nations' joint effort for which the meeting was called.

Widow Recovers From Amnesia Finds Self Wedded To Man Of Whom She Has No Recollection

Hollywood, Sept. 22 (AP)—The attractive young widow of a retired Binghampton, N.Y., newspaper man, related today a story of nearly a year's loss of memory and her recovery from amnesia to find herself married to a man she can't remember.

Mrs. Glory Weller Miller, 25, appealed to the manager of a motor hotel for assistance yesterday after awakening and finding her surroundings unfamiliar. The manager took her to the police station.

There police identified her through a picture supplied by her husband, Henry Miller, a commercial photographer who had reported her missing.

But Miller was a stranger to his wife. She had no recollection of meeting him, of their marriage in Las Vegas, Nev., May 1, or of her life with him since.

The shock which led to her plight occurred at November 4, 1941, she said, when she entered her home in Atascadero, Calif., and found her first husband, H. Pierce Weller, 50, dead. That was her last remembrance until her recovery in the hotel. She didn't know the United States was at war.

"I don't know what to do," she told interviewers. "I can't stay with someone I don't know. I realize all the evidence indicates I was married to Mr. Miller, but I don't know him. I can't remember even meeting him."

"I'm going to take here to a doctor," said Miller. "I love her and I want to keep her."

STALINGRAD'S FALL DELAYED SAYS GERMAN PAPER

Paper Insists Fall Will Not be Delayed Until the Winter

TURN ON BRITAIN

Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 21 (Delayed)—(AP)—A German newspaper, the Frankfurter Zeitung, asserted today "the fall of Stalingrad, and therewith the final breaking up of the Russian front, has been delayed" but insisted "it has not been put off until winter."

This admission, following a German claim last week that the finale with the implication of exceedingly with the implicatio nof exceedingly high German losses.

Premier Stalin's method of resistance to the death, the Zeitung said, had been approved in London because it would extend the struggle and "accordingly higher German losses were to be expected."

The newspaper asserted, however, that destruction of strategic positions in Stalingrad was imminent, after which increased pressure would be brought upon Great Britain.

A Berlin dispatch to the National Zeitung of Basel said the Germans were trying to enlarge a wedge about a mile wide forced into Stalingrad but the Russians "brought fresh units across the river (Volga) by canoe for the counter-attack."

New concentrations of the Russian air force and heavy guns on the eastern bank of the Volga also were in use, it said, so "the intensity of the battle even is increasing."

"No one can estimate how many still are living in the city which once had 500,000 inhabitants," it said.

"But if the battle lags half an hour it is swarming suddenly with human figures creeping out of hiding with terrified faces, carrying buckets and trying to reach places in the neighborhood to fetch water for the day.

"Sometimes on one of the small clay ovens which stand in front of every shelter some soup is steaming. But the next hit by artillery drives these poor terrified figures away from the surface of the ground."

INVESTIGATE DYNAMITE FIND

Thetford Mines, Que., Sept. 22 (CP).—Provincial Police officers today took over investigation of the discovery of five sticks of dynamite near Canadian Oil Company gasoline reservoirs here yesterday.

GERMAN FIGHTER PLANE DOWNED ON DESERT FRONT.

Cairo, Egypt, Sept. 22 (AP) — British fighter planes shot down a German fighter over the El Alamein desert front yesterday during a day of light action on the ground and in the air, a British communique said. The land operations were confined to occasional artillery exchanges.

GUNMEN GET $700

Montreal, Sept. 22 (CP). — Two unmasked gunmen last night staged a holdup in a west-end drug store and escaped with $700 from the cash register. The proprietor, Lorenzo Dandurand, was forced into the basement before the bandits fled.

NATIONAL UNITY ESSENTIAL FOR TOTAL WAR EFFORT

Tribute Paid to Three Russian Heroes by Ontario's Premier

CONGRATULATE STALIN

Toronto, Sept. 22.—(CP)—National unity is essential for a total war effort "but you can't have that so long as there is a narrow-minded political party in Ottawa", Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario last night told 18,000 persons attending a total war rally here in Maple Leaf Gardens.

The war presents an opportunity for a greater partnership of Liberals, Conservatives and Labor—all who believe in total war, Premier Hepburn told the rally, at which tribute was paid to three Russian heroes.

"The voice of Canada ultimately will demand an end of this fifty per cent war effort", declared the Premier.

After welcoming the three Soviet youths—Lieut. Lyudmila Pavlichenko, girl sniper; Lieut. Vladimir Pchelintsev, another sniper and Nikolai Krasavchenko, Moscow Youth Leader—Premier Hepburn presented a rifle to Lieut. Pavlichenko on behalf of the people of Ontario.

"I hope your present record of slaying 309 Nazis is a mere rehearsal", he said.

Spanish Cabinet Issues Statement

Madrid, Sept. 22 (AP). — The Spanish cabinet, in its first important pronouncement since ousting of the pro-German foreign minister Ramon Serrano Suner Sept. 3, said last night it approved "the orientation sustained during the last six years" in foreign affairs.

Discussing internal affairs, the government announcement said "the most severe discipline" would be applied to all Spaniards. It promised the "cutting short of all attempts at agitation or dissension" and said any act of violence against the state would be punished inexorably.

The Spanish policy of close friendship with Portugal and "historic solidarity" with the Spanish American countries was reaffirmed by the cabinet.

Serrano Suner was replaced as foreign minister by Count Francisco Gomez-Jordana and at the same time Franco took over Serrano Suner's post as chief of the political junta of the Falange party. The ministers of war and interior also were replaced.

A Berlin broadcast last night quoted a Madrid dispatch as saying the Spanish Cortes or Parliament is to be revived and the first session might be held next month.

NAZIS REPULSED IN SOME PHASES CRITICAL BATTLE

Hand-to-Hand Clashes Going on in Square On Street Crossings And in Houses

GAINS IN CAUCASUS

(By EDDY GILMORE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Sept. 22 (AP) — Battling at bayonet-point in the narrow streets and rubble-strewn squares, the defenders of Stalingrad held the Germans at bay today for the fifth consecutive day, reeling before steadily-reinforced onslaughts but surging back again and again and sometimes gaining ground.

Bombs and shells had levelled much of the factory city on the Volga to a battlefield, with every yard contested. Red Star reported street fighting of even greater intensity and declared that in some cases Germans held one storey of a building while the Russians fought back from another.

It was a battle with bayonets and gunbutts amid heaps of dead.

29th. Day of Siege

And even as the battle-grimed defenders held on into the 29th. day of siege and the 16th. month of Russia's war, the army newspaper reported that the Germans were using relays of transport planes in their rush to replace losses and reinforce their assault.

Red Star printed a picture of a woman volunteer at a machine-gun under the caption: "Protecting Crossings of the Volga."

(That might indicate that the Russians had been forced back to the river ranks in sectors near Stalingrad, or even that they were manning defences on the east bank the river banks in sectors near Stalclaimed to have reached the Volga banks north and south of the city.)

It indicated that these represented but a few of the scores of engagements for possession of the battered Volga River industrial city over which the Red flag still flies.

Attacks Don't Halt

"Attacks don't halt," it said. "Hand-to-hand clashes are going on in the Square, on street crossings and in houses."

(The reference to "The Square" was not expanded, but it would indicate the Germans were challenging the Russians close to if not at the heart of Stalingrad.)

Five German tanks were set on fire or disabled by Russians in the Mozdok area of the Central Caucasus, the Information Bureau said, but "in another sector the Hitlerites, at a cost of heavy losses, captured a height and a populated place".

Russians were credited with the initiative on the north-western front. The communique said they pressed back the Germans in fighting for a town and repulsed counter-attacks.

New Delhi, India, Sept. 22 (CP).—Police made eleven arrests today after searching Congress party offices in Serampore and finding unauthorized leaflets.

Possible to Destroy Germany From Air Opinion Expressed by Brig. Eaker

London, Sept. 22 (CP).—The conviction it is possible to destroy Germany from the air is expressed by Brig.-Den. Ira C. Eaker, Chief of the United States Army Bomber Command. He holds the necessary forces "will be rapidly assembled".

A lull in the aerial warfare over western Europe last night gave the Germans another brief respite from the hammering of Allied bombs. In home defence, Britain had "nothing to report".

Gen. Eaker, nominated for promotion to rank of a major general by President Roosevelt yesterday, said in an interview published by the London Daily Mail, that the enemy would fall before a sufficiently powerful series of vertical assaults.

"By destroying his munitions plants and communications you can bring his armies to a halt," he said.

"By destroying his shipyards you can make it impossible for him to build submarines."

He said "there is hardly a corner of Germany" which United States bombers would not reach within the next few months.

"It should not be assumed that we are committed to high-level bombings," he said. "The United States Army Air Forces will bomb anywhere and in any way that the weather indicates is most suitable."

He said there are enough airdromes in Britain now built and building to accommodate all Allied air forces needs for the destruction of Germany.

Dieppe, Solomon Islands Forecasts Of Things to Come

Sea-Power Welded By Ships, Aircraft Anvil on Which Global War Hammered

WILL TAKE OFFENSIVE

Washington, Sept. 22. (AP)—"Dieppe and the Solomon Islands are merely forecasts of the shape of things to come", Chairman Carl Vinson (Dem.-Gam.) of the House of Representatives Naval Affairs Committee said today in a public statement on the United States Naval Expansion program.

The Georgian's statement, declaring that "at sea we are beginning to turn the corner", was issued to reporters after President Roosevelt had requested yesterday an additional $2,731,154,308 to bring the navy's current year appropriation to a record high of approximately $17,000,000,000.

"We now are pushing our greatly-augmented program of naval construction with the utmost speed at our command", Vinson said. "When it is completed and joins forces with the British and other Allied navies, it will give the United Nations a more nearly global strength at sea than the world has ever seen, the sea-power, welded by ships and aircraft, is the anvil on which the decision in this global war is being hammered out".

Will End U-Boat Menace

He predicted the new navy would give the United States "the added escort and patrol craft needed to put an end to the U-Boat menace" and "will enable us to take the offensive with superior force in any theatre we choose".

"When the new land is launched in the West of Europe it is seapower that will launch it. Seapower will transport the men and material needed to the point of attack. To keep them flowing in an unbroken stream until the whole Axis edifice has crashed, America and the other United Nations must have sea-power in overwhelming strength, far beyond challenge by any force that Berlin, Rome and Tokyo can bring against it".

FELL ASLEEP ON PARADE

Fort Bliss, Tex., Sept. 22 (AP).—Soldiers here stood at attention for roll call. Suddenly one man collapsed in the ranks. Hastily the others gathered to give first aid. Pte. L. B. Hanna recovered immediately—and sheepishly. He had fallen asleep.

WEATHER LIMITS OPERATIONS

London, Sept. 22 (CP).—Limited in operations by bad weather over the continent, the R.A.F. confined itself last night to mine-laying in the waters off the German North Sea coast, the Air Ministry said today.

DNB, German News Agency, said British planes raided the Schleswig-Holstein area last night. However, any planes over that border area between Denmark and Germany probably were those sowing mines in nearby waters.

27 JAP BOMBERS DROP LOADS IN NEW GUINEA BUSH

First Air Attack in Strength in Two Weeks Frustrated West of Port Moresby

ALLIES HIT BRIDGE

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Sept. 22. (CP)—In their first attack of any strength on Allied positions in New Guinea in two weeks, 27 Japanese bombers, escorted by ten fighter planes, dropped bombs in srub bush 32 miles northwest of Port Moresby yesterday, but caused neither damage nor casualties a communique said today.

The jungle battleground where Allied troops have stalled the Japanese drive on Port Moresby is about 32 miles northeast of that Allied base, on the southern side of the Owen Stanley range, but a spokesman said the attack had no direct bearing on the fighting there and the situation was unchanged.

Allied fighter planes swept along the Kokoda track between Kokoda and Buna, Japanese landing base, and destroyed a bridge believed to have been a wire rope span over the Kumusi River, south of Kokoda.

The bridge originally was destroyed when the Allied abandoned the area, but the Japanese had reconstructed it because of its importance for bringing of supplies from Buna.

An Allied bomber unit made a night attack on the Airdrome and dispersal area at Buka, on the northern tip of the Solomon Islands, but the communique said results could not be observed.

CHARGE DISMISSED!

San Francisco, Calif., Sept. 22—(AP)—Municipal Judge Teresa Miekle dismissed a traffic charge for the first time in her career. The tag was mailed from Australia by Capt. Leonard L. McGee of San Francisco with this note: "I didn't have time to come in and see you as I sailed the next day."

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

GEARY POST, WINNER AT BABY SHOW

By the fountain in a brilliant afternoon sun the mothers congregated on Monday afternoon to show their offspring for the prizes that were offered by the Belleville Fair Board. The babies were dolled in their best clothes and apparently on their good behaviour and the show, under the direction of Dr. Lily B. Matheson as chief examiner with Mrs. Smale as assisting nurse, went off in fine style and with little protest against the judges' decisions. The winners were Geary Post, Lois and Louis St. Louis, twins, Joan Frederick, Robert Cummins and Gerald Ackerman.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT BELLEVILLE FAIR ON WEDNESDAY

Judging of Ayrshire and Jersey cattle and also light and heavy horses is scheduled at the Belleville Fair on Wednesday's program, the day being officially designated as Citizen's and Children's Day, when all school children will receive special rates on rides and be admitted to the grounds free.

Harness racing in the 2.20 and free-for-all classes is also scheduled with closely contested and interesting heats in both races being assured racing fans.

In addition to the above attractions there will be the regular Garden Brothers' program staged in front of the grandstand at both afternoon and evening performances, while Conklin's Midway will offer its many varied attractions to fair patrons. Dancing will be held in Park Pavilion in the evening.

CRASHES MOTOR CAR DURING PARADE

As other motor vehicles were halted to permit last night's military parade to pass a motor car, said by police to have been driven by Gordon Clapp, R.R. No. 5, Belleville, crashed into the rear of another motor car driven by John Grotto, of this city, causing extensive damage to both vehicles. P.C. Wright witnessed the accident and reported that motor traffic had been slowed down considerably along Front Street, early in the evening as the police were endeavouring to clear the main streets for the impending military parade to the Fair Grounds. Constable Wright alleges that Clapp was driving southerly at an excessive rate of speed, when his car skidded a distance of over 75 feet into the rear of Mr. Grotto's car. Clapp was taken to the police station, where he was later allowed his liberty on bail. Charges are pending against him, Acting Chief Harman stated today.

Stoker Geo. Dawkins Wounded When Ottawa Sunk by Enemy

Stoker George Dawkins, son of Mr. Norman Dawkins and the late Mrs. Dawkins, 28 Moira street east, was a crew member of the ill-fated Canadian destroyer "Ottawa" which was yesterday reported sunk by enemy action with the loss of 113 of her crew. Stoker Dawkins was injured and is at present in hospital.

Grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Dawkins, Moira street, Stoker Dawkins enlisted with the R.C.N.V.R. at Kingston in 1941 and trained at Toronto and Halifax. He has served with the navy in Newfoundland. Mr. Dawkins received a telegram from his son on Sunday morning stating "I am in hospital".

Four Canadian Airmen Decorated

London, Sept. 22 (C.P. Cable) — Four Canadian airmen have been decorated for bravery and skill in actions ranging from Dieppe and Germany to Tobruk.

Acting Sqdn. Leaders Norman Bretz of Toronto, and Lloyd Chadburn, of Aurora, Ont., and Montreal, were awarded the D.F.C. Flt. Sgt. Guy P. A. Yates, Todelo, Ont. and Sgt. Ronald George Bell, Kelowna, B.C., received the D.F.M.

The award to Yates came after an attack on shipping in Tobruk Harbor last month. He was captain of an aircraft which developed serious engine trouble when 60 miles from the target. Yates continued the flight, however, and released his bombs alongside jetties where a large explosion occurred. One propeller of his aircraft dropped on the return flight and Yates flew alone after ordering his crew to bail out. When the engines stopped, Yates parachuted safely from the low-flying aircraft.

Hastings County Again Tops In Cheese Production

Maintaining its reputation of being the leading cheese-producing county in the province, Hastings again topped its sister counties in Ontario in August production.

In the first eight months ending Aug. 31, 1942, this county produced 7,166,496 pounds of cheese as compared to 6,048,069 pounds during the corresponding period last year.

Production for the month of August this year amounted to 1,603,174 pounds as compared to 1,646,395 pounds in the same month in 1941. Unfavorable pasture conditions during the month were largely responsible for the slight reduction in production.

Comparative figures for Hastings, Northumberland and Prince Edward counties are:

Eight Months Ending Aug., 1941
Hastings	6,048,069
Northumberland	2,324,374
Prince Edward	1,603,174
Eight Months Ending Aug., 1942
Hastings	7,166,496
Northumberland	3,097,689
Prince Edward	2,769,260
August, 1941
Hastings	1,646,395
Northumberland	659,260
Prince Edward	530,727

Obituary

MRS. JANE BURNS (Trenton)

Trenton, Sept. 22 (Special).—Mrs. Jane Burns of Trenton died suddenly in the Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday, Sept. 16, and the body was conveyed to the Cobley Funeral Home, Trenton, where it rested until Friday afternoon, then at the home of the deceased's brother, Mr. Henry Scarlett, Princess street, from where the funeral took place Saturday afternoon, Sept. 19. The service in the home and at the graveside in Rayleson Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Martin of King Street United Church.

ELLSWORTH KEYES (Colborne)

Mr. Ellsworth Keyes, 68, of Colborne passed away at the Belleville General Hospital on Monday, following a brief illness. He had been a patient of the hospital since Sept. 19.

LATE JOHN CRACKNELL

The funeral of John Cracknell, late residence, seventh concession of Tyendinaga Township, took place from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell street, on Monday afternoon, Sept. 21. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. George McKenzie, pastor of Plainfield United Church.

The bearers were Messrs. Ed. Lazier, Ed Scott, William Liddle, J. Beal, W. Harrison and M. Wilson.

ROY VICTOR HADLEY

Frankford, Sept. 22.—On Friday, Sept. 18 at his home in Norwood, Ont., Roy Victor Hadley passed away after an illness of six months' duration. He was born in Frankford 46 years ago, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Sol Hadley and until ten years ago made his home in Frankford, since that time he and his family have resided in Norwood. He received his education at the Continuation school at Frankford and the College of Optometry, Toronto. He has followed the profession of optometry throughout his life. He was a veteran of the last war. In religion he was a member of the United Church.

Left to mourn his loss beside his wife who before her marriage was Miss Mary Patterson, are two children, Shirley, age 13 years and Jack age 11. Surviving also are four sisters, Mrs. Harold Noble (Viola), Mrs. Jas. Phaff (Hildred), and Mrs. Geo. Phaff (Ruby) of Rochester, N.Y. and Mrs. Clayton Kemp (Pauline) of Frankford and two brothers, Mr. Harold Hadley of Frankford and Mr. Keith Hadley of Trenton, Ont.

The funeral which took place on Sunday, Sept. 20 from the Norwood Baptist Church was very largely attended, many not being able to gain entrance to the church. The large number who were present and the many beautiful floral tributes show the high esteem in which the deceased was held in that community. A body of soldiers and veterans of the last war attended the service and led the cortege from the church to the cemetery. The Rev. Price, minister of the Four Square Church assisted the pastor of the Norwood Baptist Church in conducting the service in the church. Interment was made in Norwood Cemetery.

Gen. F. L. Armstrong, O.B.E., Officially Opens Belleville Fair After Colorful Parade of Troops

Detachments From Kingston, Belleville and Trenton March Past

MANY LINE ROUTE

"The directors of this fair are to be highly commended in their action of carrying on during this time of war. I deem it a great honor and take great pleasure in declaring this fair officially open."

Thus spoke Brig. F. Logie Armstrong, District Officer Commanding Military District No. 3, as he officially opened Belleville Fair on Monday evening before one of the largest opening night crowds ever to attend Belleville Exhibition.

In reference to the military parade which marched to the fair grounds as the major attraction prior to the official opening, Brig. Armstrong stated it was appropriate that at this 82nd annual opening of Belleville Fair and during wartime there should be a parade of all three branches of the armed services.

He highly commended the various units on parade and paid special tribute to the reserve army unit members in their sacrifice of their time to learn the rudiments of army training. He especially commended the members of the C.W.A.C., the C.W.A.S.F. and R.C.A.F. Women's Division on their marching and drill and spoke highly of the work they are doing in relieving soldiers for more active duty.

Highest Respect For Services."

He also paid tribute to the navy unit members and to the air force. "I have nothing but the highest respect and admiration for these two services," he said.

The Belleville Municipal Band, under the direction of Lieut. Fred Jobson, occupied the dais in front of the grandstand prior to the presentation of the evening's program where in their usual fine style played a number of popular melodies.

During the parade of the various units to the fair grounds, the official opening party occupied a special box in the stands where on entry they were welcomed by his Worship, Mayor Glencoe Thompson. Occupying the official box were Brig. Armstrong and Mrs. Armstrong; Air Commodore F. S. McGill, Officer Commanding Central Flying School, Trenton; Major Angus Mowatt, L.O.R.F., Military District No. 3; Lieut. P. Cowan, orderly officer to Brig. Armstrong. Lieut. Godfrey Scott; Mrs. A. B. Gribble; Mrs. B. C. Donnan and Miss Mary Butler.

President of Fair Board

President Benjamin Bleecker, following a few words of welcome to the patrons of the fair, presented Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, who announced the military procedure for the evening and introduced Brigadier Armstrong for the official opening.

Following the march past of the entire parade with Brigadier Armstrong taking the salute, three flights of airmen from No. 5 I.T.S. presented a precision drill before the grandstand, after which five members of the Batawa Sokol Association gave an exhibition of exercises on the parallel and horizontal bars.

Highlighted by Montana Frank and his band of cowboys and cowgirls, Garden Brothers' Rodeo with its variety of galloping ponies, trick riding and other cowboy stunts, captured the hearts of hundreds of Belleville Fair patrons at the first evening performance of the exhibition last evening.

Presenting almost an entirely new show as compared to the program offered on previous visits to this city at fair time, not a dull moment is permitted the audience from the time the curtain rises on the first act until the final number.

Patrons in Good Humor

Montana Frank puts the grandstand spectators in good humor with his initial act of the night in his Australian whipcracking act. With rifle-like cracks from his rawhide whip he flicks bits of paper from an accomplice's lips and with humorous bits of burlesque comedy puts his audience in high spirits for the many varied acts to follow.

A rodeo parade with the entire personnel of cowboys and cowgirls taking part, starts the show off, following which the three Tic Tocs an accomplished dancing trio, do the first of several well presented numbers. A roman rings and high trapeze act, with slack wire artists and the ever-popular Upside-Down boys are included in the program, with Pat Day, celebrated radio songstress, doing several vocal numbers.

Owing to the lateness of the hour before the regular grandstand performance was able to get under way, the complete program was not given last evening but the numbers presented met with the approval of the audience and spoke well for the appeal of the entire program.

Many Detachments Present

Participating in the parade were detachments of the R.C.A.F. from No. 5 I.T.S., Belleville; Women's Division, Mountain View; the Royal Canadian Navy, Kingston; the Canadian Women's Army Corps, Kingston; the 34th Battery Royal Canadian Artillery, Belleville; the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) Belleville; the Canadian Women's Service Force, Belleville; the Belleville Rotary Squadron, Air Cadets and the 2nd Battalion, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment from the district. Bands of the H. and P. E. and the R.C.A.F. supplied stirring marching music both during the parade and the march-past, which took place after the opening of the fair

Thousands Watch Parade

The route of parade, which originated at the armouries and took the troops up Pinnacle to Station to Front to West Bridge and thence to the Fair Grounds was lined with thousands of cheering spectators. The various units were given a spontaneous reception by the crowds as they swung past in column of route. General Armstrong and his staff escorted by Traffic Officer Jack Hatch preceded the parade and were present at the grounds, when the troops marched to the infield in front of the grandstand.

The general officer commanding took the salute as the parade marched past to end the official ceremonies. With him were Colonel Donnan and other officers.

A highlight of the military demonstration was a display of commando tactics given by a specially trained detachment of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. The infield to the left of the stage erected in front of the grandstand made a perfect setting for the demonstration. In a semi blackness, the commandos set up camp and gave the watching crowd a thrilling insight into the life of these daredevil members of the army.

Weird Light Thrown

Flares threw a weird light over the scene. Thunder bombs exploded with heavy detonations giving the scene a realistic touch. Smoke screens enveloping miniature pillboxes and machine-gun nests added to the thrill of the demonstration. Commandos were seen on parade, asleep and in their various exercises. At given signals of command they suddenly went into action. They advanced under heavy fire of machine guns and finally blew up the enemy pill-box, returning with several "prisoners." Attempts on the part of some of these were met with swift thrusts of bayonets.

The whole was a highly colorful display of not only the exciting work of Britain's famous commandos but the highly efficient training being given these members of the district regiment.

Colonel Donnan was in charge of the demonstration, while a highly interesting running explanitary interesting running explanatory Donald of the regiment.

Termed by one veteran of the last war, the "answer to a sergeant-major's dream," was the fine armed precision drill given by three flights of the Royal Canadian Air Force. The airmen manoeuvring without word of command went through intricate movements with clockwise like precision, showing evidences of intensive training and marked ability.

The future fliers received a splendid ovation from the crowd as they swung off the track in front of the grandstand.

Animal Show Features Fair's Finest Midway

"Paddy" Conklin's Midway Presents Diversified Program of Carnival Atmosphere

RIDES ARE THRILLERS

They say "seeing is believing" and to believe patrons at the Belleville Fair can't afford to miss "Frolicland" and the circus sideshows presented by that inimitable W. J. "Paddy" Conklin, king of Canada's carnival-land, during the Belleville Fair. With the blare of trumpets and screeches of the calliope a true circus atmosphere greets one as one advances to the entrance to the Exhibition Park.

Besides the conventional freaks, ballyhoo artists and barkers there is one outstanding attraction in this year's Frolicland, namely, Terrel Jacobs and his Wild Animal Circus presenting untamed beasts of the jungle and trained elephants. Headlining this diversified program of two ring "big top" entertainment can be seen lions, tigers, leopards, trained horses, aerialists as well as tumblers and acrobats mimicked by the conventional funny clowns. Incidentally Terrel Jacobs is recognized as the most fearless of wild animal trainers and has appeared in Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Circus as well as on the animal lots of California's movie colonies.

Although Jacobs' wild animal show is a feature along the carnival lot at the Belleville Fair, there are numerous other attractions such as Aloha Land, presenting 15 native Hawaiians in singing, dancing and as instrumentalists. There's Jack Halligan's feature sideshow of 20 curious humans, including Andrew Gawley, of Meaford, Ont., "the man who made his own hands."

Riding devices numbering more than a score with thrills and breath-taking moments on each ride, desired by the thrilling-seeking present-day public. The latest rides created are included in Paddy Conklin's "Frolicland" at the Belleville Fair.

Freaks along the carnival lot that equal those related by Robert (Believe it or not) Ripley, include Zandu, the quarter boy, who has amazed the medical profession for 29 years. Another freak is a boy half man and half seal, while Frances Murphy, the gorilla girl and Jimmy Jagger the human pincushion are only a few who go to make up fun and frivolity along the midway at the Belleville Fair continuing through this week.

CAME OF PORTUGAL

The ukulele is of Portuguese origin, developed and popularized by the Hawaiians.

PRODIGY BEETHOVEN

Beethoven began violin lessons at the age of five years.

Highlights of the Fair

Consensus of the largest opening night crowd in the history of the institution, is that the 1942 edition of Belleville's Fair is the best in a quarter century. That is easy to believe and was exemplified in the many expressions of satisfaction heard last night that the current exhibition "will do".

Secretary Erle Denyes is doing a splendid job in his official position and is demonstrating what thorough organization of a difficult job can accomplish. From all sides come words of commendation on the fine set-up of fair machinery, one that minimizes work of officials and is a source of gratification to exhibitors and patrons alike.

One of the most timely exhibits on display is that of the Reserve Army. Under the supervision of Sergeant-Majors Don Ridley and Walter Harden of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) and Sergeant-Major Thompson of the Royal Canadian Artillery the many exhibits are being viewed by large crowds of spetators. Machine guns of all calibre, Lewis, Vickers, and the new light Reising quick-firing carbine gun, mills bombs, "potato-mashers', egg bombs and other small weapons used in modern warfare, are on display and are being explained and demonstrated by the efficient non-commissioned officers in charge. Present too are members of the Belleville company of the Canadian Women's Service Force, who are accepting recruits for the local unit.

A sixty-five year old lady 'barker' whose age has not affected health or vocal powers, is attracting the attention of fairgoers. The lady carries a lightning-like running patter applying to her particular wares, and her stentorian voice can be heard high above the cacophony of sound that is a part of all fairs.

A North American buffalo belonging to the menagerie of the Conklin Carnival Shows, was found dead in a railway box car upon arrival in Belleville on Monday. The animal died en route from Lindsay and the carcass was later shipped to Toronto, where the buffalo hide and head will be salvaged for ornamental purposes. The cause of death was announced as natural causes. The animal was found dead by attendants as they were about to unload the carnival menagerie at the Emily Street, Canadian National Railways siding Monday.

Indicative of the rapid progress being made by breeders and raisers of livestock in this section of Ontario, are the splendid exhibits of horses, cattle, swine, sheep and poultry. Some of the blue-bloods of bovine and equine aristocracy are here and are well worth viewing. No lesser quality are the exhibits of poultry and sheep.

The general view of the Midway is one reminiscent of the good old piping days of peace. Brilliantly illuminated, with whirling lights and rides giving the entire show a sparkling touch, the Midway is by far one of the best to appear here. There is variety and color. There is music and excitement, and the management have catered to the fair tastes of people from all phases of life. It is vivid, moving, and a colorful setting for the large crowds that move in its brilliantly lighted aisles.

Providing the musical setting to one of the most colorful grandstand shows to appear here is the Belleville Municipal Band. Its stirring melodies and artistic renditions are contributing in no small manner to the enjoyment of this part of the fair's activities.

Members of St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E., known to everyone for their war work, and their enterprise of so many forms in raising money are found this time in the centre of one of the popular portion of the Belleville Fair. They have a refreshment and hot-dog booth which is a constant centre of attention during fair days.

V.O.N. Service to Community Is of Inestimable Value Needs Funds to Carry on Work

A total of 9,184 visits to patients with 947 patients being cared for during the year, is the record of the Belleville branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses throughout 1941.

The scope of the community health service offered to Belleville residents represented in the above figure include 2,417 visits to mothers and babies while free bedside nursing visits totalled 2,763.

Providing skilled nursing service to the sick in their own homes at a moderate cost, or as in many cases altogether free of charge, is the primary object of the Victorian Order of Nurses. In cases where the patient cannot afford full time nursing care or where there is no need to go to the hospital, the services of the V.O.N. fill a much-needed place in the community.

Although the Victorian Order of Nurses is a national organization the affairs of each branch are directed by the local board which raises and administers the necessary funds and co-operates with the nursing staff to provide the best possible service to the community.

Skilled Nursing Care

The V.O.N. provides skilled nursing care on a visit basis to medical, surgical and maternity patients in their own homes under the direction of the family physician. All calls for assistance are answered but nursing care is continued only under the direction of the physician.

Nursing care during illness does not comprise the whole community service offered by this fine organisation, but today special emphasis is placed on the prevention of disease and the maintenance of health. Nurses in the service are graduates of their profession and have had special training in public health nursing.

Donations Needed

The money to carry on this very necessary work is derived from fees from patients, from donations and a large percentage from annual appeals to the residents. This week the Belleville Victorian Order of Nurses are appealing to the citizens of Belleville with the Salvation Army and the Young Men's Christian Association in a joint campaign with an objective of $15,000. When the canvasser calls, hear his story and give what you can to assist in the furtherance of the community service offered by these three organizations.

Livestock Exhibits at the Fair Best in Years but Quantity Not as Great as Previous Fairs

Horse Section Led by Six Percheron Stallions From Montreal

CATTLE EXCELLENT

It takes all kinds of attractions to make a fair but the majority of people, for fair boards appeal to the farmers and agriculturists, take a keen interest in the exhibits, especially the cattle, horses, sheep, swine and poultry, and Belleville fair has satisfied that desire. As one walks through the various stables and the cattle sheds and continues on up the grounds to where the swine and sheep are stabled, it becomes abundantly clear that farmers of the surrounding district do something else besides till the soil because a better class of exhibits have never been shown at the local fair and this is especially true of the horse exhibit.

To enumerate all the entries of the horse exhibit would be taking a great thrill away from the person who delights in looking over a good horse, perfectly hitched and groomed to perfection, but suffice is to say the horse exhibit will open the eyes of many, who have always thought that a horse is a secondary feature on a farm. There are many classes stabled on the grounds from the slow moving Clyde to the sprightly roadster but the exhibit that will draw the greatest attention are the black stallions from Montreal owned by a prominent brewery company. Six of these stallions have been brought to the fair to show the farmers what fine breeding can do but they will not have any runaway in their respective classes as there are many private exhibits that have all the earmarks of perfect animals. The Percheron class is well filled with Clarence Vermilyea showing twelve head, all youngsters.

Hackneys Not Heavy

The Clydes and Belgians are in profusion, while the light draught, heavy draught and agricultural type will vie in the ring for honors. The hackneys are not strongly represented but the roadster class will be strong. In the cattle section as usual the Holsteins are the heaviest class but the Ayrshires give them a close run with the Jerseys always predominant. There will be a good entry in the beef class but the total exhibit will be down from last year but in all the class is much superior to anything that has been shown at Belleville Fair.

In the sheep and swine sections, the total exhibit is not heavy but some excellent animals can be seen as one walks along the pens. Canada is producing an enormous quantity of bacon for the fighting forces overseas and farmers have not the time nor the help to prepare sheep and swine for the show ring, but they have not let this phase of their farming down and the patrons of the fair can get an excellent idea of just the kind of sheep and swine Canada is raising. In the poultry division the classes are not heavy for again the hens are laying for Great Britain and her armed forces and not showing their plumage to the public. In all the class of exhibits is far superior to other years but probably the number of birds shown is down from previous years.

HARDER THAN NAILS

The diamond is the hardest and most imperishable of metals.

EARLIEST INDUSTRY

Basket making is believed to be one of the earliest human industries.

PLUCKING PLAYED

The che is a Chinese musical instrument with 25 strings, played by plucking.

Country's Finest Buff Orpingtons Seen at Fair

R. J. Messervey and Son Exhibit Prize Pens of Champion Birds in the Poultry Building

OTHER FINE EXHIBITS

As a special feature of interest to patrons of the Belleville Fair this year is a showing of Buff Orpingtons. Although not directly in competition, these pens are displayed by R. J. Messervey and Son of this city, foremost breeders of Buff Orpington fowl on the North American continent.

It was through the persuasion of Keith Onderdonk, chairman of the Poultry Show at the Fair, that Mr. Messervey and Son agreed to place a special showing of Buff Orpingtons in the poultry building, thus assuring this phase of the fair of additional interest.

According to Mr. Messervey, whose displays have captured world renown honors in this class in both the United States and Canada, the Buff Orpington originated in Orpington, Kent County, England, in the early part of 1880, being a cross between the Big Buff Cochins, noted for winter laying, large table birds and the Dorkings, the latter being noted for eggs and fine textured meat.

Won Gold Ribbons

The Messervey pens have captured gold ribbon prizes at the Toronto and Ottawa exhibitions, the Royal Winter Fair, but the crowning success of these pens came when Mr. Messervey sold birds to United States breeders, who later exhibited at the Madison Square Gardens to capture top honors.

Although the Messervey exhibit is a straight professional one that should make the poultry building a mecca for all fair-goers, however, Chairman Onderdonk has large displays of exhibits in competition of all varieties of poultry, including the ornamental exhibits, as well as the games, water fowl, turkeys and special displays of pens. Fine-feathered albino turkeys as well as the Rouen and Pekin ducks and large white geese all intrigue the fair patrons, to say nothing of the stately Wyandottes and Jersey Black Giants. Yes, to miss the exhibits in the poultry building would definitely be folly.

Commission Named To Investigate Wages

Ottawa, Sept. 22 (CP) — The appointment of James T. Stewart (hometown unavailable) as the third member of a commission to investigate basic wages in steel plants at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and ydney, N.S., has been approved by Labor Minister Mitchell, it was learned in informed quarters today.

Mr. Stewart will represent the Algoma Steel Corp., at Sault Ste. Marie and the Dominion Steel and Coal Corp., at Sydney.

F. H. Barlow, Master of the Ontario Supreme Court, is chairman of the commission and D. King Gordon of Toronto, will represent the Canadian Congress of Labor.

NAZIS REPULSED

White Russian guerillas were credited with killing 363 Germans and destruction of 33 railway cars, 27 ammunition trucks and about two miles of railway track in a week's fighting.

Deadly Mortar Fire

Izvestia stressed a report that German commanders had moved more troops to the Stalingrad area for a new assault intended to overwhelm the garrison. Dispatches repeatedly said the Red Army was pouring a deadly mortar fire upon the invaders on the city's approaches, but made no mention of the Russians' prized big guns.

Military leaders in Moscow expressed belief that heavy Russian batteries were firing into the Germans from the east bank of the Volga as well as from positions in and around Stalingrad.

Captives substantiated reports of large German casualties. A prisoner from a German railway battalion said his group, thrown into the fight as a combat unit, lost 65 per cent of its men.

Many Germans have been wounded and survivors of broken units are sent to the rear for regrouping, but fresh forces still move up. There is nothing to indicate the Germans haven't as many men attacking Stalingrad now as at any time since the siege was established August 25.

Izvestia said the Germans rounded up farmers, women and children at a place and drove them ahead of their troops, but Soviet automatic rifleman manoeuvred between and saved the civilians.

(The Berlin radio, as if to shift emphasis from the Stalingrad front, claimed Russian forces had been encircled on the central front after breaking through German positions at two points south of Rzhev.)

The midnight communique said a regiment of tank-supported Nazi infantry launched several attacks in one Stalingrad sector, but was repulsed with severe losses.

Batteries Wrecked

"Two hundred and thirty Hitlerites were wiped out", the communique said, "and 24 motor vehicles and three mortar batteries were wrecked in street fighting by the troops of one unit.

"On another sector our forces pressed back the enemy and destroyed 12 tanks and about two German companies".

(Bitter fighting in various sectors of the Soviet front was attended by a report in the Stockholm newspaper Arbetaren that German troops in Norway had been regrouped and it was believed large contingents were being sent to Russia.

(The Nazi-controlled Vichy radio claimed that German troops had crossed the Volga river five days ago, but did not report the site of such a crossing.

Russian heavy artillery, tanks and planes were reported backing Soviet infantry in attacks upon the Nazi flank in the Upper Don basin, destroying scores of German dug-outs and loosening the invaders' grip upon one settlement after another.

A Soviet rifle detachment forced a new crossing of the Don under heavy fire, field dispatches said.

Russian soldiers, sailors and marines maintained a defence of the Caucasian coast south of the fallen Port of Novorossisk.

"Four motor vehicles were demolished, sixty Germans were wiped out and a munitions dump was blown up in the course of three days of operations by one of our patrols", it was announced.

Nazi attacks were declared repulsed in the Sinyavino area of the Volkhov river front and a Russian force was credited with capture of a Nazi-fortified position.

Four Axis transports totalling 42,000 tons and a mine layer were sunk by a Red Navy submarine in the Baltic Sea.

NATIONAL UNITY

The rally, sponsored by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, the Canadian Seamen's Union and the United Automobile Workers of America, cheered approval of the sending of telegrams and cables to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Prime Minister Winston Churchill, Premier Joseph Stalin and President Roosevelt.

The messages to Premer King, Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt urged total war effort and the speedy opening of a second front in Western Europe. The cable to Russia assured Premier Stalin everything would be done to speed the launching of a second front and extended greetings to Marshal Timoshenko, the defender of Stalingrad.

McNaughton Cabled

The meeting also sent a cable to Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, commander of Canada's army overseas, promising him and his men the full support of people in the Dominion would be behind them when they invaded the continent of Europe.

Thanking the crowd for the warm reception given them, the three Russian heroes expressed the hope a western front would shortly relieve the pressure on the Russian armies.

"The sooner there is a second front, the sooner there will be victory for us," said Lieut. Pavlichenko, the girl sniper, through an interpreter.

Premier Hepburn condemned the Dominion government for permitting a diplomatic envoy of the Vichy government to remain at Ottawa.

"It is time to give that man his bag and baggage and send him back to the traitor he serves too well," said the Premier.

Won on Battlefields

While saying he was inspired by the declarations of labor men at the rally as they described labor's efforts to increase the country's war production, Premier Hepburn emphasized the war would be won by soldiers on battlefronts.

"The blood of British, Canadian and American youth will stain the soil of Europe alongside their comrades in Russia before the war is won."

A demand for a second front was brought before the rally by four labor speakers—George Burt, Regional Director of the United Automobile Workers of America; Paul Fournier, President of the Montreal Trades and Labor Council; C. S. Jackson, International Vice-President of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America and J. A. Sullivan, Vice-President of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, who acted as chairman.

Rumanian Troops Move to Front

Ankara, Turkey, Sept. 21. —(AP)—Reports to Ankara tonight, thus far not supported by direct evidence, described large new movements of Rumanian troops to the Russian front.

Only a few, possibly five divisions were reported left in Rumania to guard against the alleged possibility of a Hungarian stab in the back, while the bulk of Rumania's fighting men are far east of their own frontiers.

The reports said this move followed a long period of tension between Marshal Ion Antonescu and the Germans, in which the Rumanian dictator gradually swung around the idea of sending a large army to fight deep within Soviet territory.

All private rail traffic within Rumania was said to have been suspended possibly because of troop movements.

KILLED BY CAR

Alexandria, Ont., Sept. 22—(CP)—Donat Ravaray, 38, of Alexandria, was killed when struck by an automobile on Main Street here last night. Cecile Dore 17, who saw the accident, said the car which hit Ravaray stopped, backed up, and then drove away down a side street. Ravaray was pushing a wheelbarrow of potatoes along the road at the time.

Frustate Plan To Abduct Girl

Aurora, Ill., Sept. 22. (AP) — Edward F. O'Connell, 44, frustrated what authorities termed a plot by two young farm hands to abduct his daughter yesterday after he and his wife and her father and sister had been held prisoner in their farm home for several hours and threatened with death.

Sheriff Marcus W. Damisch said the victims told him the youthful gunmen both employed at O'Connells farm, said they were waiting to kidnap O'Connell's 14-year-old daughter, May Catherine, when she returned from school.

But, Damisch said, O'Connell outwitted one of his captors, Merle Smith, 17, clubbd him into unconsciousness and later with a posse of farmers seized the second youth, Fred Dubay, 16. He said both were charged with assault with intent to kill.

DIEPPE, SOLOMON

Take Offensive

Already, he said, the United Nations have taken the offensive in the Solomons and "there for the first time we have wrested the initiative from the enemy, and our new navy should enable us to retain the initiative right to the end".

On June 30, 1941, Vinson said, a United States not at war had 697 combat, auxiliary, patrol and mine vessels building, while June 30, 1942, there were 3230 vessels in this category under construction in addition to 218 being built for Allied Nations. This, he added, does not include 11,659 smaller vessels under construction.

Counting all types of planes, he went on, "we added 4,895 new aircraft to the navy's air arm in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1942, as compared with 2,067 in the preceding year."

Plant expansion "is rapidly building up to an output of just under 2,000 navy planes a month," with the navy "bearing its full share of President Roosevelt's program calling for 60,000 planes in 1942 and 125,000 in 1943."

Train Foreign Personnel

In addition, he pointed out, the navy is directing the production of planes for Allied Nations, especially China and Russia, and supervising the training of foreign personnel for their operation.

He described current production for the navy as "so vast that three-fourths of it is the work of new plants which have been specially built, tooled and staffed since July 1, 1940."

A leading congressional advocate of placing emphasis on the construction of plane carriers, Vinson said the war to date has "brought home to America and to the world at large the fact that the carrier has supplanted the battleship as the backbone of a modern navy."

Long-range carrier-type and patrol planes, he said, are being produced in sufficient numbers "to supply our bases from Iceland to South America and from Alaska to the Indian Ocean."

REPORT OPEN BREAKS OF GERMANS, ITALIANS OVER AMBULANCE TRAINS

London, Sept. 22. (CP Cable.)—The Polish Telegraph Agency quoted Italian Red Cross nurses Monday as saying there had been open breaks between Germans and Italians at some of the larger railway station in Poland where ambulance trains halted enroute from the Eastern front.

Italian ambulance trains now were said to stop only at smaller stations, passing through the larger ones or stopping for only a short while.

Letters to the Troops

Among the resources supporting the soldiers, sailors and airmen away from home are the letters and parcels which come to them from relatives, friends and from organizations doing patriotic work.

News from home is one of the needs of the armed men and no one is so inarticulate or unable to voice himself or herself that he or she cannot write a few lines which will be of great influence in keeping up their spirits. For soldiers to write home, for sailors to pen lines to their relatives and for airmen to send back word about themselves is not so easy as may be expected for these men are busy, but still they make time and are faithful in writing. Relatives and friends should help as much as they can with news about the old friends and home.

It is a fact as substantial as that the sun moves, that the soldiers, sailors and airmen and the women in the women's corps who are at a distance think much of home. Home is one of the great pillars of their life, one of the great pivotal points around which their thoughts and lives revolve. Home is to them the finest expression of their democracy which is the best in the world. With the letters to their homes and to friends go their thoughts and between their letters thoughts are sent back to home and fireside.

Letters from overseas are expressive in what they say and in what is too deep for words. But parents, brothers and sisters can read between the lines and recognize in the phrasing the deep affection for home ties. For the same reason the letters and the parcels which are sent overseas carry with them a wealth of the deepest relations in life.

Cheerful little stories of home, about the doings about the neighbormood, these are life as truly as events which at times loom large but are really perhaps not as vital as the affections, the likes, the associations which a short or a long letter, a carefully prepared box can strengthen.

Now the time is looking on to Christmas as far as plans for remembering the troops overseas go. Parcels which carry food and gifts across the ocean bear a rich atmosphere of association—a whole life of interest for the defenders of Canada and the Empire. Into the planning of these parcels go heart throbs, deep as life itself.

Let all write as often as possible to the absent defenders of home and fireside and send them inspiration. Give them the touch of home and of the Canada they are defending. This will enrich their lives. In Britain they have come in contact with that great people who have won the world's admiration and with the example of the British on every hand and the appeal and inspiration of letters, thoughts about Canada and parcels sent from Canada, the morale of the Canadians is invincible.

A Saga of the Sea

The story of the successful duel between the Canadian destroyer Assiniboine and a German U-boat which was rammed and sunk is one that fires the spirit and imagination of the Canadian people. In this instance the story has come out through official releases from the navy with pictures taken during the action and intimate stories of members of the crew of the destroyer.

This story is "only one of the many successful actions which have been waged by the Royal Canadian Navy against U-boats," Navy Minister Macdonald said.

It was a battle calling for every ounce of seamanship and presence of mind, for relentless courage and daring and for devotion to duty, all these qualities were revealed by the lieutenant commander and the members of the crew in this intense engagement. It was a graphic picture which came out of this sea encounter, the pursuit by the destroyer through the fog, after losing sight of it twice, the catching up with the Nazi marauder, the attempt to ram it by the stern, the fighting which took on something of old sea battles as the ships were very close together and the final scene where the destroyer rammed the submarine while depth charges were exploded under the Nazi craft. It wound up with the taking of prisoners of the Nazi survivors.

It was one of the sagas of the sea in which the Canadian Navy is playing its role.

"A POOR EXCUSE . . . ?"

News Item: One of the Nazi excuses for not takin- Stalingrad is that the smoke of battle gets in their eyes.

Ahead outlined in battle mist
Lay Russia's richest prize,
But halted now are Hans and Fritz
The smoke got in their eyes.

And flabby Goering soars aloft,
He recks not of defeat,
For three years now, through smoky eyes,
He hasn't seen his feet.

And club-foot Goebbels looks ahead
Through smoke-rimmed bloodshot eyes,
And rants and raves of Nazi troops
The world, a Nazi prize.

The day will come when Adolf too,
This trio will comprise,
They'll start to yell, "We'll conquer Hell
But the smoke gets in our eyes."

QUICK THINKING

Then there's the story of the local Isaak Walton who, a habitue of the shores of the bay near here, was taking one of his daily strolls when he was accosted by stranger. It appears the time of the story was before the official opening of the bass season.

"Nice bay you've got here," commented the stranger.

"Best durned stretch of water in the country," proudly returned the native. "Why there's bass in that bay that ain't equalled nowhere in the country. Only yesterday I hauled out ten of the best beauties you ever clapped an eye on."

"Oh, you did, did you?"

"Yep, sure did," said the I. W.

The stranger fixed him with a cold eye. "Do you know who I am, my man?" he asked.

"Nope."

"Well, I happen to be a member of the Game and Fisheries Department."

"Huh, izzatso," came back the local. "Well, mister, do you happen to know who I am?"

"No. I'm afraid I do not."

"Well, I'm so-and-so, the biggest durn liar in seven counties."

'MITCH' RECALLS TORPEDOING ABOARD MANURE SPREADER

Natty in brown suedes and a green gabardine drape, Premier Hepburn might noe have looked much like ehe working farmer he was introduced as to 2,000 Glengarrians at the County Fair, but he did tell earthy stories, says the Ottawa Journal.

And trying to live up to the advance billing as a "superb showman," that District M.L.A., Edward McGillivray had given him, Mitch told the stories on himself.

He was visiting at a South Elgin farm, he recalled, the after his 1934 triumph, and the happy neighborhood Grits had convened there, urging him for a victory speech.

As it wasn't "Bannockburn Farm," no grandstand was handy in that barnyard, so they rushed him aboard an empty manure spreader.

"First time I've ever been on a Tory platform, I told 'em," Mitch recounted.

His Grit admirers were still killing themselves laughing at this quip, when out from the back of the crowd rose a scornful Tory voice:

"Throw her into low, Mitch . . . . . She's got the biggest load on now she'll ever have."

He admitted that crack had torpedoed him.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Sept. 22nd., 1922

Mr. Thos. Turroff was recently elected Reeve of Dungannon by acclamation to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. John Wood. Mr. Matt McLean was nominated but retired in favor of Mr. Turriff.

Private S. B. Ellis, 4th C.M.R., has received his war medal and Victory Medal with ribbons for service in the late war.

Miss Edna Graham of Campbellford is visiting Mrs. J. H. Caskey, Grove Street.

Nurse Higgins of Brockville Hospital has joined the staff at the Claremont Hospital here.

The old Round House at Weller's Bay, an old landmark linked with the building of the Central Ontario Railway by S. J. Ritchie, was sold last week to the Trenton Hardwood Flooring Company. The building will be wrecked and the material used in constructing a building in Trenton.

30 YEARS AGO

Sept. 22nd., 1912

Mrs. (Dr.) Wartman of this city is spending a few days in Napanee, with Mrs. A. W. Granger.

The Rev. W. G. Clarke, pastor of the Tabernacle, preached anniversary sermons at Aiken's Church, Sidney Township, on Sunday to large congregations.

The members of the Glydona Club will give a dance at the club house on the park this evening.

Mr. P. J. M. Anderson, County Crown Attorney, is spending today in Stirling.

The Rev. A. L. Geen preached in Kingston on Sunday.

Mr. Wilbert Vandervoort of Saskatoon, Sask., is visiting relatives and friends in the city and vicinity.

40 YEARS AGO

Sept. 22nd., 1902

William (Buff) Falconer was killed in a rear-end collision on the G.T.R. line near Grace Hill and Cambray yesterday. He was fireman on one of the trains. He was thirty-five years of age and he recently returned home from South Africa where he went with the last contingent and saw service with Capt. Bruce Carruthers and his gallant band at Hart's River. Three weeks ago he obtained the post of fireman with the G.T.R. He was the son of James Falconer, who for many years was a tailor here and who now resides in Tweed. For some time "Buff" was engaged as a plumber with John Lewis & Co. He was popular with many friends and was well esteemed.

The steam yacht, Carmana, owned by Mr. T. S. Carman, was totally destroyed by fire last night. The yacht was tied to the dock on the bay shore, almost opposite to Mr. Carman's residence on Dundas Street. It was out during the day and it is supposed that a spark from the smoke stack caused the fire. The yacht was valued at $8,000 and was partly covered by insurance.

50 YEARS AGO

Sept. 22nd., 1892

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Roote of Watertown, N.Y., formerly of Belleville, are visiting friends here.

Mr. H. Corby, M.P., entertained the memoers of the city council, the city officials and the members of the Trenton town council on his steam yacht Ometa, this afternoon. A visit was paid to the Murray Canal.

The steamer Nellie Cuthbert took an excursion party to Picton Fair today.

Mr. E. J. Madden of Kingston, received first prize on white and colored cheese ot the Toronto Exhibition. The cheese was manufactured at the Newburgh and Camden East factories. Mr. Madden is agent for Mr. J. T. Warrington, cheese exporter of this city.

Miss Maunder, George Street, has arranged to have her household effects sold at public auction on Thursday next. Mr. B. C. McCargar will conduct the sale.

And He Means Us!

Sir:—I have just returned from a long trip to Canada. It would do us good to see their tremendous war effort and how they all pull together to pull down Hitler—no bickering, no strikes, nor discords. Everybody, men and women, are at it pell-mell. We think we have men in uniform; you should see them.

What if the Germans had Canada? What a hell we would live in. There is peace and understanding now.

What characteristics they possess! Not how quietly they speak. How they consider others; and their good manners — "If you please," "Thank you," "I beg your pardon" and so on. You find that all along the line.

They can't believe that deceit and dishonesty exists, for all that is foreign to them. Indeed, they trust to the point of gullibility; but underneath their quiet mein is a firm and determined spirit that knows no defeat, and then, being victor, bears no malice. And they go to the front as volunteers and free men who want liberty and protection for their women and children first.

Again what a grand race. It is unfortunate that we don't see more of them on their home grounds or in contact here.

THE BISHOP ON FISH AND MEN

"Ah," said the Bishop, "when the fish don't bite
It proves that fish are wiser than are men,
Bass will not eat when lacking appetite,
They wait for food till hunger strikes again.

"But man will rush for any shining lure,
Will grab and snatch to further stock his store,
And with enough won't settle back secure.
He risks his all to get a little more.

"'Tis only hungry fish that snap at bait,
But man is lured by pleasure's shining stuff.
Something for nothing tempts him to his fate;
He seldom stays contented with enough."

Drinking Habits Reanalyzed

A recently published book, "Alcohol Explored," by H. W. Haggard and E. M. Jelinek, is a readable discussion, from a scientific standpoint, of numerous angles of what frequently is referred to as "the alcohol problem." It is not special pleading, either for abstinence or for drinking. It upsets numerous widely circulated inaccuracies. Its conclusions are based upon a large number of cases for percentage of error. Both the authors are members of the faculty of Yale University. Dr. Haggard is director of the university's laboratory of applied physiology, and Dr. Jelinek, vice-chairman of the scientific committee of the Research Council on Problems of Alcohol.

Some drinkers, the book points out, go insane because they drink and others drink because they are going insane. These latter are known as symptomatic drinkers, and it is inaccurate to blame alcohol for their mental condition. Speaking in general terms, continued excessive use of alcohol shortens life expectancy, although not so much as many persons believe. It sometimes causes certain physical diseases, like cirrhosis of the liver, although that ailment may occur also in total abstainers.

The physical effects of alcohol are not so devastating as the advocates of total abstinence would have people believe, the authors say. Indeed, there is virtually no difference in the health and length of life abstainers and moderate drinkers. When you consider those who drink to excess, it is something different. They do have worse health, are more vulnerable to certain diseases, particularly pneumonia, and a certain proportion of them develop mental maladies. Yet it is rather the ethical effect than the physical which makes heavy drinking a menace, if you except the danger of motor car accidents among the bibulous.

The causes of excessive drinking remain diversified and frequently are puzzling. Sometimes the difficulty is merely increased habit. Some men and women drink to overcome an inferior complex or unhappiness. These are escape drinkers. Some drunkenness is symptomatic, the result of disease and not the cause.

Sometimes, the authors admit, men continue to drink in excess for prolonged periods and pay no penalty except the moral disapproval of many who know them. They remain healthy, able to make money and contented with their lives as they live them. Perhaps as hopeless as any class of excessive drinkers are the stupid drinkers, the fellows who drink because other people are doing it, and because they have not enough mental resources to know how else to obtain recreation.

All in all, the conclusions of the book are encouraging. The authors believe that, although the prevalance of drinking is greater now than it was before national prohibition, the number of excessive drinkers and the average consumption of liquor per individual is decidedly less. The alcohol problem hardly will be on the road to solution, the authors believe, until such time as we know more about why men and women become excessive drinkers. — Kansas City Star.

The Lost Breed

Many years ago in the little hamlet of Bird's Creek, North Hastings, a man named James Best ran a hotel. He owned a running mare that was the apple of his eye.

About that time a man came into the district with a small chestnut stallion known as Green Mountain Morgan. A race was the outcome. As Uucle Hy. says, the mare would not trot, but the stallion would, and Best lost his money.

The stallion was a true Morgan, with a beautiful chestnut roat, cream colored mane and tail, arched neck and small ears. True to his breed, he was small and compact and very trim appearing.

For years there were many of these Morgans in the Bancroft-Maynooth district, but the breed has gradually passed out.

Never much over a thousand pounds in weight, they were gentle horses, easy to keep and quite rugged. To own a team of even half-Morgans was considered something ,and this writer recalls the pleasure of driving such a team.

The origin of the Morgan breed is a mystery. They were first recognized as a new and distinct breed about a hundred years ago in the Eastern States and both trotters and runners have been found in the strain. It is recalled that the Morgan stallion Ethan Allan under saddle defeated the standard-bred Dexter, the trotting champion of the 60's, in three straight heats.

It's a pity the Morgans couldn't be re-introduced into Ontario. — Courier Advocate.

He'll Bear Watching

In a case as bizarre as a Transylvanian mountain legend, an Ontario father has been found guilty of selling his 13-year-old daughter to a farm hand for $75, with an old overcoat as the down payment. For this, he has been sentenced to serve from six to eighteen months in the reformatory.

This, presumably, disposes of the father, as far as the Magistrate's Court is concerned, but it would seem that the Attorney-General's Department should not let the matter rest there. The crime for which this man was convicted was so unnatural that his right to unrestricted freedom after his term has expired is open to question. Ignorance and cupidity hardly explain his action, so psychiatry should take a hand in the case before he is turned loose on society again.

He's Been Dive-Bombed!

Sir—In view of the recent nation-wide demand for dive-bombers by members of Parliament, the press and the public, I have often wondered how many of these various people who make this demand have been subjected to dive-bombing.

I have experienced dive-bombing to a considerable extent, both in Norway and Libya, and for land operations I consider dive-bombing to be a terrible waste of material on the part of any air force. My A.A. battery in Tobruk was attacked one afternoon in May, 1941, by 12 Stukas, and only one of our guns, a small 20mm Italian cannon-shell gun, was put out of action, and during the six months we were in Tobruk only two of our gunners were killed in action out of 160 men.

I have seen a hospital ship attacked by 40 of these machines in Tobruk harbor and not one hit scored. The same month 14 of these machines made a raid on the harbor and not one returned to their base. The Germans employ these bombers to a great extent for long-range artillery. Attacks on our front line troops at Tobruk were made three to four times daily by 20 to 90 Stukas in each raid, and on the majority of occasions very slight damage was caused and casualties to personnel were about three to four killed each day.

The day soon came on my gun site when we had nothing but contempt for the "Stukas," as we were shooting them down over the town at the rate of four machines a day during April-May, 1941. Remember, this was my gun site alone, with our four 3.7 in. guns. For the benefit of the Army, let the workers give us more 25-pounders and see our 3.7 in. guns receive armor-piercing shells instead of just H.E.'s which we had to use against the German tanks during the summer months of 1941.

Battle of the Sexes

Chicago Daily News

Readers of the Daily News have been waging an all-out debate. The question is: If a woman—the average girl not Hedy Lamarr—knew how she looked in slacks, in babushkas, in moccasin shoes, would she be caught dead in them?

We find, from information available exclusively to us, that the critics are almost entirely male. They roar in their charges with the boldness of lions on the loose, but when it comes to the signature, they suddenly become as panicky as rabbits in the hunting season. 'Please, on no account, use my name—just sign initials or a nom de plume", they beg, and probably with good reason.

For it is our belief that the letters are only a boiling over from a situation that prevails in the homes—that the writers are only saying in print words they would dearly love to speak out face to face. They would, too, if it were not for that rabbit strain or discretion which takes command of members of the sterner sex in domestic crises such as this.

The men—or at least those who take pen in hand—want their women feminine. They like 'em in skirts and in hats that come from a millinery shop and in pumps with high heels. They are confused and upset by the forthright manner in which the women have been taking over man's work since the war began. They don't want to be constantly reminded of their own fast slipping position as the dominant male. Thus slacks become a symbol, and the wearer a sort of whipping boy—or is it girl?

As for ourselves, we take no position in this battle of the sexes, and if we did we'd be sure to use a nom de plume.

ELEPHANTS AND MICE

"That business about elephants being afraid of mice is true. They were fixing up old Modoc one day when he saw a mouse, and he tore the howdah off his back."

Those words were attributed recently in a press interview to a ballet dancer in the elephant ballet number of the Barnum and Bailey-Ringling Bros. circus.

The notion that elephants are particularly afraid of mice is as old as the hills.

It is alluded to in "The Lamentable Tragedy of Locrine," an English play of unknown authorship written about 1595 and sometimes attributed to Shakespeare. In this play Assarachus, brother of King Brutus and uncle of King Locrine, is represented as saying:

"Have you not seen a mighty elephant
Slain by the biting of a silly mouse?"

The usual explanation is that elephants are very nervous and temperamental animals because they have poor eyesight and have difficulty in distinguishing small creatures that might gnaw their feet, run up their trunks or get into their ears.

A few years ago a popular writer asserted that elephants are instinctively afraid of mice because small mouse-like animals found in their Old World haunts sometimes crawl up the trunks of the huge beasts when they are feeding and dig their claws into the flesh. The elephant becomes frantic and blows violently but is unable to dislodge the tiny creature, which, according to the story, not only produces great pain but in some cases actually causes the death of its victim.

Experts, however, are inclined to scout the persistent popular belief that elephants are afraid of mice. While they admit that individual elephants may have such a fear, they are of the opinion that neither wild nor tame elephants in general exhibit any fear of mice or other small animals.

"I am inclined to think that elephants, generally, are not afraid of mice," the late Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars of the New York Zoological Park told this writer a few years ago. "I have often noted both rats and mice in the hay in circus and animal shows, the elephants apparently pay no attention whatsoever to them."

Dr. William M. Mann, director of the National Zoological Park, says that elephants in the Washington zoo pay no attention whatever to the numerous mice running about their barns.

So perhaps the phenomenon of elephants being afraid of mice is an imaginary one and requires no explanation for the simple reason that it does not exist.

Why Germany Loses Wars

"It often seems to me mildly surprising that the German Army should come in for such an enormous amount of admiration for its conduct of war. It is very efficient. It is very brave. But if it is so spectacular a force as all that, why does it lose its wars? It chose the moment for attack in 1914. It chose the position of attack. It was all ready, when nobody else was. It took all the advantages on its side; it won its battle; it won its campaigns—and it lost.

"I'll tell you one reason why the Germans lose. They lose wars for a very strange reason — a very strange reason indeed. They lose wars because they daren't lose battles. They must be boosting themselves up with victories, even if in the long run those victories don't mean anything. In this war, as soon as the western fighting began, they had the choice of attacking Britain or of turning on Paris. If they had attacked Britain they might conceivably have won the war. But they went instead for Paris, because Paris was the easier job, and the more certain victory — though when they got it they were as far off winning as ever. As soon as they were decisively beaten in the air over Britain they gave up the attack on this country. Their reputation couldn't stand defeat. They looked round for something they thought easier to tackle and, of all places in the world, they picked on Russia! Well, they've found out their mistake there, all right. And it all comes because they must have victories. But what the British Army wants is not victories — it is victory.

"And Churchill knows it has always got it — in the end." —Harold Hobson, in "London Calling."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Impetigo —Pus Spots on Skin— Cured Rapidly by Sulfathiazole

One of the common ailments of infancy and childhood is impetigo or impetigo contagiosa as it is often called because it is so contagious.

The disease is caused by pus producing organisms. The skin is "spotted" with small pimples full of pus standing out singly on the skin. There is no redness or 'halo' about these spots and when they break down and pour out their pus, which looks like honey, they dry up as yellow scabs. The reddish stain which is left disappears in time.

As the new sulfanilamide drugs are especially helping in fighting off pus conditions in the body, Dr. A. J. Steigman, in British Medical Journal, tells of his use of sulfathiazole ointment in a number of cases of impetigo. He compared its effects with that of the usual treatment, (ammoniated mercury ointment) in twenty patients by treating one side with a five per cent sulfathiazole ointment was made by using five per cent by weight of powdered sulfathiazole in soft petrolatum (vaseline). After the second day of treatment (the ointments were applied three times a day), it was possible to state which preparation had been used on each side. Impetigo treated with the ammoniated mercury ointment healed rather slowly, though steadily, requiring an average of eight days. Impetigo treated with five per cent sulfathiazole ointment showed improvement in forty-eight hours and was healed by the fourth or fifth day.

In addition to the above twenty patients, Dr. Steigman treated 31 other cases entirely with the sulfathiazole ointment; these also showed improvement in forty-eight hours and healed in four or five days.

Impetigo in the scalp, a particularly mean and "messy" condition, did not heal as rapidly with the sulfathiazole ointment as it did on the skin and required an average of eight days to heal.

Another gratifying point was that where scabies—the itch was present together with the impetigo, clearing up the impetigo first with the sulfathiazole ointment greatly hastened the clearing up of the scabies by the usual treatment for scabies.

This information will be appreciated by mothers as impetigo spreads so rapidly. That it can be cured in four or five days, especially in a family of children, will be welcome news.

Every Fuel Needs Different Furnace Firing Technique

You'll save money, have more household comfort per fuel dollar and at the same time help the war effort by conserving fuel that is needed for war industries if you make sure you fire your furnace in the one way that is suitable to the particular fuel you use states a bulletin of the Canadian Institute of Plumbing and Heating.

First of all, says the Institute, order coal or coke (or wood, if yours is a hot air furnace calling for this type of fuel) in the size best suited to the size of your furnace. If it's small, get chestnut or pea sizes. If it's large get egg or stove coal.

Next important thing to remember is to leave a red spot when you fire. This red spot should be pulled forward to the front of the furnace, with the new coal or coke sloping up toward the back. Then, when you leave the furnace door slide slightly open, the air it sucks in will combine with the gas from the fuel and will be ignited by the glowing red spit. This door slide should never be entirely closed. Grates should be shaken gently. The ash pit could be kept clean.

Just in case your method of firing your particular furnace is not as efficient as it might be or your choice of coal not quite accurate in terms of optimum efficiency, better call in your plumbing and heating contractor. He'll know, says the Institute, and he'll save you money and time by explaining just how to get the most out of your heating system.

Marmora

Marmora — The spacious town hall of Marmora proved none too large on Thursday evening for a party and miscellaneous shower tendered Private and Mrs. Thomas Smith, who were married at Stirling last Tuesday afternoon. About two hundred and fifty persons representing relatives and friends were in attendance. Frank Leal of Deloro was master of ceremonies. Music for square dancing was furnished by Doug Jones while Carl Auger with records and amplifiers looked after the requirements of those favouring round dancing. Early in the evening a pause was made for the presentation of a set of dishes and a silver tray to the newlyweds from fellow employees of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company. The presentation was made by Malcolm Hawley, with Costan Paranuik reading the address. Both Mr. and Mrs. Smith thanked the donors. After the luncheon hour which was marked with the serving of an abundance of good things. The large number of miscellaneous gifts were opened up. The gathering then formed a ring and sang "For They are Jolly Good Fellows."

Flowers, fruits and vegetables in profusion, beautifully adorned the interior of St. Paul's Anglican Church on Sunday for the annual harvest thanksgiving service which was conducted by the rector, Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell and marked with a good attendance of worshippers who joined with the choir in the hearty rendition of harvest hymns. As an anthem the choir sang "To Thee, O Lord, Our Hearts We Raise." W. J. Cottrell, who as a choir boy attended the funeral of the hymnologist in England took the solo part and also read the lessons. Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell preached an impressive sermon stressing the duty we have of thankfulness to the Creator of all good things.

WEDDINGS

BUKER—FITZGIBBON

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was the scene of a quiet wedding at 12.30 today, when Eileen Nora daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Fitzgibbon, Ridley Street, became the bride of Private Earl Charles Buker, son of Mrs. Charles Buker and the late Mr. Buker. Rev. L. M. Sharpe performed the ceremony and the church was beautifully decorated with baskets of gladioli and asters.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a street length dress of navy blue and white and carried a bouquet of roses.

Mrs. Bernice Fitzgibbon as matron of honor, wore teale blue with black accessories and a corsage of roses.

Mr. Burton Fitzgibbon acted as best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held for the immediate families and friends; Mrs. Fitzgibbon, mother of the bride received with the couple, wearing navy blue with navy accessories and a corsage of roses.

Later the bride and groom left on a wedding trip to Montreal, the bride wearing a costume of mustard beige with brown accessories.

Pte. Buker and Mrs. Buker will reside in Peterboro.

McLARTY—SMITH

A quiet wedding of interest in Ottawa, took place on Wednesday afternoon, September 16, at the home of the bride's parents when Miss Ellenor Joan Smith, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Smith, Dean Lake, was married to Corporal Alexander Grant McLarty, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. McLarty of Sault Ste. Marie. Evangelist William Hynd of Hamilton performed the ceremony under an arch of colored maple leaves, decorated with the Union Jack. Miss Joan Dalziel played the wedding music.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was attended by her sister, Miss Betty Smith, as bridesmaid. Pte. Bert Acheson, C.P.C., of Trenton, was best man.

The bride wore a floor-length model of pale blue taffeta, made on long torso lines, with a net overskirt. The neck and sleeves were trimmed with lace and self-covered buttons were used on the bodice. She wore a headdress of pale blue with tiny pink flowers, and carried an arm bouquet of American Beauty roses.

A wedding supper was served after the ceremony. The couple left for Ottawa, where the bridegroom is attached to the Canadian Postal Corps. The bride travelled in an aquamarine blue suit, with red fox trimming and surf tan accessories.

JEWISON—SMITH

Millbrook, Sept. 22—A pretty Fall wedding took place on Saturday at three o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Russell J. Smith, Bank Street, when their second daughter, Diana Elizabeth Belvia (Betty), was united in marriage with William Lloyd Jewison, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jewison of Bailieboro, the ceremony being performed by Rev. A. E. Chavis, rector of the parish of Cavan, in the presence of more than fifty guests.

The home was beautifully decorated with Fall blossoms for the occasion, the bridal party taking their place before a background of flowers, and beneath an arch centred with a large white wedding bell from which went fluted streamers of pink and white, and which was intertwined with gladioli and other September blooms. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was becomingly gowned in a street length dress of aqua green crepe, with high neckline, fitted wide belt finely braided in conventional design, the bodice having a slightly draped effect, and the sleeves being of bracelet length. She carried an arm bouquet of Talisman roses, and wore in her hair a coronet of matching roses and pleated silk net. The groom's gift, a tiny gold wrist watch, was worn, and a triple strand of pearls finished the dress at the neckline.

Attending the bride was her cousin, Miss June Freeman of Peterborough, who wore a street length of cinnamon brown crepe, with draped bodice, the skirt pleated at the front, high neckline and bracelet length sleeves; her arm bouquet was of pink Sweetheart roses, and the coronet worn similar to that of bride. The grooms was supported by his brother, Milton Jewison, R.C.A.F., Trenton, and during the signing of the register, Misses Marjorie and Beatrice McDowell sang. Miss M. L. Collins played the wedding music.

Following the ceremony a reception was held, the bride's mother wearing a dress of black typhoon crepe, with gold clip at the neckline, matching hat with gold pin, at the side, and a corsage of pink gladioli and baby's breath. Mrs. Jewison, mother of the groom, also received wearing floral patterned blue taffeta, with navy hat, and corsage of rose gladioli and gypsophilia.

Pouring tea at the bride's table, which was done in pink and white and centred with the handsome three-storey wedding cake, were Mrs. Wentworth Gray, grandmother of the bride, and Mrs. Harold Freeman, of Peterborough; while serving the guests for the buffet luncheon were Mrs. Walter Challice, Misses Marian Belch, Marjorie Sutton, Laureen Richards, Jean Smith and Mrs. Harry Freemantle, the last two being the bride's sisters.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Jewison left by motor for their honeymoon to be spent at Muskoka, Toronto, and other points, the latter travelling in a dress of romance brown crepe, with gold clips, profile hat in a darker tint of brown, with matching veil, shoes and accessories. A fur scarf was worn and she carried her "Sportowne" tailored beige top coat. Upon their return they will reside on the groom's farm east of Bailieboro.

The young couple were the recipients of many lovely gifts. The gift of the groom to the bridesmaid was a gold compact; to the best man a Parker pen and pencil set; and to the pianist and soloists boxes of fine bon-bons.

A kindly gesture on the part of the bride' mother and the bride herself was the gift of the latter's bouquet to Reeve W. E. Ball, who is still confined to bed following a serious heart attack three weeks ago last Friday.

Perth, Ont., Sept. 22 (CP)—Loss estimated at $3,500 was caused yesterday by fire of undetermined origin which gutted a large drive shed and horse stable owned by the Perth Dairy. Three delivery wagons, two sleighs and a light track were destroyed in the blaze, which also damaged a garage.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Present-Day "Romeo and Juliet"

Today, many young Americans find themselves tragically hampered by Old World traditions. And while love usually finds a way of sailing around these obstacles, things often are unhappy under the parental roof.

Take the case of Private John B. He is stationed at Camp Dix and is expecting to go overseas any time. He was given a short furlough, went to New York to see his family and the girl whom he expects to marry when the war is over.

His father has been an American citizen for thirty-five years, but just doesn't seem able to cut the cords which bound him to Europe completely. No, Father doesn't approve of Hitler. He thinks perhaps Der Fuehrer has a little wheel in his head that doesn't work straight. Father is not a German, but he comes from one of those enslaved countries which Hitler is forcing to do his fighting for him.

Father thinks that when Private John B., his first-born son, goes overseas he may be shooting at some of his first cousins and this drives Father to the consolations of the bottle, and furlough under the parental roof was anything but happy.

Now enters the in-law spectre via the family of Private John B's fiancee. Her people are of Polish extraction, all very musical and talented, all feeling themselves immensely superior to the crude brutalities of the pure Aryans as touted by Adolf. All these unfortunates got together for an allegedly farewell and gala meal for Private John B.

No sooner are they gathered around the Sunday supper table with native dishes and plenty of good red and white wine than the soldier's father launches forth in glorification of the Rumanians, only lineal descendants of the Roman Empire. "You want an argument? Look at the Rumanian language and see how akin it is to pure Latin".

Polish father objects to this: "What country has such geniuses as Poland— the great Paderewski, Chopin, Modjeska, Kosciusko— has it not been the desire of the foul fiend Hitler to exterminate these people as a nation?"

The supper grew cold, the wine warm, arguments waxed.

"What do you make of such a situation?" writes distracted Private John B. "Her father won't let her marry me. My father says he'll hang himself if I marry her. Was not that a fine party to give a fellow before he takes his chances with submarines and bombing? I felt like saying 'Thank God for war'."

Why allow old bitter feuds to destroy happiness? Your Rumanian father and the girl's Polish family should be able to see that it's the common enemy that is not only destroying Europe but attempting to destroy this country. Just to show them, I think it would be a good idea to marry the girl before you sail.

FASHION FLASHES

YOUNG AND PRETTY dresses have peplums. A delightful date dress in a mossy crepe has a row of velvet spaghetti loops marching across its molded bodice and then the loops form a peplum. Modified dirndl skirt. Worn with matching velvet calot and gloves.

Heroes like to dance so invest in one pretty dance frock for the man in your life or for duty at the dances. For a dream dress we nominate a frock in billowing sky blue taffeta, with deeply curved sweetheart neckline and short sleeves. Pink velvet roses trail from the side of the waist down the full skirt with its rich folds.

Just perfect over sport things, daytime casuals or slacks is a hip-length coat of wide wale corduroy in lipstick red or golden beige.

Flatter yourself with a snugly cut reefer, an ideal figure flatterer. A beauty is fashioned of fine black tweed with high closing and big black velvet bows appliqued at the bustline. Slit pockets. Four black velvet buttons for the single-breasted closing.

There's a neat look about the nicest of the new hats. Neat and trim but devastating in its charm is a small hat of rose-quartz colored beaver felt made with high crown and held with one huge rose-quartz colored stone. Pale beige veiling.

Matching up is the rage this season. One house brings out its beautiful handbags trimmed with washed silver jewelry set with jade, turquoise matrix and similar stones and makes them with matching clip pins.

AIKEN'S W.M.S.

The September meeting of the Aiken's Woman's Missionary Society was held at the church on Wednesday afternoon with the President, Mrs. Fred Westover, in charge.

The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Cyril McMullen, followed by a reading "You and I" by Mrs. Fred Moon.

During the business period, Mrs. Selburn Westover and Mrs. Cyril McMullen were appointed as delegates to attend the fall rally to be held in Plainfield, October 15. Plans were made for an At Home to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Westover early in November.

Mrs. Thos. Bell of the Tabernacle Church, Belleville, was present and was asked to address the assemblage. A fine program was then presented and was in charge of the Missionary Monthly Secretary, Mrs. Harleigh Hamilton.

A reading, "The Lord Christ", was given by Miss Ruth Spafford.

A Missionary Monthly Playette was given with Mrs. S. Spafford, Mrs. S. Westover and Mrs. Wm. Wheeler taking part. This proved very interesting and informative proving the high standard of reading material contained in the Missionary Monthly. A piano solo was rendered by Mrs. Lee Grills.

Mrs. Spafford and Mrs. Westover passed on valuable information and a few highlights gleaned from the week spent at the School for Leaders held in Whitby.

A reading was given by Mrs. Wilmot Bailey and the closing hymn was "Come Let us Sing of a Wonderful Love".

The meeting was closed with prayer and the singing of the National Anthem.

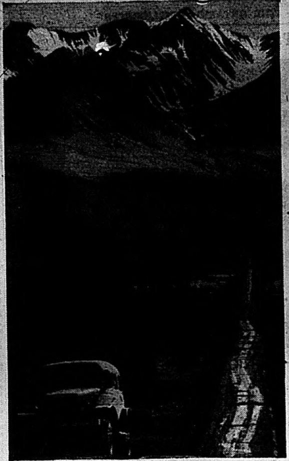
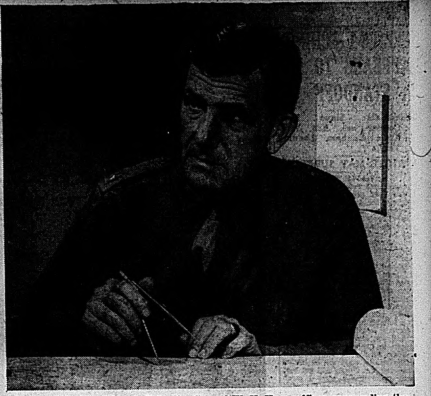
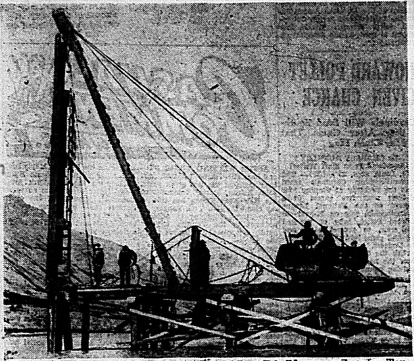
A welcome army of invasion is the great force of United States soldiers now cutting the wonderful Alcan Highway through Canada's wilderness to Alaska. A former lithographer, Sherman Gardner of Midvale, Utah, is working as surveyor.



The Trail of '42. Through bushland, across muskeg and rivers, a vital artery in North America's network of defence is feeding weapons and supplies to the north.



Mastermind of the Alcan is Brigadier General W. H. Hoge, officer commanding the U.S. forces building the road. The project is one of a broad program of joint U.S.-Canadian military activities, including training of troops and defence.



The crash of a pile driver shatters the silence, bulldozers and caterpillar tractors roar as they carve out a lifeline to our northern bastion. Engineers are shown pounding bridge supports into the riverbed, completing another link.

Payment of U.S. troops and Canadian contractors brings in American exchange, facilitating purchase of war materials in United States for Dominion's arsenals.

SERIES PITCHING APPEARS TO BE A STANDOFF

Cardinals Have Mort Cooper as Ace With Ernie Bonham Leading Yanks

WHITE MAY SURPRISE

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Sept. 22 (AP)—"Sure", conceded the American League man, "I wouldn't be surprised to see Mort Cooper pitch a whale of a game against the Yankees. They can be pitched to like any other club. Cooper might hold them to four or five hits and maybe a single run."

He and the National League man had been tossing the coming world series around orally for some time when the American made his disarming concession. The National Leaguer beamed his surprise and delight, but before he could think up a suitable appreciative reply, his antagonist continued:-

"And you know what'll probably happen to Cooper? Spud Chandler or Ernie Bonham or somebody else on the Yankee staff will be having a hot day and Cooper will get beat about 1-0. That's what I mean about Cooper not winning the series for the Cardinals."

The writer regards this as a graphic summing-up of the pitching potentialities of the two clubs that probably will play the first game of the big series a week from tomorrow in St. Louis. Brooklyn still has a mathematical chance to beat out the Cards in the National League, but actually the Dodgers were licked a week ago.

Cards Have Good Pitching

The American leaguer, of course, was giving only his side of the argument. The same thing could and probably will happen to one or more of the Yankee flingers. If the Yankees have the best pitching staff in baseball, as is widely believed then St. Louis Cardinals certainly have the second best.

The Cardinals staff must be regarded as stronger than the Brooklyn staff of a year ago. Manager Billy Southworth of the Cards, at least, will not have to start a couple of such veterans as Curt Davis and Fred Fitzsimmons, who led off against the Yanks in the first and third games of the '41 series.

While Cooper, with his fine fast ball and great variety of stuff, is the one who will have to turn the Yankees back a time or two if the Cards are to have a hope of winning the series, He lacks considerable of being the "Cardinal staff." In Max Lanier and Ernie White the club have a pair of corking good southpaws, and in Johnny Beasley the freshman pitching sensation of the National League.

The Yankees, themselves, have vivid recollections of the Card hurlers from their spring exhibition series, which the Cards won six games to three.

The Yanks expect to face Cooper, the 21-game winner, at least twice, and probably a third time if the series goes the limit of seven games

Yanks Led by Bonham

The Yankee staff, led by big Ernie Bonham with 20 victories and only five losses, probably is every bit as good as the one that held Brooklyn to 11 runs in five of their games a year ago. Marcus Russo, the ailing southpaw who beat the Dodgers 2-1 in the third game is a doubtful starter but in his place it has Hank Borowy, with 15 victories and only four losses for his first big league campaign.

Red Ruffing, a veteran now but still one of the game's greatest spot pitchers, likely will square off against Cooper in the opener. Red, at 37, has won only 14 games this season against seven losses, but his record of six world series victories against a single loss is unrivalled among today's pitchers.

Spud Chandler, with 16 and five, is certain to start one game, and probably Atley Donald another.

All in all, the series pitching appears to be about a stand-off.

Jimmy Brown, Second Sacker, Sparkplug in the Cardinals' Drive for Nat. League Flag

Knocked in Both Runs of 2-1 Victory Over Pirates to Maintain Edge

DODGERS WIN

By SID FEDER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The chances are you are never going to see Jimmy Brown in the Hall of Fame. And you'd be willing to bet his chances of landing the most-valuable-player award any year are not bright.

But when it comes to picking out the guy who did as much as anyone else to bring St. Louis Cardinals the National League pennant, don't overlook James Robertson Brown of the Jamesville, (S. C.) Browns.

The Cards still have the little job of sewing up the flag first, but after their 2-1 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday—in which Brown, incidentally, knocked both runs across — they still sported a 2½-game bulge with only five to go. And, although Brooklyn also came home a winner with a 3-1 decision over the Phillies, all the Red Birds need now is any combination of four victories or four Dodger defeats to put it on ice. Around Broadway today, the odds were 20-1 against the Bums.

There will no doubt be some arguments over Jimmy Brown, of course. From day to day when the fans will talk about Mort Cooper's zip-ball and Walker Cooper's catching and the awful things Country Slaughter does to pitchers. And when you mention Jimmy, they'll generally brush him off with, "Oh, yeah, he's the second baseman; he's pretty good, too." This in spite of the fact that other National League managers say he's the keyman who holds the infield together.

Cards Rely on Jimmy

But while that's part of it, it should be pointed out that it's not so much what Jimmy does while he's in there—but what the Cardinals do when he's out.

In two of the last three seasons—1939 and '41—it was while Jimmy was on the shelf with assorted ailments that the Cards blew their chances and as soon as he got back into action, they thundered down the stretch. And in 1940, it's probably only that he was hurt early and got back in time that they saved the flag.

Yesterday, the Dodgers took a 3-1 lead in the first inning against the Phils and managed to hold on to it right down to the wire, although Kirby Higbe was in many tough spots before he pulled out his 15th victory of the year.

Marv Bruer looked like a sure winner for New York Yankees over the Red Sox as he allowed only one hit for eight innings. Then Ted Williams' 36th homer tied it up in the ninth and Tony Lupien's single sent the winning Boston run home in the 11th.

In the only other game of the big league schedule, the Detroit Tigers rolled over Chicago White Sox on homers by Chet Ross and Barney McCoskey.

FIGHTERS TO SIGN FOR THEIR BOUT

New York, Sept. 22 —(AP)— Sgt. Joe Louis and Pte. Billy Conn, who have been training for the event for the past week, come into New York City today from their respective camps to sign the contract for their world heavyweight title fight in Yankee Stadium Oct. 12.

The signing will take place in the offices of the New York Boxing Commission at noon.

A major portion of the receipts from the bout will go to United States Army Emergency Relief.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Jimmy Brown, Cardinals: Drove in both Cards runs in 2-1 victory over Pirates.

Kirby Higbe, Dodgers: Pitched four-hitter, fanning 11, to down Phillies 3-1.

Ted Williams, Red Sox: Hit two-run homer in ninth to tie Yankees after which Sox won out in 11th, 3-2.

Barney McCosky, Tigers: Hit homer, two singles, drove in two runs and scored another in 6-4 victory over White Sox.

FUMBLE ALLOWS TIE

Winnipeg, Sept. 22 —(CP)— A fumble followed by a converted touchdown in the last two minutes of play last night enabled the Royal Canadian Air Force Flyers to deadlock Winnipeg Bombers 11-11 in the second game of the Winnipeg Rugby Football Senior League.

Toronto, Sept. 22 —(CP)— When Vancouver's Ken Black played—and tied—the people's choice, Benjamin Hogan, in a golf match for war charity last week it might have been his last golf contest for the duration. . .Golf has been his job, but because of the shortage of materials he will be looking for another (or headed for another) after Oct. 1. . .He is one of Canada's best, although he didn't compete in any of the major tournament this year.

Gridiron Gossip:

Edmonton Athletic Club Junior Footballers probably have the best coaching of any junior club in the country . . . Paul Kirk, former Regina Roughriders star, is chief with Bill Starr, Ex-Green Bay Packer fullback, his assistant. . . Starr taught the lads some plays Edmonton fans haven't seen before. . . Herbie Moores is one of football's unluckiest . . . A few years ago he retired from football after a back injury just when he seemed headed for the top with Toronto Beaches. . .FO. Lew Hayman coaxed him back to perform for the Toronto R. C. A. F. team this year, and in one of the first workouts Moores fractured an ankle. . .He's hospitalized, and likely out for the season.

For those who were wondering: the Australian who scored Winnipeg R. C. A. F.'s winning touchdown in the Winnipeg City Football League opener last week is LAC. Frank Webster. . We'll probably be hearing more of him. . . His first indentification was variously as F. L. Webster and W. L. Webster. . .Capt. Jeff Nicklin, former All-Canadian with Winnipeg Blue Bombers, is back in the country for paratroop work at camp Shilo, Man.. . .It's improbable he'll play any football this year.

Incidentally:

Regina probably will be Saskatchewan's Senior Hockey stronghold during the upcoming season . . .It has an edge on the opposition in the number of army players available. . .Terry Reardon is with Montreal Shamrocks in the Quebec boxla playoffs. This Irish pro hockeyist played against Shamrocks, for Canadiens in the semi-final. . .He went to Shamrocks as a wartime replacement . . .Private Jack Church, former Toronto Maple Leaf and Brooklyn American, probably will be available for hockey around Cornwall, Ont., this season. . .He's stationed near there. . .Larry Haynes is football coach at Vancouver college. . .He was to have been coach of the Jericho Beach Air Station Club, but its plans folded up.

E. BLACKWELL BLANKS GIANTS WITH FOUR HITS

Jersey City Has Not Scored a Run Against Syracuse in Forty Innings

NEED ONE GAME

(By The Associated Press)

Bill Terry, general manager of the New York Giant farm system which includes Jersey City, recently called Ewell Blackwell, young Syracuse right hander, the best pitcher in the International League.

And Blackwell, 19-year-old Californian owned by Cincinnati of the National League, made the selection stick last night by shutting out Terry's farm hands, 5-0, for the Chiefs' third straight victory in the International League's final round of the Governors' Cup playoffs.

Blackwell's blanking brought to 40 the number of innings since the Jerseys have counted a run off Syracuse pitching, including the game in which the two clubs broke a third-place tie.

Blackwell was touched for four singles. In addition, he walked two batters but fanned seven others.

There wasn't much to the game after a rousing first frame in which the Chiefs collected four runs and drove Adrian Zabala to the showers.

The triumph moved Syracuse, to within a single game of the playoff title and the right to meet Columbus of the American Association in the Little World Series, Columbus swept through Toledo, four games to none, in the Associations' final playoffs.

HOWARD POLLET GIVEN CHANCE

Cardinals Will Send Southpaw After Game That May Cinch Flag

By CHARLES DUNKLEY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

St. Louis, Sept. 22 —(AP)— The pennant-seeking Cardinals faced with the necessity of winning four of their next five games to be assured of the National League championship, rely on 21-year-old Howard Pollet, baby of the Red Bird crew, to protect a two and one-half game lead over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

With the Cardinals beginning to show the nervous tension of their amazing pennant drive—they have scored only three runs in their last 27 innings—cool, calculating Pollet was Manager Southworth's last minute choice to face the Pirates in the last game of their all-important two-game series.

Southworth was so pleased yesterday with the showing of southpaw Ernie White, who handed the Pirates a 2-1 loss, that he decided to toss another lefty at them.

Opposing Pollet will be Truett (Rip) Ewell, who aided the Cardinals' cause by defeating the Dodgers 3-2 ten days ago. He was the winning pitcher in the nightmare at Pittsburgh Labor Day, when the Pirates scored 11 runs after two outs in the sixth inning and went on to an 11-6 triumph.

Baby Pollet, although with the Cards only a little over a year, pitches like a veteran. He didn't win his sixth game this season until early September, but that victory was all-important because it placed the Cardinals within two games of Brooklyn the day before the Dodgers, twice defeated, were tied for the league lead. He pitched three scoreless innings against the Cubs last Sunday in a relief role.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Sept. 22 (AP) — The swanky Cypress Point Golf Club at Del Monte, Calif., will try to stay open for the duration—with only 45 members left....The Phils must feel kind of crowded with four umpires working their games these days. Most season's they'd be glad to get that many paid admissions during the final week.

Guest Star

Francis E. Stan, Washington Evening Star: "The Louis-Conn affair is one scrap drive worthy of support, but if the war department condones expenses that may be as much as $250,000, it can't be considered an all-out war effort. Offhand, we can't recall hearing when Ensign Gay, Lieut. Bulkley and a lot of bona fide heroes were given bonuses to pay off their back taxes and debts, so why Louis and Conn?"

Travel Bureau

Georgia's footballers rode 17 hours in day coaches to get to that Kentucky game Saturday....And that's another good reason for giving the home team the edge in your grid selections this year....Other colleges report they may have to split up their squads to travel in small bunches but they're still hoping for the best.

Weighty Document

The old collegiate custom of listing "program weights" for football players is out at the Texas College of Mines. Apparently tired of explaining to doubting sports scribes, tub-thumper Jud Williams sent out a squad roster, showing an average of 169 pounds, accompanied by a sworn statement showing the weights were attested by a doctor.

MORT COOPER,
— HIS PITCHING IS KEEPING THE ST. LOUIS CARDINALS IN THE THICK OF THE PENNANT FIGHT
HIS 20th VICTORY WAS AT THE EXPENCE OF THE BROOKLYN DODGERS. IT WAS HIS EIGHTH SHUTOUT OF THE SEASON

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

AFTER WINNING THEIR SECOND straight league pennant, and their sixth in the last seven years, John Keiran, sports columnist in the New York Times, has this to say about the New York Yankees:— "The recent clinching of another pennant by the Yankees brought hardly a ripple of excitement along the baseball front. Why should it cause excitement? Winning pennants is a habit with Yankee teams. It's the Yankee tradition. This is their thirteenth pennant in twenty-two consecutive seasons. There was no reason for dancing in the streets and joyous shouts of "Surprise! Surprise!" when they put over the clinching game the other day. Nothing less was expected of them.

"The surprise will come if they lose the world series. They have won nine world series in thirteen attempts. No other club has a record to approach anything like that since outfielders wore handle-bar mustaches and a catch on the first bound was out.

"The Yankees of 1942, from the start of training activities in Florida, were expected to win the American League pennant. They clinched it with plenty to spare. They dashed off to a long lead and closed the argument by a wide margin. Oh, yes; they did have one serious slump. But what it finally amounted to was that they backed up unexpectedly and crushed the Indians and Red Sox who were behind them. They they went merrily on their winning way again."

APPARENTLY THE IRISH aren't quite caught up with their baseball terms as yet, although the sons of Ol' Erin are willing customers judging from a report in the Belfast News-Letter.

In describing a game between two United States army teams calling themselves the Terrors and the Giants, the Belfast writer told his readers: "The crowd roared in true American fashion when, in the sixth innings, the Giants managed to get their winning run from a fine swipe to the end of the ground, where the limit man dropped the slightly damp ball. The hitter himself was 'pipped' on the home plate in trying to make a home run himself, but he had 'scored' a man on second base." ...The story of that ball game in the Belfast paper was given quite a play, the paper giving precedence only to the Stalingrad story and the defeat of Rommel in the desert.

ONE WOULD HARDLY BELIEVE it, but "Irish Jerry" Monnahan, that pugnacious wrestler of parts who meets Nanjo Singh here Wednesday night, commenced his professional sports career as a baseball player. "Yes, I started to play organized ball with Tacoma in the Western International League nearly 15 years ago. I had a good season with Tacoma and moved up to Seattle 'Raniers' in the Pacific Coast League the next spring. However, there was a snipe of a kid around catching by the name of Mickey Cochrane and I sat on the bench after the first month. At the time little did I ever think that the fellow to push me to the bench was later to become one of the greatest catchers of all times, so you see it didn't make me feel too badly," Monnahan admitted during a fanning bee here recently. Later "Irish Jerry" tried professional wrestling to which he was more adapted. Monnahan is on the some card with John Katan and Earl McCready, who meet in a British Empire elimination bout at the Hume arena tomorrow night in what should prove a sure-fire crowd-pleaser.

REMEMBER WHEN "BIG Chuck" Conacher, former right winger on the Toronto Maple Leafs' Kid Line, joined line-mate Busher Jackson on the New York Americans' roster three years ao today? Conacher, possessor of one of the hardest shots in hockey, went to the Amerks on option from the Toronto Leafs and was moved back to a defence post.

AS HAS BEEN THEIR PRACTICE all season whenever possible, the Deacon A.C. gals' softball team played the WAAF. girls from the Mountain View Airport at the Shannonville fair last Saturday. The fact the Deacons won made little difference, what featured the picture was the fact the WAAF. lassies were the guests at the Deacon Shirt Company cafeteria where a buffet luncheon was served both teams and a delightful social hour spent.

A COUPLE MORE WINS AND you can count the Cardinals in. Both Brooklyn and, St. Louis won yesterday leaving the Red Birds two and one-half games up with five to play, while the Dodgers have six more games left. If the Cardinals only win three more games the Dodgers will have to win all six in order to create a tie at the end of the regular National League schedule, however, if the Cards win four it's all over for 1942. The boys up and down Broadway are referring the current National League race to that of 1908 when the Giants and Cubs tied. However, delving more thoroughly into the National League records we'll compare the 1942 Cardinals with George Stallings' 1914 miracle team, the Boston Braves. That year the Braves were in the National League cellar position, along about the last of July, but drove ahead to win the pennant. Records show, however, the Braves were only eleven and one-half games out of first place on July 31st this year, while the Cardinals were ten games behind the Dodgers along about mid-season this year, so if Billie Southworth's St. Louis Cards win the 1942 National League pennant it will be a feat worthy of record. Naturally bouncing from the cellar to the garret is an outstanding feature long to be remembered, but it makes little difference in the league positions, but rather in games behind the leader that counts.

THIS AND THAT—HARNESS racing such as never before seen in Belleville is slated for the Belleville Fair tomorrow in the free-for-all... Three of the best in their class will face the barrier, Sted Craig's Bert Patch, "Chapple" Chapman's Vera Bars and Wilmer Hillock's Lastic Grattan are all shooting for that $350.00 purse and harness racing deluxe can be assured in this class ....At sunrise today 30 horses were stabled at the Fair Grounds, not counting the above....Incidentally Lastic Grattan holds the Belleville track record at 2.06.....The Boston Bruins have transferred their fall training camp from Hershey, Pa., to Port Arthur, Ont., and the Bruins will commence limbering up on Oct. 15th....You can't pay any more than $40.00 for a seat at the Louis-Conn fight, that is unless you get hooked by a scalper....All box and reserve seats for the Yankees' home games in the world series have long since been sold....However, there's something like 28,000 rush seats in the Yankee Stadium available daily ....Billy Soose, former middleweight boxing champion is in the United States Navy....The National Hockey League big-wigs will meet over the weekend and you can expect some big developments. .... Who's out of step?

BASEBALL LEADERS DISCUSS WORLD SERIES

Officials of the interested American and National league baseball clubs meet with baseball czar Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis in Chicago, Ill., to make plans for the 1942 World Series. "If the Shoe Were On the Other Foot"

At our distance from Germany, it isn't easy to visualize the effects, material and human, of the British bomber command's recently stepped-up operations on German industrial communities.

But suppose:

That Canada had been conquered by an enemy of ours.

That this enemy was possessed of a great air force based on numerous well-protected Canadian airdromes.

That the enemy began to send bomber fleets across the Great Lakes, and the long land borders, almost every night.

That on the next night 600 or 700 bombers would strike at Pittsburgh's steel and ordnance mills. And repeat the dose the next night.

That other swarms of bombers on other nights, would rain destruction on the Niagara Falls power plants and their nearby industrial clusters. And on the Soo locks, the potential bottleneck between the iron ranges and the blast furnaces.

That they bee-lined out of the Ontario peninsula to pounce on Detroit — on the vast new Willow Run bomber plant, on Chrysler's tank plant, on all that vast agglomeration of war industry. And on across the southern counties of Michigan to smear Chicago.

That on another night they rose from dispersal points around Montreal and droned down Lake Champlain and the Hudson to New York itself, and even on to Washington. Or down the valley of the Connecticut River to Springfield's and Hartford's firearms factories, and on over to the submarine yards of New London.

Or, in the West, that they blockbombed the great new Portland shipyards, or the vital copper mines and mills of Butte.

Well, you would know then what bombing meant.

If they could keep it up, night after night, without respite—could our industry maintain its wartime pace? Could our armies be supplied?

Well, that is what the R.A.F. is doing, or at least beginning to do, to Germany.

And if the R.A.F. is joined by countless squadrons of American-manned flying fortresses and liberators and B-25 "Doolittles" and B-26's, it seems a certainty that the Nazi arsenals of aggression must begin crumbling too fast for even Hitler's hordes of slave labor to repair. — An editorial in the New York World-Telegram.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Spooks Run Wild"

For situations that elicit screams of delighted horror from an audience, we recommend "Spooks Run Wild," (first Belleville showing), the Monogram mystery comedy which opened at the Capitol theatre last night, with the menacing Bela Lugosi and the redoubtable "East Side Kids" in the starring roles. This qualifies as about the most uproarious picture of its type that has reached the screen in many a moon, and last night's audience literally rocked in their seats.

The spectacle of the Dracula-like Lugosi pitting his mysterious powers against such self-confident young "tough mugs" as Leo Gorcey, Bobby Jordan, Huntz Hall and Sammy Morrison has humor in itself, but when their antics take place in a cobweb-festooned old mansion with its dark hallways, trap doors, coffin-strewn cellars and terrifying shadows, the result is little less than devastating.

The cast of "Spooks Run Wild" also includes Dorothy Short, David O'Brien, George Pembroke, Donald Haines, David Gorcey, Rosemary Portia and Guy Wilkerson, and the comedy was directed with fine effect by Phil Rosen. Sam Katzman produced.

If you enjoy thrills mixed with shrieks of laughter, "Spooks Run Wild" is just your kind of picture.

"Hold Back The Dawn"

Handsome Charles Boyer sets feminine hearts fluttering again in "Hold Back the Dawn," the Paramount romance now showing at the Capitol Theatre. In the most exciting role of his exciting career, Boyer is a debonair European scoundrel who stoops to a marriage of convenience in order to get into the United States.

Co-starring with the dark-eyed screen lover are lovely Olivia de Havilland, the trusting girl he weds, and glamorous Paulette Goddard as the woman of his past.

The story has the sure-fire ingredients of tender romance, rib-tickling comedy, some prize villainy and a melodramatic finish when Boyer crashes the international boundary line to be with his young bride after she has crashed in her automobile.

In the news are special pictures of the Dieppe raid.

AT THE BELLE

"Dr. Kildare's Victory"

Lew Ayres and Lionel Barrymore, as Drs. Kildare and Gillespie, grapple with new medical problems in "Dr. Kildare's Victory," latest of the Kildare series, now showing at the Belle theatre. A young interne gets in trouble saving a life in a zone supposed to be that of another hospital, and the two doctors, with the aid of a debutante accident victim whose life had been saved, finally save the day for the doctor and his sweetheart, a hospital nurse.

A dramatic plea to the hospital board, a delicate operation, an accident in which a night club sign falls on the victim, and Ayres' restoring of a smothered baby before the eyes of anguished parents, are dramatic highlights.

New "Discovery"

The picture introduces a glamorous new acting discovery in Ann Ayars, a young concert singer who played a nurse one day, as her first picture role, and the next day was promoted to leading lady by Major W. S. Van Dyke, directing the picture. She is beautiful, a graphic actress, and possesses a striking voice.

Other newcomers in the picture are Robert Sterling, who plays the young intern in the case, Jean Rogers, as his sweetheart, and Barry Nelson, who has a striking role as a delirium patient.

Regular Kildare favorites in the cast include Alma Kruger, Walter Kingsford, Frank Orth, Nell Craig, Marie Blake, George H. Reed and Eddie Acuff.

"The Vanishing Virginian"

Captain Bob Yancey has gone to his reward, but his spirit lives on. In effect, the noble old American gentleman lives again on the screen at the Belle theatre, where "The Vanishing Virginian" is the worthy added feature, with Frank Morgan in the title role.

This is the screen adaptation of the memorable biography by Rebecca Yancey Williams, who was Cap'n Bob's daughter. She is admirably portrayed by Kathryn Grayson, the singing discovery who won a leading role in her second picture Frank Borzage) director of such unforgettable films as "Humoresque," "Seventh Heaven," and more recently "Flight Command," guided this dramatic adaptation for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The story begins in the heart of a home and ends there, reaching into the hearts of the audience with its tender familiar episodes. Miss Grayson, a talented singer, offers three numbers and in several others the whole family joins in close harmony.

The Belle News of the World described by Lowell Thomas completes the program.

HEALTH CHATS

By Dr. Herman N. Bundesen
President, Chicago Board of Health

Mild Constipation in Child Held Not Harmful

Many mothers unfortunately are mistaken about the child's bowel movements. Some mothers believe it is a mark of good health if the movements occur twice a day. Others believe that the child is sick if he does not have a movement every day. Such notions are in error. Unfortunately they lead to the beginning of the use of cathartics in young children.

As long as the contents of the bowel moves through the bowel at the normal rate there need be no concern about the number of bowel movements the child has. It is the opinion of many child specialists that mild constipation seldom causes any harm.

According to Dr. Philip Cohen of New York, some people become obsessed with the idea that the bowels must move every day but this is by no means true. Diet is the most important factor for producing normal bowel movements, the doctor declares. The diet, of course must be bulky enough.

Foods which are most likely to lead to constipation are the protein foods, such as meat, eggs and milk, while sugars and fats are laxative in nature. Thus, in planning the baby's milk mixture, it is important that the proportion of protein, sugar and fat be correct. The sugars also vary in their laxative effect. Lactose is most laxative, while cane sugar is next. Maltrose and dextrose are the least laxative. It is a good thing, in treating the constipation, to give whole vitamin B-complex in large doses because of the effects of various parts of the vitamin B-complex on the normal intestinal action.

In some instances the constipation may be due to actual kinking of the bowel. In such cases the condition is difficult to overcome. This kinking, which may be present in early infancy, usually corrects itself gradually. Plenty of fruit juices, pureed vegetables and bulky cereal should be given as early as they can be started without disturbing the infant's digestion.

There are apparently some infants who are very nervous and easily upset. They are called "hypertonic" infants. In such babies a form of constipation may occur known as spastic constipation.

Treatment with diet does not help much in these cases. Dr. Cohen suggests the giving of such drugs as atropine to relax the spasm of the bowel. In older infants faulty habit formation may be the cause for the constipation. If a child is forced to have a bowel movement, he may deliberately attempt to keep from emptying his bowels. The proper thing to do is form in the child the habit of the proper time, the proper place, and the proper act. This may require time and the right combination of firmness and praise.

ICE PRICE RAISED

Montreal, Sept. 22. — (CP)— A spokesman for the Regional Office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board said here last night that the Board had increased the price ceiling for 25 pound blocks of ice 2 1-2 cents to 15 cents. The change is effective October 24.

He said this was done to allow Montreal ice distributors, beset by increased handling charges a fair profit. He said that an increased demand for ice recently had depleted local stocks and Montreal distributors were forced to get ice from outside points. This increased their handling and distributing charges and they could make no 'reasonable profit'. They had stopped distributing ice during the weekend and many refrigerators have gone unfilled.

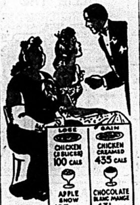
Low-Calorie Foods Reduce Poundage



Fat Girl Left Alone at Parties

"Ruthie's fat but awfully nice." the hostess said. But the men prefer the slender girls somehow!

If you're a "Ruthie" you needn't accept such a fate. You can lose two pounds a week, choosing foods that cut you down to 1200 calories a day, instead of the high quantity —maybe 4,000—you get now.

It's easy. When you know your calories you can have just as much to eat. Sliced chicken has only 100 calories a serving (creamed chicken has 435) and a baked white potato (100) is as filling as a sweet potato (200).

Desserts, too, may be on your reducing menu as long as they're low-calory—such as apple snow, 125 a cup—but NOT chocolate blanc mange, 431!

By being smart about your food you win a smart figure; soon everyone admires yours!

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop to celebrate the swell weather, and he said, Here comes Admiral Tricker, by gollies he still walks as if he thought he had a rolling sea under him.

Was he a real admiral? I said, and pop said, I guess he was real enough, but it was all such a long time ago that it seems much realer to him than it does to his present acquaintances. He thinks the world is still fighting a couple of other wars, pop said.

Which just then Admiral Tricker stopped and shook hands with pop, saying, I was just listening to the silliest ass I ever heard in my life exposing his ignorance in a radio broadcast. The chuckle headed fool was roaring and ranting to the effect that a country separated from you by water can be beaten just by a lot of airplanes. Can you imagine, just a few thousand airplanes dropping bombs all over the place without a single battleship. Air power alone in other words, can you imagine such a sap? As far as some blockheads are concerned, there's no such thing as history, he said.

It's hard to believe, pop said. When a thing's once tried and true, it's true and tried forever, I say. This country has never been the same, for instance, since a bunch of crackpots substituted these new automobile fire engines for the old spirited fire horses, he said, and Admiral Tricker said, Well, of course in the case of fire, there's the element of time to be considered.

You mean that's what the dimwits say, pop said. By gollies that's what's wrong with them, they're living a hundred years ahead of their time right now. Those were the days of real fires, with the horses 3 abreast galloping and snorting with the sparks flying from their hooves and the driver losing his helmet trying to hold them in. Maybe in another 25 years or so these horseless contraptions will be all right, just like airplanes for fighting. I knew you'd see the point. Well Admiral, glad to of run into you, it's a relief to let off steam to a sensible man, he said.

And we kept on going and I looked around and Admiral Tricker was scratching his beard to himself.

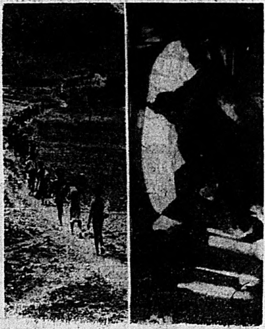
CANTERBURY MEETS THE ROYAL NAVY

The Archbishop of Canterbury, highest ranking prelate of the Church of England, is shown among some of the sailors of the British home fleet during his visit to the battle wagons recently. During his visit the archbishop held a service aboard H.M.S. King George V.

WHERE EXPLOSION INJURED FIFTEEN

A view of the interior of the primer inspection building at the Winchester Repeating Arms Company plant in New Haven, where an explosion injured 15 persons, seven of them women. Cause of the blast was not determined immediately, but an investigation is underway. The accident will not interfere with operations at the plant.

SUPPLIES REACH NEW GUINEA DEFENDERS



The old and the new meet in New Guinea to keep supplies moving to the Australian and American forces battling in the hills around Kokoda to keep the Japanese from Port Moresby. AT LEFT a long file of native porters winds toward the embattled outposts with each porter packing about 40 pounds of supplies on his back, while at RIGHT, crew members of a transport plane are pictured as they dumped out packages from overhead. No roads or railways lead to the mountainous inland terrain and all supplies must be moved by plane or by native porter.

CORVETTE CHARLOTTETOWN LOST

The Canadian corvette Charlottetown, pictured above, has been lost in action against the enemy off the Eastern Canadian coast. She was victim of a submarine and nine of the crew are dead, with five missing 14 injured. Thirty-nine of the crew are safe. Acting-Lieutenant Commander John Willard Bonner of Halifax was killed in action.

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results your druggist will gladly return your money.

700 Register At Collegiate For Opening

School bells pealed-out for 700 students at the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School today in the latest commencement of academic exercises following the summer vacation period in the history of secondary schools. The belated opening of collegiates and High Schools was the result of legislation enacted by the Department of Education in order to assist in the harvesting of Ontario crops by advanced pupils.

"Our opening registration is approximately 700, which is about one hundred less than the 1941 fall registration," stated Acting Principal Turner. Of this figure 200 are successful entrance students making their debut into secondary school education.

"Of course these figures do not take into consideration the large number of our students, who are either engaged in war work or assisting in the harvesting of farm crops throughout the district. No doubt our registration will subsequently reach a comparative figure with former years, once these students conclude their war work activities," explained Acting Principal Turner. He added it would be impossible to estimate exactly how many pupils would return to school in October, as the Department of Education permits creditted attendance for pupils assisting in farm harvesting up until Oct. 9th.

At St. Michael's Acdaemy the registration was slightly below that of a year ago, which is also attributed to the fact secondary school pupils at the Academy are assisting in the war enterprise at farm harvesting.

Hilliard Aide, 51, Dies After Crash

Victim of Bus-Tractor Collision Near Mountain View Saturday Night

As the result of a fractured skull and other injuries received in a bus-truck motor crash near Mountain View on Highway No. 14, late Saturday night, 51-year-old Hilliard Aide, of Hartamere, Ont., died in the Belleville General hospital early Tuesday morning. Crown Attorney W. S. Lane of Picton, immediately ordered an inquest and the preliminary view was heard before Coroner Dr. R. S. Thompson of Wellington, at the hospital.

Aide was a passenger in the Belleville-Mountain View Bus Saturday night when the trailer of a truck driven by Clifford Hieman, of Picton, is said to have jack-knifed and collided with the bus forcing it into the ditch. Aide and an airman, who was also injured, were sitting directly behind the driver of the bus and received the full force of the impact, stated Traffic Officer J. H. Hatch, who investigated. Seventeen other passengers in the bus escaped uninjured.

Crown Attorney Lane later instructed County Constable Earl Marvin of Wellington, to prepare evidence for the adjourned inquest that will be held in Rossmore. Following identification of the body at the hospital today it was released for burial upon consent of Coroner R. S. Thompson. A postmortem was not deemed necessary as the result of death seemed to be quite obvious, authorities stated.

BELLEVILLE BOY NAVAL INSTRUCTOR

The splendid marching of the naval unit which paraded in the military parade at the opening of the fair last evening, was in no small measure due to the instruction given the detachment by a local boy, Leading Seaman Harry "Barney" Parson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parson, 12 Strachan Street. Leading Seaman Parson is a brother of George Parson, who is missing and believed drowned when the naval patrol boat "Raccoon" was sunk by enemy action. He is stationed as instructor on a Kingston training ship.

Frank Askey Retires After Spending 40 Years on Railroad as Brakeman

Bancroft (Special)—Mr. Frank Askey of Bancroft retired from the Canadian National Railways Tuesday evening, September 8th having completed forty years service as brakeman on the I.B. & O line. Mr. Askey, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. Askey was born in the village of Haliburton in 1877 and later moved to Kinmount. Being somewhat railroad minded following in the footsteps of his father who was a telegrapher, he entered the service of the railway in 1902 as brakeman The first crew with which he worked was Conductor Albert Allen, Engineer Jo Webb, and Fireman Milton Harris. At that time the train operated from Howland to Mud Creek making its headquarters at Baptiste. It was not until 1910 when the Canadian Northern took over the line that they extended it from Mud Creek to York River two miles north of Bancroft where it connected with the Ceneral Ontario line running from Trenton to Maynooth.

Never Absent Through Illness

During Mr. Askey's forty years on the road he was never absent through sickness and the only time awy from the service was on his regular holidays. Three days weekly he operated on a run from Bancroft to Howland and return and on alternate days their train made a trip to Bessemere, Maynooth or Lake St. Peter. The crew working with him on his last run Tuesday was Conductor C. R. Smith, Engineer Eddy Meese, Brakeman C. H. Stoughton, Fireman M. Guay, and Train Agent Frank Sprung. Wrecks were frequent during his time of service but he was always fortunate to escape injury.

Mr. Askey lived at Baptiste for eight years but when the line was extended to Bancroft in 1910 he moved into town where he has made his home since. At the time of his settlement in Bancroft he said that the main industry was lumbering. Rathbuns of Deseronto were shipping trains of logs from Bancroft, and Lake St. Peter.

Family of Nine Children

Mr. Askey was married in 1903 to Jane McIntyre of Kinmount and has a family of nine children: Annie Mrs. F. Shannick of Weslemkoon Lake, Francis of Belleville, Dorothy, Mrs. Charles Musclow of Belleville, Ethel, Mrs. F. Cassidy of Oshawa, Myrtle at home, Violet, Mrs. Jack Kelusky of Bancroft Elvin of Belleville, Gertrude, Mrs. Earl Bentley of Bancroft, and Muriel at home. Mr. and Mrs. Askey are active members of St. John's Anglican Church in the village.

Youth Causes Much Excitement in Cafe

Trenton, (Special.) — Trenton Police had an exciting few minutes on Monday evening in one of its cafes when Gerald Mainprize, a local boy, is said to have run amok with a sharp bladed hunting knife, chasing the proprietor and several others around the cafe.

Mainprize entered the cafe about ten p.m. and went to the back and used the washroom. On his way out he dashed his fist through one of the plate glass windows in the front of the cafe smashing it, and kept on going. The proprietor rushed outside and told him he would have to return and make a settlement. Mainprize came back into the cafe and asked the manager not to phone the police that he would pay for the window. He reached into his pocket and instead of producing money grabbed a huge hunting knife and started after the Chinaman.

Excitement reigned high for the next few minutes as the cafe quickly emptied of its occupants. The manager rushed into the phone booth and called the police and during this interval Mainprize allegedly started after the proprietor's brother and chased him into the kitchen where the lad jumped high up on the stove. By this time Constables Morgan and McColl, accompanied by Corporal Samletzki of the Service Police of the R.C.A.F., arrived on the scene and quickly took Mainprize into custody but not before he had chased several of the other Chinamen into the kitchen. He put up a terrific struggle with the police but was quickly overpowered and disarmed.

Dim Out Darkens Street

The new wartime regulations respecting use of electricity gave downtown Trenton an unusual appearance on Sunday evening, when the regulations first became effective, and the customary sources of light were extinguished. Trenton users of Hydro have gone to work with a will, the Public Utilities set the example by reducing the street lights by fifty per cent. While the same number of lights are in use, the candle-power has been reduced. All business signs and display windows have also been dispensed with, and the Hydro has requested the householder to reduce his consumption of electricity as much as possible.

This should be an opportune time for Canadians to adopt the slogan "The harder we work, the sooner we shall see the light".

V.O.N. Nets $200

The V.O.N. taggers were well rewarded for their efforts on Saturday, when over $250 was turned in at the close of the day. The President Mr. R. F. McInnes, and other officers of the Order, are very grateful to all who helped in any way to make this Tag Day such a decided success.

Wing Commander W. I. Riddell and Mrs. Riddell of Cobourg, visited friends in town on Monday.

Graduates of Red Cross Classes Can Get Certificates

The Canadian Red Cross Society, after consultation with the Ontario Division, and the Canadian Nurses' Association, has authorized the issuing of a Home Nursing Certificate to young women who have taken the Red Cross Home Nursing Classes and who desire to do war service, according to information received by Red Cross officials here.

Eligible candidates for the certificates will be women 18 and over, who have attended 90 per cent of the course classes; who present themselves for examination within one year after completion of the course; desire to undertake war service or disaster work and in the event of a failure, has repeated the course of instruction.

A divisional examining board has been set up and a local examining committee composed of two or more nurses and at least one doctor will look after the phase of the work here.

Must Take Exam.

The examination will include a written paper which will take from 1½ to two hours to write, demanding short answers, and an oral examination and demonstration.

The first examination will be held during the month of October, the exact date to be announced later. Thereafter examinations will be held regularly during the months of October, December, March and June.

Requirements to qualify are 60 per cent on each examination; a recommendation of the class teacher and the approval of the examining board.

In the demonstrations applicants must be able to make a bed; take temperatures; give bed baths; foot baths; simple enema; mustard paste; bathing infant; apply dressings, and "do's and don'ts" regarding application of tourniquet, slings, splinting, transportation of fractures and resuscitation.

Classes Start in October

The classes will start locally early in October with Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson in command, and Mrs. Eric Keeler, Mrs. J. G. Caldwell, Mrs. Dowsett, Mrs. Seldon, Mrs. Fetterley and Mrs. Flintoff as unit leaders.

Another important step along Red Cross Nursing lines is seen in the fact that it has been placed on the curricula of secondary schools for the Defence Training program.

Mrs. Dorey of the Red Cross Emergency Corps will be here on Wednesday, and Miss Sayer of the Home Nursing and Emergencies Committee on Friday.

Red Cross Emergency Corps officials were informed this week by Chairman Jack Trudeau of the Kiwanis Centre Blood Donor Clinic that facilities have been arranged to hold their lectures in the upper part of the building.

Women desirous of attending the lectures and securing one of the Home Nursing certificates should get in touch immediately with Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson, Emergency Corps commandant here, or Mrs. Eric Keeler.

Why Not Use "A Bicycle Built for Two"

A type of accident that might have been common in the "gay nineties" occurred on North Front Street, during the noon hour today when a bicycle ridden by John McCormick, R.R. No. 5, Belleville, was in collision with another bike ridden by Alfred Lott, Frank Street, in this city. Lott was knocked to the pavement where he sustained a lacerated lip. Little damage resulted. At about the same time of day a motor-car driven by Ronald S. Stewart, Donald Street, struck a girl on a bicycle, at the intersection of Pinnacle and Station Streets. Here no injuries were sustained, Mr. Stewart assured police.

POLICE COURT

Facing two charges of violations of the Highway Traffic Act, Denis Rossetti, of this city, paid fines when arraigned before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in city police court today. Rossetti was convicted of riding a motorcycle with a defective muffler and also of driving the machine without the necessary licence plates. Collective fines and costs amounted to $20.00 and was paid to Acting Chief Harman before court opened.

Charge Dismissed

A charge of vagrancy was dismissed against Frank McLaren, Montreal transient, when the court was advised McLaren had obtained a National Registration card. The accused man had been held for some weeks when it was learned he had lost his registration card.

Pleas of guilty on charges of intoxication and a non-support case concluded a short session of the court.

POLICE BLOTTER

Mail robbers were reported in Belleville today when Mrs. J. Murphy, 209½ Front Street, informed police that some person had pried open her private mail box and removed letters therefrom. Mrs. Murphy resides in an apartment upstairs and her mail box is situated in a street-entrance hallway leading to her apartment. Police reported the incident to the postal authorities.

Trenton police reported the theft of a 1927 model Essex coach, bearing Ontario licence plates number 5-C-908. A soldier is believed responsible for the vehicle being missing.

Doyles drug store reported the theft of their company bicycle, that had been left parked at the rear of the store.

LOSES VALUABLE TRUMPET AT FAIR

While playing a game of skill along the midway at the Belleville Fair last night, Allan Juby, 27 Alexander Street, lost a valuable trumpet. Juby, who is a member of the Belleville Municipal Band playing nightly before the grandstand at the Belleville Fair, laid his trumpet down beside him as he tried his luck at a carnival game of skill. The musician's luck was bad all round, he lost at the game of chance and also lost a valuable musical instrument.

Sales of Donated Goods In Aid of War Charities Are Held To Be Taxable

Clearing up a possible misunderstanding as to whether goods sold through branches of the Red Cross and other institutions for the purpose of raising funds are taxable under the new excise regulations, it has been pointed out by the Department of National Revenue that such goods do come under the provisions of the tax.

Consequently all voluntary and auxiliary services are advised by their headquarters that taxable goods sold through the Red Cross, and other superfluity shops, bazaars, antique shops and various sales of donated goods in aid of war charities, are held to be taxable.

NEW SHELTERS FOR 20,000 READY IN LONDON

Leading Britons are convinced that Hitler's Luftwaffe will make one more desperate bid to batter the heart of the British Empire into submission with a series of gigantic mass raids before the cry of "kamerad" begins to be heard in Naziland. So London is rapidly preparing for the event. Super-shelters are being built throughout the metropolis. In this view of one shelter, named for famed Admiral Drake, an attendant pulls down the folding spring mattresses of one of the three-tier bunks. Three of these shelters are now ready, each to accommodate more than 20,000 persons.

Water and Transportation Problems Face MacArthur Defending Australia

Water and transportation are the two chief problems that face General MacArthur of he has to defend Australia against a Jap invasion which it's most reasonable to expect will be made via Port Moresby to North Queensland and thrust down to New South Wales.

So said Flight Lieutenant A. C. Hinton, R.C.A.F. of No. 5 I.T.S., who served in the Australian Army during the last war and spent many years on that continent as a stockman, to the Belleville Rotary Club in an informative address Monday.

The transportation problem is made difficult, he said, due to the fact that every state in the Commonwealth has railways of different guages, which necessitate a constant change of trains.

For several months of the year there is no water in the northern part of Australia except when the monsoonial rains come the riverbeds are great dry fissures. MacArthur's problem will be to get water for his troops.

Referring to the Japanese method of invasion, Flt. Lieut. Hinton stated that only boats of shallow draft can negotiate the waters inside the Great Barrier on Reefs off the eastern edge of the continent. Larger ships can enter only at the northern tip near Cape York or the southern extremity. He did not believe the Japanese would attempt any invasion through the Gulf of Carpentaria.

Lots of Food

If the Japs take Australia they will capture enough food to supply the Axis nations for several years. Outside of some South American countries, the Pacific continent is the most densely populated country in the world as far as cattle and sheep are concerned. Stations, as ranches there are called, have no less than 250,000 head of cattle while sheep farms herd between 300,000 and 400,000 head of sheep.

The continent is thinly populated otherwise. The aborigines, or blacks are of low mentality and intellect. "The black boy is a good tracker, but otherwise would be of little use as friend of enemy", he said.

The main Japanese threat will come through Port Moresby, and that is why the invaders are making such determined efforts to capture that important point, the speaker said. Air facilities could be established there and it is only one day's sail from Cape York and the islands off the northwestern tip of the continent where the Japs could infiltrate without much opposition.

Must Hold North Queensland

MacArthur's problem is to hold North Queensland. The lifeline of the Allies runs just south of the island continent and if the Japs took the Solomons, New Guinea and Queensland they could easily destroy this lifeline.

He paid tribute to the Australian military leaders under MacArthur, Lieut. General Sir Thomas Blamey and Major General Clowes, both men of proven ability.

Tremendous Rainfall

During the monsoonial rains, he said, the rain falls at the rate of twelve inches in one hour. It rises sometimes to a depth of three feet and remains until it flows into the riverbeds and water holes. For two months the country is almost totally impassable.

It is Spring now in Australia and it is reasonable to expect a strong Japanese thrust through Port Moresby, thence by small shallow boats to North Queensland down to New South Wales.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian "Mac" McLean and club thanks expressed by Rotarian Jack Hartwick. Among the guests were airmen from New Zealand and Australia. President Lloyd [illegible] in the chair.

Canadian Airman Displays Great Courage in Rescuing Trapped Gunner

(By ALLAN NICKLESTON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 22.—(CP Cable)—Flt.-Sgt. R. F. Jenner of Ottawa rescued the trapped rear-gunner of a blazing Stirling bomber after two crewmates had sacrificed their lives in the attempt.

A mid-upper gunner Jenner was the only Canadian in the crew of the crippled bomber returning from a big raid on Germany which crash-landed after crossing the English coast.

Defying the fast-racing flames, he clawed through a break in the fuselage and dragged the injured gunner to safety after the front gunner and the flight engineer were killed when gasoline tanks exploded as they sought to reach the rear turret through the interior of the blazing plane.

The crew's squadron commanding officer described the action as "an outstanding example of the highest courage and determination on the part of the captain and crew and proof of the team spirit which their captain had instilled into the crew".

Hit by flak after unloading its bombs, the plane's starboard gasoline tank was holed and the port oil lines severed. The port inner propeller flew off and crashed into the mid-upper turret. A few minutes later the port outer engine fell off, leaving two starboard engines, one of them crippled, to keep the sky monster flying.

The engines were nursed and every moveable object was jettisoned when the plane at one time was down to 150 feet near the coast of Holland. Both pilot and wireless operator were required to handle the rudder-bar and control column. As the plane crossed the English coast the starboard rear engine cut out. The pilot and wireless operator were knocked unconscious in the crash-landing and were pulled clear by the navigator. As the plane took fire the crew counted noses and discovered the rear-gunner was trapped in the turret. The two then went in to attempt rescue, followed by Jenner.

Ontario Leaving Racing in Hands Of Commission

Premier Says Province Will Not Become an Appeal Court

FAIR CASE REVIEWED

Toronto, Sept. 22 (CP)—Premier Mitchell Hepburn said here last night the Province of Ontario "is not entertaining any thought of becoming an appeal court for disgrunted race-horse owners," and has no intention of trying to take control of Ontario's racing out of the hands of the Incorporated Canadian Racing Association.

(Ten days ago, Harry C. Nixon, Provincial Secretary, protested in a statement against the suspension given owner James Fair, of Cainsville, by the I.C.R.A. Mr. Nixon called the suspension "unjust," and intimated the government might use its powers to establish an appeal court to rule on decisions made by the I.C.R.A.)

Mr. Hepburn made it clear his government will not interfere with the administration of racing in this province.

He said:

"As far as the controversy in racing circles in regard to the specific case of Jim Fair and his horse, McMark is concerned, I want this distinctly understood—I have nothing to say for or against the I.C.R.A., but they are the governing body of racing, and any reforms or any appeals or redress in any case must be handled through that body.

"Certainly the Province of Ontraio is not entertaining any thought of becoming an appeal court for disgruntled race-horse owners."

(Fair was suspended by the I.C.R.A. July 4, after McMark, which last year won more races than any other Canadian-bred horse, had performed inconsistently.

(Fair's entire string of thoroughbreds was ruled off, though he was permitted to transfer all of them—except McMark—to another trainer. He was denied the privileges of I.C.R.A. tracks for 30 days, after which he was reinstated and once again took charge of his horses. However, McMark's suspension was continued, and the horse still is unable to race on tracks under I.C.R.A jurisdiction.)

RUSSIA IN LAST WAR

Russia had the most casualties in the First Great War, more than 9,000,000 killed, wounded and missing.

How To Wreck An Oil Well

Ever since the Nazis started streaking like fire towards Russia's oilfields, observers have wondered: How do you wreck an oil well?

An oil well is a deep, narrow, steel lined hole in the ground. To destroy a well permanently, the steel casing must be damaged beyond repair, the shaft hopelessly plugged, or the oil supply itself dissipated. Anything else is temporary — fires can be put out, pumps and surface apparatus replaced.

There are a number of techniques for doing these things, each of which has its disadvantages.

Drowning is slowest, most effective, most difficult. Mud and water forced down the well shaft under great pressure clog the subterranean oil channels, back the oil right into the rock formations.

Dynamiting is quickest, most tricky. A properly placed charge will warp, rip and twist the steel casing, letting in water and sand. Improperly placed, the charge will waste its strength by blowing up and down the well shaft.

Hard - set reinforced concrete makes the best plug — a two-inch steel pipe lowered into the hole, and packed inside and out with cement. But concrete that is not reinforced can be drilled out like the filling of an old tooth.

Junk, old tools and scrap dropped down the hole is an old-fashioned strictly improvised method. Fishing out broken equipment is one of the mudcat's arts — a timetaker, but not too difficult.

Each of these methods may ruin an oil well for months. In most cases, the quickest way to reopen a thoroughly demolished well is to bore another shaft right beside the old one. This is a matter of weeks or months, depending on the toughness of the bedrock and depth of the oil. In the Russian fields, the bedrock is generally soft, the oil not far (often less than 1,000 feet) below the surface. — From the Magazine "Time."

Berlin Radio Directs Attack At Sweden for Communist Activity

New York, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Berlin propagandists who have called Sweden "the Communist Centre of Europe" in an increasingly violent anti-Swedish campaign aimed a sharp new attack at that Scandinavian neutral today following Sunday's Stockholm City Council election in which Communists registered the greatest gain. The Communists won nine of the 100 seats—a gain of six.

Declaring that the election results had been foreseen in Berlin "for some time", the German radio asserted Communist activity in Sweden "will have to be carefully watched by European powers fighting against the common Bolshevist enemy . . ."

In the midst of the German attacks the Swedes have been going ahead with extensive defence preparations including anti-landing manoeuvres along the southern coast, across the Baltic from Germany.

The biggest air manoeuvre ever held in Sweden have been held during the summer over the central and western part of the country, which borders on Nazi-occupied Norway, and 55,000 men have been called up for next month to boost the country's military strength to 600,000 men.

Whether all these preparations are being made in anticipation of German attack has not been explained by Stockholm, but they do reflect the feeling of the Swedish government that such a development cannot be overlooked.

Neither is it clear that Hitler would gain by attacking the last remaining neutral in Scandinavia for he has the country isolated from the rest of the world and is getting nearly all its highgrade iron ore.

Thus the situation narrows down to one thing—the possibility that the Allies might open a second front in Norway. In that event Sweden would be of tremendous strategic value to Germany.

Irishman Out of Work Packs Bag for England

Irish neutrality is neutrality with a difference. There are 150,000 Irishmen in the British forces — more in proportion than Northern Ireland's contribution, as any Irishmen will tell you—and a quarter of a million Irish workers in Britain's war factories.

There are no British uniforms, of course, in Irish streets, but walk through Dublin and it seems that every second woman you see has R.A.F. wings or a British regimental brooch in her buttonhole. There are villages all over the country in which every family has a man away at the war.

There is little about Fogarty Fegen and the other Irish V.C.'s or about Paddy Finucane in the Irish newspapers, but there is any amount of talk about them in Irish pubs.

It is the wartime censorship that sees to it that newspapers referring to Irish heroes omit to mention that they are Irish, but it is the same censorship that allows every newspaper to print the B.B.C. programs and forbide them to print the German broadcasts to Eire.

Anything that obtained before the war is allowed now," the Germans are told. "Neutrality will not allow of innovations." That is why there is a British air service to Dublin and an American to Foynes and no German air service at all, though one was asked for.

The bookshops are full of books about Britain's case and Britain's war effort. The Irish newspapers are served by the British agencies, and the English newspapers are sold in the streets of Dublin every day. Ask an Irishman if this is what he calls neutrality and he says: "But the Germans can send their books and newspapers if they like," and then he grins and says: "But they never seem to get here, and even if they did it's a pity but we can't read German."

The same man will assure you that he will defend Irish soil by force of arms against any invader but he will discuss Libya and the Caucasus in terms of "we're doing well," or "we're doing badly."

There is no real belief in the likelihood of an invasion from Northern Ireland, except as a welcome counterstroke to a German invasion of the South. If the Americans did cross the border without such excuse — and the hypothesis is as academic as could be — public feeling would be lukewarm. But the army would necessarily resist, and bloodshed might well stir up Irish feeling. If the Germans invaded, the Americans would be taken in as Allies.

The tiny anti-British element in Ireland (anti-British rather than pro-German, for the anti-British tradition is a tradition of freedom) has had no success in fostering the lingering doubts about Anglo-American intentions. Such doubts as there are would have been dispelled completely if the United States had not been so cavalier in its rejection of an Irish request for the sale of arms. Britain not so half-hearted in acceding. If Britain armed the Irish Army it would show that she could be trusted and that she trusted in the Irish promise that Eire would never be used as a base against Britain.

The army is 100,000 strong in regulars and reserves and is backed by 150,000 men in formations similar to our Home Guard, the heirs of a magnificent guerrilla tradition. The Irish argument is that Britain could spare arms for an army of this size and help to protect her own flank in doing so.

It is to Britain rather than to the United States that Eire looks for this and other kinds of help. The traditional links with America are weaker than they were. The United States — and its Irish population — is more openly impatient with Irish neutrality than Britain is, and the family ties are looser, largely because of the United States immigration restrictions of the last fifteen years or so.

But relations with Britain are better, possibly, than they have ever been. Neutrality is tempered by the fact that an Irishman out of work packs his bag for England; the best part of half a million have already done so.

Miracuously Britain's diplomatic representatives in Dublin have been chosen with imagination and good sense. Sir John Maffey, the United Kingdom representative (Anglo-Irish constitutional relations are so anomalous and ill-defined that Britain cannot have a High Commissioner in Dublin, like Canada, or a Minister, like the United States), is tactful and symathletic, a lover of Eire and the Irish, and immensely popular. So is his staff.

The only pinpricks are the arms question and the feeling that Britain could do something to raise Eire's half an ounce of tea a week to Britain's two ounces. The disparity means a lot to the heartiest tea-drinkers outside Australia. — From the Manchester Guardian.

"I'LL TELL YOU ALL ABOUT IT WHEN I SEE YOU"
It's as easy as that to make your telephone talks briefer

Please think before you telephone: "Do I have to make this call?"

And whenever you are on the telephone, ask yourself: "Am I keeping this talk as brief as I can?"

Yes, it will be hard at first to limit your telephone time to a fraction of what it used to be. But the war is changing a lot of habits . . . and the high-speed tempo of war business has put a heavy load on telephone equipment which cannot be further expanded.

The situation is sure to grow more urgent. You can help by confining yourself to essential calls . . . and by making them brief.

LARGE CONVOY REACHES NORTH RUSSIAN PORTS

BRITISH STRIKE 500 MILES BEHIND AXIS FRONT

Three Vital Enemy Points in Oasis Heavily Raided

Most Spectacular Large-Scale Raid In Whole War On Mediterranean Front

SIX-DAY BATTLE

(By STEPHEN BARBER)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Cairo, Sept. 23 (AP)—Daring British raids 500 miles behind the Axis' Egyptian line on three vital enemy points—the big supply port of Bengasi, the nearby coastal air site of Barce and the outpost garrison at the Gialo Oasis deep in the desert —were announced by British headquarters today.

Announcement of the most spectacular large-scale land raiding in the whole war on the Mediterranean front, in which British headquarters said heavy blows were dealt enemy forces, supplies and planes, came only after the Italians yesterday had acknowledged a six-day battle at the Gialo Oasis.

Only One Phase

The disclosure of these rapid-fire land patrol operations showed that even the land-sea-air raid on Tobruk the night of September 13th. was only one phase of a series of sweeping incursions into enemy territory far west of the El Alamein line.

With British and United States air forces heavily bombing both Bengasi and Tobruk in diversion attacks, the desert raiders struck Bengasi on the same night, September 13, that other forces were landed at Tobruk.

Although they began ten days ago, the Bengasi-Barce raids were a tightly-held secret until now, after the patrols have returned to their bases.

Gialo, a remote outpost about 235 miles due south of Bengasi and 500 miles southwest of the El Alamein-Qattara battle line in Egypt, was attacked on the night of September 15th.

Bengasi and Barce were attacked two nights before—the same night as the big commando raid on Tobruk, some 220 miles to the east of Bengasi

Back at Bases

The communique said the British desert patrols which carried out the raids now have arrived back at their bases It listed these accomplishments:

At Gialo—"considerable casualties" inflicted on the enemy garrison and dumps of ammunition and supplies destroyed by artillery fire.

At Bengasi and Barce—More than 30 aircraft damaged or destroyed on the ground and several others "shot down while attacking our troops"; heavy casualties inflicted on "enemy personnel and motor transport."

No Details Given

(The communique did not tell how the British forces were able to get so far behind the enemy's lines, but informed sources in London said the heavy damage mentioned in the communique indicated the Axis was caught completely off guard.

(The British authorities called the attackers "desert forces", but the fact that the Bengasi-Barce assault coincided with the big commando raid on Tobruk suggested that the desert patrols might have been ferried by sea to landings in the vicinity of the enemy ports and begun their forays from there, swinging in a vast arc southward to the Gialo Oasis and eastward by desert to their starting bases.

(This also was suggested by the 48-hour interval between the night attack September 13 on Bengasi and Barce and the assault on Gialo the

D.S.O. AWARDED EARL JELLICOE

Son of Admiral of First Great War is Commando Captain

London, Sept. 23 (CP)—The Distinguished Service Order has been awarded to Earl Jellicoe, 24 year old son of the Admiral of the First Great War, who has been serving as a commando captain in Egypt, it was announced today.

The Earl's mother, Countess Jellicoe, said she had received a telegram from him saying "Am the surprised recipient of an undeserved D.S.O."

The younger Earl Jellicoe, a godson of the late King George V, was born April 4, 1918, and formerly was a lieutenant in the Coldstream Guards. His father, the late Admiral of the Fleet Earl Jellicoe, was commander-in-chief of the Grand Fleet from 1914 to 1916 and director British operations at the battle of Jutland, May 31, 1916.

Italian Sub Gunners Poor Marksmen

Washington, Sept. 23 —(AP)—The Navy Department announced today that a medium-sized United States merchant vessel was torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine several hundred miles off the northern coast of South America in the Atlantic about mid-August. Survivors have been landed at an east coast port of the United States.

Gunners on an Italian submarine had such poor aim that the submarine was finally forced to expend a valuable torpedo to send the ship to the bottom, the navy disclosed.

One survivor said that the submarine closed to short range and unsuccessfully tried to shell their vessel. Half of the shells went wild.

Drivers Nonchalant in Carrying Bombs To Planes For Night Trip to Germany

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, Sept. 23 —(CP)— A tractor rumbled along the perimeter track pulling enough high explosive to blow this whole bomber group where Canadians are serving to kingdom come.

But so far as Julian Scheelar was concerned he might just as well have had a gang plow hooked on to his chugging chariot instead of two 4,000-pound bombs. The technique is the same.

Julian is an AC. He used to drive a tractor on his dad's farm near Strome, Alto. He says it is just the same driving a tractor over here but if you think of it particularly there may be a bit more thrill in lugging 8,000 pounds of high explosive than a farm implement.

Young Mr. Scheelar—he's 23—is one of hundreds of ground men who keep the R.C.A.F. in the air. He came to this Canadian bomber squadron last Christmas. He drives these tractors for the trains of under-slung bomb cars or fuel tanks or anything with four wheels for that matter.

The two carloads of bombs he had behind him on this trip were due to go to Saarbrucken some time after nightfall. Two of those big ones make a complete train. They rest on little four-wheeled flat-cars equipped with heavy balloon tires and plenty of springs. Nobody would want to jar those big ellows too much.

Can Handle Two-Tonners

Scheelar stood up behind the wheel of his tractor and shouted above the noise of the engine—"I'm looking for 'H for Harry.'" It isn't every bomber that can handle a two-ton bomb but "H for Harry" can. Some other bombers can do a good deal better than that.

The Alberta farm boy wheeled his tractor over to a Wellington with a big "H" on it, manoeuvred past a pool of water and dropped off one car of his "destruction special." A Royal Air Force sergeant pilot welcomed this portion of Julian's cargo with a smile. He slapped its metal sides and said, "here it is; this is my baggage for tonight."

Then Scheelar revved up his tractor motor again. You got the idea he'd just taken a big hand in helping deliver something special to somewhere in Germany. He left bomb No. 1 out there in the sun for the bombing-up armorers to load into the Wimpey, and headed on for another plane. He seemed glad to have company riding along with him.

"Those are some babies, eh?" he looked back at the bomb.

"There's something big on tonight. We're pretty busy. I'm down for a lot more trips to the bomb dump but this is the last of these. The others are smaller."

Coming out of the dispersal point and on to the perimeter track again a Halifax bomber was coming in from a test flight. Julian stopped his train. He laughed and said, "No siree, I won't argue with them—even with 4,000 pounds of 'stuff' I give them priority."

NAZIS CAPTURE SEVERAL STREETS IN STALINGRAD

Street Booths and Overturned Cars Used As Firing Points By Russians

30TH DAY OF SIEGE

(By HENRY C. CASSIDY)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Sept. 23 (AP) — Under terrific, co-ordinated attack of massed tanks and waves of dive-bombers, the Russians yielded several more streets in one section of Stalingrad today, but beat off the Germans in hand-to-hand battles elsewhere in the city where the invaders were said to have paid a toll of almost 6,000 men in three days for gains measured in yards.

Battlefront dispatches said Red army forces which crossed the surging Volga under cover of darkness fell upon one flank of the German penetration of the devastated city and drove them from their positions. An important road was reported recaptured in house-to-house fighting in another sector, while southwest of the city the Russians were said to have retaken a village.

Pravda said the sky over the city was a cloud-flecked battlefield with the Nazis making more than 1,000 bombing flights in a single day against reinforced Soviet fighter plane defences.

Tanks Hurled in Hundreds

Tanks brought up to bolster Hitler's desperate bid for a September victory on the Volga were declared hurled at the defenders of the city in massed hundreds.

In a single sector attacking infantrymen were reported led by more than 100 tanks—perhaps the greatest armored shock force ever used in street fighting.

Recounting the price the Nazis paid for their limited gains, the Russians mid-day communique said more than 1,000 Germans were killed in fierce fighting northwest of the city; 400 more in the northern part of Stalingrad and two companies of perhaps 300 men wiped out elsewhere in the city areas by Russian tanks.

The midnight communique said more than 3,000 Germans had been killed or wounded in the preceding two days northwest of the city alone, with 300 slain in another single salient and a battalion of about 600 men wiped out south of the city.

The 30th. day of the siege brought fresh squadrons of dive-bombers in-

Buna-Kokoda Trail Heavily Strafed By Allied Airmen

34,000 Rounds Of Ammunition Poured Into Japanese And War Installations

BRIDGES DESTROYED

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Sept. 23. (CP)—Allied fighter planes swarmed down the Buna-Kokoda trail in New Guinea yesterday, pouring more than 34,000 rounds of ammunition into the Japanese and their war installations in a growing aerial offensive in the Southwest Pacific.

Fighters and bombers, in a series of attacks over New Guinea, New Britain and the northern tip of the Solomons, carried out the most extensive sweeps since start of warfare on New Guinea, today's communique indicated.

Roaring up and down the track between Buna and Kokoda over which the Japanese supply their forces in the Owen Stanley Mountains, the fighters set fire to fuel and ammunition dumps, a warehouse and huts used by the Japanese, the communique said. The Wairope Bridge over the Kumusi River, bombed the day before, again was hit hard.

At the Buna end of the trail on the northeast coast of New Guinea, three motor launches and a barge were left in flames, an anti-aircraft position was silenced and Japanese ground troops suffered casualties. Medium bombers followed up the attack last night with a raid on airdrome installations.

Many Fires Started

At Kokoda the fighters poured cannon and machine-gun fire into the Japanese positions, starting fires and silencing an anti-aircraft post, the communique said.

Ranging out over the Coral Sea bombers attacked the Japanese airdome at Buka, on the northern tip of the Solomon Islands, starting large fires and explosions. Returning airmen said they could see the fires from a distance of fifty miles.

CONSERVATIVES MOVE TO GAIN NEW SUPPORT

Convention Call by Sir Arthur Meighen Will Clarify Party Position

NO PLACE SET

(By FRANK FLAHERTY)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 23. (CP)—Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen's action in moving for the assembly of a National Conservative convention is regarded in political circles as a move to clarify the position of the party and draw to it new support from elements which were not formerly Conservative but which share the Party's views on all-out prosecution of the war.

Indications are the gathering will take place in Winnipeg about the end of November. No decision on the time and place has yet been reached but Party circles believe the interim committee designated by Mr. Meighen to meet in Ottawa Friday will find that time and place more convenient.

If such a decision is reached the Party stalwarts will meet in Winnipeg approximately 15 years after the last Conservative convention there which selected the present Lord Bennett as leader and which was a forerunner to its victory in the 1930 election.

In a statement at Toronto last night, Mr. Meighen announced arrangements are being made for the national convention. The statement said it would be held at "an early date" and that "the whole

3 WELL KNOWN ATHLETES ENLIST IN R.C.A.F.

Winnipeg, Sept. 23 (CP)—Royal Canadian Air Force recruiting officials announced today the enlistment of three well known Winnipeg athletes—Bobby Kirk, Bob McCance and Danny Stack .

Kirk is a professional hockey player, formerly with New York Rangers of the National Hockey League; McCance was a star basketballer with Winnipeg St. Andrew's team, many times Manitoba champions, and Stack is a prominent speed skater, who has enlisted for air crew duty. The other two have enlisted for ground duty.

CARD 30 YEARS LATE 'TWO CENTS DUE'

Hamilton, Sept. 23 — (CP) — Thirty years ago Arthur V. Gillies of Hamilton, was holidaying in Walkerton, Ont., and he sent a postcard to the mother of his chum here. Today the postcard reached Hamilton — 30 years late — and marked "two cents due."

Happy to receive the message from the boyhood friend of her son, Mrs. Agnes Stevenson to whom the postcard had been mailed, paid the two cents and accepted the card.

Madagascar Capital Occupied Radio Announces

London, Sept. 23 (CP)—British troops who fought their way through stiffened Vichy French resistance 15 miles north of Tananarive have occupied the city, inland capital of Madagascar, a broadcast from there reported tonight.

Only a short time before, another Tananarive broadcast heard at Port Louis on the island of Mauritius said Governor General Armand Annet had sent a message of thanks to his forces for their "courageous" defence of the capital. Yet earlier reports said he had already left the capital for the southern part of the island.

The campaign began a fortnight ago when British forces landed on the west coast for the push inland.

Until they were within cannon shot of the capital they encountered little resistance except for road obstruction and bridge demolition.

The Vichy French troops immediately north of the capital had taken their stand in positions supported by artillery, a British army communique said.

The forces approaching Tananarive from Brickaville on the east coast also have made good progress along the road and railway leading to the capital, the communique said.

It said the British troops now approaching the outskirts of the capital from the north encountered Vichy French troops in positions supported by artillery about fifteen miles from the city.

This resistance was overcome, the communique said, when British forces took their last objective at Mahitsy Village.

Meanwhile, another British column advancing down the northwest coast made contact at Antsohihy with a column sent north, putting 300 miles of highway between Diego Suarez and Majunga in British hands. Majunga is the port on the northwest coast where the main British landing forces went ashore. Diego Suarez is the naval base at the northern end of the island that was occupied last May.

Claims Sub Can Lie On River Bottom For Year if Necessary

Philadelphia, Sept. 23 —(AP)—Simon Lake, designer who built the world's first big submarine, says enemy submarines soon will penetrate the East River in New York, torpedo docks and shipping and "lie unseen on the river bed for months —if necessary—until they can get away." He told a luncheon club yesterday that he knows "of a secret process for manufacturing air by which the ships could remain submerged for a year and not even impair the crew's health."

SEARCH GOES ON FOR BODIES OF 22 OUT OF 25 DROWNED

'More Would Have Been Saved if They Had Kept Their Head" Says Survivor

INQUEST OPENED

Midland, Ont., Sept. 23 —(CP)—Search continued today for the bodies of 22 of the 25 men who lost their lives Monday night when the motor launch Wa-Wi-Net sank in Georgian Bay, while police and provincial government officials sought to piece together the story of the accident from 17 men who survived.

"If they had kept their heads, more would have been saved," said 32-year-old Henry Lavigne of Midland, one of the men on board the 75-foot ship "when it went down like a stone."

An inquest into the drownings was opened yesterday by Deputy Attorney-General Cecil Snyder, who was sent here with Dr. Smirle Lawson, supervising coroner for Ontario and Prof. W. L. Robinson, provincial pathologist on orders of Attorney-General Gordon Conant. The hearing was adjourned until Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock.

"We are insisting upon a thorough and exhaustive investigation," said Mr. Conant at Toronto. "It is simply shocking that such a tragedy should occur and if there is any fault, or if there has been neglect or lack of precautions we are going to find out."

(A transport Department spokesman said at Ottawa last night that a federal investigation in the sinking of the motor launch is being carried out by the Steamships Inspection Board of the Department's Marine Division but no report on the tragedy has been received by authorities as yet.)

Can't Even Pay People to Move Says Agent

Ottawa, Sept. 23 (CP)—You can't even pay people to move in this crowded capital, says I. L. Arron, real estate agent and apartment owner.

He offered a group of tenants as high as $600 each to get out of their apartments but found few takers.

Mr. Arron has a cash offer from the Russian government for an apartment building which the Russians would like to have for their new Ottawa legation. They want to occupy it now and cannot wait until the existing leases run out.

But the tenants won't get out—not even for $600, says Mr. Arron.

A roof over your head in Ottawa is worth more than that, they say.

DEMONSTRATIONS IN FRANCE

New York, Sept. 23.—(CP) — BBC said today that in four French cities public demonstrations took place against head-of-government Laval's compulsory dispatch of French workers to Germany.

Mass arrests were reported made in Toulouse, Narbonne, Montpellier, Marseille, Nice, Lyons and other cities.

Daily Sabotage in Netherlands Inspired By Hopes of Eventual Invasion

Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 23 (AP) —Bitterness against the German conquerors is increasing in The Netherlands and, heartened by hopes of an eventual Allied invasion, the people are committing almost daily acts of sabotage, a correspondent of the Basler National Zeitung wrote today.

German road signs are destroyed, tires on German cars are slashed, trains of war supplies and food for Germany have been derailed and telephone lines have been cut. Bombing attacks have been carried out against German officers and soldiers who venture singly into the blacked-out streets at night.

Many workers have been taken to Germany to work under strict supervision and in cities there is scarcely a young worker to be seen. In addition, the Nazis in their reprisals have arrested a thousand hostages, including writers, scientists and officials, who have been sent to Germany.

Large Quantities Of War Material To Aid Russia

Most of Merchant Ships Reach Port Though Losses Are Suffered

ALL WARSHIPS SAFE

London, Sept. 23 (CP) — The Admiralty announced late today that an important convoy carrying large quantities of war material has arrived in north Russian ports.

The majority of the ships reached their destinations although losses were suffered.

The ships were heavily attacked by German planes and submarines, the Admiralty said.

None of the escorting warships were lost.

The convoy included British, American and Russian ships.

Nazis Claims More Exaggerated

The Admiralty, declining to say how many ships were lost, stated, however, that German claims "on this occasion have been more exaggerated than usual" and "a great majority" of the ships arrived at their destinations.

The German high command asserted Sunday that Nazi submarines and planes had smashed a great Russian-bound convoy in Arctic waters, sinking 38 merchant ships totalling 270,000 tons and destroying or damaging six warships in a running battle lasting six days.

With the fanfare of trumpets usually reserved for announcing great achievements, the Berlin radio broadcast a high command claim that only battered remnants of an original 45 freighters and tankers had escaped.

It said this represented a second triumph for the Germans on the northern convoy route, recalling previous unconfirmed Nazi claims that 35 ships in a convoy of 38 had been sunk in the same waters between July 2 and 7.

Seize Jap Bank Notes

Sydney, Sept. 23 (CP)— Seizure of a large number of bank notes printed in Japan for use in an invasion of Australia was announced by military authorities today.

The notes, captured during recent operations were described as similar to others issued in countries which the enemy has overrun. (The notes may have been seized during the Milne Bay fighting, in southeastern New Guinea, where a Japanese force was wiped out.)

STEINHARDT TO COME HOME

Ankara, Turkey, Sept. 22 (Delayed)—(AP)—United States Ambassador Laurence A. Steinhardt announced today that he expected to leave Turkey this weekend for the United States.

After a few weeks of conferences with President Roosevelt and the State Department he plans to return to Ankara.

HITLER IN CONFERENCE WITH RUMANIAN PREMIER

Berlin, (From German Broadcasts), Sept. 23 (AP)—Hitler conferred today with Mihai Antonescu, acting Premier of Rumania, and a DNB report said they "dealt with all pending problems."

(Germany recently has been calling for more Rumanian troops to go to Russia.)

Daily Mail Pans Dreiser for His Offensive Remarks

London, Sept 23 (C.P. Cable) —The Daily Mail, in an open letter to Theodore Dreiser, banned from speaking in Canada, declared today that the "half-baked isolationism you are still crying is now dead and damned."

The front-page article, 600 words long, was headed: "The Poison Tongue of Mr. Drieser." It was written by The Mail's special staff writer, George Murray.

"We in this country are glad to hear you face a Federal inquiry into certain statements about Britain and her leaders which you are reported to have made in Toronto," the letter said.

"It shows what your countrymen think of you. The anger you have aroused among the American public also shows that though you may have had a hearing, the half-baked isolationism you are still crying is now dead and damned.

"You are, of course, an eminent novelist. It is only that fact that gives your statements any sort of interest. You specialise in morbid psychological studies of human character.

"I suggest your next analysis should be into the queer mentality of Mr. Drieser.

Guilty of Lying

"Finally, Mr. Drieser, you were guilty, say reports, of this unpardonable lie:

"Mr. Churchill has no intention of opening a second front. He is afraid the Communists will rule the world, so he does nothing except send thousands of Canucks to slaughter at Dieppe. He didn't send any English, as far as I know."

"I shouldn't say too much about that to the Canadians if I were you. Dieppe was primarily a Canadian show and magnificently they performed it. But they are not so ignorant as you about the part British commandos, the navy, the R.A.F. and the contingents of United States Rangers and Fighting French troops.

Glad He Was Banned

"After the poisoned words you have spoken it is good to hear that Canada has banned you from speaking and that you are not likely ever to step into another lecture platform in your own country.

The letter concluded: "Your most famous novel, Mr. Drieser, is 'An American Tragedy.' What a tragedy it would be for America if you and other oddities who think like you were to have their way."

No reports have been published in the United States regarding any Federal inquiry into Drieser's statements in a Toronto interview, nor has there been published any report that he may never be allowed to speak from any U. S. platform.

A spokesman for the Canadian justice department said Monday that an order had been issued banning Drieser from making any public statements or speeches in Canada after complaints had been received covering anti-British statements made by the novelist in the interview.

Drieser's remarks were called to the attention of Justice Minister St. Laurent by Attorney General Gordon Conant of Ontario "for investigation . . . with a view to prosecution" under the Defence of Canada Regulations.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

I.T.S. TO HOLD ROUTE MARCH THURS.

The entire personnel of No. 5 Initial Training School will be seen on a route march through the streets of the city shortly after noon on Thursday, it was announced this morning by station officials.

Leaving the training centre at approximately 1:30, the airmen will march down Highland Avenue and Bridge Street to Front and Pinnacle Streets. Then the route will turn north on Pinnacle to Station, south on Front to Bridge Street and along Coleman to Dundas Street back to the station. The parade will be under the direction of Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger, Officer Commanding the station.

AIRMEN APPRECIATE ARTICLES DONATED

Residents of Belleville and district have responded generously to the appeal asking for comforts for recreation rooms at No. 5 Initial Training School and officials of the station have expressed their appreciation for the articles received. There is still, however, a need for rugs to cover the floors and for a billiard table to provide amusement for the boys in their leisure hours.

Anyone who can spare such equipment or has rugs or a billiard table not in use, would be making a generous gesture in offering them for the use of the boys at the training school. All such articles will be returned to their owners in good condition after the war.

FAILURE TO PRODUCE REGISTRATION CARD IS CHARGE LAID

.. Belleville police are holding a transient, who gave his name as F. Shaver and claimed carnival employment on a nominal charge of failing to produce a National Registration card. Shaver was arrested on Bridge Street late last night by Constables Arnott and Wright following complaints from a woman stating she had been molested in her home.

The investigation came after Mrs. Claude Finnegan, 16 Earl Street, reported to police a strange man had entered her home and attacked her. Mrs. Finnegan was engaged painting the floor in her kitchen, when a man wearing a grey colored top coat and no hat entered the house and tussled with her. Mrs. Finnegan managed to escape and telephone police. From the description given Shaver was later apprehended on West Bridge Street. Upon arrival at the police station however, he denied the charge, but was subsequently booked on a charge of failing to produce a National Registration card and held in custody.

Military Display Was Finest Seen By Frank Conklin

An outstanding tribute to the color and efficiency of the units of the armed services of the district was paid last night by Mr. Frank Conklin, of the Conklin's Shows now playing at the Belleville Fair.

"I have travelled from Quebec to the Pacific coast this year," Mr. Conklin said, "and I have yet to see a finer military display, not only in a city the size of Belleville, but in much larger centres as well."

Mr. Conklin was particularly impressed with the demonstration of "Donnan's Commandos." The setting was perfect, in his opinion, and the troops showed evidences of good training. Speaking as one of Canada's leading showmen, Mr. Conklin stated that the commando phase of the military demonstration, was outstanding in its staging as well as its entertainment and informative value.

Locked Steering Wheel Saves Car

A locked steering gear is all that saved Milton Choinard's motor car from being driven miles away from Belleville early today. Mr. Choinard, who resides at 282 1-2 Coleman Street, parked and locked his 1941 model Ford coach and left it facing south in front of his residence late Tuesday night. When he awoke this morning the car was gone.

However, en route to her employment at a nearby factory, Mrs. Choinard later, discovered the vehicle in the ditch along Water Street. It seems the car thieves managed to start the engine, despite the fact the ignition and steering gear were locked. When the robbers attempted to make the righthand turn off Coleman into Water Street, however, the locked steering gear remained secure and made it impossible to negotiate the turn. The car naturally continued in a straight direction and crashed into the ditch, where it was abandoned.

However, the thieves made off with Mr. Choinard's gasoline rationing book and two motor rugs. Police were notified and are investigating.

Jas. McKenzie Heads Cost Accountants Society of Hastings

Mr. James McKenzie was the unanimous choice of the Hastings Society of Cost Accountants for its president at a recent meeting held in the new plant of the Deacon Brothers Limited.

Other officers are —Vice President, Lorne McDougall; 2nd Vice—C. Gillan; Secretary-Treasurer, R. Lennox and Director of Publicity, J. Godwin.

The meeting was preceded by a tour of the Deacon plant under the supervision of John Deacon and Carl Casey. Later Mr. Deacon addressed the accountants giving a highly informative talk on problems of merchandising, purchase of material, personnel, determination of prices and design.

Discussion of the constitution of the Society featured the business part of the meeting. This was finally adopted after minor changes had been made.

Decision as to whether the Society here will become a member of the Canadian Society of Cost Accountants and Industrial Engineers, was left to the incoming executive which will report its findings at the next monthly meeting.

Members of the society were the guests of the Deacon management for refreshments at the conclusion of the meeting.

SURVIVOR

Elmer Shaw, manager of the Midland Foundry who is in hospital following exposure in the sinking of the power yacht Wa-Wi-Net near Honey Harbor, Georgian Bay. The boat capsized in front of the Delawana Inn, about six hours after setting out on a fishing trip. Most of the men were Midland Foundry Co. employees out to celebrate speedy work on a war contract. Bert Corbeau, who is missing, is owner of the yacht.

Return Visits Of Blood Donors Begin This Week

The opportunity to again offer blood at the Belleville Red Cross Blood Donors Clinic will be afforded next week for original donors who attended the clinic three months ago, it was announced this morning by officials. The customary three-month period between donations has now elapsed for the first of the civilian blood donors and cards will be going out this week to all those volunteers.

Officials would expecially appreciate promptness on the part of volunteers if they would notify the clinic at phone number 1,000 should they be unable to keep their appointment for next Tuesday morning.

At a special clinic held last evening 82 members of the personnel of the Trenton Air Station attended the clinic and gave their blood to the Empire's cause. Station doctors under the direction of Wing Commander Noble had charge of the clinic

Developments Expected In Theft of Cornet

City police are conducting an intensive investigation into the theft of a valuable cornet, the property of a member of the Belleville Municipal Band, which was taken while the bandsman was off duty at the fair grounds on Monday.

It was learned today that police are "hot on the trail" of the party involved and developments are expected momentarily.

In the meantime, Municipa Band officials said today, if the instrument is returned to Band Manager Harry Moorman, 224 Pinnacle Street, no further questions will be asked. They advise the person to co-operate with them in this request, and save further embarrassment on the part of all concerned.

SPEECHES BANNED

Theodore Drieser, well known United States author, who has been banned from making any speech or address at any public meeting in Canada by the minister of justice, Hon. Louis St. Laurent, Ottawa, under the Defence of Canada regulations. Certain of Mr. Dreiser's statements to the press in Toronto outraged the people of Toronto. A special meeting of the Toronto police commission was held and the minister of justice asked to take action.

Italian Fleet Will Not Fight Says Lt. Henley

Member of Fleet Air Arm Addresses Kiwanians at Weekly Luncheon

"Britain holds a distinct superiority in sea power in the Mediterranean but is in constant danger as long as the Italian fleet remains intact and every effort has been made to bring this fleet into action," said Lieut. R. S. Henley of the British Fleet Air Arm in speaking to the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday. Mr. Henley served as a Fleet Air Arm airman at the evacuation of Dunkirk, Crete and Greece, and is conversant with the situation in the Middle East but for security reasons was unable to give a full account of all that has transpired in that area since the outbreak of hostilities. He does not believe that air power will win the war but relies on the British Navy to bring victory to the Allied cause. The speaker was introduced by Gordon Barclay and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Harold Carruthers.

Jack Trudeau presided at the luncheon with Bernard Collins as sergeant at arms and Harold Carruthers as song leader, Leo B. Riggs presiding at the piano. A report of the carnival was given the members by the secretary, Bruce Lattimer, and it was shown the net receipts were more than last year and the highest for some years. This money will be appropriated for reducing the building fund of the Blood Donor Clinic now in operation, Anthony Cekota also again gave a comprehensive review of the war.

In opening his address Lieut. Henley told his audience that without sea power "we would have been finished a long time ago." He stated that the U-boat search did not belong to the navy alone and that ships required plenty of air protection or convoys would not get through. It was most necessary that they should. The speaker stated he had flown a great deal over the sea and in describing the evacuation of Dunkirk he stated that it was spectacular but the least easy of all engagements he was in.

Praised Small Boat Owners

He spoke of the coolness of the small boat owners who were pressed into service. He described the sight as horrifying and that across the channel nearly 70 miles away, the heavy pall of smoke could be seen, "Although there were no prearrangements for the evacuation, everything was perfectly orderly and every bit of equipment was destroyed.

Evacuation Described

The evacuation of Greece was next described and Mr. Henley stated this was on smaller scale. "There was a smaller number of troops than at Dunkirk but there was also a fewer number of ships." said Lieut. Henley. "Everything that was capable of being taken off was removed because at that time there was urgent need of equipment." He stated it was a long difficult trip from Athens to Alexandria because of the slowness of the ships used in the evacuation. "Ships are very important in the Mediterranean because it takes so long to replace them and the ones used at Greece were husbanded so that losses would be kept to a minimum," said the speaker. The evacuation of Crete was the most difficult and 30 to 40 per cent of the small ships used were lost in that engagement. He explained that the chief weapon of the Germans was the dive bomber but that Britain had refrained from using them because of the heavy loss in pilot strength.

Reviews Malta's Defence

The defence of Malta was reviewed and Mr. Henley stated that generally the odds were 70 to 80 planes of the Germans to three or four of the British. "We generally went after the leader and the rest became demoralized and then they were 'easy pickings'," said the speaker. He described the loss of the aircraft carrier "Illustrious," which accompanied convoys from "The Gib" to Alexandria. The battle of Matapan was described and there only aerial torpedoes were used. He also stated that when Italian crews were captured there were generally some Germans among them who formed the background. "The Italians," the speaker said, "always wanted to be picked up but the Germans were not so particular." At the close of his address the speaker answered a number of questions that were entirely off the record.

Jesse T. Graves Of Waupoos Is. Found Drowned

A life-long resident of Prince Edward County, 86-year-old Jesse T. Graves, formerly of Picton, was found drowned in a cistern on Waupoos Island late Tuesday. Mr. Graves had been in ill health for some months and was residing with a daughter.

The late J. T. Graves was a carpenter by trade and up until a few months ago had been employed at his trade in Picton. Coroner Dr. D. S. Lighthall, of Picton, visited the scene of the tragedy and after consulting Crown Attorney W. S. Lane it was announced that an inquest was in no way necessary.

McIntyre Hood to Address Organization Meeting For Local Civilian Defence

Mr. McIntyre Hood, Secretary of the Ontario Civilian Defence Committee will speak to the residents of Belleville at the McCarthy theatre next Sunday at a meeting scheduled for the preliminary organization of the Belleville C.D.C. to be headed by Mayor Glencoe Thompson.

The urgency of getting the recently proposed local civilian defence committee into operation to be prepared for any eventuality will be stressed at the meeting and films will be shown depicting the work done by volunteers and air raid precaution workers in London, England, during actual air raids.

In a recent interview with Judge Ian MacDonald, Vice Chairman of the Ontario Civilian Defence Committee, Harold Seldon, of the local O.V.C. was given assurance that Belleville was in a position equal to many other cities of a comparable size in Ontario. Cities have been categorized in accordance with their comparative industrial importance with Belleville being given a "B" rating,

The set-up for a civilian defence committee calls for an auxiliary police force into which picture the Ontario Volunteer Constabulary fits without much additional training. Chief openings for volunteers in the Belleville set-up will be the volunteer auxiliary fire fighting force which will be under the direction of Fire Chief William Lynch.

Some Training Done Already

In the matter of volunteers for first-aid duty, Belleville was well-away it was assured, owing to the fact that much training along this line has already been accomplished in this city. First aid volunteers will be trained under the auspices of the St. John Ambulance Corps and under the direction of the local medical health services.

All volunteers will be required to take a basic training course to be comprised of approximately eight lectures. After a written examination the volunteers will be divided and placed in the branch of the service for which they seem most fitted. The organization will be headed by air raid wardens who will receive thorough training locally.

Protective compensation for all volunteers is provided at no expense to members of civilian defence committees, it has been announced in a recent Order in Council. Thus volunteers are protected should they receive injury during duty.

Officials of the local organization will have to work out their own system of alarms as cities and towns in category "B" are not provided with sirens. There is a shortage of sirens and these have been reserved for larger centres.

Some Equipment Here

Without waiting for the official organization of the local civilian defence unit, headquarters in Toronto have already forwarded equipment for use in Belleville. Yesterday a trailer motor pumper capable of delivering 250 gallons of water per minute through three lines of one and a half inch hose arrived in the city and is now at the fire hall.

The pumper is powered by a four cylinder gasoline motor and is mounted on two rubber-tired wheels, the complete unit being nicely balanced on a steel frame intended to be towed behind a truck or automobile. It is a special pump adopted for air raid precaution work by the provincial organization.

Obituary

ARDEN ISAAC LOSHAW

Frankford — Death came very suddenly to Arden Isaac Loshaw in the Ottawa Military Hospital on Friday, Sept. 18th at the age of 19 years. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Loshaw of Glen Ross. He was born at South Crosby in Frontenac County. Besides his sorrowing parents he leaves five sisters Pearl, Grace, Eleanor, Reta of Glen Ross and Ruth of Peterboro and four brothers John of the Hastings Prince Edward Regiment, Donald of R.C.A., George and Clarence at home. GALE ERNEST DONNELLY
(Rochester)

Following an illness of some duration, Mr. Gale Ernest Donnelly, former resident of Belleville, died in hospital at Rochester, New York, on Sunday, September 19. Word of Mr. Donnelly's death was received by his brother, Mr. Henry Donnelly, Frank Street.

A native of this city Mr. Donnelly was formerly employed by his brother-in-law, the late C. H. Vermilyea at the Oak Hall. He later moved to Rochester where he was employed by the McFarlane Clothing Company, but ill-health recently caused his retirement from active business.

He is survived by his widow, the former Miss Jennie Fleming of Belleville; two sons, Clement of Rochester, and Harold of Buffalo. Two brothers, Henry Donnelly of Belleville and Denmark Donnelly of St. Louis, Missouri.

Interment was made on Tuesday at Mount Hope Cemetery, Rochester.

CHARLES CANCILLA
(Port Hope)

Charles Cancilla died in his 66th year in Port Hope, on Tuesday, September 22, after an illness of several weeks' duration. He was the husband of the former Antonina Domenico and brother-in-law of Frank Domenico of Belleville.

The funeral will take place on Thursday morning, September 24, to the Church of Our Lady of Mercy, Port Hope, where Requiem Mass will be celebrated.

Interment will be in St. James' Cemetery, Belleville, about 11.30 o'clock the same morning.

The late Mr. Cancilla was well known in this city and many friends will regret to learn of his death.

MISS JANE BACKUS
(Formerly of Belleville)

Miss Jane Backus, a former resident of Belleville, died early Tuesday morning, Sept. 22nd., at the home of her sister, Mrs. Harry Baker, in Baldwinville, N.Y., near Syracuse. She was in failing health for some time.

The late Miss Backus was born in Belleville about eighty-four years ago and was a daughter of the late Ald. and Mrs. George Backus. Many years of her life were passed in Belleville and for about thirty years she made her home in Baldwinville, N.Y. During her residence here she attended the Church of St. Thomas. Old friends here will regret to learn of her death.

Surviving her are two sisters, Mrs. Harry Baker, formerly Miss Addie Backus, Baldwinville, N.Y. and Mrs. John Newton, formerly Miss Maud Backus, Belleville; four half sisters, Mrs. E. T. Austin, formerly Miss Florence Backus, Belleville; Mrs. Margaret (Backus) Welsh, Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. Georgina (Backus) Slack, Brockville; Mrs. Pauline (Backus) Edwards, Brockville; one half brother, Mr. Benjamin Backus, Vancouver B.C. Mr. R. A. Backus of this city is a nephew of the deceased.

Interment will be made in Belleville cemetery on Thursday afternoon; the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

WOUNDED

Miss Juanita Pagella, ABOVE, 29-year-old American Ambulance Corps driver and wife of a British army officer was found critically wounded in her bedroom at Tunbridge Wells, England. Friends quoted her as saying she shot herself. Hostel is where the women members of the Ambulance Corps are quarteed. Her husband is serving overseas.

MRS. CAROLINE E. L. DYKES

Mrs. Caroline E. L. Dykes, widow of Phillip Dykes, and mother of Mrs. G. G. Wright, died Tuesday evening, Sept. 22, at Christ Church rectory, 44 Everett Street. She was ill for some time.

The late Mrs. Dykes, who was in her 82nd year, was born in Hope Township, Ontario, and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Culverwell. For many years she resided in Toronto and came to Belleville three days ago to be with her daughter. In religion Mrs. Dykes was a faithful member of the Church of England and attended St. Thomas' Church, Huron Street, Toronto. When age and health permitted she took an active part in church work and was a Past Diocesan Officer of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Church of England in Canada.

Surviving her are one daughter, Mrs. G. G. Wright, Belleville, and one son, Hon. Major P. J. Dykes, Overseas chaplain, Kingston, Jamaica. Her husband died here on August 21, last.

The body was conveyed from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home; Campbell Street, this Wednesday afternoon to Toronto; the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

HILLIARD AIDE
(Hartamere)

Hilliard Aide, residence, Hartsmere, Ontario, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday, Sept. 22, as the result of injuries sustained in a bus-truck collision on Saturday night last on the Picton highway.

The late Mr. Aide was born fifty-one years ago in Raglan Township and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William John Aide. Since July last he was employed by the McFarlane Construction Company on work in Prince Edward County. To his friends his sudden death has brought much regret. In religion he was a member of the Society of Brethren and was well esteemed. Fraternally he was a member of L.O.L. No. 315, Boulter, Ontario.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to marriage was Miss Keitha Miller, Hartamere, Ontario; one daughter, Olive, at home; five sons, Ishmael, MacDonald, Layton, Keith and Byron, all at home; one sister, Mrs. Richard Wannamaker, Port Stewart, Ontario; two brothers, Mr. James Aide, Ireland, Ontario, and Mr. Lawrence Aide, Wesiemkoon Lake, Ontario.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street; the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

THE WAR TODAY

(Associated Press War Analyst)

Little Switzerland has ample cause for her anxiety over the large and increasing number of refugees who are begging admission at her frontiers, for there has been created a problem which Justice Minister Von Steiger warns is endangering the security of the nation.

Apart from the economic strain on the country's limited resources, and the risk of acquiring undesirables, her neutrality might easily be placed in jeopardy. That neutrality is one of Switzerland's greatest treasures, since the independence which she has safeguarded for 6½ centuries is involved. She has no reason to fear the Allies, but a successful German invasion would mean bondage.

As a matter of fact, the Swiss success in maintaining their neutrality is one of the phenomena of the war. Their towering mountains afford them much protection against assault, but because they stand in the heart of trouble those same peaks are exposed to international political blasts from all directions.

There are several reasons why the Swiss have been able thus far to keep out of the conflict, and one of them is that the government has kept a shrewd and level head under exceptionally trying conditions. However, there's a lot more to it than that.

For one thing the Axis powers, and the Allies for that matter, find that Switzerland's neutrality provides them with an excellent listening post. This Alpine republic is one of the world's best radio sets, for into it pours information from the four corners of the earth.

The country is full of the agents of both sides in the war. German secret service men rub elbows with agents from Allied countries, and each spies on the other fellow. Travellers from many countries drift in and out, and leave behind them a trail of information. Of course, it's not surprising that there should be secret agents in Switzerland, for they're everywhere these days. The United States is full of them, as has been amply demonstrated by the alert Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Then Switzerland provides a useful medium through which the Axis can make the money transactions necessary to provide funds for their workers abroad. German money is unacceptable abroad, but Swiss money is good the world over, and this can be secured by the Axis by creating a trade balance in their favor. Such transactions naturally are normal and in accord with neutrality.

Switzerland also provides a grand general post-office for all nations. Undoubtedly Germany and her satellites receive not only information but money and other valuables in the mail. Also, all hands are happy to have the International Red Cross in Switzerland.

Recind Order Against Making Colored Cheese

Ottawa, Sept, 23 (CP)—The Dairy Products Board yesterday rescinded an order issued last April stating that all cheddar cheese manufactured in Ontario and Quebec after May 1 last, which was 14½ ins. in diameter and weighed more than 50 pounds, must be white cheese.

The order means that cheese of any size or color now may be made in Ontario and Quebec.

Announcing this step, the Agriculture Department said production and supply of cheese now was in a more favorable position than last Spring.

night of September 15.

Italians Make Extravagant Claims

(The Italian communique yesterday said that the Gialo garrison had repulsed an attack "by superior mechanized enemy forces" at dawn on September 16th., and that the British forces had withdrawn toward the south only on Monday, six days later, where an Axis motorized column approached, apparently to relieve the garrison.)

Britain's heavy bombers returned for a new air blow on Bengasi yesterday, the communique said, setting two ships on fire with direct hits. Medium and light bombers, in a night attack on the El Daba region September 21, it said, caused a large fire and explosion on an Axis airfield .

Except for artillery exchanges in the southern sector, however, there was little action aground or aloft in the main battle area of Egypt yesterday, the communique said. In the customary night patrolling during the preceding hours of darkness, it reported, British units harried enemy patrols and working parties and brought in a few prisoners.

No Mention of Size

The British communique avoided any mention of the size of the forces engaged in the desert forays, but the Italian declaration that their own Gialo garrison was outnumbered and the heavy losses inflicted on the Axis led to the belief that it was by far the largest patrol ever sent on such a far-reaching expedition across the desert wilderness.

The combined land, sea and air stabs at two Libyan ports, Bengasi and Tobruk, used by the Axis to get supplies across the Mediterranean, were said by one informed source to have complicated the enemy's supply difficulties.

Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's problem in getting men and material to his line on the El Alamein front, this source said, already had been made acute by the loss of heavily-laden ships attacked by planes and submarines and the sinking of many large power barges which moved much of his munitions and equipment to the battle zone.

No Sea-Borne Forces

Although there was no official comment beyond the communique, British sources regarded it as likely that all the British forces went overland to and from their Bengasi-Barce objectives with no participation by sea-borne troops.

These sources said the accomplishment, therefore, was all the more striking since the desert raiders carried their own artillery, even anti-aircraft guns.

Desert tracks invariably lead to oasis—now all Axis-held—and these sources said the coastal objectives presumably were reached only by taking to the open country. They suggested that the patrols scattered into many small units to minimize the danger of being detected from the air.

Rotary Ideals Subject of Talk By Dist. Governor

Trenton (Special)—With an almost hundred percent attendance, and with two new members present, the Rotary club, Monday evening, honored the visit of their recently-elected district governor, George McNab, of Guelph, Ontario. He was introduced as an educationist and a Rotarian of thirty years standing. President Hutchinson reported a previous meeting with local committee heads.

In his address Governor MacNab demonstrated he was a philosopher as well as an educationist. Speaking of the purposes and functioning of Rotary throughout the world, he mentioned the contraction of the world area in terms of human relationship during the recent past, and said that only a few years ago settlers were, in terms of time, farther apart than are the people of the various countries of the world today. He warned men against letting the greater speed of transit and communication increase the tempo of their lives unduly. Already the loss by men of the power to relax has become serious. By taking time "to stand and stare" men can definitely increase their efficiency and their usefulness in life, he said.

"Rotary," he said, "is an intangible thing, but it has great power." Like the bonds of Empire, which are intangible, indestructible and imponderable. Rotary is as a bond of steel. The idealism of the movement bind all its members together in a living chain for good. "Idealism," he stated, "was necessary to the clubs and to men always and everywhere. To have idealism does not mean we must exclude realism; to be realistic does not prevent us from having our ideals. Because we have our feet solidly upon the ground is not a reason why we shouldn't have our heads in the clouds." The idealism of Rotary he described as a very potent world force.

Speaking of the international scope of Rotary, he said, "Rotary has no frontiers," and described the many difficulties which already had been surmounted in Rotary's progress to a development within many countries, and of the good work and great service performed there in bringing together in common understanding people of conflicting political groups and varying religious faiths.

Has Vitality

"Rotary has that vitality which will carry it forward from success to success, from age to age," he asserted. "It brings to its adherents no financial benefits, but it does bring great good to the community and to community life. Rotary operates not in the material realm but in the infinite. Its values are not as the values of the engineer, but are eternal values. Its guidance comes from the music of the still small voice of inner consciousness. Its tasks are not finished; its tasks will never be finished. Rotary must go on. Rotary will go on," he emphasized.

He described the eastern Ontario area was a fruitful district for the further propagation of the Rotary ideals and fellowships.

Earlier in the evening Rotarian Gib Ariz read an interesting letter from the president of the Cairo, Egypt, club, in which was told the spread of Rotary in the Middle East. It narrated of the period when Jews and Arabs were firing upon each other in the Palestine area, that members of both these races sat peacefully around the Rotary table peacefully studying the problems which perplexed and disturbed their races and seeking solution to them. The writer described the Rotary club as their only oasis in that land then frought with conflict and death.

Other bombers visited the Japanese stronghold of Rabaul on New Britain, flying through a curtain of anti-aircraft fire to attack shipping in the harbor which services both the Japanese New Guinea forces and the enemy operations in the Solomons. Two hits were scored amidships on a large vessel.

Jap Cruiser Damaged

A navy communique in Washington, meanwhile, said that navy and marine dive-bombers hit and damaged a Japanese cruiser northwest of Guadalcanal, marine-held island in the Solomons during an attack.

The ground fighting in the Owen Stanley range where Allied troops have checked a Japanese advance 32 miles from Port Moresby was not mentioned in the communique. A spokesman said this meant the general situation was unchanged.

(Meanwhile, at New Delhi, India, United States headquarters announced today that American planes based in India carried out extensive raids on Burma and Japanese positions in Yunnan Province of China in the past week, bombing barracks, towns, rail lines, factories and river shipping.)

SEARCH GOES ON

The bodies of three men were found yesterday, among them Bert Corbeau of Midland, former National Hockey League star defenceman, the owner of the powerful twin-motored pleasure craft. An autopsy was performed on his body by Dr. Robinson, who said death was due to drowning.

The bodies of Mitch Maracle of Penetanguishene and Alvin Scott of Midland also were recovered.

Returning From Party

They were part of a gay party of 42 returning to Midland after celebrating completion of a war contract at the Midland Foundry and Machine Company. All but one were employees of the foundry and Corbeau was an official of the firm.

Elmer Shaw of Toronto and Midland, President of the plant, was saved while J. N. Bicknell, Toronto lawyer and partner in the firm, was drowned. Also drowned was 35-year-old Albert Dix of Toronto, an inspector for the John Ingles Company who went to Midland to look over some war work done at the foundry.

There was no explanation for the sinking, which took a larger toll than any similar accident in the history of the Great Lakes. Only a moderate wind was blowing and the bay water was quiet when the pleasure craft sank suddenly and swiftly shortly after 10 o'clock

Corbeau at Wheel

The party left Penetanguishene at four o'clock, travelled to Minnicog Island and then to Honey Harbor when it foundered.

"I was in the wheel house at the time," said Albert Perrault of Midland. "We were coming straight on the course. She just listed over to one side, I don't know why. We went over to the north side and straightened her up, but she started to settle.

"I and four others (Joseph Parker Orville McClung, Kenneth Lowes and Mort Garrett) hung onto one of the boats and fought our way to shore. I can't swim a stroke."

Perrault said it took them half an hour to go the mile to Beausoleil Island, where all but one of the survivors reached shore.

Piled up to Keep Warm

He was Stewart Cheetham, well-known Ontario hockey player, who swam in the opposite direction to the others when the ship sank and reached Pleasant Island.

Perrault said he and his companions, last of the survivors to reach Beausoleil, had a difficult time reaching land.

"Some of the boys were trying to get on top of the boat (one of two small rowboats towed by the motor launch) and I got mad," he said. "I yelled at them to just put one hand on and swim instead of trying to ride her."

After they reached shore "we threw ourselves in the bush, one on top of another, to keep warm."

Henry Lavigne of Midland, said he believed men crowding to one side of the boat to see something had made it capsize "in about two minutes."

"The men were trying to crowd into the row boats," Lavigne continued. "I saw somebody try to dive head-first into one of them. If they had kept their heads there would have been more saved."

Ottawa to Investigate

Ottawa, Sept. 23 (CP)—A Federal investigation into the sinking of the motor launch Wa-Wi-Net with the loss of 25 of the 42 men on board in Georgian Bay Monday night is proceeding, a Transport Department spokesman said last night.

The investigation is being carried out by the steamships inspection board of the Transport Department's Marine Division, the official said, but no report on the tragedy has been received by authorities as yet.

Another department spokesman explained that the investigators would be required to ascertain whether the men were guests. If they were paid passengers, the boat owner would be held responsible for the condition of the boat at the time of sinking, and would be liable should the investigation also find that the boat was overloaded, in ill repair, or that fire precautions had not been taken.

Provision for action in such cases is given under the Canada Shipping Act, he added.

(The boat was reported to have sunk suddenly while carrying workers from the Midland Foundry and Machine Company who were celebrating completion of a war contract. Only 17 of the party survived.)

NAZIS CAPTURE

to action, but field accounts said reinforced Russian fighters proved equal to the challenge.

Dispatches left no doubt the street fighting exceeded anything previously of this kind in the war.

Soviet attacks northwest of the city assumed considerable strength and the Germans were declared slowly forced back.

The army publication reported the Russians had recaptured a village southwest of Stalingrad. In a battle for an important height, it said, the Germans lost 22 tanks and several thousand troops in two days.

Thrusts Turned Back

"In the northern part of the city our troops destroyed six German tanks and 14 trucks and killed over 400 Germans," it was announced.

Red army tank crews were credited with wrecking or firing 11 Nazi tanks and wiping out about two infantry companies.

More than 1,000 Germans were killed in repulse of a series of Nazi counter-attacks northwest of the city and "in another sector our troops pressed back the enemy and recaptured an important road," the communique said.

Save for the street penetrations, in a sector unannounced, all German thrusts against the Volga River industrial centre were turned back, the Russians said.

Russia's army of the central Caucasus fought on against German tanks and automatic riflemen in the Mozdok area. The communique said eight German tanks were destroyed and more than 100 automatic riflemen killed in one vain attack.

Soviet artillery on the Leningrad front was credited with the destruction of 19 Nazi blockhouses, 10 dugouts and two field guns during the last three days.

Soviet snipers on this front have killed 200 Germans," the government announced. "At the approaches to Leningrad three ME-109s were brought down in air combat and by anti-aircraft fire."

Soviet counter-attacks northwest of Stalingrad, challenging Nazi penetrations in the 30th. day of the epic siege, were declared to have cost the Germans about 3,000 casualties, 20 tanks, 40 trucks and various guns and supplies within forty-eight hours.

Von Bock Relieved, Report

(Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock, gaunt and thin-lipped Prussian who has squandered blood and steel in the attack upon Stalingrad as he did in the vain offensive against Moscow last Autumn, was reported in Stockholm to have been relieved of his command.

(A Reuters News Agency dispatch quoted the Stockholm newspaper Svenska Dagbladet as saying Hitler dismissed Von Bock two weeks ago—for the second time in less than a year—as a result of a sharp disagreement over campaign strategy.

(Hitler was represented as backing the simultaneous drives upon Stalingrad and the Caucasus, arguing that capture of the Volga River steel city would entail excessive casualties.

It was reported in Stockholm that Von Bock, a professional soldier for 44 of his 62 years had returned to Berlin. He was idle for several weeks after Hitler assigned Field Marshal Siegmund Wilhelm List to the central (Moscow) front last December and himself took over supreme command of Germany's armed forces.)

The midnight communique announced that a Nazi infantry brigade which attacked Russian lines on the southern outskirts of Stalingrad was repulsed after Red army mortar crews and riflemen had cut down about a battalion of its men.

"On another sector, after fierce fighting, the enemy occupied two streets," the communique said. "One of our formations wiped out over 300 German officers and men, damaged ten tanks and destroyed nine motor vehicles, three guns and several machine guns."

A dozen German planes, 18 tanks and an artillery battery were among other equipment listed as destroyed.

Red marines who landed from the Black Sea by night behind the Axis lines northwest of Novorossisk were said to have killed about 60 Rumanians trapped in a house and sunk an enemy motorboat, returning to their base without a loss.

Russian troops who recently seized the initiative in the Sinyavino sector of the Volkhov front northwest of Moscow were credited with beating off a powerful German counter-attack.

"On this sector of the front," the communique said Soviet airmen and anti-aircraft gunners shot down ten German planes."

Hitler's Munich Blasted

Who told the Germans there would be no British raids over Germany? Goering in 1939. Now Hitler might ask himself or Goering how it was that Munich, the shrine of Nazism—to use a noble word, "shrine," to express so vile a thing as Nazism—should be made to feel the full weight of a British raid so great that its reverberations would be felt in Switzerland, one hundred miles from the blasted city. It may well be that if Hitler the other night was anywhere within a hundred miles of Munich he might have felt the vibration through the earth from the explosions caused by the British bombs. Even if he did not feel the earth reverberate, there can be no doubt that Hitler's neurotic system felt reactions, repercussions and reverberations. If he had been in a place one hundred miles away he might have seen the cloud or the glow in the sky telling of what the British, who Goering said would never be able to blast Germany, were doing to Hitler's old stamping ground.

What a picture the Fuehrer must have presented had anyone been able to see him when he heard of all this, if he saw all this and if he felt the blast! Would he not be seen to break out with flashes of anger, struck through with the dread of the impending doom of the Nazi Germany he and his associates have put together?

Here was the birth of Nazism in 1923, just nineteen years ago. Here took place the untimely putsch which failed, and brought death to some of Hitler's associates on the streets, and here Hitler was tried and sentenced to prison in which he found time to express his ambitions, brutal and callous, in a book called "Mein Kampf," which may be translated "My Battle" or "My Struggle." Surely he has now realized that the British airmen were giving him a different type of "kampf" or fight, rather they were like the blasts of the avenging angel of the United Nations battering at the Nazi structure in order to blow it from the face of the earth so that all traces of it might forever disappear. Here the R.A.F. were puffing into nothingness of powder and dust and rubble the very scenes which Hitler had disgraced and where Hitler used to greet his fellow conspirators arming against the security of the world.

Of course Munich is known for something else besides the renegade Austrian Adolf Hitler, who became a German citizen after the First Great War. Hitler has made this ancient city into a centre of war industries and that was the main objective. But this raid was also a moral blow at Hitler's Nazi Germany, a smash in the face of the very shrine of Hitlerism. As the BBC expressed it many Munich folk must have thought of Hitler while their city was being pounded into rubble. If they thought sensibly they would realize what a curse it was that this man ever came to Munich and associated himself with its name and its beer cellar.

Duty Clearly Defined

One of the most direct appeals that could possibly be made is that of General Chiang Kai-Shek, in his instructions to officials who must enforce China's national food policy. Here is the rule he has laid down as the people's obligation to the six million Chinese soldiers who must be fed:

> "At this critical juncture when the fate of the nation is hanging in the balance, those who have strength should give strength, those who have money should give money, those who have grain should give grain. It is a duty which no patriotic citizen can shirk."

This fully expresses the obligation resting up the citizens of China. Collection of the land tax in produce and the compulsory sale of food to the government is getting under way.

It would be difficult for anyone to express so completely as these words do, the spirit of the regulations which have been put into force. They will fit into the situation in China exactly. Spoken so concretely they match the problem of national economy in China in which food is so important. In her food China has had one of the great factors of her resistance against the Japanese aggressors.

Good manners and good morals are sworn enemies and fast allies.—Bartol.

THAT MOSQUITO AGAIN

Dear Boss:—

That old gag you pulled this morning about straining your back moving a piano last night had about as much weight to it as the eyebrow of a gnat.

I hate to expose you, but why don't you come clean and tell the boys it was that jaunt up hill and down dale you undertook to do in the military parade Monday night. You made a brave enough show in the bright lights, but if some of the folks could have seen you dragging one number nine after the other in the dark places, it would have been more to the point.

What some of the people didn't hear was the wheezing you did going up the East Hill. You sounded like a broken down concertina and at times you resembled a partly deflated blimp. What you should have done is carried an outboard motor in your hip pocket. No one would have noticed the sound especially after you started dragging those steel-shod brogans like a mule with a broken leg.

And you bragged that "you didn't turn a hair." Well, not getting too personal, had you turned three you would have turned 'em all. And when you swung into the fair grounds, that wasn't ginger ale that was running down the outside of your neck.

Personally, boss, I would have bet that you would have been scratched long before the field reached the main East Hill hurdle in the military handicap. You didn't do such a bad job after all, even if you had to resort to your swagger stick to push your tongue back in position several times. And your face needn't have turned so red when a spectator remarked to his wife, "Did you see the big ape in the parade?" He was referring to the wild animal show in the afternoon.

And you needn't have talked so loud when you came in the office this morning. What the boys didn't know was that you were doing it to cover up the noise of your joints that reminded me of the sound effects in the "Creaking Door" program. You sure had an "Inner Sanctum Mystery."

However, cheer up, Boss. It will do you good. The first seven years are the hardest, but after that the war will be over. So why worry.

Yours truly,
Winnie, the Office Mosquito.

P. S.:—There's one thing that puzzles me, Boss. When your commanding officer gives the order "Lie flat on your stomach," how do you do it? One of your officers told me the other day the last time you tried it, you rocked yourself to sleep.

DOG GESTAPO

This is a tale of Old Japan. . . . . There was a ruler, a Shogun or Regent. He ruled Japan when Anne was on the throne of England, and the more he saw of his fellow-Japanese the more he loved dogs, says an English exchange.

He was called the Dog Shogun, because he made it a beheading matter to take the life of a dog. A plea for self-protection was no defence in law. The birth of a litter was an occasion for ceremony, and when a dog departed this life a death certificate had to be obtained, signed by a vet and duly witnessed.

The Dog Shogun had his Gestapo, whose eyes were in every home, watching for any violation of his edict. Japan became one great canine Shangri-la. Dogs flourished and multiplied. In the place that is now called Tokio, 10,000 honorable dogs were permanent guests of the government.

The fantastic edict was extended to preserve all animal life, even flies and fish. And—this is the point of the story—the people did not resent being regarded by their lord as of less account than the worms of the earth.

They spied upon each other, vied with each other in reporting offences, so as to demonstrate their loyalty to the mad Dog Shogun.

The story is too fantastic, yet it is a true tale of Old Japan; and it is a clue to an understanding of the new Japan which at this moment looms in grinning menace across the East.

It is an historic example of that perverted fanaticism which expressed itself in the perpetuation of the atrocities at Hong Kong.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES
OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Sept. 23rd., 1922

Yesterday afternoon Ald. Geo. Foster and Mrs. Foster entertained a number of friends on their twin motor launch, the Vioris. After an enjoyable time on the water a landing was made on the Prince Edward County shore and a corn roast enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wilson of Toronto, are visiting Mrs. D. W. Adams, Cedar Street.

Miss Maud Wellman of this city is visiting her brother, Mr. R. P. Wellman in Madoc.

Mr. E. Guss Porter, K.C., M.P., is spending a few days in Montreal.

30 YEARS AGO

Sept. 23rd., 1912

Two hundred and twelve pupils are attending the high school.

At a meeting of the School Board it was decided not to sell the Station School property at the present time. The members of the Board were of the opinion that a higher price would be obtained later as price of real estate is advancing in the city.

The new 34th Battery under command of Major Rierdon, went into camp this morning at the Fair Grounds here. There are 103 men in camp and two weeks will be spent in drilling.

Mr. Roy Stocker has left for Newark, N.J. where he has accepted a position.

40 YEARS AGO

Sept. 23rd., 1902

Three Belleville young ladies upset from a skiff on the bay yesterday afternoon. They were soon rescued and suffered no ill effects.

The band will give a complimentary concert at Victoria Park this evening and will play the selections which were most popular during the summer, including "Ain't Dat a Shame".

A granolithic walk is being constructed on Pinnacle Street between Bridge and Campbell Streets.

In May last the membership of the Public Library was 104 and since that time books have been issued to 797 persons. As the Board has complied with the requirements made by the city, the city council has ordered that the grant of $200 be paid to the Library Board.

Mr. Thomas Wills, County Treasurer, and his wife celebrated yesterday their Golden Wedding they having been married on Sept. 22nd., 1852. A reception was held last evening at the family residence on Church St., in honor of the happy event and many friends called to extend congratulations and to express good wishes. The evening was most enjoyable.

50 YEARS AGO

Sept. 23rd, 1892

The Steamer Varuna ran into tow of logs this morning and damaged her steering apparatus, as a consequence she was late in reaching this port.

The Rev. John Gallagher of Pitts Ferry, is the guest of Dr. Gibson.

Mrs. Noyes and family have left to reside in the Old Country.

Mr. W. H. Johnson has as his guest Mr. Carl White of the Syracuse, N.Y., Cycling Club. Mr. Johnson and his friend are doing considerable cycling in this county and Prince Edward County. They state that the roads are excellent.

Mr. Thomas Duncan of Thurlow Township will sail shortly from Montreal for Liverpool.

W. Flint Jones, drygood and millinery merchant, northwest corner of Bridge and Front Street, held his annual Fall millinery opening yesterday, and many ladies visited the store and were much pleased with the excellent display.

ABOUT HUSBANDS

When the honeymoon is over and you've settled down for life,
He to be your doting husband, you to be his patient wife,
Don't expect him to continue as the days go swiftly by
That touch of charm and glamour which attracted first your eye,
Man's a very noble creature when he's at the door to woo,
But a husband's something different, which is very sad, but true.

When you've got him as a husband, and your frown he doesn't fear,
Faults you never saw in courtship will undoubtedly appear,
All alone some quiet evening when he's settled with a book,
You will hear a curious clicking and you'll turn at him to look,
And 'twill sadden you and madden you, and almost make you ill,
To discover he's a chewer of a toothpick made of quill.

When the home is nicely settled and you've made an evening date
That's the time the man you've married will come home for dinner, late!
He was always prompt when courting, but a husband you will find
Is a fellow most forgetful and to tardiness inclined.
He'll have various appointments planned for making business deals
And he'll think them more important than being punctual for meals.

If he leans at all to neatness he'll waste hours on being trim,
But if careless of appearance give up hope of tidying him.
Though he did his best to please you in the days he came to woo,
When you're married you'll be maddened by the silly things he'll do,
Which is why to get accustomed to a husband's ways, my dear,
We are told by all the experts always takes a solid year.

ON THE RECORD

Political Principles For a War of Coalition

New York, Sept. 23—I think it may be presumed that the British follow the United States press and that from week to week responsible persons in England carefully read clippings recording "American public opinion" as thus expressed.

Now, what can they conclude from what they read?

They can conclude that large portions of the United States consider that the British Empire is finished, and that these same people are unsympathetic to any reorganization of that British world that leaves Britain a world power.

A vociferous group is loudly and continually demanding United States intervention in India. Another group is virulently attacking the British policy in Palestine. From time to time there are hints of the growing United States influence in Australia and Canada.

Both on the right and on the left two groups are growingly articulate; those who apparently see in the war an opportunity for a new, expansive United States imperialism—at the cost of the British—and those who—usually with the most primitive knowledge of the factors concerned—are bent on aiding and abetting rebellious movements throughout the British world.

What Drieser Forgets

Now, the presumption in all this is, apparently, that Britain needs us, but we don't need Britain. When Theodore Drieser says in Canada that Britain hasn't done anything but borrow our money, our tanks, and our planes, he does not mention the fact that the British war industry at this moment and for months past has been much more efficient than ours, and that the British losses—I mean losses from the British Isles—are much greater to date than those of any other country except Russia.

And between those whose anti-Russian feelings are trying to hamper any real alliance with Russia, and those whose anti-British feelings are trying to hamper any real alliance with Russia, and those whose anti-British feelings are impelling them to throw monkey-wrenches all over the place, we are in a fine way to losing the war.

Now the presumption that Britain has no alternative course than to fight together with us is utterly false. Every great power has alternatives. And Britain, in particular, has always had an alternative. There is, for instance the alternative of appeasement.

Every great country in a war has to have a positive war aim. Britain's positive war aim is the maintenance of a British Commonwealth that can and must be remodelled; it is to maintain British influence in Asia. The latter is also our war aim If it is not, why are we fighting Japan?

But if Britain's war aims are made impossible of realization by her major ally, what argument is there against appeasement?

Anti-British Propaganda.

There are Indian groups in this country making propaganda and working up United States public opinion against our great ally. For whom? For another ally? No. For a party in India that, up to now, and to put it optimistically, is neutral. Pessimistically spoken, a party that is giving aid and comfort to the Japanese enemy, and whose leader, Mr. Gandhi, has said that he is counting on a Japanese victory.

The whole propaganda is exploited and used by the Germans and Japanese, while United States compatriots who have more good-will in their hearts than sense in their brains loudly assist them, quite disregarding the fact that they are splitting up our war of coalition.

The latest argument advanced is that we must intervene in India because we need the Indians against the Japanese. Well, it's high time somebody pointed out that we need the British—the British Fleet, the British Air Force, the British bases, and the British Army—a great deal more than we need the "millions of India."

Almost all of the backers of Indian freedom are for a second front to be made by the British. I am also for a second front. But I do not ask the impossible. I do not ask that the British make a second front in order to help us destroy the British world.

This kind of politics is stupid and ruinous.

(Released by the Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

War Preparations Lag.

The United States is the greatest potential single power in this war. But it is, at the same time, the one furthest behind in its war preparations. Nevertheless, some of us are already beginning to tell the whole world what to do.

And we are advancing ideas outside of the framework of any positive or clear picture of what kind of world we wish to see.

Of course we want to destroy the aggressive power of Germany, Japan and Italy. At the same time we wish to restrict the power of Russia and/or Britain. Now just where do we end up by this kind of goings-on? Do we wish to take on the Axis alone—and do we wish to run the earth alone afterward?

It is not enough to be for the "freedom of India." Freedom of India in what? India, like every other country, is not a unit on another planet but a member of a world society. This world society both for war and peace has to be organized inside a certain framework. India can be absolutely free, according to the Atlantic Charter, in the framework of a British Commonwealth. There may be a better proposal for India, but so far no better one has been made. Any concept of world order cannot conceive of India as another Ireland.

And if we are bent on securing freedom for this nation or that outside any concept of a new world order, mutually organized, we will find ourselves acting as the world's leading anarchists. And this is one role that history will not forgive any country.

A RARE BIRD

This or that person or thing "shall rise like the phoenix from its ashes."

How often have you heard that simile!

The myth of the phoenix is one of the most ancient known to man.

"Phoenix" is merely another form of the word "Phoenician" and was applied by the ancients not only to a fabulous sacred bird of Egypt, but also to the date-palm, a guitar-like musical instrument and the color purple-red or crimson.

According to the legend, the phoenix was a bird of gorgeous plumage that lived 500 years in the deserts of Arabia, after which it built and sat upon a nest of spices, fanned the nest into flames with its wings, and was utterly consumed, but from its ashes sprang a new phoenix, which lived 500 years only to repeat the performance.

Herodotus, Tacitus, Pliny and many other ancient writers elaborated on the original legend until the phoenix became as difficult to describe as the whangdoodle.

The phoenix was "raris avis," a rare bird, the only one of its kind, and it sang melodiously while burning in its nest of spices.

The Book of Job, one of the oldest books of the Old Testament, says: "Then I said, I shall die in my nest, and I shall multiply my days as the sand." Some Bible commentators since ancient times have interpreted this passage as an allusion to this rare Arabian bird.

It is said that the last phoenix showed up in Egypt from Arabia so soon after its predecessor that its authenticity was questioned.

A phoenix exhibited at Rome during the secular games in 47 A.D. was almost universally suspected to be an imposture.

In the ancient Egyptian religion the phoenix was regarded as the embodiment of the sungod Ra and was worshipped at Heliopolis. The periodic reappearance of the bird was accepted as a guarantee of the resurrection of the dead.

The phoenix became the emblem of immortality and in Christian art was used to represent the Resurrection.

After the Swiss alchemist Paracelsus wrote about the phoenix in the sixteenth century the alchemists adopted the mythical bird as the symbol of their vocation.

For centuries a wooden phoenix was used as a shop-sign by European chemists.

Phoenix Park in Dublin, Ireland, did not get its name from the fabulous bird. That name is a corruption of Gaelic "Fionn-uisge," the clear water, which referred to a famous spring that once existed where the park is located.

GUARD AGAINST RUNS

Join the LUX DAILY DIPPERS

Economy is the password these days—runs are a tragic extravagance. So remember, girls, the new rayons you'll be wearing from now on must have only gentle Lux care.

Dip them in Lux after each wearing—soon as you take them off. Lux cuts down on runs. Lux removes harmful perspiration—keeps stocking threads elastic.

Never risk damaging fine threads with strong laundry soaps, and never rub. Lux keeps stockings lovely—makes them last longer—keeps them flatteringly new. Don't put off your Lux daily dipping. Start tonight.

PERSONALS

MARRIAGE NOTICE

McGEE—STORMS — In St. Paul's Anglican Church, Marmora, by the Rector, Rev. Rural Dean Caldwell on Saturday, Sept. 12, Laird Elliott McGee, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. John McGee of Stirling, to Ruth Eleanor Storms, only daughter of Mrs. Beatrice M. Storms and the late John Storms, Bonarlaw. The young couple left on wedding trip to Lindsay and Oshawa and points west. On their return they will reside near Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Flurey and family, were called to Picton today, owing to the sudden death of Mrs. Flurey's father, Mr. J. F. Graves.

Miss Margaret Anderson, Coleman Street, left Tuesday to attend Queen's University, Kingston.

Judge J. Forin, who has spent the last two weeks with his cousins, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Townsend, Charles Street, is now visiting his son, Peter, in Toronto, enroute to his home in Vancouver.

Friends of Mrs. G. G. Wright, Christ Church rectory, will regret to learn of her bereavement caused by the death of her mother, Mrs. Phillip Dykes, which occurred at the rectory Tuesday evening. This is the second time Mrs. Wright has been bereaved within a month, her father having died here on August 22, last.

Mr. Frank Domenico is in Port Hope, today having been called there owing to the death of his brother-in-law, Charles Cancilla.

Mr. T. E. Post of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, is spending a few days in town.

The Briarstone Club held a successful bingo at the home of Mrs. Markle on Friday evening, prizes being won by Mrs. Way, Mrs. Vandusen, Mrs. Peoples, Mrs. Murray, Mrs. De Carlo and Mrs. Donovan. A special game played for tarts donated by Mrs. Button, was won by Mrs. Donovan.

Friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McCormick of Read on Thursday evening, September seventeenth. The occasion being their Silver wedding anniversary. A gift of money was presented on behalf of the community, to the bride and groom of twenty-five years, who in turn made suitable replies. Lunch was served and cards and dancing were enjoyed throughout the evening.

WEDDINGS

BROWN—PEARSALL

The home of the bride's parents, at Union Vale, was brightened with baskets of gladioli, chrysanthemums and roses on Saturday, September 19, at two o'clock, for the marriage of Claire Alleen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clare Pearsall, and Mackenzie Burlingham Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Brown. Rev. J. F. Reycraft officiated, the ceremony taking place before a bank of evergreen, fern, chrysanthemums, gladioli and bouvardi.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of shell pink chiffon over taffeta, with sweetheart neckline, lace insets on fitted bodice with bouffant skirt and lace inset on neckline. Her fingertip veil of shell pink was of tulle illusion, the heart-shaped halo being caught with pink flowers. Her shower bouquet of Dream roses, bouvardi and adiantum included a sprig of heather from Scotland. She also wore a necklace of pearls, the gift of the groom.

Miss Beatrice Huff was bridesmaid. Her long gown of Elizabeth blue chiffon over taffeta was gathered at the bodice and skirt and had a V-neckline. Her head-dress was of blue tulle illusion, shoulder length, caught with pink rosebuds. She carried Talisman roses, fern and plumosus.

Mr. Hiles Carter, Toronto, was groomsman. Mrs. George Dickie of London, cousin of the groom, played the wedding music with "Because" during the signing of the register. Mrs. Marshall Brummell, cousin of the bride, received the many guests at the door, wearing her bridal dress of white mousseline de soie.

A reception followed the ceremony. The bride's table in the dining room was centred with a prettily decorated wedding cake surrounded by pink tulle, smilax and pink rosebuds, over a lace cloth.

Pink candles in silver holders were on either side of the cake while the buffet was adorned with lovely Briarcliffe roses. Mr. H. Carter proposed the toast to the bride, with the groom capably responding.

The bride's mother chose a street length dress of Freedom blue crepe, black velvet hat and matching accessories with corsage of Briarcliffe roses. The groom's mother was in black printed crepe, black velvet hat, and wore a corsage of bronze 'mums. The assistants were Misses Ruth and Mary Leavens, Mrs. Roger Hubbs, Miss Eleanor Foster, Mrs. Marshall Brummell. Tea was poured by Mrs. Earl Pearsall and Mrs. Harvard Vancleaf.

For travelling to Western Ontario and Georgian Bay, the bride donned an air force blue wool suit, with quilting on jacket, matching hat and black accessories. She wore a corsage of Dream roses and fern. On their return they will reside in Picton.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dancing Often the Key to Popularity

Here are the tribulations of a girl who would never learn to dance well. She says she lacks a sense of rhythm. However she has been assured that she could learn to dance extraordinarily well if she'd only try.

She's an athlete, plays good tennis, golf, swims, and can do a ten-mile hike if required. But this matter of dancing finds her lazy.

She lives in one of those ritzy suburbs in a big city. There's a very large Army post—two of them, in fact—not many miles from the ritzy suburb. Dances are given for the men every Saturday night. Week nights a good many of the officers are invited to the Country Club, and everyone whirls off in a dance afterwards.

This girl has got the reputation of being a poor dancer. The men in uniform may have got wind of this in advance, or it may have been because she has confessed herself to be a poor dancer. Anyhow, she finds herself a good all-round wallflower. And she's very unhappy about it.

Two of the girls have become engaged. Her younger sister has more attention than she, and life, instead of being a bowl of cherries, appears to have become a bitter dish.

Why any girl should accept this fate sitting down is a puzzle to me. Go to the big city, convenient to theritzy suburb by train or trolley, and invest in some dancing lessons and the best teacher available. Then go to the Saturday night dances for the enlisted men. Pick out a few of the shyest of these, dance with them and demonstrate your skill. There's no reason why anyone not physically afflicted should not learn to dance and dance well.

The art of dancing goes back to the days before a line of history was written. In the great palace of Knossos in Create, one of the most arresting figures on the wall is that of the dancing girl. We don't know a word of their language. We don't know why this first of European civiliations was conquered, only that this lovely girl danced.

Occasionally I get a letter from some patriarchial father who gives me the mischief because I tell his daughters—fading away on the parental stalk—to learn to dance. Well, I think it's a magnificent exercise, and as long as I can plunk a typewriter I'll be the last to say a word against dancing.

Exclusive Design In Fine Crochet

by Alice Brooks

The grace of this lovely filet crochet design will delight you when you place your finished set on your chair. The chair back, done in finer cotton, measures 12x16 inches Dress up your home for Fall. Pattern 7402 contains charts and instructions for set; illustrations of stitches; materials needed.

To obtain this pattern send twenty cents in coins (stamps cannot be accepted) to The Ontario Intelligencer, Household Arts Dept., 166 Front Street, Belleville, Ont. Write plainly NAME, ADDRESS and PATTERN NUMBER.

FASHION FLASHES

CAMPUS BELLES will want at least one dance frock this season. A good choice might be a model with a sweater top of black velvet to contrast with a full pink tulle skirt, across which a flight of black velvet swallows has been appliqued.

Going up is the direction for crowns on Autumn hats. A charming little high-crowned sailor, its small brim rolled up all around, is of pink and blue printed paisley. Blue velvet crown band and curling blue ostrich tips at the top of the crown.

You will be pleased with the new wool dresses so right for every hour of the day. Easy cut marks a charming frock in heather purple woollen, its skirt fullness held in front by a self belt studded with big turquoise-colored stones set in silver.

Going to be cold this winter. Nice for lounging is a tailored robe of caramel beige corduroy made on classic lines and with a generous lap. For extra warmth, matching slacks.

Country cousins will go wild about a hip-length coat of fleecy white woollen bordered with plaid and lined with quilted red satin. Collarless and with slanting slit pockets lined with the red.

PEPSODENT POWDER makes teeth *32% BRIGHTER than the next leading brand!

"People always had a hard time telling us apart...in school, in the neighbourhood, anywhere! But, say... after Margaret won the toss to see who'd use Pepsodent, it was different! I chose to test another well-known brand, thinking there couldn't be much difference."

"Did I learn about tooth powder! Our dentist was skeptical at first... then amazed... when Pepsodent made Peg's teeth twice as bright as mine! He said he never saw anything like it! Neither did we! Pepsodent showed us how really bright teeth can be!"

For the safety of your smile ... use Pepsodent twice a day ... see your dentist twice a year.

Public Speaking Easy With Rules

New Member Has Secret Of Poise

"What a poised speaker our new member has become!"

Not so surprising—for poise in public speaking can be learned. The secret is knowing the rules—how to "address the chair," how and when to introduce your remarks, what to do when you're stuck for a word.

To get the chairman's attention you raise your hand. When recognized you rise to your feet and say, "Madam Chairman, I should like to make the suggestion that—." You don't usually keep the floor for more than three minutes.

Be brief, explicit. "Mrs. Kennedy is the logical person to ask. She's done settlement-house work for ten years."

If a word eludes you, no need to stall "Er-er"! Just pause without apology until it comes. Pauses are effective!

You can not only speak but make real speeches well! Our 32-page booklet gives public speaking exercises you can do at home for pronunciation, voice, emphasis. Tells how to prepare a speech, hold attention, feel at ease. Has sample speeches for many occasions; ex-

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Victim of Wrong Numbers Pleas for More Care in Telephoning

Of course you would always be kind to a lame person. Well, perhaps you aren't. Do you look up telephone numbers carelessly, or dial them carelessly, so that perhaps a lame woman must painfully come downstairs to answer her telephone, only to find a careless person, a rude voice and a "wrong number" on the other end of the wire?

If every one of us would consider that this may very well be the effect of our carelessness, we would make a firm resolution never again to be careless about looking up or dialing a telephone number.

You've never thought of this harsh possibility? Then read this letter:

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

A few weeks ago you wrote an article urging people to be polite and considerate when they answer the telephone and find that the person calling has a "wrong number." You said that "no one calls a wrong number intentionally." Perhaps not. But don't you think that the people who dial a wrong number, or ask Central for a wrong number, should also be given a little lecture on politness, and that the people who answer the wrong numbers of these careless telephoners should be given a little sympathy?

I believe that most of this wrong-number business is due to utter carelessness, and could be avoided with a little thought. I have been annoyed many times although I am, as a rule, an easy-going person.

I have just had to come downstairs to answer another of these wrong-number pests so, you see, I'm in a perfect mood to write about them.

I have been called to answer the telephone at all hours, even getting out of bed, for a call meant for a person whose number is similar to ours. Since several times the voice was the same one, I asked this man, courteously, if he would please be more careful in looking up or in dialing the number. Apparently it was the same person, for this request ended his calling my number.

But I still get plenty of others, "complaining" about their wrong numbers. And how gruff and coarse most of them are—practically never an apology for their carelessness or for the inconvenience caused. "Who's this?" is the most frequent impolite question. So often, too, when I answer and the person hears a voice different from the one expected, down goes the receiver—no apology, no answer to my, "Who is it you wish, please?"

Fortunately, there are a few polite exceptions to this rank discourtesy. A short time ago a very young girl, judging by her voice, dialed my telephone by mistake. She apologized so nicely that it was a pleasure to hear her and even to answer a wrong call. That little girl showed so clearly that she had had the right training at home.

I do wish, Mrs. Beeckman, you would keep urging people to use their heads .. and their eyes .. when they look up and dial a number. This is a busy world these days, and most of us have more important things to do than this useless answering of wrong numbers called by careless people.

If careless people had the humanity to consider how inconsiderate and inconvenient they are being, most of this trouble could be avoided.

I speak feelingly about the humanity of their being careful, because I am very lame, and it is slow and painful for me to get downstairs to answer the telephone, and far from pleasant to find, when I do get to the telephone, someone complaining about a wrong number.

Thank you for listening, Mrs. Beeckman.

—MRS. L. A.

And thank you for writing, Mrs. L. A.

THEN SHE EXPLAINED

NO MATTER HOW YOU DO YOUR WASH YOU NEED SUNLIGHT'S "EXTRA-SOAPINESS" FOR THOSE EXTRA-DIRTY SPOTS!

See every bit of your wartime washes come sparkling clean . . . safely!

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE to get next week's wash brighter and sweeter than ever. Not a streaky, cloudy white. Not "half-washed" looking. But spotlessly bright all over!

OF COURSE YOU WOULD! Then just do this: Put a touch of Sunlight Soap on all extra-dirty spots. Sunlight leaves a busy film of soap wherever it comes in contact with clothes. It whips up into the richest lather ever—and loosens grease and grit without rubbing.

Safe for colors

TRY SUNLIGHT on the hardest things you have to wash. See how dazzling bright they come. Don't ever let people say that your clothes look "half-washed"! Get Sunlight now! It's all pure soap . . . safe for colors and so kind to hands.

See How Easy Dishwashing Can Be!

● Try Sunlight's "extra-soapiness" on greasy pots and pans. You'll be thrilled to see how quickly it cuts grease—gets everything shiny clean in much less time. Sunlight's good for all cleaning . . . tile, woodwork and windows. And it goes a long, long way even in hard water.

CANADIAN DESTROYER VERSUS A U-BOAT

This graphic picture was taken at height of the battle between the Canadian destroyer Assiniboine and a German U-boat and shows the submarine sheering off as the destroyer attempts to ram her. A few minutes later the warship managed to drive her sharp bows into the raider to send it to the bottom.

Cadets who will serve as officers aboard submarine-hunting blimps of the U.S. navy when they complete their course, are shown at the naval air station, Lakehurst, N.J., learning by means of a model how a blimp behaves. The weight suspended from the model forward, is shifted about and effects are noted. This is a lesson in aerostatics, a "must" subject for lighter-than-air cadets.

Camilli Had to Clout 25th Homer for Dodgers to Down New York Giants by 9-8 Score

Cardinals, However, Maintain Margin by Downing Pirates by 9-3

CARDS NEARLY IN

By SID FEDER
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

St. Louis Cardinals look as if they're just a deep breath and a sneeze away from the National League pennant now, and it's probably just as well for the cardiac condition and the nervous systems of baseball fans that it's almost over.

In this year's stretch drive, it seems the Cardinals and the second-place Brooklyn Bums are specializing in seeing who can raise more lumps in the most throats in every game.

On Monday, for instance, the Cards had to go nine innings before they decided to knock over the Pirates. The same day, the Dodgers got enough runs in the first inning to flail the Phillies, but in every frame from there right down to the wire they were in hot water.

And yesterday it was a case of "this is where we came in" again, although St. Louis didn't let it last as long this time before pounding the Pirates 9-3 to remain 2½ games up in the pennant race. With the victory, the Birds moved into a spot where all they need to clinch are three victories, three Dodger losses or any combination of same.

But the Bums, on the other hand, had to come from behind three times yesterday against the Giants, and then Dolph Camilli had to clout his 25th homer out of the ball park in the 12th inning to break it up.

Umpire Tells MacPhail

On top of that, the press box had the added pleasure of a double-feature order of fireworks right after the game ended. It happened when Bill Klem, the old arbitrator who used to be the loop's most feared umpire, got into a row with Brooklyn President Larry MacPhail and told him what for in a few thousand words. The argument started over a strike Umpire Al Barlick called on Dolph Camilli in a game a full 10 days ago.

Out in St. Louis, meantime, the Cardinals had their faithful moaning low when the Pirates pushed three runs over in the third. Then, without any advance warning, the Bucs blew up and before you knew it, the Red Birds had six runs. Four of these came across when Stan Musial hit a homer with the bases loaded after three Buc errors had put the "ducks on the pond."

From there on, it was just a case of how high the Bucs could blow. They presented the Cards with three more runs in the seventh.

Otherwise on the big league front Paul Derringer and Johnny Vander Meer served up a five-hitter and a three-hitter, respectively, and Cincinnati Reds rolled over Chicago Cubs twice to take a 3-1 decision from the Senators behind Atley Donald's five-hit elbowing. Dizzy Trout tossed a six-hitter as Detroit downed Chicago White Sox 9-2.

Lou probably expected to get more "steak" horses than stake horses—and they might be a good buy, too, these days—so you can imagine his surprise when the first reply came in from Emerson (Valdi) Woodward of Texas, offering a yearling sired by Bahram, the $250,000 English horse . . . . Hamilton Horse Wins Last Heats After Pine Ridge Jim Takes Opener

TWO HORSES FALL

Harness racing of a high calibre was witnessed by a large and enthusiastic audience at the first day's races in connection with the Belleville Fair on Tuesday afternoon. Rain, which fell between heats of the first two races did little more than soften the track, to make the footing almost perfect and some of the best horses showing their wares in the Province this year put on a real show for the patrons. The grandstand was more than three-quarters full, while, a large number witnessed the several heats from along the rail. The times were not exceptionally fast, a mile in 2.13 being the fastest of the afternoon but what they lacked in speed they made up in keenness of competition. Only one accident marred the day's proceedings, this occurring in the last heat of the afternoon card but fortunately neither drivers nor horses involved were injured.

Effective from Williamsburg was making her move "through the lane" and at the eighth pole stumbled and Wilmer Hillock driving Pine Ridge Jim and trailing behind tumbled over the prostrate mare and both horses lay in the middle of the track in a heap. Willing hands were soon on the scene and the horses were quickly on their feet. Dillon Henley a real good pacer from Hamilton accounted for the 2.16 class but dropped the first heat to Pine Ridge Jim. He had too much luck coming home and fairly sizzled in the second trip, when he came from far back to go to the front and never be headed. Widower Grattan owned in Prince Edward County raced well getting two thirds in the last two heats.

Allen Volo owned by H. Stewart of Peterboro made every post a winning one in the 2.27 class with another Peterboro entry supplying the opposition. Beth Harvester a three-year-old showed some exceptional speed and will be heard from later this fall, when she races at the Dufferin. The scoring was kept to a minimum and the racing was very keen. The summary:

Tom Carruthers Wins Golf Championship

Shooting strong golf despite heavy cross-section winds T. A. "Tommy" Carruthers saptured the Bay of Quinte Golf Club championship by defeating J. T. "Joe" Legault 75 to 79 in the club finals.

The story of the Bay of Quinte Country Club championship was around the greens for off the tees the heavy winds wrought havoc with well-intended drives. A trapped third in no way helped Joe Legault, while the new club champion, Tommy Carruthers, was deadly with his irons and once out in front at the 11th hole went on to coast into a title.

At the Belleville Golf Club Mr. Carruthers has advanced to the club championship and meets R. L. "Bob" Brown for the east end golf crown this week.

Toronto, Sept. 23 —(CP)— Professional hockeyists Wally Stanowski (Leafs), Bull Juzda (Rangers) and Andy Branigan (Americans) crossed up the early-line football prophets by not turning out for the R. C. A. F. team in the Winnipeg City League.

They have managed to keep their reasons to themselves, so far. Probably the world will hear them in due course. Meanwhile, their decision is a misfortune for PO. Bob Fritz and his airmen. All are driving backs, with Branigan best of the three. The airmen seem to be doing quite well without them, however—a win and a tie in two starts.

The decision to skip football probably was reached in council, not individually, and the situation has its bright aspects. It means probably that no pressure is exerted on athletes in the forces to take part in sport. And make a note to smile at this when you have time: Stanowski the Pole and Branigan the Irishman are alumni of the same Winnipeg junior club—the Young Men's Hebrew Association!

Pertinent Note:

Jack (Cornwall Standard-Freeholder) Park reports that the Montreal army entry in the Quebec Senior Hockey League told league officials it had nothing definite in the talent line, but "players would be brought in." Cornwall and Ottawa hockey men are hoping the Montreal players won't be "brought in" from Cornwall and Ottawa.

Incidentally

Victoria Navy's hockey team will be strong this season, may be the business again in British Columbia . . . There has been general approval of the announcement that Dick Irwin would continue as coach of Montreal Canadiens, spiking rumors that Paul Haynes would succeed him . . . Hockey writers probably will find Irvin considerably less loquacious than last year, when he predicted great things for the Frenchmen, then saw all his hopes fade in a wave of early-season injuries. . . Bob Goldham, ex-Toronto Leaf defenceman, is kicking like a champion for the Toronto Navy Football team. . . Ken Charlton, who starred with Regina Roughriders last year, may wind up with Toronto Balmy Beach. . . Al Ritchie, Regina's old football Maestro, wrote east about him a few days ago, coach Alex Ponton of Beaches was tipped, and negotiations are on.

SYRACUSE CHIEFS MEET COLUMBUS FOR SERIES TITLE

Both Teams Finished Third in Regular Schedule of Season

OPEN IN COLUMBUS

Columbus, O., Sept. 23 —(AP)— A pair of baseball clubs that finished the regular season in third place then crushed opponents in straight games in playoff finals—Columbus Red Birds of the American Association and Syracuse Chiefs of the International League—clash tomorrow night in the "Little World Series."

President George Trautman of the association today announced a best four-of-seven game schedule designed to give the players the biggest possible slice of the box-office take.

The team will play two games here, travel Saturday and open a three-game series at Syracuse Sunday afternoon. If additional contests are necessary, they will return to Columbus.

If weather forces portponement of either of the Thursday of Friday night games at Columbus, three games will be played here and four, if necessary, at Syracuse.

Trautman said the alternate schedule was worked out so that the players, who get 60 per cent of the gross receipts of the first four games, would not have to travel Sunday and lose a share of a heavy weekend gate.

Lambert to Open Series

Bill Crouch will pitch the series opener for the Red Birds and Clayton Lambert will be on the mound for Syracuse.

The Chiefs battled into the series by defeating Jersey City Giants, 9-8, in the fourth successive game of the International League playoff finals last night. Syracuse previously eliminated second-place Montreal four games of five in semi-finals. The Giants downed the pennant-winning Newark Bears in the other semi-final set.

The Birds entered their fifth Junior World Series in 10 years by trampling the Toledo Mud Hens in four straight games of the association finals.

Columbus — winner of the series from Montreal last year — whipped Kansas City, 1942 AA champion, four games to three in preliminary playoffs, while fourth-place Toledo defeated Milwaukee, this year's association runner-up, in four of six contests.

BERT CORBEAU HOCKEY GREAT OF BY-GONE ERA

Born in Penetang in 1895 and Actively Connected With Winter Pastime

A RUGGED PLAYER

Montreal, Sept. 23 (CP)—Hockey greats of a bye-gone era and leading figures of the present, today mourned the death of Bert Corbeau in a party of twenty-five drowned Monday night in Georgian Bay, when his 75-foot motor launch sank.

Born in Penetanguishene, Ont., in 1895, Corbeau starred with Montreal Canadiens and other National Hockey League Clubs from 1914 until the middle 20's and was actively connected with sport last winter when he coached the Atlantic City entry in the Eastern United States League.

E. C. (Newsy) Lalonde, who like Corbeau was a hockey star two decades ago, described Corbeau as a "great hockey player and a fine specimen of a man".

"Bert, Odie (Odie Cleghorn) and I used to be roomates when we were with Canadiens. I remember Bert well in that Canadian-Seattle series of 1919, which had to be abandoned because of the flu epidemic. He was the only one to escape the sickness, and just about handled the defence duties by himself in the closing stages of the series".

Newsy said Corbeau joined Canadiens as a youngster in 1914 "I think he was about 18. He had never played in organized hockey before. He was a hard checker, but always a good, clean player".

Tommy Gorman, manager of the Canadien Hockey Club and associated with the National League since its inception, recalled Corbeau as a "battling 190-pound defenceman".

Hero of the Fans

"In the days when the Ottawa-Canadien rivalry held away, Corbeau was the hero of the fans. In those days it was real knock 'em down, drag 'em out hockey", said Tommy, "and Corbeau excelled in this type of play".

Corbeau belonged to the famed Canadien team of 1918 which won the N.H.L. title, beating Ottawa Senators in the playoffs. Lalonde, Malone, Odie Cleghorn and Didier Pitre were also members of that team. Corbeau remained with the Habitants until 1922 when he was sold to the Hamilton Club. He joined St. Pats a year later and played with them until the end of the 1926-27 season.

After retiring from pro hockey, Corbeau turned to coaching and refereeing. He handled the old Toronto Ravinas for Frank Selke when Joe Primeau was with them. Since then he has piloted the Atlantic City sea gulls of the Eastern United States Amateur League the last three sasons and prior to that was with Port Colborne of the Senior Ontario Hockey Association. He also refereed for the O.H.A. on many occasions.

Tom Lockhart, president of the Eastern U. S. Amateur League, said Corbeau's death is a great loss to his League. "Although the Atlantic City team has folded", said Lockhart, "the League wanted Corbeau to coach another club".

GORDON GIVES YANKS BIG EDGE IN THE INFIELD

Second Sacker Sparks Quartette Considered the Best in Baseball

MARION STEADY

(By GAYLE TALBOT)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Sept. 22. (AP)—With one minor exception, the same Yankee infield that chilled Brooklyn's hopes with seven double plays in the '41 World Series will be in there performing near-miracles again when the first wartime playoffs open a week from today on the "skinned" diamond at Sportsman's Park in St. Louis.

The lone newcomer to the champions' inner works is Buddy Hassett, the Irish thrush who has replaced Johnny Sturm at first base While he is not exactly a ball of fire, Buddy is at least as good a first sacker as Sturm, his hitting having shown important improvement since he learned to "pull" them to right field.

Incomparable Joe Gordon still holds down second base and three or four acres of adjacent territory; Little Phil Rizzuto scampers like a rabbit around the shortfield, and the veteran Red Rolfe at third is in better health than he was a year ago. It is, without much argument, the best infield in baseball.

To cover any possible contingencies, it might be added that the Yankee quartet also is better than Brooklyn's, as it demonstrated conclusively in the '41 series.

Rolfe Also Has Edge

About the best that can be said for the Cardinals' inner defence is that it numbers a couple of the National League's outstanding stars—Martin (Slats) Marion at short and Jimmy Brown on second. Johnny Hopp, playing his first full season at first, has not lived up to his promise of last year. George Kurowski, a rookie, has played the fine ball during the Cards' pennant dash, but he scarcely stacks up for World Series purposes against a man of Rolfe's experience.

Marion, after putting on some 20 pounds of needed weight, has developed into a near-sensation at shortstop this year. He would have to be rated at least the equal of Rizzuto in any department, and he has shown more speed and fire lately than the Yank half-pint.

Brown, shifted from third to second when Frank Crespi bogged down in the Spring, is perhaps the most valuable all-around infielder in the National League. He is a 'ball-players ball-player", a born scrapper and a terror on the base paths. He has been the heart and spirit of the Cards' terrific last-half drive. But he is not the equal of Gordon, and there's no use pretending.

With Frankie Crosetl and Gerry Priddy ready to step into any vacancy from first to third, the Yankees hold a good edge over the Cards in infield replacements.

Casual Comment
by K.J.C.

SOME FOLK ARE HARD TO convince, while others just won't learn. Take Kingston sports for instance—they clamoured to get into the Interprovincial (governed by Quebec) Baseball League and one season saw that brain child a dead pigeon. Now Scribe Walshe is quite elated over the possibilities of the Kingston "Combines" being accepted into the Ottawa Valley League. Let's hope the Limestone City puck moguls enjoy better success "away down east" than did their baseball brethren.

While on the subject, here's how Mister Walshe explains the beautifully-colored Kingston - Ottawa picture to the reading public:

"Here's the set up for Eastern Canada senior hockey as far as Kingston puck promoters have learned through extensive enquiries in an effort to establish a good senior grouping. The Quebec Senior League will have six teams, five from the Montreal area and Cornwall. Ottawa will have probably six teams operate its own senior group of service and industrial teams while Niagara will also have its own special section.

"The main motive of senior hockey this season is as much play as possible with the least loss of time and transportation. Kingston hockey officers were advised on Sunday about the Toronto plans in a conversation with W. A. Hewitt O.H.A. secretary. The talk with the O.H.A. boss followed a suggestion from Ottawa that Toronto be included with Kingston and Cornwall in a giant Eastern Ontario league. Cornwall was also canvassed and the proposal met with approval.

"Ottawa City League advised Kingston on the weekend that the entry of the Combines in the Capital circuit was favored. Cornwall was also invited to join the Ottawa circuit to probably form a strong six team group. A meeting will be held in Ottawa Wednesday night when definite decisions will be reached At present it seems practically certain that Kingston seniors will be in the Ottawa district schedule next winter."

WHILE ON THE SUBJECT OF hockey for local consumption, it seems there are interests hereabouts already probing the feelings of both Peterborough and Whitby puck interests regarding the future of the district group, Belleville interests should well remember the summer's softball program and No. 5 I.T.S., and that is to say nothing of Trenton Central Flying School.

WHILE REMINISCING RELATIVE to his professional baseball days along the Pacific Coast, "Irish Jerry" Monnahan, whose more recent sports activities have leaned towards modern muscle bending in a wrestling ring, openly admitted that professional baseball players were more capable of taking care of themselves in a free-for-all fistic encounter than any type of athlete he ever met up with. "I've seen football players, boxers, wrestlers and the whole lot of them in common battle, but take it from me stay away from a baseball player once his dander is up, because generally speaking a baseball player is a tough hombre in a fight and I'm one who should know as I've tried 'em all," admitted Jerry, who had three years of organized ball and was benched by none other than Mickey "Black Mike" Cochrane while with the Seattle "Rainiers". Incidentally Monnahan meets just as rough a ring hombre as one would desire when he tangles with that mad Hindu, Panjo Singh, at the Hume arena tonight. Of course the feature attraction of the evening's program is a finished bout, no time limit to shackle the contestants, between John (Calgary Eyeopener) Katan and big Earl McCreary in the British Empire semi-final eliminations.

LOCAL SPORT FANS WILL BE pleased to know that Bob Elliott former Kingston football, basketball and baseball star, has been appointed football and basketball coach of Queen's University. Bob will fill the vacancy created when Johnny Edwards enlisted in the navy. It was a fitting appointment for an athlete who has served Kingston and Queen's University nobly for well over a decade. Bob Elliott was outstanding as a baseball, basketball and football player and it was while playing the latter game for Queen's he lost the sight of one eye in a most unfortunate accident. A fellow-player flipped mud from his shoe as a dressing room prank into Bob's face. The result was most drastic because it severely affected the sight of an eye. However, like a true champion and sportsman Bob Elliott continued in sports and for years afterwards was a feared batter in provincial senior basball circles. His many friends in Belleville will wish Bob Elliott success in his new environment.

REMEMBER WHEN ALSAB, Mrs. A. Sabath's bargain two-year-old colt smashed a 21 year old track record at Belmont Park a year ago today to defeat Requested in a $10,000 match race? Shut Out, this year's leading three-year-old, ran out of the money in another race on the same card. Alsab blew the Kentucky Derby to Shut Out but won the Preakness and only last Saturday nosed out the great Whirlaway in the most thrilling photo-finish race of the year.

DIS AND DAT—"BUFF" HORton's Trenton R.C.A.F. senior "B" softball nine waltzed into an easy victory on the home lot last night when the Toronto St. Agnes seniors were exactly one hour and 25 minutes late.... Convener Harry Rollins made no mistake when he awarded the game to the Trenton "Flyers" and despite the fact the "Hogtown" mushballers squawked to the high heavens, Mister Rollins must be congratulated for his stand.... After all being late for sports events is just an old Toronto custom.... However, the nines lined up for the benefit of the station personnel and played a four inning affair, that saw Toronto lead 3 to 1.... The second game is slated for Toronto Thursday and a possible third maybe in Port Hope Saturday.... Yes, there'll be a third game despite the fact professional hockey players are with Skipper Horton's nine, but unfortunately by the time the snow flies they'll have concluded their courses at Trenton and dispatched elsewhere... Local puck fans will recall the late Bert Corbeau leading the Port Colborne "Sailors" into the Hume arena in 1937 to beat the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" intermediate "A" champions, in the only Allan Cup playdown ever seen in this district.... Yes, and don't be surprised at what may come out of this year's Flyer hockey camp... Well, that's all, there ain't no more.

AT THE CAPITOL

"My Favorite Blonde"

Bob Hope, Madellene Carroll and a penguin named Percy lead some Nazi spies through a series of hilarious adventures in the latest Paramount fun film, "My Favorite Blonde," opening next at the Capitol Theatre.

Bob, a vaudeville actor with a Hollywood contract, gets tangled in the spies' net when Madeliene, a blonde, gorgeous and resourceful British agent decides to pose as his wife on a wild transcontinental dash. She is headed for a California air field with secret flight plans for the United States Army. With the spies in furious pursuit, Bob and Madeleine, plus Percy, steal airplanes, oil trucks, buses, ride in freight trains and have other adventures that provide the two stars with a swift and exciting base for uproarious comedy. One highlight of the film comes when Bob and Madeliene stage a screen fight of really magnificent proportions in order to attract the police and thus get an escort through the ring of Axis agents surrounding a Chicago apartment house. The spies are finally foiled by Percy, the Penguin, in a surprise ending.

"My Favorite Blonde" is the fastest and funniest of the long line of Hope hits, faster even than his "Caught in the Draft" and 'Nothing But the Truth."

"West of Tombstone"

America's two favorite western heroes gallop across the range... in search of new adventure on the Texas plains! Charles Starrett and Russell Hayden, the fightingest cowboys on the screen today, make the range ring with gunfire... while they battle bandits, "West of Tombstone"! Hoof-thundering thrills and rhythm are promised in this new double-powered, double-barreled action hit!

Blazing with the fury of mighty gun battles between desperate outlaws and the notorious Billy, the Kid, "West of Tombstone," which opens at the Capitol theatre next as the added hit, was directed by Howard Bretherton fro man original screen-play by Maurice Geraghty.

A funny cartoon and the 7th chapter of "Spy Smasher" complete the big weekend bill.

AT THE CAPITOL

Nazi spies lead Bob Hope and Madelein Carroll a merry chase in the latest Paramount fun film, "My Favorite Blonde," coming next to the Capitol Theatre. Part of the chasing is done in the clouds when Bob and Madeleine steal an airplane. On the same program, "West of Tombstone" starring Charles Starrett and Russell Hayden.

AT THE McCARTHY

Lou Costello, Mischa Auer and Bud Abbott in one of the side-splitting sequences of "Hold That Ghost" now at the McCarthy Theatre, in addition to Bob Hope in "Ghost Breakers" and the cartoon, "A Haunting We Will Go."

AT THE BELLE

Is there a new romance in Dr. Kildare's life? From the scene above between Lew Ayres and Ann Ayres (no relation) in "Dr. Kildare's Victory," now at the Belle, featuring Lionel Barrymore, it certainly looks like it. Frank Morgan and Kathryn Grayson in "The Vanishing Virginian" is the second M.G.M. feature attraction.

AT THE BELLE

"Dr. Kildare's Victory"

Two guaranteed Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature attractions are now being presented at the Belle Theatre in Frank Morgan, Kathryn Grayson and Spring Byington in "The Vanishing Virginian," a Frank Borzage directed production and Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore and lovely Ann Ayres in "Dr. Kildare's Victory," the latest of the popular medical dramas. The Belle News of the World, described by Lowell Thomas, completes the program.

"Wild Bill Hickok Rides"

"Wild Bill Hickok Rides," a thundering drama of the Old West, will be the next attraction at the Bell Theatre. Bruce Cabot is starred in the title role of the heroic marshal who did so much to bring law and order to the frontier towns. Co-starring with him is Constance Bennett, in the role of a gambling house owner, and Warren William as the suavest crook of frontier days. Also featured are Betty Brewer, Walter Catlett and many others.

"Thru Different Eyes"

Four pairs of eyes saw the crime; but four pairs of lips told different stories, while a man's life hung in the balance—proving that, when it's murder, seeing isn't always believing! But previewers who have seen 20th Century-Fox's latest baffler, "Thru Different Eyes," the mystery companion feature insist that it's one of the most unusual mystery thrillers of the year.

"Wabbit Who Come to Supper" is the title of a comic color cartoon to be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Ghost Breakers"

If you never saw a hair-raising comedy before, don't miss bubbling Bob Hope and sparkling Paulette Goddard in "Ghost Breakers," now at the McCarthy Theatre. It's thrilling and spoofing in just the right proportions with ghosts and gags following each other in rapid succession. One minute you hold your breath in suspense, and the next moment you let it go in a side-splitting laugh.

Bob Hope is at his best. Even the skeletons rattled in the closets from laughter when they weren't busy scaring people half to death. And, as an aside to the girls—and the boys—Paulette is something to see.

Hope and Miss Goddard don't keep the picture entirely to themselves. They have plenty of expert help. Richard Carlson, who plays the part of a playboy who doesn't play so well when he's cornered gives an excellent account of himself. Paul Lukas, whom we haven't seen often enough lately, hides his identity behind a flowing beard that makes a menace out of a former handsome leading man. Willie Best, who has been nicknamed "Syracuse," not because it's near "Rochester" or anything like that, is an excellent foil for Bob Hope, whose colored man-servant he plays. Anthony Quinn, well—you'll have to see him for yourself.

"The Ghost Breakers," and in case you don't know what ghost breakers are, they clean out haunted houses at the drop of a hat—starts off with a bang. Not a moment is wasted in getting into the story.

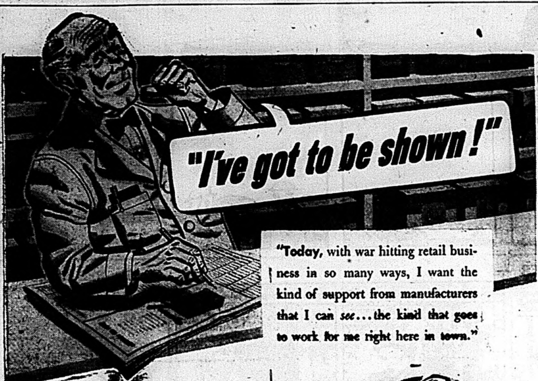
Paulette Goddard plays the part of a wealthy girl who prefers to live alone in a New York hotel. She suddenly finds that she has inherited a famous old castle on Black Island in Cuba. Ignoring the warnings of the Cuban Consuls and the attorney for the estate not to visit it, she prepares to go. Bob Hope, a gossipy radio commentator, hides in her trunk in the hotel after escaping from a threatening gangster he had offended on the air.

Delivered to her stateroom on the boat in the trunk he frightens her nearly to death when she opens it. Having heard the conversations he convinces her he is a ghost breaker of national reputation and insists on going with her on the adventure which turns out to be a romance.

Ominous threats punctuate the trip but the real adventure doesn't start until they arrive at the castle. Here they fight their way through a veritable chamber of horrors before they arrive at the reason for the great interest in having her give up the castle. They find it in the sub-cellar, but it wouldn't be fair to tell about it now. It is sufficient to say that the hero and heroine, having been through so much together, can't get along without each other.

Altogether, it's good entertainment for everyone.

Everyone loves to laugh and this program is a three-hour show of hilarity. The second feature is Abbott and Costello in "Hold That Ghost."



"I've got to be shown!"

"Today, with war hitting retail business in so many ways, I want the kind of support from manufacturers that I can see... the kind that goes to work for me right here in town."

1. "I want ads that help me answer my customers' questions and solve their wartime problems. When a manufacturer runs ads like that in my local newspaper, it really takes a big load off a retailer's shoulders... and it's a service to my customers, too."

2. "How to sell isn't my whole problem any more. I worry about what to sell, too... just as Mrs. Customer wonders what she can buy. The best way a manufacturer can help us both is with newspaper ads both she and I will be sure to read."

3. "New products are helping a lot to fill the gaps on my shelves. They help most, though, when they're pushed by newspaper ads... ads that show all my customers what they look like, and tell them these new items can be bought in stores like mine."

4. "A manufacturer's newspaper ads show me, too, that he's still mighty interested in my problems... even though he's got plenty of his own. His salesman may not call so often... but as long as his newspaper ads are pitching, I know he's backing me."

Wide-awake retailers... here in town and all over Canada... are realizing more and more this vital fact: In wartime especially, the best support a manufacturer can give them is advertising in their _local newspapers_. In scores of new ways, manufacturers' _newspaper_ advertising is helping retailers carry on through these critical days.

After the closing hymn and the National Anthem, the meeting was closed with prayer by Rev. L. W. Scott.

Trenton and District

Name Omitted

In yesterday's issue when giving the name of officers of the new "Good Cheer Club" recently organized by local citizens, the name of Mr. Fred Collins was not mentioned as Publicity Agent. Mr. Collins has accepted just such a position in this Club and well known in this town and district as an organizer.

No Action On Recreational Centre

Nothing has been heard recently of the construction of a bowling green and recreational area at the westerly end of the discussed harbor slip which was a few months ago energetically promoted by the Rotary Club. Citizens wonder whether this project has been dropped entirely or whether it has merely been postponed due to war or some such other reason. The recreational aspect held interest for many citizens, but the prospect of having an unsightly area cleaned up substantially appealed to many other residents.

YOU WOMEN WHO SUFFER FROM HOT FLASHES during 38 to 52 Years of Age!

If you—like so many women between the ages of 38 and 52—suffer from hot flashes, weak, dizzy, nervous feelings, distress of "irregularities", are blue at times—due to the middle age period in a woman's life—start at once—try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It's one of the most effective medicines you can buy that's made especially for women.

Pinkham's Compound does more than relieve distress. Taken regularly—it builds up resistance against such symptoms. It also is a fine tonic for the stomach!

Thousands upon thousands of women — rich and poor alike — have reported benefits. Also helpful for younger women to relieve female functional disturbances. Lydia Pinkham's Compound is well worth trying!

Carnival Land Appeals To All at Fair

Conklin Bros. Bring to Belleville Fair World's Greatest in Entertainment

THRILL A MOMENT

A glittering gay way of midway attractions from all corners of the earth, wartime wild animal circus and pageantry ordinarily scheduled for the Canadian National Exhibition are all combined in the mammoth Conklin Bros. carnival midway at the Belleville Fair this week.

With the conventional ballyhoo the joy zone of the show sees the conventional barkers of tradition in all of their glory presenting an assortment of spectacles and entertainers. Perhaps, the features of the fair midway are the new and daring rides that fascinate both young and old alike, as "Paddy" Conklin has purchased the latest "thrill equipment" on the North American continent for the entertainment of a war public.

Of particular interest along midway "main street" is Tommy McClure's Magazine Show with a bevy of beautiful girls who leave little to the imagination. Of course one cannot afford to pass up Terrell Jacob's wild animal act, without contradiction the most outstanding act of its nature in the world. For those interested in freaks of nature Frank Conklin has toured the four corners of the globe to collect the most interesting freaks that talk, walk or crawl. Yes, for true entertainment of the unadulterated nature, Belleville Fair goers cannot afford to miss a single performance along "the world's greatest midway."

New Masonic Temple at Madoc Dedicated by Grand Master

Masonic Dignitaries From Quinte District Assist at Opening

SPLENDID BUILDING

MADOC, Sept. 23 — (Special) — Combined colour of pageantry and solemnity which characterizes the ancient craft predominated as dignitaries from all parts of the province took part in the dedication of the new Masonic temple of Madoc Lodge A. F. & A. M. No. 8 in Madoc on Monday night. The new lodge situated in the heart of the village is complete in every detail and has new equipment and appointments. A sumptuous banquet was served in conjunction with the event by the ladies of the Red Cross.

Among the leading officers present to take part in the proceedings were: Most Wor. Bro. J. A. McCrae, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada in the province of Ontario; Most Wor. Bro. W. S. Herrington, K. C., of Napanee, Past Grand Master; Wors. Bros. Col. E. C. Hodgins, Kingston, Grant Master of Ceremonies; Wor. Bro. Lt.-Col. W. E. Kidd of Kingston, Grand Chaplain, Grand Senior Warden Rt. Wor. Bro. Oscar Morrow of Brighton; Grand Junior Warden Rt. Wor. Bro. J. Owen Herity of Belleville, Rt. Wor. Bro. George T. Little, Brighton, D.D.G.M. of Prince Edward District; Wor. Bro. J. E. Semple of Belleville; Wor. Bro. R. D. Adams, Wor. Bro. Roy Anderson, Rt. Wor. Bro. Clem Ketcheson; Rt. Wor. Bro. Dr. E. A. Carleton; Wor. Bro. T. W. Solmes, Wor. Bro. C. E. Macklin; Wor. Master of Stirling Lodge A. F. & A. M. 69; Rt. Wor. Bro. C. Buskard of Deloro; Wor. Bro. Ken. Ham, Napanee; Rt. Wor. Bro. Frank Pringle of Melrose I. P.D.D.G.M. of Prince Edward District; Rt. Wor. Bro. Geo. West of Madoc; Rt. Wor. Bro. E. G. Dixon of Hamilton, Grand Secretary, and Wor. Bro. Geo. S. White of Madoc.

A Splendid Banquet

At the splendid banquet served by the ladies of the Madoc Red Cross Society in the Armouries, the large number of visiting Brethren listened with interest to splendid addresses given by high officers in the form of toasts. The toast to Grand Lodge was proposed by Rt. Wor. Bro. George West, Reeve of Madoc village.

M. Wor. Bro. J. A. McCrae, Grand Master

Responding to the toast to Grand Lodge Most Worshipful Bro. J. A. McCrae, Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Canada, in the Province of Ontario, expressed his gratitude for the eloquent manner in which the toast was introduced and also for the kind hospitality and good fellowship extended to the Grand Lodge officers by the local Brethren. He congratulated the Madoc lodge on completing the fine lodgeroom so well fitted for the benefit of the craft. "It is always pleasing to officiate at a ceremony of dedication because it testifies to the faith of members in continuity of Masonry". He wished the lodge God speed in its mission of carrying on Masonry is made for the years to come.

Continuing, he summarized the contribution made by Grand Lodge to War Relief stating, that in seventeen months to end July, 1942, the sum of $237,000 had been subscribed and paid in response to an appeal made by Grand Lodge by the lodges of this jurisdiction. In the first five months of the first year $116,000 had been sent forward and in the next year $10,000 a month had been sent in. This is a noble achievement and showed a fundamental point of Masonry being practiced to a generous degree in this jurisdiction. Grand Lodge has resolved to continue this fund. Unfortunately the need of assistance in the future may not be only in Britain but in the future may be in New Zealand, Australia and along the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards. Wherever the enemy strikes, assistance will be needed, so I urge your continued support to this worthy cause." The objective set for the coming year is $100,000.

Centres Around Building

The ceremony of dedication centres around the building of the great temple so many years ago, which occupies such a prominent part in symbolism and ritual of Masonry. The temple of that day housed the Holy of Holies. Masonry has three dimensions, length, breadth, and height. Length may be compared to individual characteristics of man."

The breadth of Masonry is measured by our relationship to fellowmen and the height of Masonry is our relation to the Great Architect of the Universe. The cardinal virtues of Masonry include, Temperance, Fortitude, Prudence and Justice. These are the basic characteristics of true citizenship. Free Masonry is a characteristic institution of the Anglo Saxon race. The embodiment of these virtues in the temperament of our race has made for the stability of Government of these long centuries. Democracy in principle is based upon total practice of these virtues, therefore Masonry becomes a training ground for intelligent citizenship. Much is being said regarding post-war activity. Masonry has no political program, but can continue by cultivating in its members these virtues as well as love for truth, benevolence and above all a real cultivation of true brotherhood.

The toast to Masonic brethren in the armed services was proposed by Wor. Bro. Thos. Rupert, who stated that Madoc lodge had a total of 13 officers and 14 men and response was made in a brilliant speech by Wor. Bro. Geo. S. White, M. P. for Hastings-Peterboro.

Wor. Bro. (Dr.) Eagleson proposed the toast to visitors and those responding included Most. Wor. Bro. W. Herrington, Napanee; Wor. Bro. Lt.-Col. W. E. Kidd, Kingston; Rt. Wor. Bro. Geo. F. Little D.D.G.M. and Rt. Wor. Bro. J. Owen Herity of Belleville.

POLICE BLOTTER

Thieves broke into the premises at 186 William Street and stole $55 in currency, Belleville police learned yesterday. The occupants of the dwelling were absent from the city on vacation from Aug. 18th until Sept. 22nd., the robbery not being discovered until the residents returned home.

Two bicycles were reported stolen from parking positions along upper Front Street late last night. The bikes are the property of Douglas Coleman and Joseph Whalen, both of this city.

Ralph Hay, 30 Sinclair Street, parked his motor car outside his home last evening and later discovered a green colored rug had been stolen from the vehicle.

Provincial Police received complaints from motorists regarding horses running at large along what is commonly referred to as the Point Anne lane. Tom Pappas Belleville, added that one of the animals had run across the highway into the side of his motor car causing slight damage last night. The Provincial authorities are investigating the reports.

Two minor motor accidents were reported locally Tuesday when motor cars driven by Robert McPherson, R.R. No. 6, Belleville, collided with another automobile driven by E. N. Wilson, of Roslin on Front Street. Upon the arrival of police the matter of damages had been amicably settled.

Near the intersection of John St. and Victoria Ave., a truck, driven by Mac Green, 102 Chatham Street, was in collision with a motor car driven by Rev. L. M. Sharoe, of Lakefield. In this case an insurance adjuster was called to the scene to make adjustments. No charges was deemed necessary in either case.

AMBITIOUS UNDERTAKING

Picton, Ont., Sept. 23 —(CP)— Mrs. James Hedges, recognized as Picton's champion knitter, has now started on her most ambitious undertaking. She is embroidering on a quilt the names of all Prince Edward County men on active service.

Many Fine Attractions at Fair Well Patronized by Large Crowd

The stamp of public approval on any project is the public's attendance. That the Belleville Fair is living up to its first-night reputation as being one of the best exhibitions since its inception was exemplified on the second day of the fair yesterday. The crowd numerically was one of the largest seen on a "second-night" and weather permitting, officials expect tonight's attendance will equal if not better any previous figures.

Despite the fact that rain threatened during the early part of the afternoon it did not dampen the enthusiasm of thousands of city and out-of-town fair patrons. Rain did fall for a few minutes in the afternoon, but the weather-man was in a Fair mood and the clouds dispersed as quickly as they came up. The evening was cool but typical of Autumn fair weather.

The crowd Tuesday night was easily an out-of-town one. From the far-flung sections of Hastings and its neighboring counties came rural and small community residents as well as those from district urban centres.

Good Grandstand Performance

They thronged the grandstand where Billy Garden's clever artists and rodeo actors performed in one of the most outstanding outdoor shows to play the city. They thrilled to the music of the Belleville Municipal band and clamored for more enjoyment in the illuminated tented city that is the Midway. They milled around outside attractions and saw the inner mysteries that are part and parcel of a modern midway.

They brought their wives and children with them. The brilliantly illuminated rides rang to the clamor of human enjoyment, both children and grown-ups.

The fair is a respite from arduous war labor and agricultural pursuits and thousands of people are taking advantage of not only this opportunity to 'rest' but to enjoy what is now conceded to be the best exhibition since the inception of the fair many years ago.

Other Exhibits Attract Crowds

While the Midway has undoubtedly the most powerful attraction of the many features offered at the fair, other exhibitions are getting their share of attention from the public. The buildings which house features of industrial and war service phases are crowded with people afternoon and evening. The live stock and other agricultural exhibits are meccas for crowds of urban as well as rural residents while other features of interest to the farmer are well patronized.

The fair will close tonight, Wednesday, and weather permitting, attendance records are expected to go by the board. Organization of this year's exhibition has been outstanding and is one of the main reasons for the success of the fair.

Collegiate Opening Delayed two Weeks

Picton, Sept. 23—Owing to the shortage of labor in Prince Edward County canning factories and on the farms, Picton Collegiate and Vocational Institute will not reopen for another two weeks, students were informed this morning when they met for classes.

It had previously been decided to open today but canneries and farmers urgently appealed for a further extension as the students form an important part of the labor supply. The Collegiate Board acceded to their request as they had been requested by the Departments of Education and Labor to give every co-operation possible.

Principal R. L. Perkin issued a call for volunteers Tuesday morning and practically all the students will be placed in some capacity. Many stated they would be useful aiding at home.

At present there is a great rush of tomatoes, due to the very warm weather of last week. Factories have been limiting the number of bushels per acre farmers can bring in at one time. These plants have been unable to handle the big crop though operating on Sundays and several nights a week.

Fine Program Planned For Fair at Tweed

Officers and Directors of Tweed Fair, to be held next Thursday and Friday, October 1st and 2nd, have planned one of the finest programs in history. Head-lining the show will be two good horse races, the 2.22 class and free-for-all; a midway with rides and general entertainment, The Hastings & Prince Edward Regimental Band, and a bandstand program. President T. C. Graham has stated that with good weather, Tweed Agricultural Society hope to shatter all attendance records. The drawing match for heavy horses, the baby show and novelty contests are likely to draw big entry lists. Miss Mary Forster's dancing group of Belleville always a popular attraction, will be on hand with several new numbers. Altogether, Tweed Fair should provide an afternoon of interest, entertainment and education for everyone. As one of the oldest established Fairs in the district, the Tweed Exhibition should more than go over the top this year.

LAUNCH BUSINESS VENTURE

Bloomsburg, Pa., Sept. 23 —(AP)—Three trustees who launched a business venture in the Bloomsburg jail were only one step ahead of the sheriff. In fact, they ran right into him as they came out of a storeroom in the jail where they had looted coin boxes of confiscated pinball machines.

KILL 13 BUSHELS OF STARLINGS

Brantford, Ont., Sept. 23 (CP)—When sharpshooters here open up on starlings, they knock them down by the bushel. They figure there are 400 starlings to the bushel and so far they have killed 5,200 birds—or 13 bushels.

Examination of Water Standpipe Reveals Considerable Deterioration On Inside Surface of Structure

The serious conditions of the water standpipe of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission, revealed after sand-blasting operations had been started by workmen of the Dominion Steeplejack Company, Toronto, is such that the useful life of the pipe must be considered nearly over.

This statement was embodied in a report of an engineer of the firm of Gore and Storrie, Toronto, who inspected the pipe a few days ago. The report was presented to members of the Commission at yesterday's regular meeting. Mayor Glen E. Thompson was not present.

The standpipe has deteriorated to a greater extent than was indicated at a previous inspection, the report stated. Cleaning of the steel plates by sandblast operations has revealed defects which before were covered by a scale of rust.

At each joint, a proportion of the caulked edge has rusted away, and recaulking of the joints, necessitating the chipping of the exposed edges, would be a costly operation.

Rivet heads are in a bad condition, the report said and some leakage can be expected. Due to war exigencies these rivets cannot be obtained.

To Paint Both Surfaces.

After the engineer's observations, he stated that the cost of carrying out the necessary repairs, even if the material could be obtained would be greater than warranted. He advocated cleaning and painting to arrest deterioration until the war is over.

It will then be necessary to take down the pipe and construct a new tank of large capacity.

The present tank, the report said, "is believed to have been built 55 years ago and has not been painted inside for many years. It must be considered near the end of its useful life".

Use Sandblast

Workmen at present are engaged in sandblast and cleaning and painting operations. After the pipe is cleaned it will be given three coats of special paint in the interior. The outside will also be painted. The tank is 120 feet in height and has a capacity of 200,000 gallons.

CONSERVATIVES

subject of leadership and policy" would be placed before the delegates.

In Confused Status

The leadership of the Party has been in a more or less confused status since the election of 1940 when Hon. R. J. Manion failed to win a seat. He resigned and Hon. R. B. Hanson has since acted as House Leader.

Last November a conference of prominent Conservatives at Ottawa induced Mr. Meighen, who led the Party from 1919 to 1926, to resign his seat in the Senate and accept the leadership. Mr. Meighen did so but failed to secure election to the House of Commons in the seat opened for him in York South.

Mr. Meighen's decision to throw the questions of leadership and policy open to a national convention was no surprise to informed Party men. Ever since his defeat in South York, he is known to have regarded the position as satisfactory and important elements in the party, some of which were opposed to Mr. Meighen becoming leader in the manner in which he did last November, have been pressing for a convention.

Critical of Government

The Labor Day weekend meeting of "unofficial" Conservatives at Port Hope, Ont., was organized by men who wanted to get the position of the party clarified. While it did not discuss leadership nor take any formal stand it drew up a "statement of aims and objectives" which may be submitted to the proposed National convention as a suggested policy.

Mr. Meighen's statement in Toronto was critical of the Mackenzie King government for failing to broaden its base and take in men of political connections of a National government by leading members of the Conservative party.

Mr. Meighen said these views were shared by a large proportion of the Canadian people and the time had come when "an opportunity should be given, not only to Conservatives but to all Canadians who think as we do about this war and its conduct on the part of Canada, to get together and make a united effort to bring better things about."

Open to All Citizens

Just how elements other than Conservative—Mr. Meighen said the doors of the convention should be open to all citiens without regard to former party affiliations who think as Conservatives do—will be represented at the convention will presumably be something for the interim committee to work out.

The last Conservative convention held in Ottawa in 1938, which chose Dr. Manion as leader, consisted of all former Conservative Lieutenant-Governors, all Conservate Privy Councillors, Senators and members of the House of Commons, all Conservative candidates defeated at the previous election. Conservative members of Provincial Legislatures, Provincial party leaders, ex-members of Conservative provincial cabinets, members of the National Convention Committee and sub-committees, a certain number of delegates-at-large from each province, special youth delegates and four delegates from each Federal constituency.

R. A. F. RAIDS SUBMARINE YARDS AT FLENSBURG
U. S. DESTROYER MISSING, PRESUMABLY SUNK

Raid Accompanied By Coast Command Attacks on Convoy

Three Medium-Sized Ships Declared Hit Off Netherlands Coast

10 BOMBERS MISSING

London, Sept. 24. (CP)— British bombers in their first night raid against Germany this week attacked objectives in the north and northwest, including submarine yards at Flensburg, last night, the Air Ministry announced today. At least two R.C.A.F. bomber squadrons participated in the night's assault.

This thrust accompanied a raid by coastal command aircraft on an Axis convoy off the Netherlands Coast in which three medium-sized ships were declared hit.

"Ten of our bombers are missing from these operations", the Air Ministry said.

Authorities said that overnight aerial activity against Britain was confined to flights by three Nazi bombers. One was destroyed before it crossed the coast.

"Bombs were dropped at one place causing slight damage and a small number of casualties", an Air and Home Ministries communique said today.

Fires Quickly Dealt With

Some explosive-type incendiary bombs were dropped on a town in northeast England and one or two fires started, but authorities said these were dealt with quickly and the damage was slight.

The last time the R.A.F. was over North Germany was September 14, when Wilhelmshaven was blasted. Other familiar targets in that area include Bremen, Bremerhaven, Hamburg and Emden.

Flensburg is a Baltic port in the Prussian Province of Schleswig-Holstein, near the Danish frontier.

A Berlin broadcast asserted the R..F. "made isolated nuisance raids over a North German area last night and DNB, German News and Propaganda Agency, claimed eight bombers were shot down.

Orange and Red Flashes Seen

In the coastal command operations Netherlands naval bombers scored hits on three medium-sized merchant ships off The Netherlands Island of Texel.

In the brilliant light of the parachute flares dropped to help the attackers, the observer on one plane was able to watch the entire course of the fall of his stick of bombs culminating in a great spurt of orange and red flame from the stern of the attacked vessel.

The pilot of another Hudson sighted two cargo ships and bombed the larger one. The rear-gunner of the plane reported that a direct hit was scored on the after-part of the ship's bridge.

A huge orange and red flash was seen on another vessel of the convoy after an attack by a third plane of the squadron.

Machine-Gunners Of RCAF Squadron On Flensburg Raid Have Good Workout

SMASH SEARCHLIGHTS

(By ALAN RANDAL)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 24 (C.P. Cable) — Machine-gunners of a Royal Canadian Air Force Halifax squadron had a work-out last night when they attacked Flensburg, Nazi U-boat base, under the leadership of Wing Commander Len Fraser, of Vancouver.

The Canadians reported they whipped through cloud patches and dropped bombs from hilltop level.

While the bomb-aimers were pinpointing, the pilots weaved their aircraft through interlacing flak and the gunners opened up. Several reported the satisfaction of seeing menacing searchlight beams wink out.

Then the Canadians returned from their target "on the deck," whistling full-throttle over the heavily-flakked Island of Sylt.

PO. C. W. Higgins of Charlottetown, said his altimeter read 100 feet above sea level as he sped over rooftops on one part of the homeward route.

PO. Larry Murphy and PO. Floyd Luxford, of East Angus, Que., gunners, each put out searchlights as Fraser brought their plane down low. PO. Phil LePage of Quebec, also said he doused a light.

Murphy reported a big explosion followed by a glaring red light after the bombing, adding: "It may have been the gas works or a submarine plant, but with a good deal of smoke over the target it is impossible to say where the fires were."

Premier Bracken Not Interested

Winnipeg, Sept.. 24(CP)—Premier John Bracken of Manitoba said in interview today that he has "no personal desire" to be associated with any party at this time.

Mr. Bracken made the statement in regard to an Ottawa report of a Conservative spokesman who said if Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen retires from the national leadership of the Conservative party, Mr. Bracken "should not be overlooked" as a possible choice.

Mr. Bracken said: "I have no personal desire to go to Ottawa for any party in any capacity, nor am I interested in becoming associated with any single partisan group in Ottawa or anywhere else during such a serious crisis as that through which we are now passing."

The Ottawa report stated also that the possibility of making Mr. Bracken national leader of the party had been discussed with several Conservative members of the House of Commons.

"One can't stop people from thinking," the Premier said. "What I have said explains my position and expresses my views."

Plane Crashes Into Grand River

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 24 (CP) — The two Royal Canadian Air Force pilots who were killed yesterday near Dunnville when their plane crashed into the Grand River, were identified today as Flt. Sgt. Norman E. Kirk of Hamilton, and WO. James I. McIntyre of Aberfoyle, Ontario. Both were instructors.

The men were on a routine flight when the plane suddenly dived earthward. They were believed to have lost their lives when it struck the water. Half submerged, the plane had to be raised before the bodies could be recovered.

A court of inquiry was ordered.

LOST—12-BED HOSPITAL

Philadelphia, Sept. 24 (AP). — John Michel, Red Cross executive, made this appeal: "Will the party who found a 12-bed emergency hospital in North Philadelphia yesterday kindly return it to the Red Cross?" Michel explained that a cabinet maker, who built the interior of the 20 by 30 foot canvas emergency station, was delivering it when he lost the whole thing off his truck.

10,500-Ton Liberty Freighter Hits Water 10 Days After Keel is Laid

Portland, Ore., Sept. 24 (AP).— Ten days after its keel was laid, the 10,500-ton Liberty freighter Joseph N. Teal slid into the Williamette River here today.

Thus the Henry J. Kaiser Oregon shipbuilding yards trimmed a full fourteen days from the record for ship construction.

Kaiser himself arrived here early today and witnessed the launching of the ten-day ship. Work on the Teal, named for an early-day Oregon industrial leader, began at 12:01 a.m. Sept. 13. Last midnight, 240 hours later, some of the hundreds of men working on the hull began clearing the way for launching.

When the Teal hit the water she was 87 per cent complete, said Albert Bauer, assistant general manager of the yard. Ordinarily a vessel is 79 per cent finished at launching.

The yard hopes to complete the ship and give it a trial run by Sunday. If successful, seventeen days will have been clipped from the keel-to-delivery record of thirty-one days, jointly held by the Oregan yard and the Richmond No. 2 yard.

The previous record for launching, twenty-four days after keel-laying, was held by the Richmond yard. The Teal, if delivered Sunday, will be ready for the open sea two weeks after the keel was laid.

CANADA'S GUN PRODUCTION SHOWS BIG GAIN

One Month's Production Of Guns Over 36 Times Greater Than In 1941

MANY TYPES

Ottawa, Sept. 24 (CP)—Canada now is producing in one month more than three times as many naval and field guns and small arms as it turned out in all of 1941, the Munitions and Supply Department announced last night.

During August, said a departmental statement, three Canadian plants each started production on a new type of ordnance—a new type of 4-inch naval gun, a large anti-aircraft gun barrel, and the Browning tank-type gun.

It added: "There now are 12 types of guns, 16 types of carriages or mountings, and 10 types of small arms being produced in Canada. In addition to the foregoing new types, these include the 25-pounder artillery gun, carriage and trailer two types of tank guns and mountings, two types of anti-tank guns and carriages, Bofors anti-aircraft guns and mountings 3.7-inch anti-aircraft gun and equipment 4-inch naval guns, 12-pounder naval guns 2-pounder naval guns, naval mountings, and small arms of various types.

Indian Mob Massacres Survivors of Air Crew

New Delhi, Sept. 24 (C.P. Reuters)—An Indian mob massacred the survivors of a crew of a military plane which crashed west of Narayanpur in Bihar Province, September 18th., Sir Sultan Ahmed, law member, told the Legislative Assembly today. The pilot was killed in the crash and two others killed by the mob.

This was among a series of atrocities which the member cited in reply to a question regarding alleged excesses by police and the military in dealing with unruly crowds.

"In Marhowrah, Bihar Province, one British officer and four Britons of other ranks, part of a detachment on protective duty, were ambushed as they alighted from a car in a field and speared or beaten to death," he said.

He also referred to the murder of two air force officers and added, "the brutality and ferocity with which they were murdered display the colossal callousness of the mob."

MIGHT HAVE JAPS IN MIND

Chicago, Sept. 24 —(AP)— James A. Boyle went shopping for his son, a gunner on a dive-bomber in the Solomon Islands. "He told me to buy him a 10-inch hunting knife," Boyle said. The letter didn't specify for what purpose the knife was to be used.

LOTS OF MONEY IN N.O.

New Orleans, Sept. 24 (AP).—The so-called "New Orleans Million Dollar Breakfast" scheduled for Friday morning—with a $1,000 war bond as a meal ticket—is pleasantly out of hand. Subscriptions, the local war bond committee reported, now total $2,802,150.

Russ Disappointment Grows as Opening Of 2nd Front Delayed

Moscow, Sept. 24 —(AP)— Wendell L. Willkie said today he will take back to Washington from Soviet Russia a story of growing disappointment and dissatisfaction over the failure of the United States and Britain to establish a second front.

"I feel it and you must," said Willkie.

He presented Premier Stalin a large, thick and square envelope containing a personal message from President Roosevelt at a conference with the Soviet Premier in the Kremlin last night.

Two Hours With Stalin

Stalin and Willkie, President Roosevelt's personal representative on a tour of strategic world centres from Cairo to Chungking, met for two hours.

With them was Vyacheslav Molotov, Soviet Foreign Commissar, who himself visited Allied war leaders in London and Washington last spring and returned with an announced complete understanding on "the urgent tasks of creating a second front in Europe in 1942."

Willkie has been asked on all sides during his visit to Moscow about the prospects for opening of a second land front. One of his responses was: "I want to check a lot of things here."

Soviet newspapers published large pictures of Stalin and Willkie on their front pages.

Moscow Defences Strong

Before his meeting with the Soviet Premier, Willkie was shown the defences of Moscow and said that they were "the most impressive of any city I've seen this year."

"I believe Hitler would have a very tough job ever taking Moscow," he added.

Many women in uniform were among the defence units he inspected.

Willkie also visited a number of factories.

Cooler to Foreigners

To foreigners who have been working here since the Washington-London-Moscow agreements on the war were announced June 11 it has been no secret that individuals are gradually getting cooler treatment from the Russians, both officials and private citizens, as a result of the lack of action toward a second front.

All Feel the Same

To date Willkie has talked to the highest officials of the government and to workers in factories.

They all expressed appreciation for aid from Britain and the United States, but Willkie said it was apparent that what they really want is a second front.

Unless one is created, they are going to feel terribly let down, he said.

It was assumed here that Willkie will report to President Roosevelt this growing coolness.

After seeing Stalin he said nothing that would indicate he did not discover a feeling of disappointment there, too.

American newspaper correspondents in Moscow have begun to hear more and more outright criticism of the United States and Britain recently.

Persons the Americans meet casually in the street bring up the question of the second front and ask in plain language why none has been established.

Such Russians, feeling keenly the German drive into the Caucasus and against Stalingrad, say that in the absence of a second front they are shouldering the burden of the war with Hitler.

FIND 16 BODIES OF 25 DROWNED IN GEORGIAN BAY

Department of Transport to Consider Formal Probe in Disaster

BOAT FOUNDERS

Midland, Ont., Sept. 24. (CP)— With 16 bodies already recovered, search continued on Georgian Bay today for the bodies of nine other men who lost their lives Monday night in the sudden sinking of the motor launch Wa-Wi-Net.

The powerful twin-engined craft, with a party of 42 men on board, foundered at 10 o'clock in the mile-wide channel between Beausoleil and Pleasant Islands, eight miles from here. Sixteen men made their way safely to Beausoleil and one reached the shore of Pleasant Island.

A preliminary inquiry into the accident—one of the worst of its kind in the history of the Great Lakes—was held here in camera yesterday by the Dominion Department of Transport. The Department will now consider "the question of a formal investigation into the disaster."

Ontario Probing Drownings

In addition to the Federal investigation, Provincial authorities are probing the drownings under direction of Attorney-General Gordon D. Conant.

The deaths ended a seven-hour celebration of the completion of a war contract at the Midland Foundry and Machine Company plant here.

Bert Corbeau of Midland, owner and pilot of the boat and former National Hockey League defence star was one of the company officials drowned.

All of the members of the cruise but one were officials or employees of the Midland Foundry. One man was an inspector for a Toronto war industry.

GENERAL'S DAUGHTER STARTS BASIC TRAINING

Toronto, Sept. 24. (CP) — Pte. Evelyn Constantine of the Canadian Women's Army Corps was in Toronto toda to start her basic training in the military district commanded by her father, Maj.-Gen. C. F. Constantine, officer commanding Military District No. 2.

Enlisting in Kingston, Ont., Sept. 17, Pte. Constantine is a member of a class of 400 recruits who will start training here thise week.

BBC APPEALS ANEW TO FRENCH PEOPLE TO LEAVE AREA

Declares Drive Being Prepared to be Launched Without Warning

DETAILS WITHHELD

London, Sept. 24 (CP) — Declaring that the United Nations are preparing for an offensive against Germany which will be launched without warning, the BBC appealed anew to the French people last night to co-operate by evacuating French coastal areas.

"In the course of our military operations," the message said, "it was necessary, and today it is more necessary than ever, to envisage the possibility of landings by British and Allied troops on French soil, of operations by our navy in French territorial waters, and attacks by the R.A.F. on military objectives in occupied France.

"An offensive of the United Nations is being prepared. On the day when we can be assured of attaining our goal—which is nothing less than the annihilation of Hitlerite Germany—this offensive will be launched.

"No one will be warned in advance of the attack or the point at which it will take place, but when the moment comes to call for the co-operation of the French people as a whole we will keep our promise and let you know in time."

The announcer recalled that a series of warnings had been broadcast to the French in the last six months to "prevent as far as humanly possible the useless shedding of French blood."

"By following our advice," he said, "you will contribute to the success of present and future operations that form the prelude to full-scale action which has been so long awaited."

Stockholm, Sept. 24 (C.P.-Reuters)—The Swedish newspaper Social Demokraten reported today that Canadian-led assault on the Nazi-held French port of Dieppe last month caused a wave of nervousness among German troops in Norway.

These forces, the newspaper said, began immediately to strengthen their networks of defences along the northern coast.

At Narvik, Social Demokrater continued, machine guns and light artillery have been posted in many houses and established at vantage points near the harbor.

ALLIED BOMBERS INCESSANTLY RAID JAPANESE BASES

Enemy Greatly Hampered in Supplying Army Near Port Moresby

JAP DRIVE STALLED

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Sept. 24 —(CP)— Clashes between Allied and Japanese patrols in the jungles around Ioribaiwa, 32 miles north of Port Moresby, were renewed yesterday as Allied fighters and bombers pressed incessant attacks on enemy bases at Buna and Kokoda.

Casualties were suffered on both sides during the patrol fighting on the southern slopes of New Guinea's high-peaked Owen Stanley mountains, a spokesman at Allied headquarters said, but there was no indication of any further Japanese advance.

It was believed here that continuous strafing of the enemy communication lines between Buna and Ioribaiwa was greatly hindering the Japanese in the already difficult task of keeping their forward troops supplied with food and ammunition.

A communique announced that Allied fighters had made three sweeps over the Buna area yesterday, raking seven barges with cannon and machine-gun fire on the first foray and blasting supply dumps and buildings in subsequent sallies.

For the first time in more than a week Japanese fighter planes challenged the Allied raiders, six Zeros taking the air in an effort to break up the attack. The attempt was unsuccessful, although one Allied plane was lost.

The fighter sweeps followed a night bombing assault on Buna during which one-ton bombs were dropped on airdrome installations, causing large fires.

In the Kokoda area, between Buna and the Japanese advance posts, Allied fighters shot up a bridge and an enemy pack train.

A single Japanese plane appeared at sunset yesterday over Port Moresby and dropped several bombs, all of which, a communique said, fell harmlessly in scrub growth.

May Ask Increase Of Working Hours In U. S. Coal Mines

Washington, Sept. 24 — (AP) — Fuels Co-ordinator Harold L. Ickes today summoned producers and labor representatives to a conference here Tuesday to consider increased working hours in coal mines to meet war-time requirements.

Contracts of the United Mine Workers of America (C. I. O.) generally call for a five-day 35-hour week in both bituminous and anthracite mines. Anthracite contracts, however, allow for a six-day week 12 weeks a year beginning in November.

United Mine Workers Officials said they understood Ickes would ask for a six-day, 24-hour week.

RAIN DISCLOSES POCKETBOOK

Dundalk, Ont., Sept. 24 (CP) — Elvin Stewart, of Maple Valley District, plowed a one and a half acre area of ground for the second time without finding his pocketbook, containing $45 in cash. Then torrential rains washed the loose soil from the pocketbook and Stewart's father located it with contents intact.

Italians Very Unhappy Because Reds Concealed Bridges Across Don River

New York, Sept. 24 (AP).—Russian ingenuity in the use of concealed bridges for retreat and counter-attack in the battle of the Don bend draws plaintive comment from Il Giornale d'Italia of Rome.

"The Soviets," said the newspaper in a dispatch broadcast today by the Berlin radio, "built several dozen bridges across that river (the Don) which were, however, completely invisible to Italian ground troops and also to the air force because they were laid about a foot and a half below the water's surface."

Moving up or withdrawing, the Russians waded knee-deep across these bridges by night. The dispatch said the trick was discovered when a Russian soldier pursued by Italian infantrymen escaped by striding across one of the spans.

Craft Disappears In S. W. Pacific Without Trace

Jarvis En Route From Solomons To Repair Base When She Vanished

U. S. TRANSPORT SUNK

Washington, Sept. 24 (AP)—The Navy Department announced today that the United States destroyer Jarvis had disappeared in the Southwest Pacific without leaving a trace, presumably sunk by enemy submarines or aircraft, and that the auxiliary transport Little had been sunk during recent operations in the Solomons.

Possible loss of life on the two ships was estimated at 250 men.

The Jarvis was en route from the Solomons to a repair base when she vanished several weeks ago. She had been damaged during enemy air attack off Guadalcanal in the Solomons.

Approximately half of the personnel of the Little was saved when she went down.

The loss included the commanding officers, Lt.-Cmdr. William Walter Graham Jr., of the Jarvis, and Lt.-Cmdr. Gus B. Lofberg of the Little.

Complement of Jarvis

The Jarvis, according to Jane's Fighting Ships, had a normal complement of 172 officers and men. The 1,500-ton vessel was a modern ship, having been launched in May 1937. She was built at the Puget Sound, Wash., navy yard.

The Little, a converted 25-year old destroyer of 1,060 tons, probably had between 150 to 200 men on board. Since half this total personnel was saved the Little's losses may have been between 75 and 100 men.

The United States, on the basis of the navy's published reports, now has had five ships sunk and five damaged in the Solomons offensive compared with the enemy's 22 or more in operations among those islands.

Say Nazis Hasten Set-up of A. A. Batteries And Sowing of Mines

London, Sept. 24—(CP)—Norwegian sources said today the Germans are hastening the installation of anti-aircraft batteries and sowing thousands of mines along the Norwegian coast in a widespread tightening of anti-invasion defences.

At Narvik, the far northern Atlantic port, informants said, the Germans have set up machine-guns and light artillery in every house, and cannon in the centre of the town.

Body is Found By Three Brothers

Midland, Ont., Sept. 24. (CP)— The body of Bill Clark of Midland, who was drowned Monday night when the launch Wa-Wi-Net sank off Beausoleil Island in Georgian Bay, was found yesterday by his three brothers.

Alan and James Clark of Kirkland Lake, Ont., and Donald Clark of Manitoulin Island, Ont., hired an outboard motor boat and grappling equipement in Midland to aid in recovering bodies of those lost in the sinking.

After dragging three hours they located a body and raised it to the surface. It was the body of their brother.

Tananarive's Population Cheers British Troops

London, Sept. 24 (CP)—The Vichy French garrison of Tananarive surrendered unconditionally yesterday and British troops occupied the Madagascar capital just a fortnight after their landings on the west coast of the island, it was announced today.

A communique said the troops were "received with cheering" by the population when they marched into the city after breaking through suddenly-stiffened Vichy resistance 15 miles north of the capital.

Antalaha, 200 miles south of Diego Suarez, on the northeast coast, also was occupied early yesterday morning, the communique said.

Men on Leave To Be Given Ration Cards

Ottawa, Sept. 24 —(CP)— Special arrangements for providing ration cards for men on leave from the armed services were announced today by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

The regulations, set up after consultation with representatives of the armed forces, provide for temporary ration cards for sailors, soldiers and airmen when on subsistence or on leave of seven days or more, the announcement said, and are designed to simplify the procedure for all concerned.

Men and women living out of barracks and on subsistence allowance will be provided by their units with temporary ration cards, good for 10 weeks, and if still on subsistence at the end of that period must re-apply for cards. If they are taken off subsistence, the unit is responsible for collection of the cards.

Those who were on subsistence before July 1 and who have permanent ration books are entitled to retain them so long as they remain on subsistence.

The statement said non-commissioned officers and men of the army and navy get passes when proceeding on leave, and these are to be presented at any office of the board for issue of temporary ration cards. Army and navy officers are not issued passes, but arrangements have been made with the Defence Department to give them chits with which to obtain ration cards. Should any officer apply before this arrangement has come into operation, the rationing officer may use his discretion.

TOWN OF RYE BOMBED

London, Sept. 24—(AP)— Authorities today permitted disclosure that Rye was the town on the British southeast coast where a lone German raider bombed a motion picture theatre Tuesday afternoon. Five persons, including one theatre employee, were killed.

15 LBS. TEA, COFFEE STOLEN

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 24 (CP). —Fifteen pounds of tea and coffee have been stolen from a locked truck owned by George Rookley, of Niagara Falls. The theft is the first to have occurred here since rationing came into effect.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

MISS S. MacDONALD TO SPEAK IN CITY

Belleville women will be afforded the opportunity of hearing at first hand how the war effects the women of Britain when at a lecture at St. Andrew's Church Hall this week Miss Sheila MacDonald, daughter of the late Ramsay MacDonald, former Prime Minister of Great Britain will speak to the Women's Canadian Club.

This is the second tour of Canada to be made by Miss MacDonald as guest speaker at Canadian Clubs. She first visited Canada last year but returned to this country early in the summer with an up-to-date story for Canadian listeners. She is at present living with her brother Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, High Commissioner for the United Kingdom, at Ottawa.

AYRSHIRE EXHIBIT HIGHEST AT FAIR

Although the display of cattle, exhibited at the Belleville Fair this year, was not exactly as large in quantity as some former years, the quality of this livestock was definitely of a much better grade, according to fair judges. Ayrshire exhibits dominated the show when 60 head were on display. There were also 53 Jersey, 26 Holsteins and 20 Shorthorns comprising the cattle show. Two herds of Holstein cattle, which were expected did not arrive for competition.

OFFICIALLY LISTED AS "LOST AT SEA"

Jack Parsons, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parsons, who was reported missing following the sinking by enemy action of H.M.C.S. Raccoon a few days ago, is now officially reported as "lost at sea."

Relatives of the young sailor received official notice from the Dominion Government to this effect today together with expressions of sympathy.

IMPUDENT TRANSIENT GETS PROMPT ANSWER

Door-to-door panhandlers are busy in the city. A case of sheer nerve was reported by a resident of the eastern part of the city today who stated that a young man called at the house, asking "How long would it take you to make me a cup of tea and some sandwiches."

"Just long enough for me to call the police," answered the house wife.

The transient disappeared quickly, minus his tea and sandwiches.

TAG DAY FOR BLIND REALIZES $505.35

The sum of $505.35 was realized as the result of the tag day for the Canadian Institute for the Blind which was held in Belleville last Saturday, it was revealed this morning by Mr. A. D. Archibald, who acted as secretary for the tag day and general campaign conducted in this district last week.

Individuals contributions made during the campaign will considerably swell this total, it was reported by officials, with donations of this nature totalling $209 to date. Officials of the campaign wish to express their appreciation for the very generous response to assist the work among the blind in the Belleville area, but feel that many people have delayed in sending in their contributions. Promptness in such people making donations as soon as possible would be appreciated, it was stated by officials.

SCRAP IRON STOLEN FROM FARMER'S HOME

Although city police recovered two bicycles found abandoned on the outskirts of the city yesterday, still another was reported stolen. George Garrow, 25 Bridge Street, informed police his bicycle had been taken from its parking position on West Bridge Street. Otherwise in district police circles only the theft, of a quantity of scrap iron from the farm of Percy Ray, of Harold, was reported to Provincial Police.

MEMBER OF RODEO FRACTURES RIB

Central Ontario has not been kind to Paddy Preston, youthful cowboy member of Montana Jack's Rodeo which completed its engagement at the Belleville Fair last night.

The young rider had his nose broken and a rib cracked at the Lindsay exhibition, and his first appearance in the saddle since that accident, saw him crack another rib while participating in a "chair" race in front of the grandstand yesterday afternoon.

Preston walked to the rodeo tent plainly suffering from the injury. He was attended by Red Cross official until the arrival of a doctor.

1,200 Expected To Register In 20-24 Age Group

With registration forms still being received at the local Employment and Claims Office from rural post offices, the total number of women in the 20-24 age group in Belleville and district to register under the National Selective Service is expected to reach approximately 1,200, it was reported this morning by Mr. H. H. Reed, manager of the local office.

The number of women in the above group to register in Belleville was considerably greater than was at first anticipated, according to Mr. Reed, with approximately 800 coming to the city hall to register under the order. Before the period for registration it was expected there would be four to five hundred registrations.

The majority of the women registering under the order expressed a willingness to go to work, with practically the only exception being married women with very young children. This at least was true in Belleville and district, although no word had been received at the local office regarding the feeling of women throughout the many districts across Canada.

The reason for slowness of the rural reports coming in to the Belleville office was explained by the manager as being in part because post offices in certain localities ran out of registration forms and more had to be secured. Present indications point to a lower registration of women in the rural areas than was at first expected, it was revealed.

TO CURB BLACK MARKET

Canberra, Australia, Sept. 24—(AAP)—Minimum penalties of three months imprisonment for individuals and $50,000 fines for companies are proposed in a bill introduced in parliament today to curb "black market" dealings.

All goods involved in transactions resulting in convictions would be forfeited to the crown under the proposed measure, which would be retroactive to February.

LADY ASTOR SPEAKS MIND

Cheltenham, England, Sept. 24—(CP)—Lady Astor told an audience here yesterday that Russia's great enemy in Britain is the British communist.

"I would not mind sitting on the platform with a Russian communist," the conservative member of parliament said, "But I would not be seen dead with a British Communist."

Belleville Fair Closes, Considered To Be Best Exhibition in Years

Attendance Higher Than Year Ago With Last Day Topping Receipts

DIRECTORS PLEASED

Generally conceded to be one of the best exhibitions in years, the 1942 edition of the Belleville Fair closed last night with thousands of patrons from all parts of the district placing an unanimous stamp of approval on a show that was a distinct credit to not only the Fair Board of Directors but to the district as well.

Fair officials stated today that the exhibition just closed was a success from all angles. Attendance figures broke all previous records, indicative of the steadily increasing interest in the fair.

Playing a major part in the success of the 1942 fair, was the organization of the exhibition, under Secretary Erle Denyes. Appointed to his position at the annual meeting of the Fair Board early in the year, Mr. Denyes went into his new job with the determination to make the fair a success. That he succeeded is beyond question.

The weather man was in a 'fair' mood. Rain threatened on one or two occasions but did not materialize into anything that resembled a patronage deterrent. The coolness of the air perhaps affected attendance to some extent.

Largest Crowd Present

The last day of the fair saw the largest crowd of the three-day exhibition. The grounds were packed with fair-goers both in the afternoon and evening and all phases of the fair were well patronized.

The entertainment was of the highest order. The famed Conklin Shows, easily the best of its kind in Canada, was outstanding and was the leading attraction in the entertainment field. The grandstand performance staged by Billy Garden was on a par with that of other years, despite the fact that war exigencies have taken a heavy toll of personnel in this particular phase of the entertainment world.

Exhibits of live stock and poultry, in fact all agricultural entries while not, as numerous perhaps as those of other years, maintained the high calibre for which breeders, and farmers of this district are noted.

Directors Pleased

Lovers of harness racing had the opportunity to view some of the best trotters and pacers in the country. Every heat was well contested and the racing was of the high standard that characterized metropolitan fairs of other years.

Directors today expressed themselves as being well satisfied with the exhibition as a whole. Appreciation of the patronage of the district was voiced. The attendance indicated that small city fairs as well as country fairs hold major interest in the minds of the people, despite the fact that the nation is at war.

CIVILIAN MEAT DELIVERIES CUT 21 P.C. ON OCT. 1

Urges Citizens to Limit Selves to 2½ Pounds of Meat Per Week

ENTIRELY ADEQUATE

By WILLIAM NEEDHAM
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 24 (AP).—Agriculture Secretary Claude Wickard announced today that, starting Oct. 1, civilian meat consumption in the United States during the last three months of this year will be restricted to approximately 79 per cent of the amount delivered by packers for civilian use during the last quarter of 1941.

Simultaneously, Wickard said that citizens voluntarily should limit themselves to 2½ pounds of meat a week per person, to permit a fair sharing of available supplies.

As chairman of the War Production Board's Food Requirements Committee, Wickard said that, to assure sufficient meat for army, navy and lend-lease needs, the committee has ordered deliveries for civilian use curtailed on this basis:

Beef and veal, 80 per cent of deliveries during the last quarter of 1941; lamb and mutton, 95 per cent; pork, 75 per cent.

The allowance proposed, he said, is entirely adequate for good nutrition, assuming the 2½-pound limit is observed.

"It is necessary that individuals hold their consumption at this figure whether they eat at home or in public eating places," Wickard said. "Public eating places in some sections may prefer some such device as a meatless day."

Should Reduce Purchases.

If there are invalids, aged persons, young children, or vegetarians in the home—none of whom would normally consume 2½ pounds of meat a week—the housewife should reduce her purchases accordingly, he said.

As evidence of the increasing army, navy and lend-lease needs, Wickard said estimated requirements have climbed 500,000,000 pounds since the 6,000,000,000-pound forecast made by the committee three weeks ago.

The total demand for meat is 27,500,000,000 pounds, against a supply of 24,000,000,000, he added.

"Under the wartime meat program, civilians will have a supply that would usually be regarded as normal," he explained. "But now, the demand is abnormal because of high buying power, coupled with a decreasing supply of most things to buy. The result is a very high demand for meat."

DONATES TROPHY CUPS

Evanston, Ill., Sept. 24 —(AP)—The 100 loving cups Mrs. Helen Shockey has in her home were rewards for winning tennis matches over a period of 18 years, but she is going to get rid of them—her contribution to the scrap drive. Included in the trophies is one for winning the girls' national singles title in Philadelphia in 1932.

Canning Factory Workers Overcome By Gas From Chimney

Burrs — What might have been a serious situation occurred at the Greer Canning Factory, Wellington, on Saturday of last week when several of the helpers collapsed apparently from the gas in the smoke that blew down from the smoke stack due to the heavy mist-laden air that was so evident several mornings last week. Miss Dorothy Carley felt ill and went outside to get some air and fell on her face, breaking her glasses. Several other women fell where they were standing at work. Medical aid was summoned and they were taken to their homes and put to bed. It is understood one party was taken to hospital while others were kept under the supervision of a South Lakeside doctor for some time.

Obituary

T. HERBERT MOUCK
(Hungerford Township)

One of Hungerford Township's highly respected residents passed away today when T. Herbert Mouck, well-known farmer residing two miles east of Thomasburg, died at his home shortly after 9.30. He was in his 70th year.

The late Mr. Mouck died in the house in which he was born and lived all his life. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mouck and had he lived until December 21st, would have celebrated with Mrs. Mouck the anniversary of their golden wedding.

He was a farmer all his life, belonged to the Masonic order fraternally, and for some years was on the board of directors of the Moira Valley Cheese Factory. He was an Anglican and a member of Christ Church, Thomasburg. His wife was the former Miss Jenny Kerr.

He occupied a position high in the esteem of a wide circle of friends and relatives, and his passing has created an aura of sadness throughout the community.

Surviving besides his widow are one son, Clarence, at home; one daughter, Mrs. Harry Coulter, Tweed, a grandson, Reginald Mouck, one brother Abner, Tweed, and three sisters, Miss Nettie Mouck, 287 George street, Belleville, Mrs. Jas. R. Bateman, Thomasburg, and Mrs. Alena Graham, Tweed.

JOHN JOSEPH LONG
(Murray Township)

Trenton, Sept. 24 —(Special)—The funeral of John Joseph Long, who died at his home in Murray Township, Northumberland County, on Thursday, Sept. 17th., after a short illness, took place on Monday, Sept. 21st., to the Church of St. Peter-in-Chains, Trenton, where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father J. J. O'Neil. The Rev. Father Rishea of Wooler, was present in the sanctuary and two grandsons of the deceased, Robert McDonald and John Finnegan, served at the Mass.

Interment was in Mount Calvary Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Leonard McDonald, Gerald Long, Vincent Long, Harold Corbett, John McCormick and Arthur McCormick.

Friends from a distance at the funeral included Mrs. W. Barclay, Syracuse, N.Y.; Miss Elizabeth Long, Fayettville, N.Y., and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Long, Oshawa.

There were many spiritual offerings and beautiful floral tributes.

The late Mr. Long, who was in his 75th year, was born in Sidney Township and moved to Murray Township forty-five years ago. In the community he was held in high regard.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Sara McCormick and whom he married in 1896; seven daughters, Mrs. J. McDonald, Trenton; Mrs. E. Finnegan, Port Hope; Mrs. J. S. Burke, Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. T. P. Finnegan, Capreol, Ontario; Mrs. J. Monoghan, Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. Donald Scott, London, Ontario, and Miss Veronica Long, Reg. N., Hartford, Wis.; two sons, Mr. Harry Long, and Mr. John Francis Long, both of Glen Miller. A son, Joseph Long, died in infancy.

C. Moon, Madoc, Given 6 Months

"I don't like to send any person to prison, but in this case you have left me no alternative," stated Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in Thursday's County Police Court here before he sentenced 28-year-old Clarence Moon, of Madoc, to serve six months in the common jail. The sentence came after Moon pleaded guilty to a serious charge, namely contributing to the moral delinquency of children.

Moon was arrested by Chief J. C. Hayes of Tweed, in the home of an Elzivir Township woman some time ago. Chief Hayes informed the court that the accused man, who is also married in Madoc, admitted the offence charged. Moon elected summary trial and pleaded guilty to the charge. In the meantime Inspector T. D. Ruston of the Children's Aid Society, placed the woman's three children as wards of the Society. "This is a very flagrant case," suggested Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C.

Four Traffic Cases

Traffic cases constituted the remainder of the court docket, that saw only on spectator present. D. H. Hall, Toronto, and Elgin Asselstine of Shannonville, both paid fines of $15.00 and costs upon being convicted of speeding under the War Measures Act. Andrew B. Pritz, Trenton, was assessed ten and costs after admitting to a careless driving charge, while Mrs. Helen C. Brant, of Deseronto, was fined $3.50, including costs, for failing to produce a driver's licence and Frank Johnson, Belleville, was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail after being convicted of selling liquor. Johnson's home was named as a public house at the request of Crown Attorney Donnan.

DEATHS

MOUCK — At Thomasburg, on Thursday, September 24th., 1942 Thomas Herbert Mouck, in his 70th. year.

The funeral will take place from his late residence on Saturday, September 26th., 1942, at 2.30 p.m. for service in Thomasburg Anglican Church.

Interment Thomasburg Cemetery.

THE WAR TODAY

By DE WITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

That quarrel between Herr Hitler and commander-in-chief of his now-or-never offensive against the Caucasus, Field Marshal Fedor von Bock, may prove literally to be the decisive battle of the war.

The basic strategy of the vital Caucasian campaign is said to be involved in this historic argument, which is reported to have resulted in von Bock being relieved of his command. The point at issue is described as this:

Von Bock wanted to concentrate on the Caucasus and not attack Stalingrad at the same time. He maintained that an assault against that great industrial city on the Volga would be too costly in casualties.

It seems that the Nazi all highest, who boasts that he works by intuition, insisted on the siege of Stalingrad. Von Bock bowed his stiff Prussian neck to the yoke, but apparently sulked in his tent as his drive was held up by the grand Red defence, and Nazi casualties strewed the approaches to the city like autumn leaves.

Looking at the position today, as the Russians still continue to throw back the invaders from Premier Stalin's proud namesake-city, I'm afraid we have to say that the infallible Hitler's intuition has failed him at the crucial moment. We must give von Bock best. At the same time, I believe we must recognize that the two men approached the problem from different viewpoints—Hitler from that of political strategy and his captain solely from the military angle.

Von Bock, every inch the expert soldier from the soles of his polished boots to the crown of his Prussian bullet-head, saw only that the outcome of the war likely depended on Germany's ability to break into the oil-bearing Caucasus and the strategic Middle East this year, and in the process annihilate Red Marshal Timoshenko's armies of the south. If that could be accomplished Germany would have a victory-grip which would be hard to break. Stalingrad was a side-issue to von Bock.

One cannot doubt that Hitler also saw it was imperative to conquer the Caucasus and the Middle East, for his other operations indicate this. Probably at the outset of the great drive he was in complete agreement with von Bock. However, as time went on and the Russian resistance became menacing, Hitler developed a new scheme to secure help.

He saw the political value of the capture of the city which is the apple of the Communist leader's eye. Stalingrad stands as a symbol of Russian strength, and the Nazi chief wanted to crack it for the moral effect at home and abroad.

Most of all he wanted to influence Japan to attack Russia from the rear. The capture of Stalingrad might turn the trick.

But not even Hitler can guess right all the time. We need to see the outcome of the next month of fighting, but the indications now are that military history will say he threw away his chances of winning the war when he forced von Bock to embark on what probably has been the costliest siege ever undertaken.

PARATROOPS START TRAINING AT CAMP SHILO, MAN.

Coe Hill Red Cross Society Holds Mammoth Field Day

Stirling, Sept. 24—The patriotism of North Hastings was on display Wednesday afternoon and evening, when people from all parts of the county gathered to give loyal support in the work of the Red Cross. Early in the afternoon visitors began to gather at Coe Hill Agricultural grounds for a day of events equal in quality to those at many Fall Fairs. A clouded sky and cool wind early in the day caused many of the visitors to remain in their cars but in mid-afternoon the sky cleared and youngsters crowded the refreshment booths as older people enjoyed the sports events, which included races of all types and softball games by two snappy girl teams and a game of baseball. The event took the form of a huge family picnic with former residents returning from all parts of the province to renew acquaintance with people and scenes, that are dear in their memory. No better season could have been selected for such a function, the countryside has already begun to take on its fall clothing of radiant color, which can only be matched in warmth by the famous "Northern Hospitality" in evidence at every turn. To one accustomed to crowed streets and strange faces, there is something in a northern handclasp and the glint of the welcoming smile akin to a home-coming.

Well-Planned Program

Hard working committee workers had completed details for the event with enviable precision and the day's activities got underway with a parade of school children from Coe Hill school and six neighboring rural schools The children assembled for the parade at the school and marched under the direction of their teachers to the Fair ground, where they assembled for a group of choral numbers including patriotic songs before the grandstand.

This display by the school children was directed by the teaching staff of the local school and the teachers of the schools represented the choruses and songs by the combined voices was directed by Miss Anne Collins, district supervisor of music.

Those schools and their teachers taking part included, White School, led by Miss Rita Farrell, Coe Hill School led by Principal R. Turner, Miss Henderson, Mrs. Baugh and Mrs. Nicholson directed the children of Ormsby school, Faraday School with their teacher Miss Ramsay Gilroy, Mrs. Hoard, Ridge School, Miss Gray, Greenbush School, Miss Ryan and Bethel School, Miss Handley. The youngsters gave a smart performance in both drill and musical efforts and the teachers are to be congratulated for such a fine performance at the very beginning of a new term. In the services of Miss Anne Collins the musical talent of the district school children will be brought forward in thorough fashion and musical appreciation given expression under her capable tuition.

Dr. Faulkner Present

Among the visitors most widely known and coming from the greatest distance to be present were Mr. B. O. Lott of Stirling, veteran Liberal campaigner of former years, and Hon. Dr. Faulkner ex-Minister of Health for the Province of Ontario. These two gentlemen, who seemed to know everyone they met and thoroughly enjoyed the day and their visits with old friends of the district. Dr. Faulkner journeyed all the way from Toronto to witness a display of loyalty, which did not surprise him.

Sports events of the day included a girls' softball game with Greenview girls meeting a local girls' team and Coe Hill's hard ball team meeting a smart team from Madagascar, Ont. Both provided splendid entertainment for the ball fans. Later in the evening a dance was held in the hall with old-time music provided by a local orchestra.

The event was a success from every standpoint and much credit for same is attributed to the following officers of the Coe Hill Red Cross Society and the assisting committee also named below.

Officers and Committees

President, Mr. Charles Holland, Vice President, Mr. H. G. Lehigh, Secretary-Treasurer, Ralph Turner.

Sports Committee, Messrs R. P. Gunter, H. G. Lehigh and Ralph Turner.

Canvassers, Mrs. R. Hennessey, Mrs. N. Whitmore, Mrs. W. N. Gilroy Mrs. Robt. Campbell and Mrs. J. O'Brien

Fair Grounds Committee, Mr. Chas. Holland, Mr. A. Swayne, Mr. R. Campbell and Mr. R. Henderson.

Dance Committee, Messrs. F. Whitmore, B. Giles and H. Gunter.

Mr. N. Gilroy was in charge of speakers and refreshments.

Sugar Firms Threaten To Leave Chatham If Japs Are Taken Away

Chatham, Ont., Sept. 24 (CP) — Representatives of Agriculture and two large local firms last night urged Chatham City Council to retract criticisms of Japanese Canadians working in this district, and A. W. McIntyre of the Canada and Dominion Sugar Company, said it was "highly possible" the firm's Chatham plant would be shut down if the Japanese were removed.

McIntyre said the head office would be taken from the district if the Chatham factory were closed, and labor shortage had already forced one of the plants to close.

Last night's meeting, attended by only three councillors, was called after the Japanese had themselves said they were ready to leave the community at once. Farmers who employ them strongly criticized Mayor W. . Hubbell.

Farmers and industrialists attending the meeting pointed out Japanese workers were the country's only labor reservoir, and declared "hundreds of farms" would not be tilled next year if they were compelled to leave.

A. C. Richarde, of Ibby, McNeil and Libby Company, said removal of the Japanese would mean a considerable reduction in production. The farmers, predicting a drop in output of almost every food product produced in Kent County, urged council to take steps immediately to retract its criticisms and to persuade the Japanese to stay on.

(At the City Council meeting Monday, objection was raised to the appearance of Japanese on the streets during working hours, and in a letter drafted for dispatch to government authorities, council asked the Japanese either be kept out of Chatham during working hours or confined to camp "at all times" under detention.)

Mayor Hubbell has called an emergency ession of the council for tonight.

CHAPTER ONE

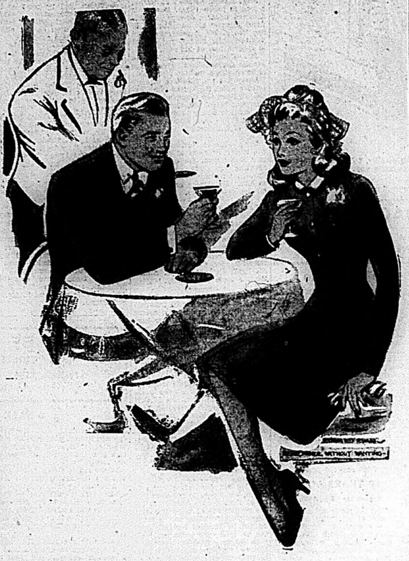
Romance Follows a Wedding

It was October, 1938 and though many people in New York probably were being married today, it was also Phyllis Conover's wedding day, Judith was thinking as the taxi that was taking her home darted in and out of the snarling noonday traffic. She hoped Phyllis, who shared the apartment with her, was not impatient. Everything had been planned perfectly and Phyllis was to sleep late while she, Judith, reported to the office for a few hours work. The ceremony was scheduled for four o'clock, leaving ample time for the small bridal party to see the bride and bridegroom "off" on a West Indies cruise.

It was a young figure, slender and graceful and wearing a tailored black wool frock that sat in the taxi that cool October day in 1938. And it was a young face, alive, intelligent and glowing, that peered thoughtfully into the teeming streets. A black felt hat worn at a jaunty angle almost covered her dark hair, and the eyes that looked at the unceasing parade of faces, but did not actually see them were gray and dark-lashed, beneath natural, curving dark brows. It was a face to remember not merely for its warm young beauty, but more particularly for the girl who possessed it, the girl behind the face, a girl in conflict with herself. She was Judith Barth, 22 that autumn day, a fashion artist with the mark of success already upon her.

How did Phyllis feel now? How carelessly the word "love" was tossed about like a ball by people who only half-heartedly played the game! Phyllis and Ames' love had been so smooth and perfect, their meeting at a cocktail part, their "dates" becoming more and more frequent, their brief engagement. Simple and natural, the way it should be. Judith thought but I want too much. I'm more complex than Phyllis. All my life I've demanded more as though were a specially-privileged person. It's the wrong way to be, always looking beyond the things that satisfy other people . . . .

She was not to live alone after Phyllis left, for Emily Travers, who was secretary to an editor, was moving in next week. Emily, like Phyllis, was a friend of three years ago when living in a staid hotel for women had been a precarious hand-to-mouth existence livened by an occasional check from home meant for one, but always shared cheerfully by three. But it had been Judith and Phyllis who had rented the apartment. Phyllis gladly had relinquished her share for the beautiful things new and modern in the new apartment where she would live after her honeymoon. Emily would bring only her pretty, amiable honest self.



Half an hour later they were having cocktails in a lounge. "Do you know Max Worthington well, Robert?" she asked.

The taxi stopped before the brick apartment house and the doorman sprang to attention. Presently Judith was walking through the spacious lobby to her ground-floor apartment.

Disorder greeted her in the small foyer, the large living-room with its deep, comfortable, chintz-covered furniture and brown rug and rose-colored walls, and in the maple-furnished bedroom. Boxes from which last-minute purchases had been snatched—tissue paper, clothes hangers, Phyllis' new baggage, cigarettes in every ash tray Phyliss' bed still unmade, the blue broadloom rug sprinkled with powder. Phyllis was in the bathroom with the shower on in full force.

Passionately neat, but loathing the dull chores of housekeeping, she quickly took off her hat and gloves and proceeded to clear the debris. She suppressed a smile as she thought of her mother who would have said, "If this is a sample of Phylis' housekeeping, heaven help Ames". But yesterday Phyllis had ceased to be a mediocre fashion artist, a working girl who had to eat and sleep and play by the clock and today she would become a wife.

And how would Phyllis, charming but vague, fit into the pattern of Ames Preston's conventional life? How long the years that stretched ahead! How very long, those years. Had they thought of that? To Judith it seemed that Phyliss looked out beyond her tropical honeymoon as if marriage were to be confined to two glamorous weeks.

Finally Phyllis emerged from the bathroom, her lovely red head above the white turkish bathrobe, her large blue eyes wide with excitement, her small, rather pointed face shiny clean.

"Oh, I didn't hear you come in, Judith! I don't know whether I'm going or coming. This rush. . . . You've made my bed. Thanks. What time is it? Shouldn't they come for my baggage? I thought my flowers would be here by now—"

"One thing at a time, please." Phyllis who was never on time, always expected everyone else to be.

"There's so much to think about at the last minute . . . I'm going to smoke a cigarette. Sit down and have one with me". She sank in a chair and sighed as she looked at Judith who curled up on her own bed. "I feel as if I've cornered the market on happiness. Havana, Colon. What lovely-sounding names! And with Ames—at last! I wish I could give you some of my happiness darling".

"You keep it. I'll find my own or stumble into it". My heart waits. . . But for whom, for what? It's as if my heart has always been waiting. . . .

"I hope so," Phyllis said breathlessly as she rested her head on the back of the chair. "You've been so wonderful to me, Judith, keeping me straight, lending me money— oh, all sorts of things You're so efficient. But you have a family and I haven't. You can't call it a family when you've been passed around from one relative to another and all with different ideas as to how a little girl should be raised. Thank heaven that's all over. . . Ames will keep me straight now. He's as efficient as you. Just think —I'll never have to worry about paying bills again or getting to places on time or being fired. Don't you envy me just a little?"

October 1938. A room with blue walls and maple furniture. A room in the East Sixties where she sat on a bed a few hours before she met Max, and said in a warm low voice.

"No, Phyllis, I don't. It isn't that I'm criticizing your marriage or your love for Ames or his for you. It's just that your kind of marriage isn't what I want. . . .I suppose I'm a non-conformist. I've always been in myself a sort of problem child. Funny, we've known each other so long and I've never explained myself before. We were always too busy or too sleepy. But I don't want a cut-and-dried romance, a proper engagement ring, a wedding in the little church in Clinton, a house in the suburbs and babies. A life like that would smother me. When I go home and see my sister and my old friends living like that, I wonder how they endure it. The awful sameness of that kind of living. I wonder that love doesn't wear out. No marriage for me, Phyllis, the usual marriage with the usual man. . . ."

She understood Phyllis' puzzled, startled look. "But you're successful, Judith. I'm not. You're really talented, and I'm not. There's nothing else for me to do except get married. Oh, I've a certain flair for drawing, but I'd never be any good.

"And that's another point. Why should I give up the work for which Ive been trained to take on a job for which I'm totally untrained? Career girl? Yes. But I know that a career isn't enough for a woman. It wouldn't sustain me entirely. There's be something vital lacking. But the usual marriage with the usual man isn't enough for me. I want something better". Warmth and gentleness were in her smile. "Ames is splendid and terribly in love with you. Keep him terribly in love with you".

There were less than a dozen people in the church that afternoon. Ames' father, a stout, jolly man, a widower and an executive in the large company in which his only son was a minor executive, and Ames' uncle and aunt, a dignified elderly couple, comprised the blood relations. The others were friends since Phyliss, indifferent to her frugal, unfriendly New England relations, had asked none of them.

The organ had played softly the familiar strains which to some gathered there brought a sharp sweet memory, to others, a romantic hope. Now, the clergyman's deep, sonorous voice was speaking and the sun was shining through the stained glass window. Phyllis, wearing a green suit, the orchids tremulous on her shoulder, stood beside Ames, tall, dark-haired, fine-featured. Behind them stood Judith slender and erect in a brown suit, her eyes stirred, her pulse uneven. A stranger, Robert Kennedy, Ames' boyhood friend, stood beside her, a tall, thin smirking young man, whose tardiness had postponed the ceremony for several minutes.

Not the usual marriage with the usual man, Judith was thinking. Why must she be different? This was so sweet, this open declaration of love, this mingling of lives, this sharing. But did it last? What would they feel a few years hence? Did she expect too much because she wanted to avoid the commonplace? Should she be ashamed that she wished to continue her work? she thought: For this one beautiful moment I envy you, Phyllis because I'm on the outside looking in.

It was over quickly; the organ played again and Phyllis and Ames were surrounded, Phyllis kissed profusely, Ames' hand shaked. . . . Congratulations, darling. . . . .All the luck in the world. . .You look perfectly lovely. . .You're a lucky guy, Ames. . . . .Judith saw Emily, brown-haired, brown eyed, pretty, Emily with a new young man but there was no time to speak to them.

Robert Kennedy turned his smirk upon her. "You're Judith, aren't you? I missed the train in Chicago. Worse luck. I haven't had more than two words with Ames. We're going to see them off, aren't we? Then what? Won't you have dinner with me? We just can't call it a day and let them have all the fun. Was anything else planned?"

"Dinner? All right. No, nothing else was planned. Thank you."

An evening with the best man no doubt expected of her, she thought, following Phyllis and Ames from the church, pounding them with rice and then finding herself, some minutes later, sitting between Robert Kennedy and Ames' father in the latter's car.

The scene at the pier was one of confusion and merriment with baggage, passengers, well-wishes, dogs, telegrams and flowers. Phyllis and Ames' cabin was found eventually and inspected; then the bridal party went on deck where Ames laughingly shook the rice from his hair and Phyllis laughing, too, emptied her diminutive brown shoe of it. In the noise and milling of people one had to shout to be heard.

"I took one of these cruises once," Kennedy said, remaining close to Judith. "I'll never forget it. Phyllis and Ames will have the privacy of gold fish. There's the signal. . . I suppose you'll want to stand in the mob and wave until they're out of sight".

"I usually do. Do you mind?"

And so Phyllis was kissed again until her mouth was pale, and Ames' hand was pumped until it ached before the small party filed down the gangplank to join the vast crowd of other-well wishers on the pier. Presently the whole cruise ship her flags flying gaily, cut the water. Judith saw Phyllis and Ames waving frantically, their smiles now a little weary.

"Wish you were going?" Robert asked.

"Perhaps I shall next year—or rather after Christmas. There's a vacation due me. Have we lost the others? I'd like to say goodbye to Mr. Preston. He lost his only son today". She want to see Emily and her new young man, too.

"But gained a daughter. Afraid we've lost them in this mob. He's probably gone home to have a good cry. You're getting squashed".

"But I told Phyllis I'd stand here until she and Ames were only specks".

She was not looking at Robert, for he was standing behind her in an effort to protect her from the crowd. She had wanted to see Emily she thought again, but she had disappeared, too. A moment more of Phyllis and Ames before she turned away to an evening that was somehow to be endured. . . Standing on her toes, she saw them again, more specks among other specks on the deck. . . She waved and smiled again.

But the voice she was next to hear close to her was not Robert Kennedy's too intimate one, but one which so entranced her that it swept her other thoughts from her mind instantly. Suave, deep, clear, precise a voice to command attention, to give orders to demand and to be given what it demanded. . . . Strange she was later to think, that she heard Max's voice before she saw him or knew his name.

"Robert Kennedy, isn't it? I thought I recognized you. I believe the last time I saw you and the first was on a West Indies Cruise".

Robert Kennedy was flattered. The voice made him less pleased with himself, less confident.

'Oh yes! How are you? Seeing somebody off? . . . . I'm sorry but I can't quite remember—"

"Max Worthington".

"Oh, sure. Sorry. Terrible at remembering names, but I remembered you. Judith—"

She was unwilling to turn lest the man not belong to the voice, lest he not be worthy of it. But slowly she did turn, seeing Max for the first time. Seeing the stern features and the fair hair that grew back from his high forehead and the blue eyes that were intense and knowing and humorous—eyes that took in all of her in one single, swift, penetrating glance.

Not as tall as Robert Kennedy but more powerfully built, Max wore gray tweeds. Judith thought that some woman probably had selected this item so "right" was the shade of the blue that deepened the blueness of his eyes. But it was his mouth that fascinated her most, a mouth both sensuous and sensitive.

He was a flame to her imagination, making questions fly like sparks across her mind. So solidly he stood that no one jolted him. People would walk around him, she thought, once he stood his ground. Vainly she tried to place him in some business or profession. But Max Worthington could be one of so many things and places.

Robert was introducing them. . . .nd while they were murmuring the usual things, she wondered whether Max saw amusement in her eyes as the result of her sudden realization that he had sought Robert in order to meet her. How long had he been looking at her? She knew that Max Worthington would not deliberately seek to renew the acquaintance of a young man like Robert and that Robert's shallowness of character was as obvious to him as to her. While she had been waving to Phyllis and Ames, Max had been making up his mind to meet her.

"Seeing somebody off?" Robert asked again foolishly. "We've just been attendants at a wedding."

Judith saw Max's unconcealed contempt for Robert's thin layer of sophistication and for his air of possessiveness toward her expressed by the taking of her arm.

"I was seeing a friend off', Max said quietly. But he was looking at Judith.

"Taken any more cruises lately? I've been transferred to Chicago and I don't get East very often these days. I almost didn't get to the wedding today."

"Really?" Max asked. Still looking at Judith he asked, "Judith Barth, is it?"

"Yes".

That one word "yes" was all she said to him except the lost pleasantries after their introductions. For Max nodded his goodbye, smiled at her and her eyes followed his quick steps through the crowd until she could see him no more. Why had he been so careful to be certain of her name? Why, if . . . .

But Robert was saying, "Let's go buy a bucket of red paint. Where would you like to go, darling?"

Darling! She drew away from his possessive touch, thinking that Max Worthington would never say "darling" like that and knowing with a sudden, sureness that she would not draw away from his touch.

"I'm a working girl not a glamor girl, Robert. I brought work home for the weekend".

"You're both to me. Let's go. I need a drink".

Half an hour later they were having cocktails in a mirrored lounge and Robert, for the moment had exhausted the subject of himself.

"Do you know Max Worthington well, Robert?"

"Call me Bob, honey. I can't honestly say I know him at all. I met him on a cruise, Snooty sort of guy. He was coming back from the Canal Zone. He's an engineer, I think".

"He's very sophisticated".

"Think so? You girls go for that, don't you? I don't know. . .Most of us on the cruise thought he was a conceited ass. What are the good shows in town? Just name them".

It was one o'clock when she let herself in the dark apartment. For a few minutes she stood quite still in the foyer and stroked her forehead that ached from loud music and meaningless conversation. They had danced miles and still Bob's favorite subject, himself, had continued as a record played over and over. She had told him she would be too busy to see him again.

After a shower she put on a comfortable housecoat and sank wearily in the bedroom chair, her body tired, her mind acutely alive as she reviewed the events of th day, saving until the last that sharply-etched memory of Max Worthington. She could not dismiss the rushing current of high feelings his presence had caused, but she could, she thought, attribute a portion of them to the excitement of the day.

Perhaps if she saw him again he would be quite an ordinary person and not a man who had caused

Commando Dagger as Symbol

Canadians when they look upon the commando dagger symbol of the forthcoming war loan will see in it the symbol of the assault on Dieppe where Canadians gave of their best and having gained their point withdrew. The dagger has a meaning for today and the future. It means absolute war against the Huns and everything associated with them, the Mussolini Fascists of Italy and the Japanese. It is in fact, war to the knife, war to the end, war with every ounce of energy of body, mind and spirit and every ounce of the national resources put into it.

This commando dagger signifies participation personally along with the heroes of Dieppe and of other raids, and offensives of the future.

Real commando daggers have been flown to Canada, 722 of them, army issue from Sheffield, England, for distribution to the 722 local units of the loan organization. When each community unit achieves its loan objective, the commando dagger awarded to the unit will be sent to the regiment overseas which represents the community.

This dagger will be for actual use in battle by a member of the regiment and will stand as a pledge from the folks back home to supply the armed forces with all the weapons and equipment they need to reach Berlin. This dagger is all-steel and fourteen inches long. The guard has an arabesque and the blade a diamond-sectioned pattern.

Ceremonials with the dagger will be held n 722 places on Sunday, October 18, which will be proclaimed Third Victory Loan Sunday, when Canadians will pledge themselves to the intensified effort.

Now is the time when Canadians will show their mettle by lending their financial resources to the successful prosecution of the war.

At Stalingrad

Russia is performing miracles at Stalingrad. Days and days ago Hitler was ready to make a speech announcing the fall of the city and yet Stalingrad defenders fight in the streets, turn back the enemy and hold firm. Truly they are living up to the highest Russian tradition to hold or die.

Germans have not at any time shown such dourage or tenacity. Hitler must realize this but only in his Nazi way by becoming more bitter and angry at the frustration of his hopes. Tens of thousands of Germans he has sent to their doom for his inordinate ambition. But the Russians hold for they have courage and imagination and a flaming love of country, surpassing the Germans in that essential psychological or spiritual essence of individual and race.

Moscow was one of the miracles of history. It is a name which will forever last for its frustration of the Hun when Hitler failed to do what Napoleon did, though both alike were turned back. Lately it has been said by observers that a Moscow miracle does no repeat every day. But in the year 1942 there is a great miracle developing at Stalingrad. One observer has said he expected the Russians to succeed in holding the key city of the Volga.

Not only Stalingrad holds but Hitler is disappointed too because he has not been able to make his way into the Caucasus except slowly, his plans being greatly delayed and as De Witt Mackenzie points out "of even greater importance is the fact that he (Hitler) has failed in an important objective—the shattering of that magnificent Red line. So long as Marshal Timoshenko's forces remain intact and fluid, the Fuehrer is swimming against a flood of grief. . . ." Not only the mighty Caucasus range of towering mountains faces Hitler but also the force of King Winter which is almost at hand. The latter's advance guards, the fall rains, are beginning to arrive to signalize the coming of the Russian Caucasus winter. While Mackenzie says he does not think we are yet in position to sign off the Hitler offensive for the season and must wait for October since the Germans are going all-out in this fling for victory, in the broad view Mr. Mackenzie feels "things are not going badly for the Allies in the vital battle for the Caucasus and Middle East."

FIRST DAY AT SCHOOL

Sitting in rows at tiny desks, some of the tots are awkward, shy, none daring yet to lift their gaze and meet the unfamiliar eye of 'Teacher.' Others rigidly fix her with gaze both sharp and glum, quaintly droll, their focused glare, suspicious of what is to come.
(Somewhat tense is young "teacher"—new—this is her first day at school, too!)
A chubby boy comes bouncing in, greets all and sundry with, "Hello!"
a cheery atmosphere shines 'round, all bask in the friendly afterglow.

GOOD OLD BELLEVILLE CHEDDAR

A Smith's Falls soldier, according to a story from Kingston, had written home from England about the fine quality of cheese available in the Old Land. In fact, he wrote, it was so good that it "was far better than any at home."

Thinking he would surprise the folks, he brought back some of the English cheese with him when he returned recently to Canada. The people here, he figured, could see for themselves how superior it was to the Canadian product.

But his face turned slightly pink when it was pointed out to him the cheese he had brought all the way across the Atlantic Ocean, had been made in Belleville.

LOGIC OF LUNACY

For logical lunacy, remarks the Chicago News, we must commend the Quisling government of Norway, which, according to a despatch, has cut off all government subsidies to insane asylums. A lunatic government would be crazy to subsidize competing institutions. There is plenty of room for all the nuts in the Nazi government itself, and as the goal of its policy is one Big Bughouse, why trifle with the little ones?

KING'S NEPHEW WORKS

At the gates of Harewood House, Yorkshire home of the Princess Royal and Lord Harewood, the evening motor bus drops a tall young man wearing oil-stained dungarees, according to an English exchange.

He is the Hon. Gerald Lascelles, 17-year-old younger son of the Princess Royal and Earl of Harewood and nephew of the King, coming home to supper after his nine-hour day at a north-east munition factory. He earns nearly £2 a week.

The King's nephew has been Apprentice Lascelles in an engineering shop for some time. Now, after working stripped to the waist at the furnaces, he is operating a turning and cutting machine.

On top of his nine-hour day in the factory he has a long bus journey to and from work.

At one time he was "mate" to the more skilled workers, running errands and cleaning up. Now, after passing through various processes in the factory, he is on more intricate work, with 34lb. to 36lb. billets which have to be slotted and fitted under complicated machinery.

It is his own choice of war work before joining the Army in November, when he will be 18 and plans to enlist in the Rifle Brigade.

His elder brother, Lord Lascelles, is in the Grenadier Guards.

Apprentice Lascelles takes his meals in the works canteen.

As he stood in a workers' bus queue one night last week with oil stains on his face and hands Mr. Lascelles told me that on a visit to the factory his mother, touring the works, stopped near his machine and, as she had asked other workers, wanted to know how he was enjoying the work.

"I told my mother that I was having a splendid time," he said. "I'm enjoying every minute of it."

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

September 24th., 1922.

At the final session of the annual meeting of the Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce in Owen Sound, Mr. John Elliott and Col. Ponton of this city were elected Honorary Vice Presidents. Mr. Fred Newman of Picton was also elected an Honorary Vice President.

Mr. Thomas Wills, the capable Sanitary Inspector, has been appointed City Fuel Controller. He acted in this capacity before and is conversant with the work.

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Herity spent the weekend with friends in Madoc.

Mr. Grant Maidens has left for Toronto and will enter the honor course in Arts and Medigine at Toronto University.

30 YEARS AGO

September 24th., 1912.

Messrs. L. Prindle, E. Sprague of this city and M. Sprague of Cleveland, Ohio, had excellent sport fishing in the bay yesterday. They caught ten fine black bass which averaged in weight two to four pounds.

Mr. B. Serviss has been appointed caretaker of the High School at a salary of $500 per annum, and Mr. Joseph Mills has been appointed caretaker of Pine Street School at a salary of $650 per annum.

The Board of Education has received an offer of $2,500 for the old Pinnacle Street School building, and $260 for the old Station Street School building. These prices are not considered to be satisfactory. It is expected a higher price will be obtained for each building.

40 YEARS AGO

September 24th., 1902.

Mr. D. M. Green, who for some time has been foreman with W. W. Chown & Company, will leave shortly to reside in St. Thomas. Last evening his late fellow employees presented him with a handsome pipe.

Judge C. D. Macaulay and family, formerly of this city, have arrived safely at Dawson City.

Mr. A. F. Wood of Madoc was in town today.

Mr. William Docter is spending a few days in Ottawa.

Mr. F. W. Wilkins, Dominion Topographical Surveyor, an old Belleville boy, is here on a visit to his mother, Mrs. H. Wilkins, Albert Street.

The attendance at the D. & D. Institute here this year will be between 275 and 300 pupils.

50 YEARS AGO

September 24th., 1892.

During the storm last night the residence of Mr. Thos. Hudgins, 8th. concession of Tyendinaga Township, was struck with lightning and entirely destroyed by fire. The household goods were all lost.

A shed in the rear of Mr. Ed. F. Dickens' residence on Ann Street was struck with lightning last night and set on fire. The blaze was extinguished but the building was considerably damager by the lightning.

Mr. John Eustace of Rochester, N.Y., is visiting his brother, Mr. Stephen Eustace, in this city.

Messrs. S. A. Lazier and R. P. Hamilton have returned home after an extended trip to British Columbia and the State of Washington.

Whitehall Notebook

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 24. (CP) — The case of Capt. A. H. M. Ramsay, detained Member of Parliament for Peebles, is discussed in a new book by Prof. Berriedale Keith who declares that Prime Minister Churchill's action in declining to pass legislation to declare the seat open is "of doubtful validity".

Prof. Keith contends that holding a man in prison (Capt. Ramsay is detained under defence regulations) deprives his constituents of any use of his membership and justified their request for an act to deprive him of his seat.

Mr. Churchill pointed out to Peebles Conservatives who made representations to him that Capt. Ramsay was not convicted of any offence which would lead to his expulsion from the Commons. The view was taken, too, that it would be constitutionally dangerous to arrogate to the Commons the rights of the electors.

Capt. Ramsay, incidentally, is not totally deprived of parliamentary rights from the channel of speaking for his constituents through written questions is open to him. He already has used this method several times.

Rev. T. Hunter Boyd of Toronto who, before the war, worked in an unofficial capacity at the Canadian emigration office here helping smooth the way for Czech emigrant to Canada, came out of retirement to conduct a service of intercession for Czecho-Slovakia at St. Paul's Cathedral. Mr. Hunter Boyd is more than eighty.

Lady Tweedsmuir came to the rescue of the Ministry of Information when a prolonged search through the writings of her husband, who died while Governor-General of Canada, failed to uncover a lengthy quotation the government department required.

Standard books of quotations and enlistment of the aid of the National Book Council and Lord Tweedsmuir's publishers failed to bring to light the elusive paragraph. It was then the M.O.I. turned to Lady Tweedsmuir.

She was unable to supply the information from memory, but some days later advised the ministry she had found the quotation in a booklet reprint of a lecture on 'Montrose and Leadership" given to the University of St. Andrews in 1930.

Stalag 3D, the prison camp to which, Vichy reports, prisoners taken at Dieppe have been sent, has the reputation of being well run. Reports from visitors to the camp, opened in Potsdam last May, say the barracks seem to be well built, with ample space for recreation. Hours of work are long, but no longer than those exacted from Germany's civilian workers.

Sir Walter Womersley, Minister of Pensions, tells this story about his department, part of the ministry's work since 1918 has been to keep a fatherly eye on the children of the men killed in the last war.

"One of these," Sir Walter said "recently joined the army, but was discharged on the ground he was not likely to make an efficient soldier. When the explanation reached the boy's mother, who thought my ministry still had a duty to her son, she wrote me:

"Billy has been sent home and of course, must get a job. I know he's not very bright, but I'm sure he would make a very good man for your department anyhow'."

Leslie Hore-Belisha, former Secretary of State for War, returned to the House of Commons from the summer recess refreshed by a holiday unique among politicians. He spent it in a Cistercian Monastery.

"It isn't an experience you want to advertise," Hore-Belisha said when asked why he had withdrawn himself. He added, however, that a politician, tied up most of the time with public affairs, should have an occasional period of retirement for reflection on the ultimate reasons behind existence.

Lord Beaverbrook, rumor has it, is not far removed from the political picture as this story about him might indicate. Recently he invited some Trades Union Congress leaders to dine with him, sending his invitation by prepaid telegram.

One T.U.C. man, not knowing the Ontario-born Peer's address, sent his reply to "Beaverbrook, House of Lords, London." A few hours later it came back to him, marked: "Not known here."

Indian Troops' Casualties 98,388 On All Fronts

New Delhi, Sept. 24 —(CP)— Casualties of Indian troops on all fronts were placed at 98,388 to date in a government report yesterday. Of this number 2,096 were listed as killed, 8,521 wounded, 2,938 prisoners, and 84,833 missing—most of them believed to be prisoners.

Indian troops have seen their principal action on the North African battlefronts and in Malaya and Burma.

BODIES FOUND IN CAR

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 23 — (AP) —The hacked bodies of Charles A. Nash, about 56, a St. Louis Federal official, and his wife, 49, who had left their home Monday night for a short automobile ride, were found last night in a car alongside the main highway between Chicago and Springfield. Mrs. Nash's body was found inside the car, but the body of her husband was not discovered until about three hours later, stuffed in the small trunk of the machine.

O RARE BEN JONSON

Three hundred and five years ago Ben Jonson, poet, scholar, playwright and friend of Shakespeare, died and was buried in Westminster Abbey.

In the simple slab over his grave was cut the inscription: "O Rare Ben Jonson."

The real significance of this epitaph, composed by Sir John Young is still a subject of dispute.

Many suppose it to be plain English and to mean exactly what it says.

Others believe that the author of the inscription intended it to be a solemn epitaph and that the stonecutter made a mistake in separating the "O" and "rare" in the Latin word "Orare," meaning "to pray."

No matter which way it is interpreted, it doesn't quite make sense.

"O Rare Ben Jonson" seems like an odd epitaph to put on the tomb of a great man in Westminster Abbey.

On the other hand, "Orare Ben Johnson" doesn't seem to satisfy either.

But, whether mistake or not, the felicitous phrase "O Rare" is firmly associated with the name Ben Jonson and has helped to centre attention on his genius.

Jonson, of course, was christened Benjamin, and his first name was so spelled on some of his published works; but it was generally abbreviated by himself and his contemporaries, and it would be hard to think of him other than as simple Ben Jonson.

Legend says that King Charles I personally promised Jonson that he should be interred in Westminster in any spot that he might choose.

He chose a place on the north side of the nave of the Abbey. But after his death August 6, 1637, it was found that the space he had selected for burial was already occupied except about "eighteen inches of square ground."

Charles kept his promise, and, since the space was not large enough to place the coffin in the usual horizontal position, Jonson was buried in an upright posture with his head toward the sky.

The slab or piece of pavement containing the original epitaph, "O Rare Ben Jonson," is now built into the wall close to the floor beneath the monument of the sculptor Thomas Banks.

Jonson in his later years weighed 270 pounds and he himself described his "mountain belly." Since the poet died in extreme poverty, some authorities have suggested that he was buried in an upright position to diminish the burial fee by economizing on space.

Trenton and District

District Leader Gives Talk On War Emergency Reserve

Trenton, (Special.) —Members of Trenton Branch of the Red Cross were addressed on Tuesday afternoon in their work room by Mrs. George Dorey, district leader for War Emergency Reserve, of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

Mrs. Dorey, who along with her husband, was a missionary in Western Canada for many years and is a graduate nurse, and came to Trenton to advise the women as to forming a branch of this important work of War Emergency.

Mrs. Dorey outlined the five different branches of the War Emergency Reserve, transport, nursing, office administration, food administration and university section, the latter having been just recently started. While these nursing classes were only organised in Ontario last May the speaker pointed out that all the organised classes were already working with their leaders to train the women for any emergency which might arise. Though Canada has as yet seen very little of actual war, and no epidemics of any kind have arisen, yet it is only reasonable to expect, said Mrs. Dorey, that sooner or later something of this kind is bound to happen here. Following the last Great War an epidemic of flu unparalleled in history swept over Canada and many lives were lost, and while it is hoped nothing of this kind will come out of this conflict still we must face the fact that it could happen and we must be fully prepared.

Each of the groups formed to make up this Emergency Class will, it is hoped, be in charge of a local Registered Nurse with one Nurse being in charge of the full district. Local doctors and dentists will be called upon to give voluntarily of their services to help with these classes, and each member after graduating should be prepared if called upon to give at least two hours twice a week to some voluntary work of an emergency nature.

Several town graduate nurses have already volunteered to help with these classes and further particulars will be published shortly as to where registration will take place and when classes will commence.

Tag Day for Chinese Relief

Trenton has had many tag days of one kind and another but Saturday September 26, next, has been set aside as Tag Day in aid of the Chinese War Relief.

Local taggers on Saturday are to be assisted by several Chinese girls who will be here to help put this drive over the top. Mr. J. H. Matson, manager of the Bank of Montreal, is chairman of this Chinese Relief in Trenton and your assistance is urgently needed.

225 Students at T.H.S.

Trenton High School opened on Tuesday morning with some 225 students registering. There are still quite a number of boys and girls who are busily engaged in helping with the harvesting of fruits, etc., and may remain with the farmer until October 9, by authority of the Department of Education.

A new commercial course has been introduced in the Collegiate for the current year for pupils of Grade X and up to twenty-five students may register for this. While business study has been taught previously in Grade IX this is the first year that a regular commercial course of study has been undertaken. Miss Johnson, the new teacher added to the staff is to be in charge of this course and twenty new typewriters have been added to the High School equipment for the work.

Need Wash Cloths

The convenor of the local branch of Red Cross, Mrs. J. H. Redick, made a special appeal on Tuesday for wascloths for sailors' ditty bags and to be sent to a well-known British hospital. These may be donated or may be made of cotton warp which will be supplied at the work rooms. There is also still an urgent need for garments of all kinds for the men of the services and for British refugees.

Flowers donated by Miss B. Robertson on Tuesday were raffled and won by Mrs. Harry Filion, Bay St., $1.50 being realized from the raffle.

Police Court

Gerald Mainprize appeared in Trenton police court on Tuesday afternoon on a charge of having in his possession an offensive weapon, to wit: a hunting knife, for a purpose dangerous to the public peace and assaulting Allen and Henry Lee, with intent to commit an indictable offence of wounding the said Allen and Henry Lee. Mainprize ran amok in a local restaurant on Monday evening and was taken into custody by police after putting up a terrific struggle. He was remanded to jail for a week for mental examination.

Charles Leslie Phillips charged with stealing a ride on the C.P.R. from Bowmanville to Trenton, was given eight days in jail.

James E. Scriver and Andrew Clements both charged with being drunk and were assessed $10 and $3 costs each.

Cable Service to Relatives In Nazi, Occupied Lands

Ottawa, Sept. 24 —(CP)— Mrs. H. P. Plumptre, Director of the Red Cross Inquiry Board, announced yesterday that the Canadian Red Cross Society is handling a service under which personal cable messages may be sent by Canadians to relatives in enemy or enemy-occupied countries.

"This new service, which it is believed will be appreciated by persons having relatives in Europe, now is in operation and inquiries may be made at any branch of the Canadian Red Cross throughout the Dominion, where the necessary forms may be procured," Mrs. Plumptre said.

Seeds of Discord Being Sown In Hitler's Army

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

There is enough rumor smoke from the Stalingrad siege to warrant the conclusion that Hitler is building fires under his generals, even if one accepts with caution the Swedish reports that Field Marshal Fedor von Bock, German commander, has been purged.

Stalingrad, left-wing citadel of the Russian defence line extending from the Baltic to the Caspian, has come to have more than strategic significance for Hitler. It has become a symbol of his personal prestige. If he ordered its capture against the counsel of his professional soldiers, as the Stockholm version runs, he dare not sanction a halt in the bloody frontal attack.

Only its fall to Nazi arms, whatever the cost of that victory, could gloss over ever-mounting casualties in the eyes of the German public.

Even that could not satisfy the sombre judgment of German military professionals that Nazi political-military amateurs are risking utter disaster, guided only by Hitler's "intuition" instead of sound military conceptions.

Friction Before.

There has been friction before between the professional and political elements of the Nazi army. Almost a year ago Hitler swept aside the advice of his most seasoned generals, took over supreme command in Russia himself, and blatantly announced that his personal "intuition" would thereafter provide the guiding genius for Nazi armies.

Events compelled the recall of the ousted von Bock.

If von Bock foresaw the grim price that must be paid to take Stalingrad, as reported and warned against an assault there and in favor of a concentrated campaign in the Caucasus, unquestionably not only von Brauchitsch but all other senior German professionals shared his view. The soundness of their judgment not only of Stalingrad's defence preparations, but also of Russian will to fight to the death to hold it is now proved beyond question.

That Hitler is seething with resentment for the delay involved, as well as over the blood cost, goes without saying. That he is seeking a scapegoat among his non-political generals to avert public blame from himself is quite likely.

Rommel Complaining.

Another straw in the wind is the current report that Marshal Rommel is complaining bitterly of Nazi failure to back him adequately with air power. His frustrated attempt to crack the British El Alamein-Qattara Depression line is directly traceable to that air inferiority. Every day brings from Cairo indications that his situation is becoming more critical. British land as well as sea raiding far behind his front emphasizes that growing peril as United Nation strength in Egypt steadily mounts.

Veteran observers of the German political scene long ago held out the possibility of a complete rift between Hitler's military-political setup and the German professional military caste. It has never been a complete fellowship ideologically. Nor have such observers questioned that the rank and file of German regulars would follow their generals rather than Hitler in a split born of actual or impending defeat.

That time still may be remote. For all his setbacks in Russia last year and now around the ruins of Stalingrad, Hitler still is moving on. But his pace is slowing. No decisive turn of events in his favor of averting another wearing Russian winter campaign is discernible; but he is still moving forward, not backward, to soothe his people with fresh promises of ultimate triumph. An internal crackup of any sort seems improbable until he is definitely halted; but the seeds of discord are being sown.

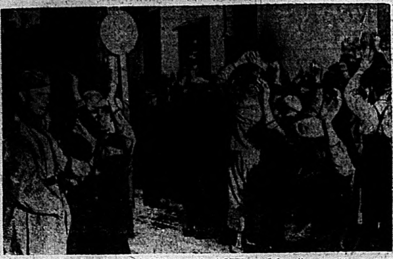
WHEN GESTAPO AGENTS RAIDED WARSAW GHETTO



This photo, found on the body of a Nazi officer killed on the Russian front, was taken by the officer during a raid on the Jewish ghetto in Warsaw. Such raids are carried out practically on the flimsiest pretext. Gestapo agents at LEFT are searching some of the victims. Discovery of anything that the Germans decide to call "contraband" is excuse for beatings, torture and murder. The Inter-Allied Information committee in London has just issued a report that the known executions carried out by the Germans in conquered Europe is reaching the quarter million mark. The Poles have been the hardest hit, with 200,000 executed.

Vitamin A and Poor Eyesight

It is agreed that the greatest discovery in nutrition in recent years is the vitamins. Each and every vitamin so far discovered gives some definite help in maintaining good nutrition and, in other indirect ways, is a real help to the body processes.

Unfortunately, many individuals are relying almost entirely on vitamins not only for nourishment but for other defects or deficiencies in the body.

Thus the fact that vitamin A is of great help where there is some defect of the surface cells of the body—skin, lining of the eyelids, covering of the eyeball and other surfaces — has caused many individuals to believe that vitamin A will restore their eyesight and make glasses unnecessary.

If an individual is getting little or no vitamin A in his food, he may find that his eye reflexes are slow; that is, when he passes from light to darkness or darkness to light the eyes are slow in adjusting themselves to the change. In severe cases inflammation results. It is in these cases which, though it is the eyes that are affected, that vitamin A taken direct or in milk, fruit, vegetable, cod liver oil, gives such wonderful results. As these are common foods in general use, physiologists state that the retina, at back of eye, does not usually need extra vitamin A.

We are told in the bulletin of the Better Vision Institute that about 95 percent (19 of every 20) of all cases of poor vision result from refractive errors, that is, the object does not strike the retina at back of eye properly—short sight, long sight, astigmatism (object not clear). These defects of vision are corrected by glasses which bend the rays of light in such a way that the object strikes the retina properly. Vitamin A cannot perform this service for poor vision.

The thought, then, is that vitamin A has a definite use in cetain eye conditions but it cannot restore poor eyesight nor can it take the place of glasses in making an image strike the the retina properly.

I am writing this because so many are taking Vitamin A for their poor eyesight instead of consulting an oculist or optometrist. This means that they are not only wasting time and money but are losing valuable time in not getting vision corrected properly.

Miss Loretta Stark has been accepted in the services of the C.W.A.C., and has now completed her basic training in Kingston, Ontario.

Miss Phyllis Twiddy, Moira St., and Miss Violet Bachelor, Harriet Street, have returned home after spending a few days with Sgt. and Mrs. J. W. Darling, Ottawa.

The staff of the Bank of Montreal, their wives and friends held an enjoyable wiener roast on the spacious grounds of "Rowallen", the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Gilbert Stackhouse on Tuesday evening last. The crowd gathered round the large outdoor fireplace adjoining the beautiful sunken lawn at the rear of the property and roasted the delicacies to their heart's content. After the very tasty meal, Mr. Matt Currie, accountant at the bank, added to the evening's enjoyment by showing outdoors, several reels of motion pictures taken by him in various parts of Canada and Florida. At midnight, on behalf of the staff and invited guests, Mr. Currie thanked the hosts for their hospitality, also the Misses Grace Hogle and Eileen Mills of the staff, for so thoroughly making the necessary arrangements.

On Monday evening, a cup and saucer shower was given by Miss Helen Reddick and Mrs. Joseph Yome at their home, Picton Road, in honor of Miss Wilma Clarke, bride-to-be. A very enjoyable evening was spent in bridge and Michigan rummy, the prizes being won by Mrs. Grant Ashley, Misses Betty Shappee, Phyllis Clapp and Janette Hall. A doll carriage and miniature crib, beautifully decorated in pink and white were wheeled in, laden with gifts for the bride-to-be, seated under an archway of white bells and pink and white streamers. The guest of honor graciously thanked her friends for the lovely gifts. All sat down to a dainty lunch which brought the evening to a close. All wished for Wilma the best for a happy future life.

Why it is wise to BOVRIL-IZE

The best of beef GO-ZINTER BOVRIL and wise cooks know that when a little BOVRIL GO-ZINTER leftovers and thrifty cuts, the meal is much improved in taste and goodness by the BOVRIL she PUT-ZINTER them.

When one is cold and tired, a cup of delicious beefy BOVRIL proves a real BUCKER-UPPER that is also a real PALATE-TICKLER that stimulates the flow of gastric juices and so helps digestion.

All these novel words indicate how wise it is to BOVRILIZE, because BOVRIL not only has a deliciously beefy flavour, but is a stimulating pick-me-up without harmful reaction of any sort.

WEDDINGS

SHAMBO—ROBINSON

Emmanuel Church Rectory was the scene of a quiet wedding on Wednesday afternoon, September 16, Rev. S. R. Foreman officiating, when Amy, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Robinson, 22 Earl Street, became the bride of John Leslie, only son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Shambo, 20 Strachan St.

The bride looked very pretty in street length frock of beige crepe romaine with brown accessories and corsage of American Beauty roses.

Mrs. Howard Robinson attended the bride attired in Turf Tan with brown accessories and corsage of Talisman roses.

Mr. Howard Robinson, brother of the bride, did honors for the groom.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The bride's mother received wearing orchid sheer with black accessories and corsage of pink roses and deep purple asters. The groom's mother, also received wearing navy sheer with black accessories and corsage of pink gladioli and blue cornflowers.

Later the happy couple left amid showers of confetti for Montreal and Laurentians. On their return they will reside in Belleville.

FINGER—GADSBY

Rev. P. J. Helps officiated at the marriage in First Baptist Church, Welland, on Saturday, of Marjory Ellen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Gadsby, to Mr. Wayne Clifford Finger, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Finger. Mrs. Leonard Pratt, Niagara Falls, played the wedding music and Mrs. S. W. Bond, Toronto, the bride's aunt, sang.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore white slipper satin with a lace panel and her mother's wedding veil, held by a sweetheart hat. Her bouquet was a shower of roses. Mrs. Ormond Embleton, Stamford Centre, was matron of honor, wearing yellow chiffon and matching hat. Miss Dorothy Hansen, bridesmaid, wore orchid chiffon. Both carried orchids and yellow gladioli. William O. Patterson, R.C.A.F., stationed at Mountain View, was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Ormond Embleton, Stamford Centre, and John H. Kew, R.C.A.F., Toronto.

STACEY—CAIRNS

The wedding of Anita Zudora, daughter of Mrs. Cairns and the late Mr. W. E. Cairns, and A.C.2 Frank Capper Vickers Stacey, R.C.A.F., stationed at Trenton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stacey, took place in St. James' Anglican church, Hamilton, on Saturday afternoon, Rev. A. Hamilton Powell officiating. Given in marriage by her brother, LAC. W. E. Cairns, R.C.A.F., the bride wore a white satin gown and long net veil, held by a halo headdress, trimmed with lilies of the valley. She carried a bouquet of red roses and baby's breath and wore a gold locket, faced with mother-of-pearl, the gift of the groom. Mrs. Samuel Taylor, matron of honour, wore a dusty pink sheer crepe dress and matching veil, held in place by a halo of flowers. She carried pink roses. Miss Dorothy Eade, the bridesmaid, wore a powder blue net dress, matching veil and flower headdress and carried yellow roses. A.C.2 Samuel Taylor, R.C.A.F., Lachine, P.Q., was best man and the ushers were A.C.2 Eric Bodden, R.C.A.F., Trenton, and Mr. John Cairns, brother of the bride. Mr. Jack Shoesmith played the wedding music. Miss Nellie Philips sang "Because" and "All Joy Be Thine" Gladioli were placed on the altar.

A reception, held at the Markeen Gardens, was attended by forty guests. The bride's mother was dressed in navy blue sheer crepe and wore a corsage bouquet of red roses, and the groom's mother wore a navy blue figured sheer crepe dress and corsage bouquet of pink roses. After a short motor trip through eastern Ontario, the bride and groom will reside at 116 Britannia avenue. The bride travelled in an air force blue wool dress with which she wore matching accessories.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Don't Deny Guests Joy of Giving

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are planning to have 'Open House' for my mother's and father's Golden Wedding Anniversary. As times are now, my mother does not wish to have the guests bring gifts.

1.—Would it be proper to write "No gifts please" on the inner envelopes of the invitations? The invitations are ivory and gold, and we do not want to spoil the appearance of them by writing on the invitations themselves. What is your advice about this?

2.—The 'Open House' is to be on a Sunday afternoon soon. Is it proper to write "From 2 to 5 o'clock" on the cards?

J. G. S.

1.—Although I appreciate your mother's first inclination about asking that no gifts be brought to this anniversary, I am never enthusiastic about making this request, which never sounds graceful. A Golden Wedding Anniversary is such a significant occasion that I know many of your relatives and close friends will feel deprived of a very special privilege if they are denied the joy of bringing gifts in honor of this milestone.

Don't you think your mother could be persuaded to give the guests their choice about bringing gifts—even "as times are now", they can follow their own inclinations and, if necessary, adapt the choice of gift to their budget. But do let them have the joy of giving, as an expression of the honor they wish to pay your mother and father.

Remind your mother, too, that the gift for this occasion need not, of course, be gold or "golden"; it can be anything, simple or otherwise, that the guest feels will be welcomed by the couple.

2.—Yes, it is not only proper but necessary, to write the hours on the invitation-cards . . . either "From 2 to 5 o'clock", or "Two until five o'clock".

Who Gives Hope Chest?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My boy friend and I have been discussing whether or not it is proper for a girl to receive a Hope Chest from a boy friend, or if it should be given to her by her mother.

We would also like to know if the Hope Chest should be given before or after the engagement.

Anxious

A girl's fiance may properly give her a Hope Chest but it would be inexcusably bad taste for a girl to allow a young man who is just a friend of hers to give her this gift, which is so significant of an engagement. This means, too, that the fiance shouldn't give the girl the chest until the engagement has been determined on by the couple; it isn't necessary to wait for the public announcement.

If the girl especially wishes to have a Hope Chest, and her fiance doesn't suggest giving it to her (even with a hint or two!), of course it is proper for her mother to give it to her.

POLK—STAFFORD

Emmanuel Church, Portland, was the scene of a lovely autumn wedding at three o'clock, Saturday afternoon, September 19, when Rev. A. E. Pepper united in marriage, Doris Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stafford of Moose Jaw, Sask., and SQMS. Charles Vance Polk, R.C.O.C., eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Polk, of Portland.

Mrs. E. H. Bolton played the wedding music. The bride, who was given in marriage by Mr. William Lyons, was charming in a two-piece street length ensemble of rose beige wool sheer, with accents of brown velveteen. Her hat an off-the-face model was of felt with a short veil. Her corsage was of queen peach gladioli and fern. The bride was attended by Miss Marguerite Polk, sister of the groom, who wore a frock of beige wool crepe with brown accessories. Her corsage was bronze baby chrysanthemums. Sgt. Kenneth Learmouth of Ottawa, was best man and the ushers were Donald Polk, brother of the groom, and John R. Polk of Portland.

During the signing of the register Mrs. S. T. Heath sang, "O Perfect Love". The wedding party left the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the groom's parents, for the immediate relatives. The bride's table was adorned in pink and white with crystal candleholders with pink candles, centred with a three-tier wedding cake, which was cut later by the bride. The Misses Mae and Mary Polk and Jean and Reta Brown, assisted in serving.

Following the reception the couple left on a motor trip and will visit friends at Belleville, Stirling and Madoc, the bride travelling in a smart frock of moss green crepe with tweed coat and brown accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Ottawa.

Lesson for Lightweights

By HELEN FOLLETT

Will the skinnies and lightweights please pay attention to what teacher has to say this day? She's going to talk turkey, for their own good. Normal weight is not only necessary for good appearance, but for wellbeing and resistance to disease. When legs are thin, elbows sharp enough to cut bread, collar bones poked into the public eye — something must be done. A thorough medical overhauling by the family Doc is well worth the investment.

The diet should include all kinds of good groceries, aided and abetted by cream, butter and cereals. In addition to three squares a day, a quart of milk should be taken (a glass between meals, another one at bedtime. You don't like milk? Very well, go right on counting your ribs then.

Thin girls have a yen for foods that do not build adipose tissue. A thin sandwich and a couple of lettuce leaves is a feast to them. Spread plenty of butter on the sandwich, then, and use mayonnaise on the salad. Cocoa is fattening. The day should begin with fruit, cocoa, and a hot cereal, well garnished with sugar and cream. Custards, macaroni, rice, potatoes are the skinny girl's friends.

More food; less activity! Leanies are great girls for dashing around and getting to bed late. That system won't do. Eight hours of sleep should be the rule, with an hour's rest during the day. Four pounds a month will be added, maybe more.

There is the matter of dress that dissembles emaciation. Wear round neck bodices or those with narrow collars.

Choose hosiery of light shade, they will make spindly shanks look larger. Coat collars should be soft, high and folded over.

Arlene Judge has a lovely, well-proportioned figure.

Welcome Mat

We would like to take this opportunity to extend greetings to our new teachers, Miss Pallett (Art); Mrs. Davison (Girls' Gym); Miss O'Connor (Commercial); and Mr. Partridge (Boys Gym).

Then, too, besides the new students in Grade IX, we welcome Stuart Wood from Winnipeg, Kathleen Weatherill from Westmount, Montreal; Catherine Clark from Humberside, Toronto; Gordon Devereux from Kingston; Stephen Geneja and Tommie Donnan from Albert College; and Marie Badgley from Shannonville.

Glad to know you!

Cuff Notes

There were pigeons on the lawn. It seems that there is grass on our campus only for the first few days—then it's gone with the rugby team . . . There was a nice, crisp, clean smell about the school the first morning, with the lockers and desks well-groomed for another term . . . There were, it seemed, fewer students in Grade IX than usual. But those who came listened carefully to the outlines of the various courses and chose wisely (we hope) . . . There were well-tanned arms and bronzed faces on the army of farm workers that marched back to school to tackle algebra and zoology for another year.

There is a much more crowded term this year, with students coming in to school late in September (and farm workers as late as October 9) and leaving before Easter, in April . . . There is much more to be done, too. Besides the regular extra-curricular activities and sports (no games with any but local teams) we have a new load of war-work and salvage coming up . . . There is a new item on the time-tables. Labeled simply "Defence" it will comprise, we understand, military instructions, etc., worked into school time.

There will be shorter hours (9:00 to 4:00) and slightly shorter periods . . . There will be no single lines moving through the halls for the time being. We are trying a new, more informal system, Acting Principal Mr. Turner has put it up to us which system will be finally adopted . . There will be a regular assembly period, on Wednesday morning, instead of the floating period that we tried last year . . . There will be, it is presumed, less students late, if every late student has to remain for one hour after four. And remain absolutely STILL, which means no homework being done to kill time. You gotta get up in the morning!

Operation on Misshapen Nose May Not Relieve Mental Stress

The surgeon can change the appearance of a person by an operation on his nose, chin or ears. Quite often, when one's livelihood depends upon pleasing appearance, the nose is straightened out. Very often the corrective operation is done only to relieve the unhappiness caused by the deformed nose. But sometimes the operation may really be needed to restore the normal breathing passages.

Of all the factors which may detract from one's appearance, a deformed nose is the most potent. The nose may be big and ugly even at birth, or it may become deformed as a result of injury or infection. Many persons who go to a physician to have an operation on the nose have a deformity so slight that the average person would hardly consider it worth noticing. These persons have mental stress all out of proportion to the deformity present. In fact, in many instances the deformity has become an obsession with the patient; he has become self-conscious, may even have developed a feeling of inferiority.

Dr. Samuel Salinger of Chicago, says that before the patient is offered advice by the physician, it is always a good plan to get the patient's idea of what he thinks is wrong with his nose, the length of time he has had the trouble, and whether or not the condition of the nose has subjected him to ridicule or comment. In some cases the patient's entire personality may be so warped that a mere change in the shape of the nose can hardly be expected to bring about the kind of improvement the patient may wish. In such instances it may be better not to perform an operation on the nose. Of course, the more marked the deformity, the better are the chances for a successful outcome. The less the deformity, the more difficult it may be to obtain a satisfactory result. The patient must understand just exactly how much can be accomplished by an operation, and not look for miracles.

Sometimes the end of the nose may become thickened as a result of acne or eczema. This may make it difficult to carry out the procedure for reducing the tip of the nose.

There are other features which may detract from the appearance—a receding chin and thick lips, for example. In the case of the receding chin, it is possible to carry out an operation building up the chin with cartilage.

Nasal plastic operations for changing the shape, size and appearance of the nose can be successfully carried out, but it must be remembered that as a rule these operations had best be done only when the deformity greatly detracts from the person's appearance, or interferes with his normal breathing.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw — Harvest Thanksgiving service was held in St. Mark's Church Sunday evening at eight o'clock and was well attended. The service was conducted by Rev. Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell, assisted by Lay Reader W. J. Cottrell. The Rural Dean preached an inspiring and appropriate sermon. The choir rendered the anthem "His Love Befriending Us" during the offertory. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers, fruits and vegetables.

A number from this vicinity attended the memorial service held in Stanwood United Church on Sunday afternoon for Pilot Officer Arthur Milton Rowe, recently reported killed in action in Egypt.

Max Reid, who left the city of North Bay last April, to assist his cousin, Ronald Brown with his farm duties, returned home last Wednesday where he will again take up his studies at High School. Max will be greatly missed here as he was active at Young People's meetings and other community activities. His many friends hope to see him again next summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Seabrook of St. Catharines, spent the weekend at Bonarlaw visiting relatives.

Reds Stage Dramatic ResurgenceofDefensive And Offensive Power

By EDDY GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Sept. 24 —(AP)— Red army men of Stalingrad have torn a group of fortified positions from the German grip, recaptured a settlement northwest of the city and killed more than 7,200 invaders in a dramatic resurgence of both defensive and offensive power the Russians said today.

Communiques of the day implied there was not a single new breach in Russian lines within the streets of the Volga River city. The Germans were reported again "hurriedly bringing up reinforcements" by plane to fill their ranks.

The Red navy's Volga River gunboats helped Red army artillerymen, machine-gunners and riflemen mow down the invaders by the thousands.

Official reports of midnight and mid-day listed 115 additional tanks and more than 48 field guns as wrecked or captured in fresh actions of the bitter, month-old battle.

Russians were declared doggedly holding their positions in barricaded streets and smoking ruins under shot, shells and bombs and the fact that Stalingrad, never a fortress city, still held out in the 31st day of its siege was regarded here as one of the greatest testaments to the skill and courage of the Red army.

Most Intense of Battle

The army newspaper Red Star said the current fighting was the most intense of the battle.

The Germans were declared to have used 200 tanks as a shield for one push into the body of the city, only to be repulsed.

Nazi troops seized a large building in violent fighting. Soviet patrols rushed into approaches and overpowered guards on the stairways, in corridors and rooms. Finally, Red Star said, Russian fighters armed with explosives blew up the structure with the Germans inside.

Red Star said the German command was trying to supplement its siege forces with a new column. The direction of this advance was not specified.

Bombers, fighter planes, heavy artillery and tanks were reported employed by the Red army in the counter - attacks northwest of Stalingrad. The threat against the Nazi flank as well as the heavy direct pressure was credited with forcing the invaders to withdraw.

Red Star said that both the city and Volga River traffic were under continuous air raids. It reported that a barge withdrawing refugees was smashed.

Attacks Lead to Reverses

German attacks were declared to have led only to reverses on four other sectors of the far-flung front, in the Sinyavino area on the Volkhov River; at Voronezh; southwest of Novorossisk; and in the Mozdok region of the central Caucasus.

Soviet troops repulsed several attacks overnight in the Stalingrad area and boosted to more than 13,000 the roll of invaders killed in the last four days, the Russians said.

"One Soviet tank unit has dislodged the Germans from fortified positions, destroying six tanks and several trucks and killing 600 Germans," the mid-day communique announced.

"In another sector several enemy attacks were repulsed and about 700 Germans were killed."

Other details were supplied by the midnight communique.

2,000 Wiped Out

Red army men striking anew against the assault and supply columns moving upon Stalingrad from the northwest "made some headway" and wiped out more than 2,000 German officers and men, the Soviet Information Bureau said.

Apparently referring to a related action, the Moscow radio announced that Soviet troops "continue to develop their successful offensive" within the northwestern section of the street centre following their recapture of a commanding height three days ago.

Russian agencies stressed a Soviet disregard for odds.

The Soviet radio said Red marines engaged 1,000 Rumanian infantrymen and only 100 of the enemy survived.

Ground Strewn With Dead

Among reports of the Stalingrad street fighting was a declaration that a single Soviet detachment had repelled a dozen plane-supported attacks by German infantry and armored units, strewing the area before their ramparts with dead and the hulks of 42 tanks.

"In another sector, in three days, about 2,000 German officers and men have been wiped out, 44 tanks crippled or damaged and 18 guns, 30 motor vehicles, six mortar batteries and 39 machine-gun nests demolished in intensive fighting by infantry and artillery," the communique said.

Shellfire of the Volga River flotilla was declared to have annihilated at least two battalions of German and Rumanian soldiers and silenced eight enemy artillery batteries and three mortar batteries.

Determined Russian resistance in the Mozdok region of the central Caucasus forced the Germans to break off an assault and retreat with a loss of five tanks, 24 trucks and about 200 men, it was said.

All Attacks Repulsed

A series of thrusts by four German infantry regiments and 75 tanks against Russian positions in the Voronezh area were beaten back by Soviet troops and aircraft.

"All attacks were repulsed," it was announced. "Fourteen enemy tanks were crippled or burned out and more than 1,500 men were wiped out. Four German planes were shot down by anti-aircraft fire."

The Germans not only were unable to gain in an attack upon Soviet lines on the Black Sea coast of the Caucasus south of Novorossisk, out were pressed back by a counter-attack, a communique said. More than 300 Germans were declared wiped out.

Nazis Doomed For Another Winter

Almost 1,200 miles to the north, Red army men who have dug in after an advance against the Germans still threatening Leningrad's flank in the Sinyavino area on the Vilkhov River were reported to have repulsed Nazi attacks and destroyed eight tanks.

"Sixteen German planes were brought down by anti-aircraft gunfire and machine-gun and rifle fire," the communique said.

A Stockholm message to the London Daily Express said German troop trains were moving north through Norway and a new offensive is expected to be launched this fall against Murmansk Russia's Arctic port of entry for British and United States munitions.

The London Times said editorially that Moscow might be considered safe for another season and that the German army is doomed to the hardships and attrition of another winter in the Russian snows."

AXIS SHIP TORPEDOED

Cairo, Sept. 24 (AP).—British torpedo-carrying aircraft were credited officially today with scoring a direct hit on an axis vessel off the coast of Greece in continuing attacks on Marshal Erwin Rommel's overseas supply line.

A communique announcing this success also reported a slight increase in enemy air activity over the Egyptian battlefront yesterday, but said the R.A.F. came through the day without any losses.

Except for night patrol activity the land front remained quiet, the bulletin said.

SOME SUGGESTIONS

1—Use only sufficent lamps to provide eye-saving light.
2—Use one light or lamp in the living-room rather than three or four, and place so that the family may gather around one light.
3—Have the light source as near as possible to work, but avoid glare in the eyes.
4—Keep lamp shades and fixtures clean, dusty fixtures absorb as much as ¼ of the light.
5—Eliminate colored bulbs, they absorb approximately 1-3 of the light.
6—Replace dark shade linings with white or light colored lining to reflect more light.

REMEMBER WITHOUT WANTING

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

sparks to fly in her mind. If she saw him again. . . That wasn't likely. "But I believe I shall see him again," she thought. "Will he meet the ship when it returns in two weeks? I told Phyllis I'd meet her. Was the friend he saw off a man or a woman? When I think it was a woman, I'm jealous."

Why did this day of all days cause her to open a bag of memories and peer into it seeing herself the second daughter of a moderately-successful business man and the pretty, gentlewoman who was her mother and a home on a tree-lined suburban street in the near-south city of Clinton? An uneventful childhood, to be sure, with Harriet, her sister, four years older than she, and the children in the neighborhood. School, Sunday school parties, lessons and summers at the seashore until she persuaded her easily-persuaded parents that she preferred summers in art schools to sun and sand swimming.

No stark dramas had punctuated the security of that life. There was only the drama in her, the seeking, the longing for that which she could not quite explain but which was relieved a little by the pictures created by her talented hands.

Harriet had left college in her second year to marry Larry Summers whom she had loved since they had been in high school together and had proceeded promptly to have two healthy, handsome sons, timing the last so that his birth coincided with Judith's decision to come to New York.

She went home frequently and her parents came to New York to see her, reconciled now to her leaving home and touchingly proud of her. But to them, she knew, and to Harriet her life in New York was but an interlude, the wayward birdling testing her wings until she met a "nice" young man like Larry and lived, as Harriet lived, in a world of bridge, mortgages and baby formulas.

They reckoned wrong, she thought. For she had created for herself a satisfactory life and her work in the advertising department of a large department store was absorbingly interesting, her co-workers congenial, her salary adequate. Her circle of friends was ever increasing and there was a challenge in each new day met with youthful courage and optimism and excellent health. Perhaps she would be a trifle smug, she had thought recently, if she had not been acutely conscious of a lack, an emptiness, the old longing for something she could not define. It was as though she were waiting for something miraculous to happen to her.

She went to sleep finally, knowing that her unwillingness to accept sleep sooner came from an impatience to see Max Worthington again.

CHAPTER TWO
Delightful Surprise

The next morning, Sunday morning, Judith awoke, missing Phyllis' red head in the next bed. After preparing breakfast, she ate alone at the card table beside the broad window, missing, too Phyllis' rather aimless but usually diverting conversation. The part-time colored maid, the good-natured Fannie, who wasted time but never her energy, came three evenings a week to prepare dinner. The remaining evenings she and Phyllis had dined out or, with some confusion in the tiny kitchen, had prepared their own meals.

That afternoon she was working at her drawing board when Emily came, her pretty face aglow, her brown eyes bright after a brisk walk in the crisp Autumn air, her brown hair perfect beneath an absurd little black hat. Tall but delicate-looking, she wore a black suit and her prettiness, her sweetness, her femininity livened a room shadowy in early twilight.

Daughter of a prolific, gregarious, mid-western family, Emily exuded friendliness and generosity of self. Unlike Phyllis, who carried in her the bitterness of an unhappy childhood and who was a little selfish, careless and extravagant as a result, Emily was uninhibited, unselfish and a naive believer in the face value of the people she met. Judith had often thought that Phyllis had an indescribable charm but that Emily's was quite definite and that while you had to guess what was in Phyllis's mind, Emily's was an open book as honest and simple as her background.

Conscientious in her work, Emily might be received, but she would never deceive others. Judith loved them both, understood them though there had been many times when Phyllis's irritating habits of losing her key and borrowing her clothes without asking had made her think that Emily would have been the wiser choice to live with. They had in fact, asked Emily to share the apartment in the beginning, but she had declined, preferring the less expensive, less pleasant existence in the staid hotel for women.

Emily's lips, brushing Judith's cheek, were cool and soft.

"Working! You work too hard, dear, but I won't stay long to interrupt you. I should have called. But I needed a walk and it's such a lovely afternoon. I miss Phyliss already don't you? I feel we've got to talk about her or we'll feel she's dead. I hope she's happy today. She looked so lovely yesterday".

Judith said, "I looked for you after they sailed, but I couldn't find you".

"We didn't stay. It was such a mob". There was laughter in her warm eyes as she sat in the chintz covered chair and pulled off her immaculate white gloves. "I wanted you to meet Tim but I never got around to introducing you. Phyllis and Ames were the whole show . . naturally."

"Tim He's new, isn't he?" You're in love, Emily. . . . .I've seen you romantic over several young men but not seriously so. A few weeks later you'd tell me they'd done something to disappoint you Phyllis wasn't like that. She said that until she met Ames she had liked men only for the fun of being with them and dining and dancing in nice places and for their thoughtfulness in sending her flowers and gifts.

"Yes. Sort of-brand-new. Oh, let me tell you about him, Judith! I met him at the Alexanders in Connectious two weeks ago and he's been keeping the wires busy ever since calling me. He lives near the Alexanders and they're all very good friends. Tim's family is very rich. Tim is an only son and he's in Wall Street with his father. Judith, his car is magnificent and his home—we drove by it last Sunday—is a show place. He's Harvard and all the better things of life. I wish he weren't. I'd like him just as much if he weren't. You saw him—tall and dark and handsome with mischief in his eyes. He makes me laugh, he sends me orchids and orchids and I'm—I'm in a dizzy whirl."

And you're not frightened? Judith though. No, only happy, living for this moment and the next. You can't see a precipice with a young man like Tim because young men like Tim don't often marry girls like you, Emily, for all your worth. They like to play with you and take you dancing and make cautious love to you . . . . but they don't marry you. Girls like you are sweet memories to young men like Tim in later years.

But she said, smiling slowly, "It sounds very exciting."

"It is! And he's so glad I'm leaving the hotel and coming in with you. My family is, too. Mother thinks I'm undernourished; and she can't imagine how anyone who doesn't own a washing machine and a back yard can possibly be clean. I can't wait until Christmas to go home."

"I want to go home next weekend. You're coming in on Wednesday, aren't you?"

"Yes. Tim's going to bring me and my things. You'll meet him then. You'll like him."

"Ask him to dinner. Fannie will be here on Wednesday. Tell him he doesn't have to spend the evening in just because he comes for dinner."

Emily said, "He's so restless and energetic I don't think he spends many evenings in." She laughed. "I've done nothing but talk about myself and Tim! But he's driven everything else out of my mind, Judith. I can't remember things. It's unreal and it isn't. When I'm with him, it's the realest thing I've ever known" she smiled. "You look so lovely and superior sitting there while I rave on like a romantic school girl."

Superior? No, Judith thought. Not that. Never that. But she was seeing more clearly than Emily because her emotions were not involved. Max. . . .His face, arrogant, sprang before her as though it had been waiting for her to summon it. The rather close-cropped fair hair, the finely-cut mouth, the immense physical power of him had the effect, briefly, of uprooting her own emotions. . . . She thought, I won't tell Emily about him. There's nothing to tell except how he made me feel.

Emily gathered up her purse and gloves. "I know you're dying to get back to work and, Judith, I appreciate so much your asking me to come in with you even though I can't pay as much as Phyllis paid. I'll try to make it up by being useful and not getting in your way. I'm going to love having a kitchen to putter around in! Wait'll you've eaten one of my meals! Well-see you Wednesday."

"I'll get your key. What time on Wednesday?"

"I'm leaving the office a few hours early and I'll probably be settled here when you come home. And if you'd rather not have Tim. ."

"I'll love having him. I want to meet him."

"Tim instead of Ames."

"I'll ask Sid. We'll make it a foursome."

All at once the room was dark. Turning on lamps, Judith went to the bedroom and called up Sid Biddison, an old friend from Clinton now working in the New York. Sid was a mild, pleasant young man who enjoyed concerts and the theatre and books. Safe and unexciting, but never a bore, he would drop in at the apartment at his leisure and Judith could always depend on him to accept an invitation and to fit in nicely with all types of people.

Sid said he'd be delighted to come for dinner Wednesday evening. Judith returned again to her drawing board in the living-room. How neutral Sid would seem in comparison with Tim! And while Emily and Tim were going out, she and Sid would have another of their long conversational evenings which fortunately never tired her. Because Sid could not afford to take her where Tim would take Emily she must avoid an embarrassing situation by making it clear at once that Emily and Tim were to go their way unaccompanied.

The telephone rang. She answered it.

"Judith Barth?"

Not for an instant did she doubt . . . .The clear, precise tones of that demanding voice were the name she had heard yesterday. . . .It was Max. It couldn't be anyone else.

"Yes.".

"Max Worthington, who was very happy to find you in the telephone directory."

His words were spoken slowly as though he were weighing them carefully. He was calm and she knew that no sudden impulse had sent him to a telephone, but that he had planned hours before to call her.

She said, "I'm very happy that I'm in the telephone directory."

He chuckled. "That could be taken two ways, but I'll take it in the way complimentary to me. I thought of you last night and wished I had had the courage to take you away to an evening much pleasanter than the one you were bound for. At any rate, I'm putting in an early bid for Friday evening. You're having dinner with me, Judith."

"Am I?"

He laughed. "You resent being told? Well?"

"Very well. Dinner with you on Friday." Had anything been planned for Friday? She couldn't remember.

Max said, "I hope Robert Kennedy served his purpose—for us. He hasn't lived in vain. Good night, Judith."

"Good night." She added, "Max" too late for him to hear it.

She replaced the telephone slowly, thinking, "Who are you? What are you, Max Worthington, that your voice makes me light-headed and helpless? It's ridiculous. You're not the only attractive man I've ever known. But here I stand foolishly shaken, wondering about you, wondering why Friday is such a long way off.

When she looked in the mirror, she saw with surprise that her eyes were as Emily's had been that afternoon-bright and warm with laughter in them. How could she judge Emily when she, Judith, might be heading for a precipice? Running toward it . . . . She thought, "It's the not knowing. . . .If only you could know and skip the pages to the last page. But you can't. You have to live it."

Fag Fund Seeks Financial Aid

If every citizen in Belleville would contribute one cent per month to the Kinsmen "Fag Fund" to assure smokes for Belleville boys serving overseas, the amount of cigarettes flowing overseas to our fighting forces would meet all requirements to continue the fund. Each week the Kinsmen-Fag Fund sends individual packages of 300 each to forty Belleville boys serving overseas at no cost to any person concerned, as all money contributed to the fund goes directly towards the paying for the fags sent overseas. It is purely a voluntary fund with the Kinsmen Club of Belleville meeting all administration costs.

To prove how Belleville boys overseas appreciate the cigarettes received from home the following Belleville boys wrote letters of appreciation, which were received this week: F. T. Symons, R. Whittard, W. E. Haines, G. Doran, C. Finden; H. M. Denord and Wm. Ironside.

The forty Belleville boys sent individual packets of 300 cigarettes through the fund this week included:

B. F. Armstrong; J. D. Betts; Harold Burkholder; R. S. Chadwick; John M. Clarke; R. E. Davis; Fred M. Day; S. A. Denyer; Harold S. Dracup; D. E. Gilmour; Frank Hebert; Bill Holway; F. M. St. Louis Cardinals 24 Hours Nearer Pennant by Their Win Over Cincinnati Reds, 4 to 2

Larry French Hurls One-Hitter to Keep Dodgers in the Race

FACED 27 BATTERS

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

In 65 years the National League, the oldest baseball organization in the world, has had only one season in which winning 100 games was not sufficient to win the pennant—until this year.

The Brooklyn Dodgers won their 100th game yesterday and it didn't move them even one wisp closer to the championship. That's why the St. Louis Cardinals are making preparations to face the New York Yankees in the World Series opening next Wednesday.

Brooklyn bagged No. 100 yesterday as old Lefty Larry French marked up one of the finest pitchin performances of all times. He pitched a one-hitter, and a single by Nick Etten that got past shortstop Peewee Reese not only kept the veteran southpaw from a no-hitter but also from a perfect game. The laughing boy never walked a man, never let anyone get to first base except Etten, who was erased in a double play, and altogether pitched to the minimum of 27 batters.

This remarkable outing brought the Dodgers a 6-0 triumph over the Phils, but it didn't save them from imminent elimination in the furious National League pennant fight because the Cardinals also triumphed in a night game against Cincinnati, 4-2.

Can Cinch it Today

This made it possible for the Cardinals to clinch the pennant today if they win again from the Reds and the Dodgers lost to the Boston Braves.

The Cardinals came from behind last night to down the Reds, who scored both their runs in the first inning on a walk, an error, a wild pitch and a single. After the first frame Cincinnati made only one hit—a total of two from the game off rookie Johnny Beazley as he attained his 20th triumph of the season.

St. Louis smacked Bucky Walters for nine safeties, three of them by Stan Musial, and won handily with three runs in the third and another in the seventh.

This reduced the Cardinals' winning combination to any two St. Louis victories, or Dodgers defeats, or one of each.

Yanks Ready For Series

While the National League squabble was continuing unabated the New York Yankees, secuer with their sixth American League championship in seven years, trimmed the Washington Senators, 4-1, on the five-hit hurling of big Ernie Bonham. It was his 21st triumph against five setbacks this season.

This closed the Yanks' home season and left them with only one game at Boston Sunady, before entering the world series next Wednesday.

No other Major League games were scheduled yesterday.

DRAPER GIVES WARNING

New York, Sept. 23 —(CP)— A warning that "if we can bombard Tokyo, the Germans can bombard New York, Halifax and Montreal," was given here last night by Brig.-Gen. D. C. Draper, chief constable of Toronto, in an address at the convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Gen. Draper suggested that central information bureaus be established in every city to handle air raid information about persons wounded, missing and killed in raids.

LARRY MACPHAIL RESIGNS TO JOIN THE U. S. ARMY

Manager of Dodgers Not Likely to Return to Baseball After War

NO SUCCESSOR

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Sept. 24—(AP)—Help Wanted: One Experienced baseball executive with colorful personality capable of taking charge front-running baseball club and keeping it there. Salary up to $75,000. Address board of directors Brooklyn Baseball Club.

This advertisement properly should appear in the classified columns of this newspaper, but it missed the deadline because Leland Stanfoad (Larry) MacPhail, after all the weeks of rumors about his joining the army, did not formally resign until last night.

The task of severing his connection with Dodgers was attended to at a special meeting of the Dodgers' directors, who accepted with regret and said no successor had been decided upon.

Afterward MacPhail disclosed that he expected to be commissioned in the field artillery Sunday, the day the Major League season closes, although the fact that his beloved bums are close to being squeezed out of the National League Pennant had no bearing on his action.

MacPhail, who was a captain in the first World War and took part in the effort of a handful of the A. E. F. to kidnap the Kaiser after the armistice, has been striving to return to uniform ever since the United States became involved in this war.

It was with tears in his eyes last night that he said his farewell.

"I'm not figuring on coming back to baseball," he said. "I've resigned my connection with the Dodgers and from now on it's up to somebody else. The directors haven't decided on a successor. They're going to interview applicants. They may make some changes in the organization. I don't know. From now on I'm out."

Katan Wins Doubtful Decision Over Earl McCready, Lawson Unable To See Antics of Winner

Katan Uses Ropes to Reverse Hold That Had Him in Trouble

MARTINEZ WINS

Fights that were not advertised featured last night's wrestling card at the Hume Arena when partisans squared off in combat in front of the local sports palace and went into battle royal that took the effort of police to disperse. The allegations for the outbreak of public differences came following a questionable decision in the British Empire eliminations between Earl McCready and John Katan, opponents in the main bout of an advertised wrestling card that resulted in Katan winning on a rather doubtful decision. Patrons took sides and carried their feelings into a pugnacious atmosphere, which culminated with a general brawl with women, as well as men, taking sides and squaring off outside the Arena in what subsequently proved general bedlam with fists flying without regard as to sex. Cooler heads of police quieted the outbreak without arrests, but backers of McCready still feel they were justified in their stand.

The fans' biased opinions actually commenced after the third and final fall of the Empire eliminations, when Katan gained a short-arm, figure, four scissors hold off the ropes to pin the peoples' favourite, Earl McCready, with Referee Phil Lawson failing to see the advantage of Katan's hold off the ropes and declaring the Calgary "eye-opener" winner. In defence of Lawson it must be acknowledged that both wrestlers were between him and the ropes, but McCready continued his protests and in any event if these two ruffians ever meet again it might be a splendid suggestion to have two referees in the ring, one to watch such antics as Katan used to win last night.

Katan Wins First Fall

Katan won the first fall in his battle for a shot at the British Empire championship when he flattened McCready with a spin and body press after 17 minutes of rough grappling, that saw no quarter asked nor given. Getting back into stride McCready assumed the aggressive roll in the second round and after assuming some rather unorthodox attacks at the hands of Katan, finally evened matters by pinning the Calgary villain with a full crotch and leg spread. Came the third round and Katan roughed McCready, Referee Lawson et al and finally worked himself into a position whereby he gained the advantage of the ropes and whipped on a quick short-arm figure-four arm scissors and pinned McCready as the patrons verbally howled and roared in disgust, when Referee Lawson, who was on the off side, gave Katan the verdict. Following the bout McCready personally placed a long distance telephone call to Promoter Frank Tunney of the Queensbury A.C., who was unable to be present for the show, and stated his objections and protested loudly claiming he would take the matter to the Wrestling Commission in protest of the decision.

Martinez Win

In the semi-final bout, a battle of elongated ruffians both of whom stood well over the six foot mark, Pedro (the rough Mexican) outroughed Roland Kirchmeyer, the Oklahoma skyscraper, and finally won with a reverse body slam, but not before the patrons had received well of their worth of entertainment in a give-nothing go.

In the curtain-raiser Referee Cliff Fox labored longer and harder than either Jerry Monnahan and Nanjo Singh, who finally mauled and pulled each other and the referee for thirty minutes to what was declared a draw. In this bout Singh once gained his noted "cobra hold", but before Monnahan or Fox could figure the matter out an irritated fan moved into the picture and broke matters up by grabbing Singh by the foot, applying a timely toe hold and the participants started all over again. (Thanks, Mister Fan, for some timely assistance.)

DRILLON CASE MAY COME UP BEFORE MEETING

Good Right-Winger of Leafs Not Likely to Play in Toronto

FANS SOUR ON HIM

By SCOTT YOUNG
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Sept. 24 (CP)—The strange case of Gordon Drillon may be among the problems settled here today and tomorrow during meetings of the National Hockey League's Management Committee and Board of Governors.

Here is a brief brush-up on Drillon's trouble with the Toronto Maple Leafs; his natural style of play is not aggressive, although records show it to be highly effective. For his seemingly lackadaisical play, Toronto fans have booed him periodically. When he didn't look good against the rough and tough Detroit Red Wings in the Stanley up finals last year, he was benched. Club officials said he would be sold or traded before another season began.

That all is quite clear. But what makes his case strange is that the deal hasn't been completed. Leafs' terms undoubtedly are high, but some N.H.L. clubs could make a sharp move by trading an entire forward line for his scoring ability.

Has Plenty of Ability

There is nothing doubtful about that ability. In the 1937-38 season, one year after he turned professional with Syracuse Stars, the Toronto farm, Drillon won the N.H.L. scoring championship with 26 goals and 26 assists. He also was awarded the Lady Byng trophy that year. In 1938-39, he was 18th in the scoring with 18 goals and 11 assists; in 1939-40, he was fourth, with 21 and 19; in 1941 he was third, with 23 and 21; and last season he was 10th, with 23 and 17. His goals probably have meant a difference of a souple of rungs on the N.H.L. standings for Toronto each year since he joined the club.

Toronto's best chance to cinch a deal for this 27-year-old, Moncton-born player will come today and tomorrow when every team in the league will be represented at N.H.L. meetings here.

Brooks' May Drop Out

Another unscheduled but important item of business likely to be considered is whether Brooklyn Americans will continue to function. Rumors have had Amerks dropping out for the duration, but they are unconfirmed. As the schedule will be planned during the next two days, the public must be told now whether Americans are in or out.

Other business on the agenda is the drafting of policies to comply with new government regulations covering professional sport, and consideration of a proposed new N.H.L. agreement with the anadian Amateur Hockey Association. The new amateur-pro agreement differs from the previous one mainly in that juniors will be allowed to turn professional in future without special permission from the C.A.H.A.

YANKS OUTFIELD HAS EDGE ON CARDINALS TRIO

DiMaggio and Keller Shift Balance of Power to New York

SLAUGHTER GOOD

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Sept. 24 —(AP)— The presence of Joe DiMaggio and Charley Keller, two of the most dangerous clutch hitters in baseball, in the Yankee outfield is sufficient to guarantee the American League champions an important edge over their prospective World Series rivals, St. Louis Cardinals, in the gardening department.

Only in right field, where Enos (Country) Slaughter with his .316 batting average and 13 home runs stacks up against Roy Cullenbine, Yankee replacement for the departed Tommy Henrich, can the Cardinals be figured to hold an advantage over the '41 Worlds Series champions.

And even there the statistics might not offer a thorough comparison. Cullenbine, a moody fellow has been regarded for several years as potentially one of the best outfielders in the game. The main rap against him as he drifted from one club to another in both leagues was that he seldom bore down.

Cullenbine Looks Better

He looks and acts like a brand-new ball player since he joined the Yankees. He has got acquainted with his teammates and has been pounding the ball at a more valuable rate than his most recent official average of .274 would indicate.

In centre field the great DiMaggio, who has made a notable comeback after a poor start this season, will be paired against Terry Moore, captain of the Cardinals and one of the game's outstanding defensive outfielders. Joe, even with his deflated sticking average of .307 and his comparatively poor record of 20 homers for the year, far overshadows the valiant Card leader as a hitter.

Comparison of the two leftfielders offers a more ticklish problem if one is influenced by the figures. They show, for a fact, that Stan Musial, the Cardinals' wonderful rookie, is hitting a lusty .310 as against Keller's .292, and that his fielding average is better than King Kong's, too. But the writer has a suspicion that if 10 pitchers were picked at random and asked which player they would rather face with two out and the winning run on second, that the answer would be an almost unanimous "don't be silly!"

Not Had a Good Year

Keller, like DiMaggio, has not had a particularly good year. Yet both of them have knocked in well over 100 runs—a feat not approached either by Musial or Moore. Keller has blasted 26 home runs to Musial's 10. Musial and Moore, while fitting perfectly into the Cardinals' hair-raising style of play simply are not the power punchers that the two big Yankees are.

In the matter of speed afoot the Cardinal trio might hold a slight advantage, but not enough to matter. Both Keller and DiMaggio are much faster than is generally realized.

The Cards, with young Harry Walker and Coaker Triplett to call on, probably would be less weakened by injury to one of their regular gardeners than would the Yankees. Walker, in particular, has looked good as replacement for Moore in recent games. The Yanks haven't much to fall back on in the veteran George Selkirk and Tuck Stainback.

New York, Sept. 24.—(AP)—On behalf of West Coast fans, Col. Russ Newland takes issue with this corner's recent nomination of Gunder Haegg as the year's outstanding athlete. . . . . .Russ points out that Cornelius (Dutch) Warmerdam, the pole vault champ, is the only man ever to clear 15 feet officially. . . And he's done it 14 times this year and 26 times in all since April, 1940 . . .. We're still inclined to rate Haegg's running at various difficult distances above Connie's consistency at one feat. . . However, we agree that Warmerdam is in line for the Sullivan Memorial award, which he almost won last year. . . He's a standout among American athletes and there's no question about his qualifying as a sportsman, leader etc., . . . The secretary will cast one affirmative vote.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Sept. 24—(CP)— When Canadians think of six-day bike racing (although millions of them never do) they usually think of Torchy Peden, the iron-legged Victoria redhead. . .Promoters remembered this when planning one of the Marathon muscle-benders for Montreal and Peden will be among the competitors . . . Calgary's Jack Singer is percolating again as a fighter promoter . . . He's trying to line up a good opponent for Pte. Al Lust, who holds the Western Canada version of the Canadian Welterweight Crown. . . Present plans call for all but fighters' purses and expenses to go to war charity . .Singer apparently has given up trying to get the recognized Canadian Welter Champ, LAC. Dave Castilloux, to do battle with Lust.

Social Note:

Boston's Bill Cowley is visiting in Halifax, and Ken (Halifax Herald) Chisholm reports he may enter the Naval Officers Training School at King's college . . . If true, 'twould be good news for the men behind the Halifax navy hockey team . . . Cowley won't commit himself on the subject.

Incidentally:

Latest reports from the Prairies indicate that there will be good Senior and Junior teams in all three Provinces. . .First word of organized curling in the services comes from Calgary, where members of the No 3 Service Flying Training School are laying plans . . .One of the prime movers is Howard Wood, Jr., who played second on the rink his father skipped to the Canadian championship in 1940. . .Montreal professionals report the golf ball shortage is becoming acute . . . Kitchener, Ont., Panthers in the Ontario Rugby Football Union have lost 27 players to the armed forces since war began. .. Don't be surprised if there is a western Canada football playoff this year . . .Bob Walker, former Regina Roughriders Star, is coaching a Regina Navy Club and wants some exhibitions with Winnipeg City League teams. ..If Walker gets the material, he won't let Winnipeg have the western field to itself.

Alan (Brantford Expositor) Rose reports that when a Brantford vs. Niagara Falls baseball game was called for wet grounds, the players (juveniles) persuaded the groundskeeper of a nearby football field to set up a diamond on the turf and were all ready to play there when officialdom banned the enterprise. . .You have to hand it to Vancouver golfers as great boosters for war charity. . . They lead the field in raising money now, but are trying to arrange an exhibition between top-notch gal golfers to climax the season.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

CLEANING OUT HIS DESK recently, Warren Brown, sports editor of the Chicago Sun, ran across the 1941 roster of the Brooklyn Dodgers and discovered that out of the 37 players who went into camp with them that spring, only 13 remain in active service.

"This means that in 19 months, the Dodgers have uprooted practically two-thirds of those lovely baseball flowers that bloomed in the spring training garden of 1941," comments Brown.

"Six of the 13 are pitchers and all six are still held in esteem by all of Brooklyn, since they are Whitlow Wyatt, Curt Davis, Kirby Higbe, Max Macon, Hugh Casey and Ed Head. Here and there, the Dodgers have acquired other pitchers, but most of the six who were the stalwarts of spring in 1941 are still carrying the load. It hasn't been that way with any other portion of the Dodgers' combat front, save the outfield. Joe Medwick, Pete Reiser and Dixie Walker haven't needed much help over the last 19 months and didn't get it, even if there were a need.

"Mickey Owen survives among the catchers and two regular infielders, Dolph Camilli and Harold Reese, are still on the job. So is Lew Riggs, on a part-time basis. Scattered by the trade winds that blow over baseball are 24 of the 37 varieties of flowering Dodgers, as of spring, 1941.

"In that Brooklyn garden, it's nice work if you can get it, but apparently it's nicer if you can keep it."

JOE McCARTHY, MANAGER of the World Champion Yankees, tells one on Herb Pennock, the Bombers' old ace lefthander.

"I said to Pennock one day, 'You know, my wife calls you her noodle pitcher,' " chuckled Marse Joe. "Well, you should have seen Pennock swell up. 'Smart woman, Mrs. McCarthy,' he replied. 'I guess she's noticed the way I work on those batters, pitch to their weaknesses, eh, Joe?' "

" 'Oh, no, you got me wrong,' I said to Pennock with a straight face, 'I mean she once told me, "Joe, between the time that man Pennock starts winding up and the time he finally lets go of the ball, I could prepare a mess of noodles." '"

"Gosh, you should have seen Pennock's face drop at that!"

WHEN THE CLEVELAND INdians and Detroit Tigers played 14 innings to a scoreless tie recently, it was the first runless game played in the major leagues since July 6, 1931, when the Washington Senators and Philadelphia Athletics went seven innings to a scoreless standoff.

That the scoreless tie is all but non-existent in the majors is evidenced by the fact that since 1920, only three 0 to 0 games have been played in the National League, and only six in the American. Only three of these went the regulation nine innings or more.

The National League hasn't had a regulation double shutout since September 22, 1917, when Art Nehf of Boston and Lee Meadows of St. Louis went 14 innings to a goose-egg draw.

REMEMBER WHEN MISS Canada III, driven by Harold Wilson of Ingersoll, Ont., won the 13th annual President's Regatta Gold Cup race at Washington D. C. three years ago today? Notre Dame, only other competitor in the final heat, finished a quarter a mile behind the winner. Two other boats were forced out earlier by mechanical trouble after being pressed by Wilson's hard driving.

TOMMY McCLURE, WHO HAS the Magazine-cover girls show at the exhibition Grounds, is the same old Tommy who promoted light heavyweight, wrestling in Belleville a decade ago. Tommy brought such popular "lights" as the Black Panther, the Red Devil, Frankie Hart and others to town. Previous to that McClure was the top-ranking referee when Jack Corcoran was headed the Queensbury A. C. Tommy gets a great kick out of show business and meeting the public.

THIS AND THAT—THE GO-ahead signal was given for a match race between Whirlaway, Alsab and Shut Out at Belmont track early in November.... Johnnie Beazley hurled a two-hitter as the Cards beat the Reds and although the Dodgers won over the Phillies all that remains now is to have the Cardinals win one or more and they're in as champions of the National League regardless.... The veteran Larry French hurled a one-hitter for the Dodgers and only 27 men faced him, the only Phillie batter to get a hit was later knocked down on a double play....

Ernie Bonham pitched his 21st win of the season as the Yankees ran their win list to 103 and only need three more to equal the greatest number of wins ever racked up in the American League, namely 106.. That man's in again.

THE HORSE RACES, WHICH have just concluded in connection with the Belleville fair were the best racing the city has enjoyed in these many years. The race committee spent long hours getting the track in shape and trying to induce horsemen to visit the city, which at one time had the best race of anywhere in Eastern Ontario. The times of the several miles were excellent, the racing very keen especially in the last half mile of every heat and many halves were turned in 1.04, which is not loafing to say the least. Dillon Henley, the game little pacer from Hamilton started twice and was the winner on each occasion. He is very trappy going and has a real turn of speed. Miss Vera Bars too much for the free-for-allers but was lucky to win the first heat as Bert Patch came very fast through the lane. Lastic Grattan seems to have gone a little stale as he did not have his usual brush in the stretch. We are glad the fair board decided to include racing in their fair program because there are still many who love a good horse.

KINGSTONHOCKEY CLUB ADMITTED TO OTTAWA LOOP

Five Teams Already in and Kingston Plays at Home Saturday Nights

TO HAVE GOOD TEAM

Ottawa, Sept. 24—(CP)—Ottawa City Senior Hockey League at a meeting last night accepted an application from Kingston, Ont., Frontenacs to enter the circuit, which will have five and perhaps six teams operating this winter.

Royal Canadian Air Force, Hull Volants, Montagnards and Canadiens, of last season's clubs, all were represented and plan to operate. In addition, an application was received from the Canadian Army Postal Corps. The meeting took no immediate action on this, but it is expected the postal corps will be admitted.

Kingston's five delegates, who included Capt. Sutherland, Bill Walshe and Wally Elmer, assured the league the Frontenacs will have an outstanding club, including army and civilian athletes.

Kingston home games will be played on Saturday nights, enabling the Ottawa teams to make trips there with a minimum of time out from work.

No application was received from Cornwall, Ont., Basic Training Centre, which had been expected to seek admission.

MISS VERA BARS CAPTURES FAST CLASS AT FAIR

Bert Patch From Kingston Takes Third Heat of Free-for-All

DILLON HENLEY WINS

Four of the best pacers in Eastern Ontario hooked up in the Free-For-All at the fair grounds in the last day of racing at the Belleville fair on Wednesday and "Chappie" Chapman wheeled Miss Vera Bars home in front in the first two heats to get the major portion of the money offered but Bert Patch, driven by Sted Craig of Kingston, came through in the last heats and was only beaten a whisker in the first heat. In the 2.20 class the game little pacer Dillon Henley from Hamilton came right back after a tough race on Tuesday and annexed the class being a straight heat winner.

The races concluded one of the best exhibitions of harness speed that has been witnessed around here in some years. The horses were the best that are campaigning and everyone raced for the money. The Harness Committee are to be congratulated for bringing racing back to a firm footing and there should be greater plans made for next year if hostilities show any sign of a letup. Miss Vera Bars has been racing in tough company all summer and Chapman sent her away winging in the first heat but Bert Patch set in behind. Lastic Grattan who was conceded the race before the start did not seem to have his usual link and he lost his only chance in the first heat, when he tried to go through on the inside when he reached the lane. The times were not very fast but there were plenty of half miles paced in 1.04, when the boys opened the speed valves on the last lap. The results:

AT THE BELLE

"Wild Bill Hickok Rides"

For thrills, action and excitement, "Wild Bill Hickok Rides," which is now on the Belle Theatre screen would be hard to beat. A fine cast headed by Constance Bennett, Bruce Cabot, Warren William, Betty Brewer and Walter Catlett, fast-paced direction by Ray Enright and a clever story by Charles Grayson, Paul Gerard Smith and Raymond Schrock, all contribute in making "Wild Bill Hickok Rides" rousing good entertainment.

Cabot plays the title role of Hickok, the two-fisted marshal whose work in bringing law and order to the frontier towns had made his name one of the best-known in the history of our west. Constance Bennett is extremely well-cast as the beautiful proprietress of a gambling hall, whose better instincts are constantly at war with her bad ones. And a suaver villain than Warren William never swindled a whole county full of ranchers out of their ranches. Betty Brewer, a miss who has just entered her teens, does a grand job as the little tomboy who is Hickok's ward and most devoted admirer.

Briefly, the story concerns itself with William's efforts to get control of the rich ranching country around Powder River, Montana, with some side aid from Miss Bennett, pitted against them is Cabot, as ranchers shall not be cheated. Miss Bennett's admiration for Hickok soon brings her over to his side, and it is with her help that he finally is able to rid the valley of its would-be despoilers. All three of the principals get a chance to demonstrate some tricky gun-play, and the final scenes in which a dam is blown up in an attempt to drown the cattle, is fast-action photography at its best.

Beside the starring players, the cast includes Russell Simpson, Ward Bond, Howard da Silva, Faye Emerson, Julie Bishop, Lucia Carroll, Frank Wilcox and many more.

Romantic Woods!

Donald Woods, glib-tongued and suave, plays the romantic lead opposite charming Mary Howard in 20th Century-Fox's unusual new murder mystery, "Thru Different Eyes," which is the mystery romantic companion feature. Prominent, too, are Frank Craven, June Walker, Vivian Blaine, George Holmes and Jerome Cowan.

"Wabbit Who Come to Dinner" is the title of a color fun cartoon to be exhibited on the same program.

"In Old California"

Lovers of action and adventure will be thrilled with the program which opens next at the McCarthy. The first feature will be "In Old California" starring John Wayne, Binnie Barnes, Albert Dekker, Helen Parish, Patsy Kelly and Edgar Kennedy. The second feature presents thrills hot from Iceland, Bruce Bennett, Virgina Field and John Beal in "Atlantic Convoy."

AT THE CAPITOL

"My Favourite Blonde"

Fastest and funniest of the long line of Bob Hope screen hits, the Paramount comedy, "My Favorite Blonde", is now wending its merry way into the Capitol Theatre with Madeleine Carroll sharing stardom with Hope. The film more than matches in speed and laughs the high spots of "Caught in the Draft" and "Nothing But the Truth".

"My Favorite Blonde"—Madeleine in the title role, of course—presents Hope as a ham vaudeville actor who has obtained a Hollywood contract because of his partner, Percy, a trained penguin. Madeleine, a beautiful British secret agent, is bound for Los Angeles with flight plans for the U.S. Army Air Corps when she barges in on the startled Hope and announces she's going to accompany him to Hollywood. Then starts a transcontinental chase, with the spies supplying the excitement, that for slapstick and speed puts the Keystone Kops in the shade. The combination of slapstick, thrills and typical Bob Hope gags makes "My Favorite Blonde" uproariously funny. The picture doesn't lag for a single second.

Gale Sondergaard heads the spy gang and has the able assistance of such screen villains as George Zucco, Lionel Royce, Walter Kingsford, Victor Varconi, Otto Reichow and Crane Whitley. Sidney Lanfield directed.

"West of Tombstone"

With six-guns blazing, Charles Starrett and Russell Hayden will be blasting the bandits from the western range when Columbia's rip-roaring outdoor thriller, "West of Tombstone", opens at the Capitol Theatre as companion feature. Directed by Howard Bretherton, the story is said to be jammed with exciting highlights, including a fight-to-be finish between the famous Billy, the Kid, and a gang of desperate outlaws! Supporting players include Cliff Edwards, Marcella Martin and Gordon DeMain.

A fun cartoon and the thrilling "Spy Smasher" Serial complete an ideal weekend treat for the whole family.

PENNANT-BOUND CARDS DRAWING CLOSER TO FLAG

Need Two of Remaining Three Games to be in Against Yankees

COOPER TO HURL

By CHARLES DUNKLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 24—(AP)—The pennant-bound St. Louis Cardinals today are 24 hours closer to hitting the jackpot—the National League Championship, their first since 1934.

Cards last night registered their 103rd victory of the campaign to equal New York Giants' 1912 mark. The league record is held by Chicago Cubs at 116 in 1906.

Behind the superb two-hit pitching of 23-year-old rookie right-hander, Johnny Beazley, the Cardinals smothered Cincinnati Reds, 4-2. They meet again here today.

If the Cardinals win the next two of the remaining three games, they can't miss regardless of what Brooklyn does. They've regained their lead of 2 1-2 games.

Billy Southworth, Manager of the Red Birds, selected big Morton Cooper, ace right-hander, to pace Cincinnati. Cooper will be seeking his 22nd victory and his ninth straight. He will be opposed by Ray Starr, with a record of 15 games won, 12 lost.

Fair Thrill Crowd

Beazley and Ray Sanders, a rookie first-baseman, thrilled the crowd of 26,514 with their achievements last night. Southworth was forced to replace Johnny Hopp, ill with a cold, at first base and Sanders, a rookie first sacker, filled in by smashing a triple to score two of the three runs registered in the third inning and fielded faultlessly.

Deacon Bill McKechnie, mild-mannered manager of Cincinnati, is raging over a telegram he received from Larry MacPhail, head of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

GIRLS REPLACE MEN IN THE ARMY

READY FOR THAT SECOND FRONT

American parachute troops drop out of the sky somewhere in England during invasion exercises. It has just been announced by U.S. army headquarters in London that a large contingent of such troops has been in the BBritish Isles for some time. They are commanded by Lieut.-Col. Edson D. Raff of New York City. The men are armed with light and heavy machine guns, light field pieces, mortars, grenades, bayonets and knives. This is a radiophoto.

ICKES INSPECTS WHITE HOUSE FENCE

U. S. Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, is shown in Washington D.C., on top of the pile of iron railings that once formed a fence around the White House. The fence was taken down in 1937 and has been stored since then. It was given to the scrap metal drive by President Roosevelt, who recently announced that the mansion itself yielded no less than five tons of scrap. Whatcha got in your yard?

STIMSON SHOCKED AT ARRANGEMENT FOR CHAMP FIGHT

Will Make Personal Investigation Into Plans for Louis-Conn Prize Fight

1ST PLAN ABANDONED

Washington, Sept. 24 (AP)—War Secretary Henry Stimson said today he was "shocked" over arrangements for the Joe Louis-Billy Conn championship prize fight and had started a personal investigation.

"I didn't know of the details until this morning," Stimson told his press conference. "I've been shocked at the situation.

"I am making a personal investigation which I hope to complete in 48 hours."

Asked for Comment

The War Secretary's announcement was prompted by a question whether he would comment on the proposed October 12 fight at the Yankee Stadium in New York between Sgt. Louis, the heavyweight champion, and Cpl. Conn. He declined to state what details "shocked" him.

When sanction for the fight was given on September 8, the War Department announcement said that the entire net proceeds would be turned over to the Army Emergency Relief Fund. The announcement said further that neither fighter nor any "private interest" would receive any return.

Change in Set-up

On September 18 a change in this set-up was announced by the Committee of New York Sports Writers, named to handle the fight arrangements. Under the terms of this new set-up, which the committee said had been approved by the War Department, it was agreed that Louis would receive $100,951 to pay off obligations. Conn was to receive $34,500 for the same purpose.

Louis' obligations, as announced by the sports committee, consisted of $59,806 to the 20th Century Sporting Club, of which promoter Mike Jacobs is the head, and $41,146 to one of his managers, John Roxborough. Conn's obligation also was said to be the 20th Century Sporting Club.

Both fighters' indebtedness, it was said, consisted of sums advanced at various times by Jacobs and Roxborough for personal bills.

The sports committee's announcement followed a stormy session at which it is known that some members were opposed to the plan. The committee said that it had found it "impossible to conduct the fight under the original plan suggested by the war department" under the terms of which no private interest would have benefited.

Commodores Conclude Successful Season On Saturday

Concluding an eminently successful first season, the Commodores orchestra under the direction of Bud Haines, will close its dancing activities at the Park Pavilion on Saturday night.

The well-known dance band has increased a well-deserved popularity during its summer stay at the new dance spot on the Exhibition Grounds, and this has been exemplified in the consistently large crowds that have attended its tri-weekly appearances.

The popular pavilion has been the mecca for hundreds of dance lovers this week during the fair, and so insistent have been the demands for a continuation, that the band has decided to provide music the remaining nights of the week.

As a special treat for their patrons, the Commodores have engaged Jack Evans, and his famous thirteen piece orchestra of Toronto for Friday night. This band has just concluded a highly successful season at the "Seabreeze" in Sunnyside.

"Bud" and the boys of the Commodores today expressed their sincere appreciation of the generous share of dancing patronage accorded them during the summer months by residents of the city and district.

Trenton Plant Processes Over 2,100,000 Eggs Weekly Into Powder

Trenton — (Special) — One of Canada's most important war industries these days is the busy plant of the Canadian Doughnut Company where eggs are dehydrated and shipped to Britain.

For several years back this plant has been drying the yolk of the egg and mixing it with several other ingredients to make a doughnut powder which has been shipped practically all over the world. In addition to making a doughnut powder this company has been and is making the doughnut machine, in fact, several types of machines, which turn out anywhere from ten to six hundred dozen doughnuts per hour.

On February 15th last this firm received information that dehydrated eggs were required in large quantities for Great Britain and by February 17th all the machinery was in full swing and this great task had been taken on with a will. The factory, which is spotlessly clean and pure white in appearance both inside and out, is now supplying along with seven other such factories across Canada, all the eggs which are consumed in Great Britain in powdered form.

Shipped From Afar

The Canadian Government ships eggs into this factory from points as far west as Winnipeg and as far east as Charlottetown, some eleven carloads of eggs per week, each car containing 6,600 cases of 30 dozen each. These eggs, when dehydrated, occupy only one-seventh, of the shipping space of the eggs in shell. Absolutely no refrigeration whatever is necessary and this is also a great saving.

Process of Drying

When the eggs arrive from the shipping point they are taken into a cold storage plant where some seventy-five employees are kept busy breaking them. When broken they are put into huge drums which are then transported into the drying plant. Here they are received into vats, rushed over coils which are at a temperature just above freezing point where the eggs are completely chilled. They are then forced by a machine of 5,000 pounds pressure per square inch up into a huge drying drum. The liquid egg enters this drying drum through a tiny pipe barely the size of a pin hole and as it comes in contact with the huge amount of hot air which is forced into the drum it immediately forms a mist and is instantly dried.

Packed Into Barrels

The powdered egg is then packed into barrels which are lined with treated paper to prevent dampness and shipped in this form to Great Britain, each barrel containing some $200 worth of eggs. These dehydrated eggs have proven to be all that is required of an egg both for cooking and table use.

The Canadian Doughnut Co. at Trenton was the first plant to attempt the drying of eggs in Canada and in less than one month after the call went out from Great Britain for the eggs, they were arriving in huge quantities from Trenton. Certainly this plant has made a major contribution to the war effort.

New A.R.D. Commanding Officer

Group Captain W. M. Keddie, formerly of No. 31 S.F.T.S., Kingston, has been appointed Commanding Officer of No. 6 Air Repair Depot, Trenton, and took over this week from Group Captain W. H. Simmonds, who it is understood, is returning to England.

Group Captain Keddie was born in Montreal and spent the early years of his life in Montreal and Ottawa. He is a graduate of Queen's University, Kingston, and M.I.T. and in 1931 went to England and joined the R.A.F. For nearly ten years he remained with the R.A.F. during which time he saw considerable service in India. He returned to Canada in 1940 and took command at No. 31 S.F.T.S., Kingston, where he remained until coming to Trenton.

Knocked From Bike

Fred Higgs, Sidney Street, suffered severe abrasions to his left ear and arm and right cheek and knee when he was knocked from his bicycle on Tuesday afternoon by a car owned and driven by Pat MacAuley, York Road. Higgs was apparently coming along on his bicycle and is said by witnesses to have swerved and skidded on the loose cinders, when apparently Mr. MacAuley who was turning his car coming out from Stokely-Van Camp factory, did not observe him and struck the bicycle throwing the the boy to the ground. The lad was taken to the office of Dr. F. J. Farley where his injuries were given medical attention.

Aged Man Assaulted, Robbed

John Knox, an aged man who claimed Marmora as his last residence, reported to local police on Tuesday that he was on his way to the Old Peoples' Home in Belleville when he met a man in Trenton's Simcoe Park who offered him a drink. After taking the drink of wine this man informed Knox that he had not eaten for a couple of days. Knox gave him 50 cents to get a meal and inadvertently let the stranger see that he had some more money in his purse. The next thing Knox knew he received a heavy blow in the face and was knocked out. When he came to, his wallet and money and several other personal belongings were gone.

Shortly after receiving the complaint the police arrested Harry Corby and it is alleged that certain articles which were stolen from Knox were found in Corby's possession. Mr. Knox is being cared for by the police and Corby is being held for further investigation.

Attendance Records Broken at Fair By Total of 15,000 Paid Admissions

Attendance records of the Belleville Fair went by the board during the three-day exhibition just finished, Secretary Erle Denyes announced today.

Fifteen thousand people paid admission to the exhibition while another five thousand members of the armed services and school children were admitted free through the courtesy of the directors.

Attendance figures exceed by a substantial number, those of any previous fair in the history of the Agricultural Society here, an indication of the interest taken in this year's fair by the general public.

The attendance was consistent throughout the three days of the fair. The opening night saw the largest "first-night" crowd since the inception of the exhibition, and the following afternoons and evenings saw the large patronage maintained.

Son Confesses To Axe Slaying Of Father, Mother

St. Louis, Sept. 24—(AP)—After hours of questioning, Robert Nash, 27-year-old St. Louis electrician today confessed, police said, to the axe slaying of his father and mother during a quarrel over his financial difficulties.

Charles A. Nash, 61-year-old internal revenue agent, and his 49-year-old wife, Eleanor, were found, hacked and mutilated Tuesday night in the family automobile on a highway eight miles north of Springfield, Ill.

His composure unruffled by a constant barrage of questions, Nash finally revealed he killed his father, then his mother, during a violent argument over $640 in personal debts and his habit of continued late hour, police captain Leonard Murphy related.

Nash's version of the murder, as told by authorities, related how, after he had grabbed a hand axe and killed his father, his mother, frantic with fear and grief, cried:-

"Now look what you've done."

Struck With Fist

Her hands wildly clutched at hers on as he turned, in anger, struck her with his fist, then again took up the bloody weapon and slashed her repeatedly.

"I hit her on the head, shoulders and back," Nash said, "I placed his body in the trunk and then I threw her body on the floor."

Before announcing Nash's confession, acting Chief of Police Andrew Aylward, said that young Nash a few days ago had admitted mailing a premium on a $2,000 insurance policy on the life of his father.

Officers found the amputated ring finger of the mother near their car, but throughout the grilling the son continued to deny he had cut off the finger and said he did not know how that happened.

Conklin Shows Stay All Week

He is a young man in years, but in show business he has had the experience of men many years his senior. It's J. W. "Paddy" Conklin referred to, the man whose name is recognized as an authority on carnivals throughout the length and breadth of the country and whose shows are playing at the Exhibition Park here the remainder of the week with no cost of admission charged for entering the grounds.

For years Conklin has been hailed as Canada's foremost showman and his carnivals have featured the Canadian National Exhibition, Calgary "Stampede," Ottawa and Vancouver Exhibitions to say nothing of a complete road program from coast to coast. Hailing originally from Vancouver, Conklin has gathered about his shows some of the world's greatest in carnival entertainment ranging from the latest creations in carnival rides for thrills to saucer-lipped girls and ring-necked dusky women from the darkest of Africa

Headlining a diversified list of entertainment is Terrell Jacobs' Wild Animal Circus with lions, tigers, elephants and trained horses.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 24 (AP)— Rails and Industrials kept in front of a further stock market advance today but the move was restricted more or less by light profit cashing on the upswing.

Gains of fractions to around a point subsequently were reduced here and there and activities slackened near the fourth hour.

Among stocks making new year's tops were Erie, Goodyear, Goodrich, U.S. Rubber and Western Union. Modest plus signs were recorded for Southern Pacific, N.Y. Central, Chesapeake & Ohio, U.S. Steel, J. I. Case, Sears Roebuck, Johns-Manville, Anaconda, Du Pont and Douglas Aircraft.

Canadian stocks showed fractional strength. Canadian Pacific, Dome Mines, Hiram Walkers, Distillers Seagram, each gained 1-8 and McIntyre Mines 1-4.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 24 (CP) — The stock market generally held or improved early today.

Steep Rock continued to hold the trading spotlight and churned around between the 1.33 and 1.37 marks after having opened at 1.35. In early afternoon dealings it was selling at 1.33, up one from the previous close. Other base metals, including International Nickel, up one point, held earlier gains.

Malartic Goldfields was an active gold and gained 10 cents to 1.37 while Preston, which also attracted trading attention, gained 7 to 1.47. Lamaque, Kerr Addison and Upper Canada also improved.

Industrials were generally firm but quiet. Massey, new common, held its earlier ½ gain at 4.

Alexander Scores Five Bull's Eyes

Cairo, Sept. 24. (AP) — Gen. Harold Alexander, Britain's Middle East Commander, became the first member of his forces today to fire the United States' Garand rifle and the first to make a test drive of a General Grant tank repaired in American workshops in the desert.

The tank itself was a first—the first out of the newly-completed shops built by American forces.

The General scored five bull's-eyes with the Garand and wheeled the repaired tank around with impressive skill.

Parade To Fair Grounds Inaugurates Recruiting Drive by the Argylls

Headed by the pipe band of the regiment the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) under Lieutenant Colonel A. B. Gribble, and the 34th Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery under Captain Steve Sword, marched through the city Wednesday night to the Fair Grounds, on the eve of a recruiting campaign which gets under way this week.

Commanding officers of the reserve army here intend to exert all efforts to recruit their respective units to full strength and will issue a general appeal to eligible men in the city and district.

The parade moved off from the Armouries to Bridge Street and west along that thoroughfare to the Fair Grounds where the troops were dismissed.

Lieut Colonel Gribble, in charge of the parade announced that a garrison parade will be held again on Friday night of this week.

INDIANS LAUGH AT ROMMEL

Having failed in his attack on the British lines anchored on El Alamein in Egypt, Rommel has taken to dropping anti-British leaflets among the Indian troops. The leaflets have been printed in Hindustani. They are so crude, that these Indian soldiers enjoy a laugh while reading them. This is a radiophoto.

Tweed and District

Dance Pavilion Receipts at Tweed Park for Past Season Total $1446

Tweed (Special) — Tweed Parks Board met at the Park recently, with the chairman Mr. W. S. Gordon, presiding. Members present were T. N. Beatty, S. B. Rollins, Reeve C. H. Kerr, Jas. Ryan and S. H. Connor, secretary. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

A number of accounts were passed and ordered paid. The treasurer, G. D. C. Morton, reported total dance receipts for the year were $1444.36, a slight increase over the receipts of $1437.50 for the previous year. The average proceeds per dance were considerably higher however, during the present year as the number of dances were two fewer than in 1941.

Tweed Fair Board was given permission to use the Pavilion for a dance on Fair night for the regular fee. The caretaker was instructed to paint the tables and benches at the Park.

Appreciation was expressed by the Board to the chairman, Mr. W. S. Gordon, for his very generous contribution of 162 loads of loam which was used to fill a considerable portion of the reclaimed eastern end of the park this year. The Board authorized the spending of $100.00 this fall for further work of this nature. The Parks Board some time ago purchased a considerable section of low-lying ground adjacent to the main portion of the Park and lying at the northeast. This area has been used as a dumping ground and is gradually being reclaimed.

To Launch W. S. S. Drive

Tweed War Savings Committee met on Monday evening in LeSage's Garage to launch the drive for the sale of War Savings Stamps in Tweed and district. The local quota has been set by the County Committee at $1000.

Members of Tweed War Savings Committee are Dr. W. A. Paul, chairman; S. H. Connor, secretary; S. R. Curry, publicity; W. LeSage, treasurer.

The following Tweed merchants also consented to press the sale of stamps among their customers: Selrite Store, Dominion Store, Barnett's Grocery, Rupert's Drug Store, Quinn and Quinn, F. B. Foster, Belch's Drug Store.

One or two Tweed merchants protested that they were too busy to undertake to aid Canada's war effort to the extent of selling the stamps.

Tweed Consolidated School will also assist in the campaign for the sale of stamps in which they have been actively engaged since the outbreak of the war.

To the purchaser of each War Savings Stamp a ticket will be given and at the conclusion of the campaign, October 17th., a draw will be held. The two lucky ticket holders will be rewarded with a certificate valued at $25.00, donated by an anonymous donor and a $10.00 certificate donated by Mr. W. S. Gordon.

Bride Showered

A delightful shower was held at the home of Mrs. S. H. Connor on Monday evening in honor of Mrs. Grant Shorey (nee Jean Lamberton), a recent bride. A number of friends of the bride and the groom, Sergt.-Instructor Grant Shorey of the R.C.A.F., gathered in her honor and presented her with a number of lovely gifts.

The evening was spent in games and interesting contests, followed by a dainty lunch. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Chas. Porritt, sister of the groom, and Mrs. Jack Colgan.

Mrs. Shorey is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Lamberton, Belleville, formerly of Tweed. Sgt.-Instructor Shorey will proceed overseas later in the autumn. For the present they will reside in Ottawa.

Murray Heath, Campbellford, Heads List in Jun. Farmers Judging Contest

A Hastings County lad, Murray Heath, of Campbellford, led all junior farmers from four counties in a junior judging competition open to calf club members in Northumberland, Prince Edward, Hastings and Lennox and Addington counties at Belleville Fair on Tuesday.

Heath rolled up a total of 512 points, twenty more than the second place winner, Lloyd Merrill, also of Campbellford, but a resident of Northumberland county.

In a special competition open to boys, 12 to 23 years of age, Grant Carman of Picton, R.R. 1, took first place with a total of 544 points. He led the entire field by a considerable margin as Carl Heath of Campbellford, second place winner had 472 points. Donald Sills of Plainfield, came in third position with 444 points.

Grant Carman of Picton took first position in a special horse judging competition that was closely contested. Carman won by a one-point margin, defeating Lloyd Merrill of Campbellford, for the first prize. Leslie Platt of Norham, was third with 96 points, only two points below the winner.

Receive Awards

Prize-winners in all competition received their awards at a special banquet held in Holloway Street Church during the evening, with Mr. A. H. Martin of the Department of Agriculture, Toronto, presenting the prizes to the boys and Miss Jean Scott of the Women's Institute, announcing the winners in the girls' competition and presenting the prizes.

Mr. Ben Bleecker, president of Belleville Fair, welcomed the junior farmers to the fair and congratulated the winners on their excellent standing. Warden of the County, Charles Rush, also spoke briefly to the assembly numbering well over one hundred.

Asks Greater Production

The highlight of the evening was an address by M. C. McPhail, B.S.A., of Kemptville Agricultural College, who appealed for greater production of farm produce to assure a plentitude of food during the coming year. Charles Heath, of Swift Canadian Company, Belleville, acted as chairman for the evening, and the W.A. of Holloway Street United Church provided the supper.

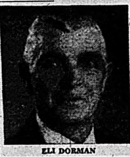
Free From Pains in Joints and Back; Praises Syntona

Says There is Nothing Like It for Relief From Stomach and Kidney Disorders and Resulting Pains as it Gives Him Good Results a Second Time in Three Years.



ELI DORMAN

"I guess I was among the first in this section who used Syntona and it certainly was a great thing for me," said Eli Dorman, well known resident of Byron, Ontario, in a recent statement:

"About three years ago I was suffering terribly with stomach troubles, headaches and muscular pains and I was badly rundown. I had tried so many remedies without any real benefits that I had become discouraged. But I was persuaded to take Syntona and it did wonders for me. In a few weeks it rid me of those pains and I could eat anything I liked without any after effects.

"I continued in fairly good health until a few months ago, when I had a cold that seemed to settle in my kidneys and caused loss of sleep and a general rundown condition. Pains set into my back and they spread all through my legs and shoulders. I felt constantly tired and nervous from loss of sleep.

"Knowing how Syntona had helped me before, I began taking it again, and now I have come back to tell you that it has given me the same good results all over again. If you had seen me a few months ago, when I couldn't walk upstairs, because my joints were so sore and stiff, you would hardly believe that I rode fifty miles on my bicycle only last week, but that is exactly the way my health has improved. There is certainly something about Syntona that makes a person feel better and I recommend it to all my friends."

Let this pure herbal medicine help you as it has hundreds of other local men and women. It is pleasant to take and quick to act. Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

WOULDN'T CROSS STREET FOR $100

You know these people — maybe you are one yourself—who come home after work so tired out they can't be lured out of their easy chairs — who wouldn't even go across the street for $100 to see the greatest show on earth. It's not over-work that always makes a man or woman feel this way — although they often fool themselves that it is. A tired, listless condition like this is oftentimes the result of low blood count due to simple anemia. A low blood count oft times may mean you haven't enough red blood corpuscles. Try Dr. Williams Pink Pills. They are world-famous for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles when they have been weakened by simple anemia. Besides, Dr. Williams Pink Pills are fortified with Vitamin B_1, an important aid in promoting appetite and keeping nerves and intestinal system normal when you feel jittery and "off" because of a deficiency of this vital element. Don't wait. Be sure—try Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

REDS THROW NAZIS ON DEFENSIVE AT STALINGRAD

40 NAZI PLANES, TWO U-BOATS LOST IN ARCTIC

Flanking Drive From Northwest Relieves Pressure

Nazis Fail in Fresh Infiltration Attempts Directly Against The Steel City

LOSE HEAVILY

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

MOSCOW, Sept. 25 — (AP) — Thrown on the defensive on Stalingrad's northwestern rim by the development of the Red Army's flanking counter-attack, the Germans were reported today to have failed in fresh infiltration attempts directly against the city while battling desperately against the menace from the flank.

The epic battle centred like a consuming cyclone on the northwestern sector where the Russians had recaptured two dominating heights and nearby populated sections, today's Stalingrad dispatches said.

(The German High Command claimed that its troops had taken "further fortified points in fierce street fighting" and, conceding the defensive nature of the fight on the flank, said "Soviet relief attacks against the northern barrier erected by German and Allied troops were repulsed in hard fighting.")

The Russian army newspaper Red Star declared that no other city in this war had been such a battlefield as Stalingrad. A military commentator quoted by Tass, Russian news agency, said the Germans had lost more than 25,000 dead in the course of the last week.

"And Stalingrad is not the fortress which Verdun was," he added.

Red Star said German tanks were cruising the streets and alleys of Stalingrad, seeking to fall unexpectedly upon the Russian positions and demoralize the men holding them.

Despite this infiltration, it was said, the Russians were countering successfully, with anti-tank guns and grenades, generally holding their ground. One street running from the western edge of the city to the high cliffs along the Volga was attacked "scores of times" by German tank forces and tommy-gun shock troops — without avail.

Battle Rages Day and Night

"Heavy fighting rages day and night in the streets of Stalingrad," said a Tass commentary which elaborated on the nature of tank and anti-tank warfare on such strange terrain.

"The courageous defenders of the city bar the enemy's way, dealing him heavy blows. The Germans exert every effort to capture more streets but encounter stubborn resistance everywhere.

"One street leading from the west towards the Volga has been the object of scores of enemy attacks but the Germans failed to score any success. The enemy tanks sped there is successive waves, attempting to break our resistance by incessant attacks. However, Soviet anti-tank artillery and infantry repulsed all attacks.

"Our troops surround and annihilate groups of enemy automatic riflemen whenever they manage to infiltrate into our positions.

"In street engagements the Germans use on a wide scale tanks of

New Destroyer For Canada

By ALAN RANDAL

A British Port, Sept. 25—(CP)—H. M. C. S. Haida, another of a number of powerful Tribal class destroyers built at a famous shipyard here for the Royal Canadian Navy, has been launched, it was announced today.

The vessel was christened with the name of one of the mightiest tribes of Indian hunters on Canada's Pacific coast by Lady Laurie, wife of Sir John Laurie, Lord Mayor of London.

The ceremony was colorful but brief and no sooner was it over than workers were back at their jobs.

At an informal reception after the launching, Lady Laurie recalled that Montreal was her birthplace and paid tribute to Canada's part in the war. The growth of the Royal Canadian Navy was, she said, "one of the most remarkable features of Canada's war effort.

English Southwest Coast Lightly Bombed

London, Sept. 26 (CP) — A few German planes dropped bombs along the southwest coast of England last night but the R.A.F. did not follow up its Wednesday night assault on Flensburg with another raid on Germany, presumably because of bad weather over the continent.

The government said the German raiders had caused only slight damage and no casualties. One Nazi plane was destroyed.

Three German Planes Downed in Bay of Biscay

London, Sept. 25 (CP).—A Wellington bomber of the Coastal Command, manned by a Polish crew, shot down a German Junkers-88 and drove off another in a battle over the Bay of Biscay yesterday, the Air Ministry announced today.

The action brought to three the total of Nazi planes destroyed over the bay during the day, two previously having been reported shot down by British Beaufighters, one of them piloted by F/O G. H. Carson of Fort William, Ont.

Russia-Bound Convoy Under Constant Day and Night Bombings by Nazis

San Carlos, Calif., Sept. 25 (AP) —The fury of continuous day and night German air attack on a Russia-bound convoy in the Arctic was described yesterday by Second Mate John Cassin Dyer, U.S.N.R., home on leave.

The convoy was his first assignment after his previous ship was torpedoed and sunk in the Caribbean.

Dive bombers and submarines struck simultaneously. Within a minute, two ships had been put out of the fight but in the ensuing 40 minute battle the convoy guns had sunk one sub and downed five planes. The next day there was another battle and the enemy was driven off.

The third day found the convoy under the midnight sun. "From 9.30 that morning to 10.30 p.m.," Dyer said, "the waves of Focke-Wulf high altitude bombers and torpedo planes came over hourly .. God, it was awful—ships going down, men swimming in icy water, ships burning and exploding. We had 18 hours at the guns without rest."

For the next three days there was more of the same. Just off the Russian coast, "a stick of bombs exploded right against the starboard side, below the water line. The dynamos went out of commission and the engineers in the blackness of the engine room were frantically trying to stop the inrush of water from several holes in the engine room bulges." The planes meanwhile had been beaten off, and finally the crew made such temporary repairs as enabled the ship to take its place with the convoy.

87 Raids in 20 Days

They made port, and had hopes of some peace and quiet. But, Byer stated, during the 20 days the convoy was at anchor in the Russian port the city underwent 87 air raids.

On the homeward voyage there was an almost continuous, general alarm.

"The night before we were to make a landfall," he said, "there was a high wind and a heavy sea running. Terrific concussions shook our ship from stem to stern.

"Ships were being blown clear from the water by the explosions, often breaking into two or three pieces. Vessels were travelling in all directions in order to avoid collision with stricken ships . . . the water was so cold that a man could expect to live only half an hour in it.

"There was a terrific explosion under our stern. Our gun, loaded and ready to fire, went off with the force of the explosion and was irreparably damaged. We got ready to abandon ship but found that, although taking water, we were not in a desperate condition; so we put on full steam and got clear away in the fog . . . I do not know what it was we ran into. Personally I think it was a mine, perhaps laid from German subs ahead of us."

Dyer's ship limped home at last, after three months of adversity. Then — lightning struck the vessel causing further damage.

SEE CURTAILMENT LESS ESSENTIAL INDUSTRIES SOON

Drastic Reduction Will Provide Machinery, Provision for War Purposes

FIRST MOVE SOON

Ottawa, Sept. 25 (CP).—Drastic curtailment of less-essential industries is expected to result shortly from a government order which, it was learned today from official sources, has already been framed.

Based primarily on immediate manpower needs, the action sharply reducing or entirely stopping the production of a wide range of goods will also make available machinery and plant accommodation for direct war purposes.

There is not yet any indication when the first move may be expected but the order, based on a definite decision of policy by the cabinet, is likely to go into effect in the very near future, it is reported.

Manpower Problem.

The manpower problem holds major attention in Ottawa this week and it is understood it is due for further consideration at today's cabinet session. While several sources are being tapped to meet general manpower needs, the most acute shortage is in skilled machine operators.

In many instances war industries are suffering reduced production because of this shortage and the only pool from which trained men can be drawn is from industries now producing materials not considered essential to the war effort or to a maximum wartime standard of living.

Coupled with the action to make machine operators immediately available for war needs is a severe tightening of material priorities and a policy of making the best possible use of existing buildings and machinery.

The policy of refusing to make essential materials, particularly metals, available for unessential purposes is likely to be considerably tightened.

Shortages of machine tools and other industrial equipment can, it is believed in official quarters, be at least partially met by utilizing tools now devoted to less essential purposes. The peak of industrial wartime building is considered passed and in future careful study will be made of other available buildings before new construction is sanctioned.

Two-Thirds Karlsruhe Razed or Badly Damaged Says Zurich Dispatch

London, Sept. 25 (CP).—A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Zurich, Switzerland, today quoted persons who survived the last heavy air attack on Karlsruhe as estimating that 8,000 to 10,000 residents of the city died in that assault.

According to reports of eyewitnesses, the dispatch said, at least two-thirds of Karlsruhe was either razed or so badly damaged that only the outlines of ruined buildings remain. Industrial areas were reported badly battered.

The city last was raided Sept. 2.

Canadian crews said on their return from the raid that extensive fires were burning in the important German transport centre.

"The whole town was ripping," said Sgt.-Pilot Bill Duncan of Midland, Ont., captain of a Halifax. "It was really blazing. We went in over the target, circled around, bombed and came out. A lot of fires were going and as we left the fires were joining in one big glow. We could see them for 100 miles on the way home."

Eight bombers were lost in the raid, which was the seventh of the war on Karlsruhe and its big railway shops. The city previously was bombed Sept. 17, 1941.

8,000-TON CARGO SHIP AT RABAUL STRUCKAMIDSHIPS

Devastating Attacks by Allied Airmen Continue Against Japanese

AIRDROMES SMASHED

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Sept. 26 —(CP)— Allied fighter planes continued their devastating attacks on Japanese communication lines in New Guinea yesterday while bombing formations blasted enemy shipping and shore installations in New Britain, Timor and the Solomon Islands, Allied headquarters announced today.

Huts containing stores and equipment were left in flames, a communique said, by a strong force of Allied fighters which strafed the airdrome at Kokoda, advance base for the Japanese column attempting to push across southeastern New Guinea toward Port Moresby.

Another formation bombed a bridge near Wairopi, over which the Japanese have been attempting to move supplies for their troops across the deep gorge of the Kumasi River. The bridge—suspended over the chasm by wires—previously had been damaged by Allied planes and the enemy has been working feverishly to repair it.

Fighting between Allied and Japanese patrols was reported, meanwhile, in the vicinity of Ioribaiwa, 32 miles from Port Moresby, where the invaders have been stalled for more than 10 days, but the Allied communique said there was no change in the general situation.

Carried Out in Moonlight

"The attack on New Britain Island, east of New Guinea, was carried out in moonlight by a force of Flying Fortresses. The bombers scored a direct hit amidships on an 8,000-ton cargo ship in the harbor of Rabaul. When last seen the vessel was blazing fiercely and probably sank later, the communique said.

An Allied spokesman said there was a considerable concentration of both warships and merchant vessels at Rabaul and the Allied raiders said they were met with heavy anti-aircraft fire. All returned safesy, however.

For the first time in more than two weeks light activity was reported in the area northwest of Australia as an Allied plane bombed a Japanese merchantman in a daylight attack on the harbor of Dili Timor.

An Allied medium bomber also attacked the enemy airdrome at Buka in the northern Solomons, scoring a direct hit by aircraft dispersal bays and causing fires, the communiqhe said.

FALLS FROM TRACTOR, FRACTURES LEG

Bancroft (Special)—Slipping from the drawbar of the tractor he was driving, Mr. Robert Bartlett, elderly farmer of Monetagle, 12 miles north of here had the misfortune to have his lef broken in two places Thursday night as the tractor wheel lugs pulled his leg under the machine.

Mr. Bartlett was using his tractor to push a threshing separator into a farmer's barn and was standing on the drawbar of the tractor when in some manner he slipped from his position under the tractor wheel. The injured man was brought to Bancroft this morning and the fractures reduced by Dr. O. W. Anderson. He was then admitted to Bancroft Red Cross Hospital where he will be confined for a few days.

FRENCH FLAG WILL FLY OVER MADAGASCAR

Military Rule Established by British to Ensure Law and Order

FRENCH SOVEREIGNTY

London, Sept. 26 (CP).—British forces have placed Madagascar under military rule to "ensure law and order and provide for administration pending establishment of a friendly regime," the Foreign Office News Department said today.

The sovereignty of France, however, remains unaffected and the French flag will continue to fly over the island, the department said.

It added that British authorities hope to gain the administrative co-operation of representatives of the Vichy regime.

Small numbers of Vichy French and native troops, perhaps as many as 2,000 men, who still are under orders from the Vichy governor-general, Armand Annet, have withdrawn to the southern part of the island but British authorities are hopeful they will submit without further fighting, a military commentator said.

Reports reaching London did not indicate whether the island's defenders who yielded at the capital and elsewhere were simply disarmed and demobilized or treated as captives.

Repatriation was offered Vichy forces which yielded in Syria, it was recalled, but there is nothing to show whether a similar policy has been adopted in Madagascar.

The military commentator, who must remain anonymous, emphasized that British forces reached Tananarive swiftly considering the road obstruction and the desire of the forces to avoid killing Frenchmen. There was no word here whether the road demolitions were continued by the Vichy French south of Tananarive.

Large Axis Tanker Hit by Torpedo

Cairo, Sept. 25 (AP) — British torpedo-carrying aircraft damaged a large tanker escorted by destroyers northwest of Tobruk Wednesday night in another attack on Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's overseas supply lines, British headquarters announced today.

Air activity over the Egyptian battlefront yesterday was on a small scale, the bulletin said, and there was no noteworthy action on the part of opposing land forces.

Headquarters said one plane was lost, and announced the destruction of a German aircraft over Malta.

NO LOGS IN RESERVE

Victoria, Sept. 25—(CP)—British Columbia has practically no logs in reserve, lands minister Gray said yesterday. Usually at this time of the year there are between 200,000,000 and 300,000,xxx feet of logs in waterways awaiting shipment. Mr. Gray said the present situation was due to labor shortage.

ADVERTISES FOR GIRL

Jefferson City, Mo., Sept. 25 (AP) —A soldier met a girl in the Missouri capitol building, then lost her. He wrote the Jefferson City Post-Tribune for help in finding her again. The description: "A very sweet little girl . . brown hair and eyes . . the girl I have been looking for all my life."

BUCK, 12 OTHERS SURRENDER TO MOUNTED POLICE

Went Into Hiding After Outbreak Of War but Never Left Dominion

WANTS TO AID IN WAR

TORONTO, Sept. 25 — (CP) — Thirteen leaders of the Communist Party of Canada, including Tim Buck of Toronto, the party's general secretary, surrendered to Royal Canadian Mounted Police today and were taken to Don jail on charges of being members of the Communist Party.

They had been sought for internment under the Defence of Canada Regulations since the party was declared an illegal organization by the Federal government in June, 1940. Ending the mystery of his whereabouts, Buck led the party of 13 to the office of J. L. Cohen, Toronto lawyer, from where they went to R.C.M.P. headquarters.

Cohen's office said two other Communist leaders who also had been in hiding would surrender later today, Leslie Morris of Toronto "somewhere in Western Canada" and Oscar Cain of Toronto in Windsor, Ont.

Arrest in Winnipeg

Another party leader, William C. Ross, former member of the Winnipeg school board, was arrested on a downtown Winnipeg street Wednesday after appearing for the first time since his arrest was ordered at the Workers' Committee office there.

Buck, who variously had been reported in the United States and Mexico, laughingly told reporters he had not been out of Canada since he disappeared. But he would not say where he had been.

The 13 who surrendered here obviously knew they would be taken to jail immediately for they came to Cohen's office with small overnight bags. After Cohen spoke by telephone to V. A. M. Kemp, R.C.M.P. superintendent for Western Ontario, the party proceeded in three taxis to police headquarters.

Buck appeared in good spirits and stood around Cohen's office chatting with the other members of the party and newspaper men. The others who surrendered with him are:—

Stewart Smith, former Toronto alderman; Sam Carr, Toronto, organizational secretary of the Communist Party; Stanley Ryerson, Evariste Dube, Fred Rose, Henri Gagnon, Emery Samuel and W. Fortin, all of Montreal; James Litterick, Winnipeg, former member of the Manitoba Legislature; Sam Lipschitz, Gus Sunquist and William Kashtan, all of Toronto.

Kashtan formerly was secretary of The Young Communist League of Canada.

Statement Given Newsmen

In a statement given newsmen Buck said the decision to surrender was made "so as to appeal against the internment orders which now prevent us from giving our full energy to strengthening the country's war effort."

Desolation, Suffering in Stalingrad Vividly Described by Newsman

Moscow, Sept. 25 (AP).—"The sky flames over our head and the earth quivers under feet in Stalingrad," Konstantin Simonov, Russian author and newspaperman, wrote today in describing his visit to the besieged Volga River city.

"There is wreckage everywhere, and everywhere the choking smell of smoke and high explosives," he said. "On the river beach are the corpses of women and children killed by German bombs. The Stalingrad water front is a great patch of ruins.

"By night fresh Soviet troops cross the river on barges and boats. The wounded are removed the same way.

"The medical service is working under conditions of tremendous strain. Young nurses are crossing the perilous passage from east to west bank incessantly, running the gauntlet of bombs and shells, and attending to the collection of wounded among the burning houses of the front line.

"Headquarters is working far underground in almost airless conditions.

"Separate battles rage in single streets and sometimes even in specific houses.

"To some extent the centre of the town still exists. Among the buildings not smashed a bakery still functions.

"Many civilians have been evacuated but it is impossible to remove all of them. Large numbers of human beings have burrowed like moles along the sides of a deep ditch, covering their earth dugouts with bits of charred boards, and stuffing the cracks with rags in order to protect children from the cold winds and rain.

"Anyone who has been in Stalingrad and seen traces of the suffering left by the Germans will never ask for mercy for them."

Four Other Subs Believed Damaged Admiralty Says

British Destroyer And Minesweeper Also Reported Lost From Convoy

MOST OF SHIPS SAFE

London, Sept. 25 (CP)—The Royal Navy lost the destroyer Somali and the minsweeper Leda in a convoy homeward bound from Russia after getting "the great majority" of the laden merchantmen through to Soviet northern ports, the Admiralty disclosed today in a complete account of the sea struggle in the Arctic Ocean.

At least 40 Nazi aircraft were blasted from the sky, the Admiralty reported, while two U-boats were almost certainly destroyed and four others probably seriously damaged.

"The task of the escorting ships was by no means complete" when the goods had been delivered to Russia, the Admiralty related, and the commodore of the convoy "turned his force to fight the homeward bound convoy from Russia back through areas in which the enemy has concentrated in such large forces."

Outward Journey

On the outward journey, the Admiralty previously had disclosed that most of the merchant ships carrying war supplies for Russia had reached their destinations and that none of the convoying warships had been lost despite Nazi air and U-boat attacks in the Autumn dusk of the Arctic.

Bound back, however, it said the Somali was torpedoed by a submarine and sank after breaking in two when she had been in tow in bad weather for more than three days.

The Admiralty said that although the convoy was first sighted September 9 off Norway it was not attacked until three days later.

U-Boats Launch Attack

U-boats launched their first attacks September 12 from bases on the Norwegian coast. The following day these were extended, while German planes also sowed mines in front of the convoy. In the early stage of the battle, one U-boat was attacked and probably seriously damaged, the Admiralty reported.

The commodore of the convoy was Rear Admiral E. K. Boddam-Whetham, D.S.O. Escorting vessels were led by Rear Admiral R. L. Burnett, O.B.A., who flew his flag on the cruiser Schylla, commanded by Capt. I. A. P. MacIntyre, C.B.E., R.N.

TIN-HATTED SKUNK SHOT

Port Hope, Ont., Sept. 25—(CP) —Constable Clarence Weatherup of Port Hope has shot a tin-hatted skunk which previously had annoyed participants in a euchre party here. The night of the game a dog owned by E. B. Lingard emerged second best in a brush with the skunk. Then Constable Weatherup spotted the animal emerging from an alley, wearing on its head a tin can which it had been cleaning out and which proved too tight for it.

CAR WEDGED TIGHT AGAINST ENGINE

Finch, Ont., Sept. 25 (CP).—Miss Erme Empey, 22, school teacher at Goldfield and native of Berwick, was instantly killed Thursday night when a westbound Canadian Pacific Railway freight train struck her automobile which was stalled on a crossing on the outskirts of this village.

Witnesses said the young teacher, apparently unable to get her coupe across the tracks, saw the train approaching, got out of the car and started to run for sofety. The train struck the car which swung and struck her, hurling her body 150 feet.

She was dead when picked up. The engine of the automobile was so tightly wedged onto the front of the locomotive it took fifteen men to remove it before the train could proceed.

ITALIAN PLANES RAID GIBRALTAR

London, Sept. 26 (CP)—Reuters News Agency reported from Gibraltar today ;that several Italian planes raided Britain's western Mediterranean stronghold last night, causing an air alarm but no damage or casualties.

Only a few bombs were dropped, all failing inthe sea, before the fortress' anti-aircraft barrage drove the raiders off, the dispatch said.

$1,675 RETURNED TO OWNER

Toronto, Sept. 25 — (CP) —Harry G. Purdy of Detroit discovered how much he appreciated Canada's good neighbor policy today when his wallet, containing $1,675, was returned to him after two Toronto women found it lying on a downtown department store counter.

Purdy, who had been shopping in Toronto Tuesday, did not miss his wallet until he had crossed the border at Windsor, Ont. Police here notified Purdy his purse was in safe hands after Mrs. Colin Campbell and Miss Catharine Dick, store employee, turned the wallet over to authorities.

CAREER OF AUTO IN ACCIDENT

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 25 (AP).—Here's what happened to J. R. Griffin's small coupe: It struck and knocked aside a heavy detour blockade on the highway; climbed a sand pile; sailed over a 12-foot ditch, landing so solidly both rear tires blew out; rolled into the rear end of a truck and projecting lumber crashed through the windshield. It finally stopped with Griffith's nose almost nudging the timber.

Interment was in the Hartsmere Cemetery.

HARRY CHARLES WALTERS

Picton, Sept. 25—The funeral of Harry Charles Walters was held at Bloomfield United Church, with Rev. M. Buttars officiating and interment in Hicksite cemetery. The service took place on the day Mr. Walters would have marked his 36th birthday.

Mr. Walters was accidently electrocuted at Red Lake Gold mines, Madsen, Northern Ontario. While walking along a ditch with his son, the boy fell over the embankment. His father jumped into the ditch to assist him and in doing so grasped a steel pipe which was electrically charged. Death was instantaneous.

He resided at Bloomfield until a few years ago when he went north as an electrical engineer. He was the foster son of Mr. and Mrs. Angus Walters of Bloomfield. Also surviving are his wife, two sons, Joseph and Ernest, and a daughter, Charlotte, of Madsen; three sisters, Miss Ruby Shepard, Kingston, Ina Anderson, Toronto, Winnifred Shepard of Madsen and a brother, Ernest Shepard, Madsen.

MR. JESSE GRAVES

Picton, (Special.)— Following an illness of some months, Mr. Jesse Graves passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Wm. Reeks, Waupoos Island, on Tuesday, September 22. The deceased who had passed the four score mark, had resided practically all his life in Picton, where he was a well known carpenter, and held the esteem of a large circle of friends. He is survived by one son, Ennis Graves of Picton and two daughters, Mrs. T. J. Flurey of Belleville and Mrs. Reeks, with whom he had made his home for some months. Mrs. Graves predeceased him a number of years ago.

The funeral service was held on Thursday afternoon with interment in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Cheque for Campaign Accompanies Letter Of Appreciation for U. Church Council Reports

From the far west comes tangible appreciation of the coverage given the recent session of the General Council of the United Church of Canada, by The Ontario Intelligencer.

In the mail this morning was a letter from Mr. A. Gowler, a lawyer residing in Grenfell, Saskatchewan, in which he not only expressed his appreciation of the "full and interesting' reports given by this newspaper, but enclosed a cheque to be applied to the local Community Drive for funds.

The local coverage, Mr. Gowler wrote, "kept those of us who were not privileged to attend, in close touch with the every-day proceedings".

Mr. Gowler adds an interesting local note. Writing of continued wet weather which has hampered harvesting and threshing operations in his part of Canada, he added "a few snow flurries this morning is an indication of colder weather ahead."

Capt. Walters Describes Visit To Stratford-on-Avon, The Famous Shakespearean Shrine in England

NOTE: Following is an interesting letter from Capt. Austin Walters, Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, who is in England.

Capt. Walters is well known here, having practised medicine here for several years before enlisting.

Mr. Jack Marsh, to whom the letter was sent, has kindly forwarded it to this office for publication.

Sunday, August 30, 1942

Dear Slim:

Haven't had a leave in nearly nine months now, and so thought you might like to hear about it in some detail. It came on just thirty-six hours' notice so didn't get a chance to contact any of my friends and went alone.

Spent a couple of days of it visiting at the hospital I worked in earlier in the year. A favorite sport there is bicycling so one afternoon Major Dunc. Croll and I went out hunting antique shops. We never got any further than the first one we came to—a quaint little place tucked away beside an ivy covered brick wall. It was full of the most interesting things. When we went to leave, it began to rain and the wife of the proprietor insisted we come back in and see her own personal treasures. The upshot of it all was we were practically shanghaied into staying for tea. Mrs. Turner, when she found Dunc was interested in old buttons, etc., went and got dressed in a hundred-year-old dress with hoops, lace and ribbons. So we had our tea off a table belonging to Queen Charlotte, presided over by a delightful old lady with a Belfast accent, wearing lace (lavender shade), old ribbons and hoops. To make it even more memorable, she told us with great pride of her only son who is an R.A.F. night fighter. Wonderful folk the English. We went in two strangers to look at antiques and finally were entertained royally.

I went on to Stratford-on-Avon and saw most everything pertaining to Shakespeare. It's a delightful little place and very beautiful. Unfortunately, the Bard's own home and even his famous mulberry tree were destroyed by some foolish gentleman but there is a place there beside it, a very old spot, in which are preserved many things of the period; one can still wander about the original foundations of the poet's home, peer down his well and look at another mulberry tree planted in exactly the same spot as the original. There is also an Elizabethan garden which is a riot of color, with benches placed about for anyone to come and sit and read. Out of curiosity I peered at the book a man sitting next to me was reading. He apparently had no reverence for Shakespeare — it was an Edgar Wallace story! Went through the very fine little church where he was buried. An actor, who played in the repertory company at the local theatre, went around with me while a kindly vicar told us many interesting things. The church has rather a long name —the Collegiate Church of the Holy Trinity—and part of it dates from early in 1200 A.D. The altar stone dates from 1100 A.D. That's where the famous epitaph is engraved:

> "Blest be the man that spares these stones,
> And curst be he who moves my bones."

Also walked out to Shattery and went through Ann Hathaway's cottage. No signs to direct you as you would find in Canada. You just go by any passerby's directions —along a winding path across fields, now filled with garden allotments, and through more winding lanes with thatched roof cottages on each side until you turn a corner and instinctively, from memory of pictures, you know this is the cottage. It belongs too, to the Shakespeare Foundation and is well cared for and maintained. There was a profusion of flowers in the garden, the sun shone brightly on the thatching and everything looked so peaceful, but with the one thing present to remind you of the war—the large number of planes in the sky. Everywhere the English sky is filled with English planes. Met two boys that night, sergeants in the R.C.A.F., who had just finished their final training and were waiting rather impatiently for their first "Ops." One was from Port Credit and the other from Vancouver. Also met two other interesting people at the hotel who illustrate so well what this nation is doing. Two middle aged women from Lancashire were there on their first holiday in nearly eighteen months. During that time they had been working 12 hours a day, six (and sometimes seven) days a week in a munitions factory. That's a real war effort.

In Stratford-on-Avon there is a very beautiful Shakesperian memorial theatre. I saw "The Merchant of Venice" and it was excellently done. Carried me back to old high school days. Wasn't that the first play we read in First Form? Spent the last day of my leave in London. My chief visit there was to Madame Toussaud's. Of course it was blitzed in 1940, and part of the building is still in ruins. I think a lot of the work on figures must be quite new, and I was somewhat disappointed by it. However there were some excellent likenesses, one particular politician (who shall be nameless) being a marvellous putty faced resemblance.

One other thing would interest you. Not long ago on a scheme our regiment was bivouacked in a woods when in wheeled a motor bike. Jack Morgan was riding it, and I hadn't seen him in nearly a year. The Hastings and P. E. regiment were just a few miles away, so I hopped on behind Jack and went up to see them. Spent an evening reminiscing with Lt.-Col. Graham and Majors Bruce Sutcliffe and Ron Church and Jack. Hadn't seen any of them since that December night they went through Belleville by train on their way to England over two and a half years ago. We commented on the length of time. While on leave my second anniversary of leaving Canada went by. It's such a long time to be away from your wife and family, but after all the boys the last time were away longer and had more hardships than most of us this far, so we can't complain.

Right now all the boys here are proud of the way our Second Division behaved at Dieppe. Hope you see the movies of it soon, as they are very good. During that day I saw no less than seven complete squadrons of Spitfires—eighty-four in all—go out over the Channel in one large perfect formation and that was only over our small place.

—AUSTIN.

DONE MAKING WISECRACKS

Philadelphia, ept. 25 (AP) —Dorothy Parker says she's sworn off making wisecracks for the duration. The writer with the reputation for a sharp tongue came here from her nearby farm home for a Russian war relief concert and commented "Time enough for humor when there's something to laugh about." It's all a myth anyway, she said, about her being "a bad girl and a conversational hellion, because I'm really a very nice girl."

ADMIRALTY

The Admiralty told how the convoy was shadowed September 12 by aircraft and U-boats, against which several attacks were carried out, and hot on the following day heavy fighting broke out.

The first air attack came from high-flying bombers who dropped their explosives through gaps in the clouds. Next, between 40 and 50 torpedo bombers flew towards the convoy in line abreast, close formation, and attacked.

Five Planes Destroyed

Carrier-borne navay fighter aircraft and ack-ack fire restroyed five enemy planes, seen to crash into the sea, and probably destroyed or damaged many others.

The third attack of the day came from nine torpedo bombers which were driven off by gunfire, the planes dropping their torpedoes from long range. Two of these planes were seen to crash.

At dusk, 12 torpedo bombers came over the ships, but again the attack was frustrated by naval fighters and heavy anti-aircraft fire. Six enemy aircraft crashed, running the day's total bag to 13 destroyed.

The next morning at dawn U-boats returned to the attamk, several being subjected immediately to depth-charges in one case, bubbles,, oil, wreckage of wooden gratings and some green vegetables floated to the surface.

Attack Aircraft Carrier.

Early that afternoon a flight of 22 torpedo bombers attacked the convoy. An aircraft carrier was the main target but was not hit, the Admiralty said.

The next attack came in the form of high-level bombing by 12 aircraft which lasted for an hour and a quarter. This was followed immediately by an assault by 25 torpedo bombers. Again the work of fighter pilots and anti-aircraft gunners saved the convoy.

In his report, Admiral Burnett said, "I shall never forget the reckless gallantry of the naval fighter pilots in their determination to get the enemy despite the solid mass of our defensive fire of every type."

These pilots in these attacks shot down five enemy aircraft, probably destroyed three others and were credited with damaging 14, the Admiralty reported.

24 Planes, One Day's Toll.

Shortly afterwards another high-level tombing attack developed but no damage was caused. At least 24 enemy planes were destroyed that day.

A three-hour aerial attack, embracing both high and low level bombing, was visited on the convoy Sept. 15 by from 50 to 70 enemy planes. The defence was hampered by low clouds but fighter planes harassed the enemy above the clouds and heavy ack-ack fire bothered the Nazi pilots when they darted below the cloud formations. One enemy plane was seen to crash.

The Admiralty reported "another very promising attack on U-boats" that day, when bubbles, oil and wreckage again floated to the surface.

Final Attack Harmless

The final attack on the convoy was made by 24 dive-bombers shortly before the ships neared their destination. No damage was caused but two enemy planes were shot down.

Said the communique:—

"... losses were suffered among the ships in the convoy but despite the large number of very heavy attacks made by the enemy, the great majority of the ships arrived at their destinations.

"Once again the products of arms factories of Britain and the United States were fought through to Russia by the fortitude and determination of officers and men of the British, American and Russian ships in the convoy and their escorts.

"The task of the escorting ships was by no means complete and Rear Admiral Burnett turned his force to fight a home-ward bound convoy from Russia back through the areas in which the enemy has concentrated such large forces."

Some Losses

This time the convoy was free from air attack, although submarines again plagued the ships and the Admiralty announced "some losses," including the destroyer Somali.

Many counter-attacks were made against the enemy underseas craft. The Commodore of this convoy was Commodore J. C. K. Dowding.

The Admiralty reported that during the passage of these two convoys, 40 enemy aircraft were seen to crash and a large number were damaged severely. Four naval fighter planes are missing but the pilots of three of them are safe. Two enemy U-boats were almost certainly sunk and four others were probably seriously damaged.

Added the Admiralty in its communique: "Throughout the whole of this operation the Coastal Command of the R. A. F. provided invaluable air patrols and reconnaissances under the most arduous flying conditions."

WINS D.F.C.

Flying Officer William Cecil Langstaff, R.C.A.F., who has been awarded the D.F.C. In March on a trip to Cologne, his wireless equipment went out of order, crossing the English coast. Despite this he went on to the target and brought his plane back safely to England.

The Rural Church

(Tribute Written by Arthur Wilson of West Huntingdon to It's Work and Influence on Lives of People in Country and City)

It is not within the range of human understanding to estimate the service rendered by country churches down through the years, nor for a critic to feel the strength of the tie that binds a country congregation together. In every city there are men and women, whose memory often takes them back to the old church by the side of the road and rekindles in their hearts sacred recollections of scenes that characterized the life of rural dwellers in other years. These men and women are not only in the common walks of life, honestly laboring in life's work, but many have gained high positions in business, profession and leadership, whose early lives were permeated with God's truth as it was courageously expounded and magnified by zealous men from the pulpit and in the Sunday School as well. Both Moira and Beulah churches are proud of their long life, and the congregations carrying on today, embody the devoted and sacrificial spirit of all the former members, who from their labors rest.

Commissioners Praise Belleville's Hospitality During Recent Meeting

Many letters of appreciation are being received in the city from the commissioners of the General Council of the United Church, who were guests of local people during the Tenth Annual session of the body.

The letters mentioned the "wonderful hospitality" of Belleville's people, and the fine reception accorded the visitors.

The Moderator, the Right Rev. Dr. J. R. P. Sclater, Toronto, described Belleville as being located in "that wonderful Paradise of the Bay of Quinte'. The distinguished head of the United Church was profuse in his appreciation of his reception here, and of "splendid" people he met during his sojourn in the city.

POLICE COURT

Trenton Taximen Deny Throwing Tomatoes

Although they denied actual participation in throwing tomatoes from a motor car in Belleville a week ago, Walter Kemp and Douglas Wannamaker, both of Trenton, pleaded guilty to charges of contributing to disorderly conduct, contrary to city bylaws, and each paid $2.00 including costs.

"It was an airman who had engaged our taxi who threw the tomatoes from the back seat of the car. We didn't throw any tomatoes ourselves," commented Kemp after the pair had pleaded guilty to the lesser count.

"Tomatoes were thrown out of the car at girls on Dundas Street," asserted Acting Chief Harman.

"That must have been a pleasant pastime," commented Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., as Kemp repeated his denial of actual participation. The fines were paid without further comment with Charles A. Payne, K.C., local barrister, appearing on behalf of the men.

Charge Dismissed

LAC. James Kivell of the Trenton R.C.A.F. base, appeared on a charge of careless driving, which was preferred as the result of a truck-car crash at the intersection of Dundas and Church streets some weeks ago.

Only part of the evidence was adduced before Mr. Donnan interrupted and asked His Worship the advisability of dismissing the matter. "It seems to be this case would be better heard in a civil court and let the parties concerned place their difference in a civil action," suggested Mr. Donnan and His Worship agreed.

"I do not think Mr. Payne will object," smiled Magistrate Lloyd addressing Mr. Payne, who also represented Kivell. The charge arose out of an accident between a truck driven by Robt. Blaind of this city, and Kivell, and it was immediately dismissed.

Gordon Chisholm, 112 Cannifton Road, reported the theft of his bicycle to police last night.

Collegiate Students Spend Days Helping To Harvest Fruit Crops

Picton, (Special) — For the next two weeks' Collegiate pupils are meeting at the school each morning and are driven to farms and orchards where they are helping to harvest the apple, potato and tomato crops. Farmers are loud in their praise of the young help, whom, they report are especially careful not to destroy limbs and vines. The pupils are paid by the hour, rather than as piece work, and in many cases are paid at the end of each day so that they are encouraged by seeing a quick return of each day's work.

H. & S. Association Meets

The first executive meeting of the season of the H. & S. Association was held on Wednesday afternoon at 'Shorelands', the home of Mrs. L. B. Calnan. The program committee outlined the special features for the coming year. Plans were made to hold a rummage sale in the near future, and if posible to have the community teas in the Fall instead of in January. Members of the executive were chosen to assist Miss Edwards Reg.N., at the Board of Health Exhibit at Picton Fair.

At the close of the meeting, fruit served by the hostess, was enjoyed before an open grate fire.

Telephone Users Asked To Make Fewer Calls

In order that vital calls on war business may not be delayed, the Bell Telephone Company is issuing an appeal to all its subscribers, asking that telephone users make their calls fewer and shorter.

This, the company emphasizes, is all in the interests of the war effort.

From the outbreak of war, calls both local and long distance have increased steadily. To meet this situation the company has added greatly to its plants. Today, it is pointed out, more calls are being made than ever before.

Telephone facilities cannot be further expanded to take care of the ever growing volume of calls. The materials that build telephone plants, copper, rubber, aluminum, zinc, are no longer available. They are needed for war purposes.

There is but one answer, company officials assert: use of the telephone, local and long distance, should be confined to calls that are absolutely necessary, and even essential calls should be as brief as possible.

SAY HITLER PLANS TO END GOV'TS OF QUISLINGS

Reports Say He Will Appoint German Dictators in Norway

RACIAL QUESTION

By MAX HARRELSON
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Recent reports from Europe indicate that Hitler is planning to dismiss his quisling governments in Norway and Holland and replace them with German dictators.

These reports were partially substantiated yesterday by a secret document which the Soviet News Agency Tass reported had been circulated among German authorities in occupied countries outlining a new racial policy.

The document was quoted as saying that Scandinavian and other conquered Nordics had been given "a harmful illusion of race equality" with the German conquerors by the previously announced principles of race policy. It added that this illusion was present in the minds of "various groups collaborating with German authorities, particularly in Holland and Norway."

What Report

German occupation authorities were advised to take political activities "from the hands of mixed and impotent national elements" and concentrate such activities among persons "bound by blood ties with internal Germany."

If this document is genuine it can only mean one thing: Hitler has decided the puppet governments of Anton Mussert and Vidkun Quisling have failed and has decided to give up his efforts to win over The Netherlands and Norwegian peoples to the German side.

This was borne out by a second instruction to the occupation authorities. The document told them to draw on any number of representatives of northern races for work necessary to meet German economic and war needs. The key to the whole question seems to be that Hitler is in need of workers.

In raising the racial question in the most crucial period of the war, Hitler is running the risk of alienating some of the "inferior" races who are fighting with Germany against Russia—the Italians, Rumanians, Hungarians, Slovaks and Finns.

For this reason, the publication of the document at this time is undoubtedly highly embarrassing to the Nazi leaders. It was made public just as Hitler was conferring with Dr. Ante Pavelic, Chief of State in Croatia, and Mlahi Antonescu, acting Premier of Rumania, presumably seeking additional troops from these "inferior" peoples.

Russia Denies Red Planes Bomb Bulgarian Cities

Moscow, Sept. 24. (AP)—An official denial that Russian planes have been bombing Bulgarian cities was made public today through Tass, the Soviet News Agency. Axis sources last week report such bombings.

"The foreign press circulates a report alleging that a few days ago a group of Soviet aircraft dropped bombs on some Bulgarian populated places", Tass said. "Tass as been authorised to deny this as a lie fabricated with clearly provocative purpose".

Bulgaria and Russia still maintain diplomatic relations although Bulgaria is a member of the Axis. So far her armies have not been among the satellite trooops Hitler has called into his war with Russia.

S. R. BURROWS, C.L.U.

D. G. WILLIAMS

C. H. BURR

The Head Office of The Mutual Life of Canada has announced that three members of the Belleville agency, S. R. Burrows, C.L.U., Branch Manager; D. G. Williams, Belleville and C. H. Burr, Picton, have again qualified for membership in the Company's production groups.

Mr. Williams and Mr. Burr, who have represented The Mutual Life since 1935 and 1928 respectively, have both enjoyed consistent success during their period of service with the Company, and are members of the 1942-43 Century Club.

It is of interest that Mr. Burrows, who has represented The Mutual Life since 1911, has been a member of one of the Company's production clubs every year since they were organized twenty-five years ago, with the exception of only one year. He is also a "Master Builder", a distinction given to outstanding producers of the Company.

Death Toll Now 18 in Train Wreck At Dickerson, Md.

By JAMES E. HAGUE

Dickerson, Md., Sept. 25—(AP)—Body after body was taken late today from the twisted wreckage of a Pullman car that became the flaming coffin of perhaps 18 of the 20 or more persons believed killed in a wreck of two passenger trains and a fast freight.

The sleeping car carried most of the victims when death struck in a deep gully along the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad tracks. One passenger express plowed into another and tossed the Pullman into a freight speeding along the adjoining track.

Wreckage of all three trains jammed into a small mountain of crumpled steel in the narrow pass, and fire from spilled fuel oil spread through the mass.

Six bodies had been taken by late afternoon from the Pullman, and railroad officials said they held no hope for twelve other persons believed aboard at the time. They said twenty-one were in the Pullman, three of whom were rescued, all injured.

Nine Taken to Hospital

The other victims were J. M. Gilhart, 53, of Baltimore, flagman on the freight, and a man whose decapitated body was found near the blazing wreckage of a baggage car on the second passenger train.

Nine injured were taken to the Frederick city hospital, and an undetermined number of others treated at the scene. Some of those at the hospital were reported critically injured.

The wreck occurred at 7.35 a.m., E. D. T., half a mile of Dickerson, about thirty-five miles northwest of Washington. The Baltimore and Ohio said it was the first train accident involving injury to passengers in twenty-three years. It happened this way:

The Cleveland night express stopped for repairs made necessary by engine trouble. A flagman was sent out, and recalled when the trouble was overcome. Then, just as the Cleveland train was starting, the Ambassador, passenger express from Detroit, also bound for Washington; piled into the rear.

The diesel locomotive of the Ambassador sheared under the Pullman car at the rear of the Cleveland train, tossed it sideways into a fast freight westbound on the adjoining track.

Pullman is Telesceped.

The Pullman was telescoped and set afire, and the car ahead of it damaged. The diesel locomotive tipped over on its right side, burst into flames. Fifteen box cars of the freight jumped the tracks and some were wrecked, their cargo of steel piping splintered and piled up like a log jam; the baggage car on the Ambassador overturned and caught fire. Flames spread to debris of the freight cars.

The disaster was swift and complete. So badly torn was the Pullman car and so quick the outbreak of fire that there was no opportunity for rescues beyond the dragging out of the three injured who survived in that car. Flames licked at the wreckage more than six hours.

Military Parade

Many who witnessed the military parade on Monday evening through the streets of Belleville to the fair grounds no doubt considered it one of the greatest if not the greatest local event of the kind in view of the representative character of the services on the march. During this war parades have not been very numerous in the very nature of modern training, but Monday evening saw not only the well trained members of His Majesty's Canadian forces, but also the large enthusiastic crowds of citizens lining both sides of the streets. With bands playing the whole parade touched the height of interest and enthusiasm.

Never did so many units participate in a parade in Belleville. This but shows the character of modern war with its variety of services. It provided the citizens with a good notion of why the war is an all-out war calling for the exercise of every resource, human and material. It shows why Canadian plants are working so steadily, "making the night joint-laborer with the day" to forge the weapons and prepare the munitions for war on a gigantic scale. That's why it is so necessary that every citizen should be working at his and her best, that the wheels of industry never lag for they have the mightiest of tasks.

Such parades have a valuable purpose to fulfil. They fire the imagination of the people who have to provide the men and the material sinews of war. Such parades are a moving exhibition of the manpower and womanpower of this nation and of the needs of a united human power in essential industry.

The performance before the grandstand at the fair went into the tactics of modern war, something so impressing as it revealed how the local boys like those from every part of the democratic world are prepared to take their part in the struggle for the world's liberation from Fascist threat and curse.

To Dismiss Quisling Governments

Hitler, when he put a Quisling in power in Norway, misread the character of the Norwegian people as the record of more than two years of uncompromising opposition by the Norwegians to anything that smacks of Nazism and friendship for Germany or that tends to take from their liberty shows. Now after trial of rule by the reprehensible Quislings Hitler is reported to have decided to dismiss the Quisling governments of Norway and other countries and to replace them with German dictators.

Did Hitler think he was fooling the Norwegians when he chose Quisling? He had not read men well enough to realize that not even a Quisling or one of his ilk can dictate the conscience of his own country. Hitler's low cunning did not work in Norway or in other lands for the Hun is hated everywhere. Not all the Quislings who could be found could mould free peoples to Hitler's tyrannous slavery.

The spirit of the nations is that of freedom. Hitler treats others as he thinks Germans would act in their place under like conditions. Therefore he believes in tyrannies, persecutions, slaughters. But his German dictators can not crush the spirit of a nation that looks for its freedom and the liberty of every one of its sons and daughters. Hitler had a servile race to start with, the Germans, who allowed him to grow upon them and he tries to handle other nations as he did the Germans. But he has found that the dominated races won't surrender. They will wage war until Hitlerism is bled white. His German dictators will anger and stir the deepest emotions of the people and they will plan revolt. Today it is true that throughout the occupied world is the spirit that will not yield, and that organizes and plots to down Hitlerism. After two years of his black 'new order' he lives in a world populated by German slaves and sycophants on the one hand and by enemies on the other who will never give up the battle to crush him as the lowest vermin that has ever crawled on earth. In occupied Europe are millions that wait the call to duty to strike off the Nazi chains and join in the greatest battle in history, the march for liberation; when the dictators of the Axis, Quislings great and small, Axis cut-throats, persecutors, torturers, will try to flee the wrath of the free peoples.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

THE GREMLINS

Over in London, the lads of the R.A.F. are having a lot of fun with the gremlins, those queer little mythical folk whom the fliers claim are raising hob with their antics, played on Allied pilots.

The pilots swear the little fellows climb inside their guns and deflect the bullets, causing many misses, when an enemy plane is the target, and stop motors by putting their fingers over the carbueretor jet.

One pilot, poetically minded, has written some verse about the gremlins, which appeared in a service magazine. There it is:

When you're seven miles up in the heavens,
That's a hell of a lonely spot,
And it's fifty degrees below zero,
Which isn't exactly hot,
When your frozen blue like your Spitfire
And you're scared mosquito pink,
When you're a thousand miles from nowhere
And there's nothing below but the drink,
It's then you'll see the gremlins,
Green and gamboge and gold,
Male and female and neuter,
Gremlins both young and old:
It's no good trying to dodge them,
The lessons you learned on the Link
Won't help you evade the gremlin
Though you boost and you dive and you jink.
The white one will wiggle your wingtips,
Male ones will muddle your maps,
Green ones will guzzle your glycol,
Females will flutter your flaps,
Pink ones will perch on your perspex,
And dance pirouettes on your prop;
There's a spherical middleaged gremlin
Who'll spin on your stock like a top.
They'll freeze up your camera shutters,
They'll bite through your aileron wires,
They'll bend and they'll break and they'll batter,
They'll insert toasting forks in your eyes.

That's as far as the R.A.F. man got with his poem, but it is expected that other poets will add to it.

Meanwhile, several of the R.A.F.'s expert "gremlinologists" have announced that they have uncovered four new species of gremlins, developed by selectiv breeding with other types during the past three years. They listed them as follows:

Genus jockey. This one's chief characteristic is that it is able to sit cross-legged between the wings of a wayward seagull or pigeon and guide the bird into the windscreen of approaching R.A.F. planes. The birds, when they hit, often give the pilots serious shocks, and sometimes damage planes.

Genus incisor. The chief characteristic is that it has sharp, strong teeth for gnawing strips of wing surface around anti-aircraft or bullet holes. They also have strong hands with which they weaken the rivets of the planes. Their favorite pastime, however, is to teach their young how to teeth on vital control wires of planes, causing them to snap when the planes go into action.

Genus optic. They have red or green eyes and love to hide in bomb sights, turning on their optic glow just as the bombardier is getting his sights lined on the target.

Genus cavity. It has a shovel-shaped nose, and appears at dawn at airports and manages to get a hole dug right in the path of a bomber coming in for a landing. This type works in gangs and often hitches rides on the plane after it hits the hole, grabbing its tail and then rushing to its nose, which puts the plane into a ground loop.

AN EARLY START

Grandpa gnashed his toothless gums indignantly.

"There's far too much bad language used by the younger generation," he wheezed. "Now, when I was a boy things were different—"

"Well," said his grandson: "I think we are much better today than in your time—better than they were thousands of years ago—even the ladies swore in the olden days."

"How do you make that out?" gasped grandpa.

"Why," replied the youngster, "it says in the Bible that Job cursed the day he was born."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES
OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

September 25th, 1922.

The Hon. Nelson Parliament, Speaker of the Ontario Legislature addressed the pupils and teachers at the Tabernacle Sunday School rally on Sunday.

Dr. W. K. Burr of Lockport, N.Y., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. James Carson, Dundas Street.

Members of Quintena Lodge No. 133 Rebekahs of this city will visit Laurel Lodge No. 211 of the same Order in Stirling and confer a degree tomorrow evening.

Heretofore Kingston Road, running east from Toronto to Kingston, has been designated by that name only by general use and common consent. Now by the action of the Ontario Department of Highways the name "Kingston Road" has been conferred officially.

Mr. James Jamieson, an old Belleville boy, has returned to his home in St. Paul, Minn., after visiting relatives here.

30 YEARS AGO

September 25th., 1912.

Mr. F. E. O'Flynn addressed the members of the Senior League of Bridge Street Methodist Church last evening on "Christian Fellowship." Mr. J. W. Johnson also made a brief address, and Mr. E. A. Ridley sang in fine voice, "Face to Face."

Mr. Fred Thomas of Watkin, N.Y., is visiting friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Harrow left yesterday to visit friends in Chicago, Ill., and Frint, Mich.

Police Officer Deshane has resumed his duties after a trip to Watertown, N.Y.

Chas. Diett, well known barber of this city, died this morning. He was about sixty years of age and was born in Oswego, N.Y. He resided here since 1875.

40 YEARS AGO

September 25th., 1902.

Mr. Francis T. Chambers, who sang recently in St. Andrew's, Bridge Street and the Tabernacle churches, and delighted those who heard him, has decided to remain in Belleville and give instructions in voice culture. He is a tenor of rare ability and Mrs. Chambers is probably the finest contralto singer heard here in years.

The young bachelors of the city gave a very enjoyable dance in the I.O.O.F. Hall last evening. Music was furnished by Chalauoka's orchestra.

Mr. Charles Lavis, Sr., is visiting friends in Campbellford.

Mr. G. W. Tickell will sail shortly for England and will later go to South Africa.

Mr. William Johnson has returned home from Winnipeg where he attended the General Conference of the Methodist Church.

50 YEARS AGO

September 25th., 1892.

In a sermon to young men on Sunday the pastor of Bridge Street Church said that young men should take young ladies to church as freely as they take them to concerts. The Young People's Church Associations, he said, are sometimes called sparking schools—which are as necessary as day schools, and are much better under the hallowing influence of church associations.

Bass fishing in the bay is now at its best.

The sailing yacht, Norah, will go out of commission tomorrow.

Mr. J. J. Lynch of the post office staff, has returned home after spending a vacation in New York City.

Mr. Stewart Masson, barrister of Owen Sound, formerly of Belleville, is in town for a few days.

CONSECRATION

No time to lose; no blow to spare;
No selfish personal goals to gain;
No thought of pleasure here or
there,
No whimpering over little pain;
But resolute of heart we take
The uphill road for freedom's sake.

No narrow measurement of space,
No petty counting days and

Until the victory is ours.
With all we cherish now at stake,
We stand or fall for freedom's
sake.

No bickering over trifling ends,
No scrambling for advantage
small;
BBut now, since all on us depends,
We're all for one and one for all!
A line unshakeable we make
To win or die for freedom's sake.

The Farm Mess

New York, Sept. 25.—One thing is certain: The farm problem is not going to be intelligently or reasonably settled in the present atmosphere raging in Washington. It has reached the stage where nobody, on either side, is talking to the point. Instead, a sort of class struggle has broken out over the question How much of the income of the country should be given to farmers, workers, and industrialists?

Every one is arguing on the point of the "just price"—which does not exist in time of war. In the moment when the net spendable income of each person in the nation must be reduced for everybody who lives above subsistence level, the question is no longer permissible.

"What must I get for my work?" What must a soldier get for his life?

The question is not, "What part of the population should get more—or less?" One question is: How can we produce more food and avoid inflation?

Another is: How can we produce the food which we need most, educate the people to consume the food of which we have a surplus, and give up eating food of which we have a shortage?

On Horse-Trading Level

The way the Administration and the ongress have put the question is calculated to sharpen cleavages. Every question of 'parity" leads to a fight over "What parity? Why 100—why 110—why 112? It puts the question on the level of horse-trading.

As we have said before, if this question is to be settled intelligently, there can be no one parity for all agricultural prices. The effect of setting one parity will be universal rationing, which will be a mess, prohibition to cultivate certain foods, enforced cultivation of others, and the increase of an untrained bureaucracy already cumbersome beyond description.

Not only that: the combination of price ceilings and ration cards always has one consequence, and that is the black market. On that matter we have a world-wide record. The black market sabotages any advantages from either price ceilings or rationing.

As for the bureaucracies: it is impossible to urge the farmer for sacrifice and against waste as long as the bureaucracies with which he deals are themselves flagrant examples of waste.

The Question of Priorities.

Take the manner of dealing with farm priorities. Secretary Wickard said, on Wednesday last, that the poultry industry must produce 2,000,000 more chickens this fall and winter.

More chickens cannot be produced without an increase of plant. In the fall and winter they do not grow in the open air. If a farmer wants to build a $1,200 chicken coop for four or five hundred fowl he has to go through the following: He must present an application to the County War Board, on which sit half a dozen representatives of that many agencies. The board is not in continuous session; it meets once a fortnight or once a month.

When its members meet they must assemble from various parts of the country. Agricultural counties are usually large, and every meeting is likely to mean the expenditure of several hundred miles of travel in gasoline and tires.

The decision of the six gentlemen on the matter of a $1,200 chicken coop does not settle the matter. It then goes to the State War Board, where another group assembles to consider the application; from there to the Department of Agriculture; then to the W. P. B., and finally to a construction committee in New York. God, in His infinite wisdom, only knows what it costs in gas, rubber, time, salaries and paper to arrive at a decision on the chicken coop. But one thing is certain: weeks or even months pass before the farmer knows whether he can or cannot raise more chickens.

Indecision and Delay.

I know of the case of a farmer whose house burned down on April 26, and who on Sept. 12 was still waiting to know whether he could or could not rebuild it. Since the farmer is in Vermont, where the winter comes early and the temperature resembles that of the Russian front, the question is not whether this farmer will grow more chickens, but whether there will be any farmer.

This is absolutely nonsensical. It means indecision to the point where no farmer can plan in advance or act in an emergency.

It means a freezing of our economy, and frozen economies do not increase production. The Government increases the expenses of every construction by an enormous percentage, and from the viewpoint of the whole economy it is immaterial that this cost is borne by the tax-payers instead of the farmers.

In the country of our enemy, Germany, the matter would be settled by the local "Landrat" in one hour.

Comprehensive Report Needed.

Imagine that this kind of bureaucracy is extended to everything: to what the farmer has to grow; to the rationing of most of his products; to the distribution of manpower.

Who is going to be left over to do the work of this nation?

In view of the whole situation, there is only one thing the President can do to get the country out of the mess. That is to appoint immediately another commission like the one that dealt with the rubber problem. Make it up of agronomists who are not representatives of either the Government or farm organizations. Put on it a great executive and organizer of the type of Mr. Baruch. Charge it to bring in a report on the entire situation.

Then the Administration and the Congress can chart a program in the light of reason and realism.

SALE OF A SOUL TO SATAN

The legend of Faust, the man who sold his soul to the devil, is based on a real person named Faust.

The real Faust was a self-styled Doctor of Philosophy who travelled about Germany during the first part of the 16th century and made his living practicing magic, telling fortunes and performing pretended cures.

He died mysteriously about 1540 and a legend soon sprang up that the devil, by whose aid Faust had wrought his wonders, carried the charaltan off.

The story of the real Faust became a nucleus around which a great cluster of medieval legends accumulated.

In 1587 Johann Spiess of Frankfort printed "Historia von D. Johann Fausten," by an unknown compiler. This book had a large sale and was followed by numerous books, ballads, and poems on the same subject.

A book entitled "History of the Damnable Life and Deserved Death of Dr. John Faustus" was published in London about 1588.

It was on this English version that Christopher Marlowe based his famous drama entitled "The Tragical History of Doctor Faustus."

In the original stories Faust negotiated with Mephistopheles for the sale of his soul to the devil in return for 24 years of worldly pleasure and power. Faust was credited with many marvellous exploits and held up as an awful example of a person who abandoned religion for secular learning.

Strolling English players took Marlowe's masterpiece back to Germany, where, after being taken up by German actors, the story degenerated first into a farce and then into a puppet show.

Marlowe's play on Faust contains his famous lines about Helen of Troy:

"Was this the face that launched a thousand ships,
And burnt the topless towers of Ilium?"

When a boy Goethe was attracted to the Faust story in the puppet shows.

At one time he seriously considered translating Marlowe's play into German. Instead he decided to make the story the theme of his own masterpiece, which he worked on, off and on, for more than 60 years.

The notion that Johann Faust, who aided Gutenberg in his printing venture, was identical with the Johann Faust who sold his soul to the devil, is now almost universally rejected as baseless.

Making Fish of One...

Editorial in Globe & Mail

As a result of public pressure, Air Minister Power has plans for lifting the restrictions on the number of pilots, observers and navigators to be commissioned on completion of their courses in the Commonwealth Air Training Plan. There are no plans for lifting the restrictions on the number of wireless air gunners and air gunners who may obtain commissions.

That partial handling of the question is not good enough. After putting the onus on Great Britain for his inability to commission more air crews because of the agreement under which the Commonwealth Air Training Plan was set up, he breaches the agreement he says is in existence. If he has breached the agreement, Mr. Power ought to go the whole way and do the right thing for all those young lads who fly the planes in combat against the enemy. But if he can raise the limit of the number of pilots, observers and navigators who may be commissioned he has no excuse whatever for not commissioning them all on graduation. And that goes for the wireless air gunners and the air gunners as well.

Another aspect of the whole question of commissioning air crews is the one of prisoners of war. Take the example of two lads who enter the R.C.A.F. together. They have gone to school together. They perhaps live across from each other on the same street. They take all their training together. One is commissioned; the other is not.

They both fly bombers over Germany. They are both shot down. They are both taken prisoner. The pilot officer goes to an officers' prison camp. The sergeant pilot goes to a separate prisoners' camp for N.C.O.'s and men.

Under the Prisoners of War Conventions there is distinct treatment for officers and men. The lad who is in the officers' prison camp gets the best of treatment. He does not work. He has his officers' mess. He gets better food. He has better communication with his family. He gets the pay of the equivalent rank in the German Army. He is an officer in a country where the officers are elite and the men scum.

The friend of the commissioned officer who is a sergeant pilot gets the treatment of men in the German prison camps. And to a German the non-officer is some one to be looked down on and sneered at. He gets poorer food. He has almost no privileges when compared with those the officers get. He hasn't the recreational facilities his comrade has in the officers' camp. He has none of those little things that make life easier.

Both young men have piloted the same planes, fought the same enemy, taken the same courses. Yet Canada insists on the distinction between them.

Sooner or Later Ferment Will Burst In the Balkans

London, Sept, 25 —(CP)— Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden said yesterday there is no doubt that "sooner or later the ferment will burst the Balkans."

Speaking at the opening of a Yugoslav centre in London, he said:

"I can repeat to you, on behalf of the government, that we shall not be content until Hitler is finally defeated, until Yugoslavia with the others resumes its liberty and until the evil deeds which have been done are avenged."

The centre was opened by King Peter.

Speaking of the continued resistance of the Serbs, Mr. Eden said that "enemy divisions needed in Russia or on the Egyptian front are being contained by the fighting in Yugoslavia."

"But there is more in it than that," he added. "This resistance is a portent of things to come. There is no doubt that sooner or later, at the appointed hour, the ferment will burst in the Balkans."

Former Resident Opens Brighton Fair Thurs.

Ex-Mayor George O. Tice of Belleville and a former resident of Brighton, was given the honor on Thursday of opening the Brighton Fair and also acting as starter for the races, which were attended by a large crowd. Although the weather was not the most desirable, there was a large attendance and the exhibits were in good quantity and of excellent quality. In opening the fair, Mr. Tice said in part "It is a real pleasure for me, a former resident of Brighton and an enthusiastic supporter of fall fairs, to officiate here today. An important part of our democracy is its social institutions and we are striving today to preserve these functions, in seeking to overthrow our enemies. No more important social function exists than the annual fall fair, bringing together, as it does, agriculture and industry. Brighton is essentially an agricultural community, which is proven by the fact that this fall fair itself has been held for more than ninety years. Keep the flag flying is this year's motto for Brighton fair, which I now declare officially open". The result of the races were:

Jap Naval Forces Operating in Atlantic Says Tokyo Report

Tokyo, (From Japanese Broadcasts), Sept. 25. (AP)—Headquarters said today that Japanese naval forces now are operating in the Atlantic "in close co-operation with the Axis navies".

One Japanese submarine operating in the Atlantic, the Bulletin added, "recently called at a certain German naval base and again set sail for strategic waters".

(This is the first report from any source concerning the presence of Japanese naval units in the Atlantic.)

Headquarters said that operations of the Japanese navy in the Atlantic are "parallel to a German naval operation in the Indian Ocean", which was not elaborated upon, and "highly significant as they represent joint Japanese-Axis naval operations against the anti-Axis powers".

WEDDINGS

CROSBY — BENSON

Marmora —(Special)— In the presence of immediate relatives and friends, a quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Mark's Church, Bonarlaw, on Wednesday afternoon, when Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell united in marriage Hazel Kathleen, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Benson, of Springbrook, and Overton Llewellyn Crosby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Merton E. Crosby of Trenton. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was daintily attired in navy blue crepe with matching hat and accessories and wore a corsage of red roses. She was attended by Miss Marguerite Crosby, sister of the groom, who also chose navy blue with matching hat and accessories and wore a corsage of pink roses. The duties of best man were performed by Mr. J. Allan Patrick of Trenton.

Wedding music was played by Miss Enid Crosby, sister of the groom. Following the ceremony about twenty guests attended the wedding reception at the home of the bride. The couple left on a trip to Toronto and on their return will take up residence in Trenton.

BUZEK—WILSON

Trinity College Chapel, Toronto, was the setting for an interesting ceremony, when Miss Ellen Stuart Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Douglas Wilson, was married to Mr. Karel Stanislav Buzek, Toronto, formerly of Czecho-Slovakia. Provost F. H. Cosgrave officiated, and Mr. G. E. Holt was at the organ.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore her mother's wedding dress of ivory satin, made on classic lines, with veil of antique lace lent by a friend of the family. She carried pink roses and white gladioli. Miss Lorna Savage, her only attendant, wore rust velvet, matching hat of velvet petals, and carried yellow gladioli. The groomsman was Mr. Wilson Woodside, and the ushers, Mr. Thomas Bata, Frankford; Wing Commander Jan Ambrus, Montreal; Mr. Joseph Chmel and Mr. Douglas Wilson, brother of the bride.

KERR—McKENNA

At nine o'clock, Saturday morning, in St. Anne's church, Merrickville, the marriage of Miss Mona E. McKenna to J. Morgan Kerr was solemnized. Rev. Father T. J. Scott was the officiant at the ceremony and Mrs. M. McConnell played the wedding music. During the mass, the following solos were sung by W. McKenna, brother of the bride, "Ave Maria", and "O Salutarus". Rose and white asters and zinnias against a banking of ferns, adorned the church. The bride daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. McKenna, was given in marriage by her father, and was attended by her sister, Mrs. C. McNamara, as matron of honor. The groom, who is the son of Mrs. A. M. Kerr and the late James Kerr of Montreal, was attended by his brother, Gerald Kerr of Montreal. The bride wore a street length frock of light grey wool, three-quarter length sleeves, with fitted bodice, flared skirt trimmed with rows of ruching. She wore a turban of marine blue with matching accessories and American Beauty roses comprised her corsage bouquet. Mrs. McNamara chose a street length dress of wine wool, with grey accessories and a corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. C. McKenna, mother of the bride, wore wine crepe with corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. Kerr, mother of the groom, wore navy blue crepe with black accessories and corsage of red roses.

BELLEVILLE NUPTIALS

Flying Officer William A. Sprinkle and Mrs. Sprinkle are pictured following their marriage in St. Michael's Church, Belleville, Sept. 19. The bride is the former Catherine Anita O'Connor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. O'Connor, Belleville. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Sprinkle, Seattle.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the Rideau Hotel, Smiths Falls, for the immediate families. Later the bride and groom left on a wedding trip to Toronto and will take up residence at Belleville. For travelling the bride had donned a jacket of grey squirrel over her wedding ensemble.

GUNNING—KENNEDY

Thomasburg.—A very pretty Autumn wedding took place in a setting of Autumn flowers at the United Church, Thomasburg, at two-thirty o'clock on Wednesday, September 23, when Olive Elizabeth only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kennedy, became the bride of Mr. James Laurison Gunning of Lodgeroom, eldest son of Mrs. James Gunning, and the late Mr. Gunning. Rev. A. S. Doggett, pastor, performed the ceremony.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, gowned in a beautiful sheer floor length dress made with long full sleeves and carried a cascade bouquet of red rose buds and baby's breath. She wore a shoulder length veil.

Miss Isabel Free of Belleville, acted as bridesmaid, gowned in a yellow figured sheer floor length dress with net headdress. She also carried rose buds.

Mr. Lorne Gunning was his brother's best man.

Mr. Laurison Kennedy and Mr. Wilbur Bateman were ushers.

Mr. Fred Porter played the wedding music and during the signing of the register, Mrs. A. S. Doggett sang.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Kennedy, mother of the bride, received in navy crepe with corsage of roses, while Mrs. Gunning, mother of the groom was also dressed in blue with corsage of roses.

The happy young couple will reside at Lodgeroom. Guests were present from Belleville, Toronto, Tweed and Port Hope.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S. WEST HUNTINGDON

The September meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. John Hassells. There was a Pot Luck dinner served at noon and the attendance was splendid; seventeen members and six visitors.

Mrs. Wm. Shaw gave a splendid talk on 'Tithing'.

The Bible reading was read by Mrs. Robert Gay. A reading entitled "The Words that Didn't Confuse", was read by Mrs. Howard Ashley. This reading was made more impressive coming from the voice of one of the auxiliary's oldest members, having created a deep spiritual atmosphere.

Mrs. Walker gave an interesting review of the Missionary Magazine "The Glad Tidings" and a poem entitled "The Presence of Jesus" was given by Mrs. J. C. Sills.

The usual business period took place and the hostess was thanked for her kind hospitality and the use of her home. The President thanked those who helped with the program.

SORRY, FOLKS—
It's September, but still not enough ICE CREAM to go around!

PERHAPS you tried to buy Borden's Ice Cream today—and found none to be had. Here are the facts of the situation.

This shortage of ice cream is quite general—but should not continue for many more days.

On October 1st we expect to be delivering every Borden dealer his regular quota, and, once again, you may enjoy the nutritive benefits of Borden's Ice Cream.

Why do such shortages occur? For three general reasons:

First—Borden's are restricted in the amount of ice cream they can make. Only 70% of the sugar used in 1941 can be used for this year's production.

Second—there has been a much greater demand for Borden's ice cream this year than ever before. With dealers on strict rations, this increased demand plays havoc and most dealers run out of ice cream before the month end.

Third—to conserve on rubber and gasoline, dealer deliveries are restricted. If a dealer runs out of ice cream, he must wait for his next regular delivery day, even though his quota is not yet exhausted.

We, of the Borden Company, want to thank all of you—our customers and our dealers—for the splendid co-operation given us in meeting this shortage situation. We publish these facts concerning the ice cream shortage so that all concerned will understand how and why it occurs from time to time.

Poorly Fitted Shoes Cause of Many Feet Ailments

Painful feet can make one uncomfortable and change an otherwise love occasion into a disagreeable one. And how helpless we would be with constantly painful feet.

In caring for the feet, choice of the shoes is most important. Tight shoes, whether they are too short or too narrow, crowd the bones of the feet together and cause deformities. The crowding interferes with the movement in the various joints and causes wasting of the muscles. Then when the shoe is taken off and the person walks barefooted, the feet spread to an abnormal degree because of the weakened muscles. For this reason, many patients complain that each new pair of shoes they buy must be larger than the previous pair. Many deformities of the feet—hammer-toe, bunions and corns—are produced directly by faulty shoes.

The child's shoes should have a rounded toe with the sole made of leather and thick enough to protect the feet, and the middle part of the shoe should be strong and flexible. In children who are overweight and have weak ankles, the shank of the shoe should be stiff. Men's shoes should have a rounded toe, be made of soft leather and should, of course, be long enough and wide enough. Women usually must wear shoes that conform to the various activities. When a woman is walking, she should have low-heeled shoes with rather heavy soles. When she shops, she should use a well-constructed shoe with a stiff shank. For evening wear, higher heels may be used as desired.

It is well to have a number of pairs of shoes so that they can be alternated from day to day. People should avoid getting their shoes wet. Shoes not in use should be kept straight by the use of shoe trees. For ordinary use, shoes should have rubber rather than leather heels, and leather rather than rubber soles. It is a good idea also to use a powder in the shoe while walking. For persons who stand a great deal, pain in the feet may occur because of weakness of the foot muscles, which is liable to happen following unusual fatigue. The arches of the feet flatten out, and pain, swelling and awareness of tenderness in the feet develope. For those who must stand up over prolonged periods, the shoes should be roomy. The shank of the shoe should be stiff to help prevent flattening of the arches. Felt arch supports may be necessary in some instances.

If a person walks a great part of the day he should wear shoes with a broad heel, preferably made of rubber, and a fairly thick leather sole. If a person is subject to foot strain, he may develop an abnormal way of walking to avoid pain in the feet. This, in turn, may affect the normal balance of the muscles of the feet, legs and thighs. It is important, therefore, to overcome the foot trouble to avoid great muscle strain, backache and other difficulties which can be so disturbing. It can be seen, therefore, how important it is that everyone makes sure that the shoes they wear are the proper ones.

FASHION FLASHES

IT ISN'T NECESSARY to pile on fur to obtain a rich effect. A smart new hat and muff ensemble is fashioned of rose-colored suede, the hat with a cuff of nutria, the big squashy pillow muff of suede with vertical bands of the fur.

IT'S NICE to see black lace with color. A new dinner frock, cut on slim lines of fine dull silk jersey, has a wide swathed sash and front panel of American Beauty jersey.

PRETTY PERKY is the best description of the very youthful date frocks now in the shop. Black velveteen makes a two-piece model with side closing and pert peplum outlined with heavy white cotton lace.

A GOOD FIND, since it is as smart over a suit or a uniform as over a dinner dress, is a military looking cape of Australian opossum made with military collar and shoulder epaulets.

A BIG DEMAND has developed for the tuxedo rever coat. Deep purple woolen with silver gray threads flecked through it is beautified with a double collar and revers of silver fox.

EVERYONE IS after those easy little woolen frocks that look right and attractive no matter the time or the occasion during the day. A mixture of woolen and rabbit's hair is used for a modified peg-top dress in purple, its sterling silver slide fastener with amethyst colored stones set in the ends. Similar stones stud the belt.

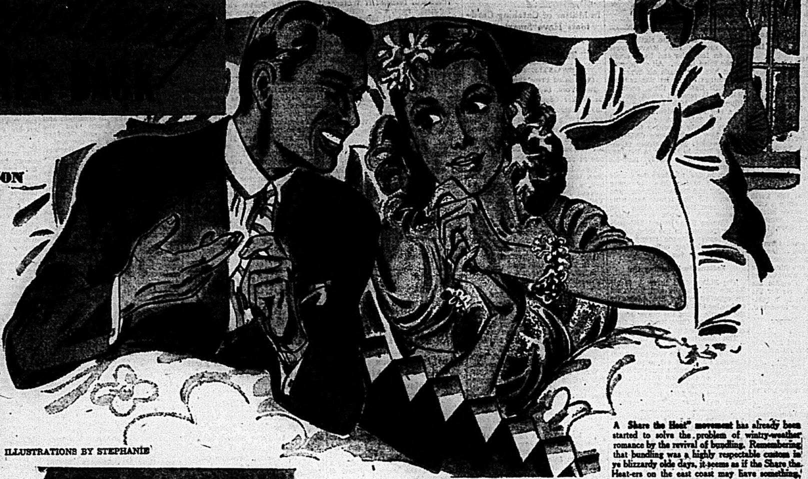
Your great-grandpa and great-grandma had a great idea for enjoying fuel shortages, and no doubt there'll be warm enthusiasm for other wartime substitutes this winter when oil is scarce



A Share the Heat" movement has already been started to solve the problem of wintry-weather romance by the revival of bundling. Remembering that bundling was a highly respectable custom in ye blizzardy olde days, it seems as if the Share the Heat-ers on the east coast may have something.

ILLUSTRATIONS BY STEPHANIE

By

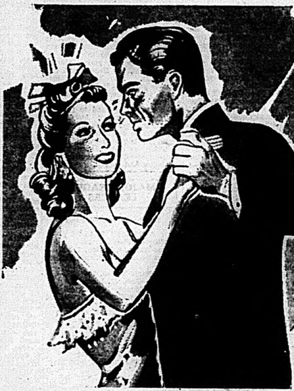
HILDEGARDE DOLSON

AS A bony blonde who is susceptible to frost-bite when the thermometer drops below boiling-point, I hearby serve notice on all moths east of the Rocky Mountains that they'd better lay off my woolies for the duration. What with the shortage of fuel-oil and the over-supply of Japs, Nazis and Duce-spots, it looks like a long, cold winter ahead, especially for poor Mr. Ickes, who has an oil burner in his rambling, hard-to-heat home, too. However, for once I'll shiver gladly, with nary a yap, if it means more fires lighted under the enemy's—er—rear.

Back in the sizzling August dog-days when Mr. Ickes was mopping the perspiration off his brow and urging all furnace-owners to convert to coal (and discovering it would cost him $2,500 to convert in his own home) there was a human tendency among civilians to tell him to go sit on an ice cube. Now that the dimmed-out nights are a-cummin' on cooler, what he says makes good sense, and I'm relieved to report that my own landlord seems to be up to his earmuffs in coal. Said landlord has also defrosted my long-standing feud with him by promising to install a damper in the chimney of my wood-burning fireplace. Last Winter, after heckling a certain tall, dark Boy Scout to rub some sticks together and build a jolly blaze in my fireplace, the smoke poured out in a manner to discourage all termites within ten miles. It also discouraged my date. He departed for the Army leaving me all smoke and no fire.

Frankly, I have never been of the opinion that a damper can quite take the place of a man. And I note with wide-eyed interest that in Hunterdon County, New Jersey, the light-minded sponsors of a "Share the Heat" movement are trying to solve the problem of wintry-weather romance by suggesting a revival of bundling. Since Hunterdon is a regular nesting ground for Ye Olde Antique Shoppe furniture, I can only surmise that the inhabitants took one look at an old bundling-bed, and said thoughtfully "Hmmmm, not bad." Remembering that bundling was a highly respectable custom in our Eastern States, when fuel did grow on trees and was darned hard work to get, it seems as though the Hunterdon Share the Heat-ers may have something.

At the time bundling became one of our better institutions, fuel was much too precious to squander on courtin' couples sitting up half the night to talk foolishness. Rather than let them sit up catching pneumonia, while everybody else went to bed early to keep warm, some bright papa invented the first bundling bed, with a solid dividing board down the middle—thus saving fuel and chaperones.



The new trick hairdressers have of using beer as ersatz wave lotion in these days of war shortages has our Hildegarde all in a dither. It's going to be hard for a girl to explain the malt and hops perfume when she's dancing with the One and Only.

This winter we'll probably be wearing pale pink woolie unmentionables christened Siberia Shorties and fuzzy-wuzzy red flannels known as Igloo Itch, or worse.

And when a man went bundlin' in those days, sir, his intentions were strictly church-wedding. Snuggled under the goose-down quilt on his side of the fence, a courtin' cavalier could call out to his honey-bunny across the bundling board, "Miss Eidelburt, may I be so bold as to discuss the matter of a dowry with your old man?"

There was also a strict set of rules known as Etiquette for Bundling, and I can only suppose that what was good enough for our great-great-grandmothers is good enough for us. If the idea becomes as popular as it used to be in our blizzardy Eastern States, all families who have long since burned their bundlin' boards for firewood had better take a board from the dining-room table, or even a few sturdy lengths of chicken wire, to fix something up for daughter and her beau. When the wind whistles throught the weather stripping there's nothing like cozy conversation over a bundling board to break the ice and warm the cockles of a gal's heart.

The Hunterdon Share the Heat movement centers on the idea of families living in large houses visiting back and forth for a week at a time, with the women sharing the work. Something tells us this might only bring on heated arguments and cold glances. On the third day of the first Share the Heat visit, when little Oswald Brown had whammed his little guest Susie-belle Smith over the head with a choo-choo train, and Mrs. Brown had flounced out without drying the Smith's dishes or picking up her husband's pajamas, there'd be enough fuel for ten family feuds. Just thinking of coming home to a set-up like that is enough to make papa hot under the collar, poor man.

Papa gets hotter than mama anytime, it seems. By measuring a lot of skin temperatures, Dr. C. P. Yaglou of Harvard arrived at the conclusion the female of the species is much cooler than the male. He found women's feet and hands to average 5 deg. cooler than the masculine extremities, their heads 3 deg. less, and their trunks 1 deg. less. (Ah, there, Lana!). This is why, it seems, men have always fumed about over-heated rooms the little women considered frozen food lockers and why Dr. C. E. A. Winslow of Yale is telling us if women will wear more clothes, we'll save a lot of fuel. Dr. Winslow claims the average room temperature should be 65 deg. for health's sake as well as fuel economy.

Our fashion designers have taken the hint, and you see fuzzy-wuzzy wool unmentionables in all our better fashion reviews. For example, one Fifth Avenue department store is showing a new long-sleeved flannel nightgown which they insist on calling Russian. Much as we admire the valiant Red Army, we're a bit baffled at this naming a nightie after our ally. If this keeps up we'll have pale-pink woolie pants christened Siberia Shorties, and red flannels known as Igloo Itch, or worse.

On the milder side in fashions for hot-house lovelies deprived of heat, they're already showing a cuddly plaid wool jacket called the Churchill coat. As for this cold-blooded blonde Hildegarde, I'm rolling a thoughtful eye at the new "Powder puff" jackets —fleecy white wool and the perfect antidote for weather-stripping. Remembering the outraged hollers our escorts let loose a few years back, when gals' cashmere evening sweaters moulted all over their impeccable serge lapels, it behooves a damsel to wear something less contagious than cashmere, for zero-weather cosiness. I note with nervous fascination that another keep-warm costume is the new wool shepherdess dress, which means we'll be having coy Bo-Peeps all over the place, by hook or crook. There has even been hectic fashion talk of horse-blanket plaids, and I think it's time the horses organized and put an end to this idea. Let them lock the barn door before the horse blanket is stolen, because women will stop at nothing when they want a new dress.

I also feel the gooseflesh coming on when I hear that checked wool knickers are back, and dashingly draped to cover a gal's knees when the frost is on the pumpkin. I willingly give this fascinating fashion to those women who take cold showers and 20-mile hikes before breakfast. They may also have the new "tightly fitting basque waist," made of sports roadster upholstery fabric, to wear with their checked kneewarmers. Then let them jump under the shower fully dressed and in what they call their right minds. My great-aunt Esmeralda, who still talks fondly of the Great Blizzard and suffragette's bloomers, will be in her element in an outfit like that. When I think of the Christmas presents she's given me in the last ten years, such as the antique bamboo hat-rack, something tells me I won't lack for firewood this winter.

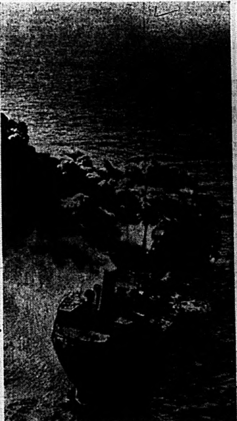
Another surprising wartime fashion comes from a French girl who recently escaped from Paris. She reports that chic Parisiennes are wearing hats made of old cheese-boxes decorated with a few Fall leaves. This headgear will undoubtedly play havoc with the nervous system of Nazis in Paris, because a woman wearing a cheese-box and Fall leaves is nothing to meet up with, even in broad daylight. It will also keep foresighted American husbands busy burning their old wooden cheese boxes for firewood so that the little woman won't suddenly turn up in a new hat.

Another idea which has me sitting with open mouth and for which we must blame war shortages is the new trick hair-dressers have of using beer as ersatz wave-set lotion, to plaster the gals' tresses. In spite of the beauty columnists' blithe assurance that beer as a hair lotion is odorless and top utterly delightful, I'm inclined to be darkly sceptical. What would happen if I went out dancing with a dream guy, and, in the midst of a dance, his nostrils began wiggling in baffled wonder. "Hildegarde," he'd say sternly, "what's the name of that perfume you're wearing?" When I'd answer meekly "Chanel #5," he might draw himself up and remark coldly that it was the first time he'd known Chanel #5 was made of hops.

Another dubious idea, which hardly seems necessary as yet, is the one my hostess over a recent week-end suggested brightly, as I sat down to Sunday morning breakfast. "I forgot to take our sugar-ration card to the store yesterday," she said. "How about putting honey in your coffee, instead?" Being one of those people who are definitely NOT full of hearty appetite and honeyed words at 8 a. m., I gave her a sickly smile and drank my coffee black. With all due respect to the Queen Bee, I say let's keep honey out of coffee, for the good of civilian morale.

On the brighter side of what we'll get used to in wartime, an eye specialist has said that on account of dim-outs and black-outs our eyes will soon become more accustomed to seeing in the dark. This is dandy news for a gal who has often groped her way into darkened movie theaters, picked out a seat that looked empty, and sat down hard in a strange man's lap. By the time my startled victim has let out a yelp, and I've trampled on several dozen assorted feet in my haste to get out of there, half the audience is in an uproar, and three ushers come running. Then, with a barrage of flashlights and reproachful glances, they lead me to safety and an empty seat. During the first test blackouts, I also banged my shins frenziedly on various immovable objects, and dribbled a bottle of cod liver oil all over my brand new tapered slacks. However, when my eyes get the new night sight, I'll leap around like a cat, and dutifully avoid sitting in strange men's laps. This gift of seeing in the dark should also be a boon to husbands whose wives have moved all the bedroom furniture around and forgotten to mention it.

As long as we can see where we're going, and get there, a few minor discomforts like fuel shortages won't worry us much. All we ask is to turn the heat on Hitler, Hirohito and Benito.



Tanker tragedies like this one in the submarine-infested waters off our Atlantic coast are the reason why there's a long, cold Winter ahead for easterners who use oil burners for heating.

New pipe lines that are being rushed to completion will carry some fuel oil from western fields to Atlantic Seaboard consumers, but authorities agree the supply still will be insufficient.

Cards Likely To Be Shortest Priced Entry National Loop Has Sent Into World Series

Odds of 10-7 With Yankees Favorite Seems to be the Prevailing Price

COOPER FEARED

(By JUDSON BAILEY)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

St. Louis Cardinals, close to clinching the National League pennant, are likely to be the shortest priced entry the Senior circuit has sent against New York Yankees in many years simply because of one man—Mort Cooper.

The odd layers are tentatively calling 10 to 7 against the Cardinals in the series with the world champions and this is quite a tribute to the big righthanded pitcher who they figure might handcuff the world champions, once, twice or even thrice.

The grown-up Missouri farmboy has shown he is capable of beating just about any club in baseball any time his teammates get him one run. Yesterday he whitewashed Cincinnati Reds 6-0 to assure the Cardinals of at least a tie for the pennant and put them in a position to clinch it today or tomorrow.

22nd Victory For Cooper

It was Cooper's 22nd victory against seven defeats and for the fourth time this season he allowed only two hits, both singles. He walked no one and the only Red to get past first was Gee Walker, who was allowed to steal second unmolested after two were out in the fourth inning.

It also was Cooper's 10th shutout, which may be more important, because this not only was the best mark of any pitcher in the major leagues this year, but the best of any hurler since Carl Hubbell pitched ten scoreless games for New York Giants in 1933.

Coopers' 22nd victory by a 6-0 count came just one day less than a year after Whitlow Wyatt won his 22nd by a 6-0 count at Boston to clinch the pennant for the 1941 Dodgers.

Today, the Dodgers are in danger of marking that anniversary by being eliminated from the race. They came up against the Braves for the last time and a defeat would knock them out of even a chance to tie, but they may slide out anyway tomorrow when the Cardinals, after taking today off, resume action against Chicago Cubs.

Dodgers Came From Behind

The Dodgers downed Boston 5-3 yesterday by coming from behind with four runs in the sixth inning after spotting the Braves three runs on four hits and three errors in the third frame. All of Boston's seven hits were made off Wyatt in six innings before he was relieved by Hugh Casey in the seventh. But Wyatt received credit for the triumph, his 19th and the fifth in a row for Brooklyn.

In the only other National League activity yesterday the Phils and New York Giants divided a doubleheader. Bill Lohrman pitched New York to victory in the first game 8-0 with a sturdy four-hit performance.

Then in the nightcap the Giants were held to four hits by John Podgajny and George Hennessy and beaten 3-2. The former was banished from the game, along with Catcher Ben Warren, for protesting Umpire Ziggy Sears' ball-and-strike judgment in the third inning and Hennessy made strong relief showing—allowing only one run, Mel Ott's 29th homer.

Indians Just Holding On

The Phils scored three times off Rookie Bill Voiselle and furnished an opportunity for Ace Adams to makes his 61st relief appearance for the Giants, tying the major league record set by Clint Brown of Chicago White Sox in 1939.

The American League competition was limited to one doubleheader which the White Sox took from Cleveland 3-1 and 4-2 to push the Indians within half a game of dropping out of the First Division. Ted Lyons scattered nine hits in the first game and Lefty Ed Smith allowed only four in the second.

Jim Braddock And his Manager Join U. S. Army

New York, Sept. 25 (AP)—The fight game's oldest and most enduring friendship—between ex-heavyweight champion Jim Braddock and Manager Joe Gould—has been going on for 16 years—and now it's going riht into Uncle Sam's army, intact.

The "Cinderella Man" and the little fellow who managed him and still pals around with him have been commissioned as first lieutenants in the Longshoremen's Battalion of the Army's Transport Service.

They're to report for action Oct. 2, and asked for assignment to a combat zone.

WALKER COOPER GIVEN AN EDGE OVER BILL DICKEY

In Matter of Catching Cardinals Have Smart Exponent in Cooper

TIMELY HITTER

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

New York, Sept. 25 (AP)—It will be Walker Cooper, St. Louis Cardinals' outstanding young catcher, against a no-longer-robust Bill Dickey in the approaching world series, and under the circumstances the vote will have to be a wavering one in favor of the kid.

For a half-dozen years Dickey has been the greatest catcher in baseball, a long-legged iron man who slugged from fifth position in the Yankees' batting order and, everything considered, probably was the most consistently valuable cog in the magnificent Yankee machine.

In previews of other world series it was customary merely to point out that the Yankees had Bill Dickey and the opposition had to like it. Bill was that good—not only a murderous hitter but a magician at handling pitchers.

Begins to Bow With Age

This time, though, it is painfully necessary to record that the backstop of the generation has at last begun to bow to age and an accumulation of injuries. He has been out of action perhaps half of the present season and will not have played in anything like 100 games.

When he is in there, of course, Bill still is the master craftsman, a symphony in motion, and now and then he can knock the cover off a baseball. But he can't do it regularly any more, and it would be risky to assume that he might catch all the games in the coming series, much less catch as he used to do.

Cooper, on the other hand, is one of the game's most brilliant youngsters; fast at a streak, a timely if not over-powering hitter, and an able handler of the Cardinals' fine pitching staff. His batting average at last official tally was only .281 compared to Dickey's .290, but he had caught 120 games to Dickey's 79 and had played a fighting part in the Cards' great last-quarter dash past the Brooklyn Dodgers.

WILLKIE MEETS COMMODORE WHO DELIVERED CARGOES

Moscow, Sept. 24 —(AP)— Wendell L. Willkie has met the man who delivered the goods to Russia.

Rear-Admiral K. K. Boddam-Whetham, R.N., commodore of the latest convoy to get through under Axis attack, attended a reception at the United States embassy yesterday and met President Roosevelt's envoy.

"We had a hot time for eight days," Admiral Boddam-Whetham commented.

REPORT ARRESTS IN NORWAY

Montreal, Sept. 24 (CP). — The press attache here of the Norwegian government reported today the arrest of several prominent members of the Norwegian Oxford movement in a recent wave of arrests in Nazi-held Norway.

The attache said that according to word received here they were taken into custody because they had "given economic support to Norway's clergymen during their fight against the Nazis."

Toronto, Sept. 25 (CP)—War charities will benefit infinitely more from the National Hockey League this season than last.

Chicago Black Hawks have shown the way. Hawks plan to turn over all profits from the 1942-43 season to war charities, probably the Army-Navy Relief Fund in the United States.

This intention was announced several weeks ago by Col. Frederic McLaughlin, Chairman of the Hawks' Board of Directors. It was repeated yesterday by William J. Tobin, President of the Chicago club.

Tobin gave more details. Most pertinent is this: Hawks are considering a plan to have the war relief organization audit the Chicago books at season's end. By this means, the public would be assured that Hawks were giving full value on their promise. It wouldn't be necessary, but the Chicago club wants to make everything quite official and businesslike.

The only other club to indicate so far that it may follow Hawks' lead is Boston, and nothing is definite there. Art Ross, Vice-President of the Boston club, has said he believed the whole league should adopt the Chicago policy. There has been no formal proposal to this effect made, but it is probable that some sort of policy toward war charities will be adopted by the league as a whole within the next few days, or weeks.

Incidentally:

Bill Wilkes of the New Westminster Salmonbellies was chosen the Inter-City Boxla League's most outstanding player, combining ability and sportsmanship...Wilkes led the league scoring, with 37 goals and 43 assists, and had only 21 minutes in the penalty box...He went to the coast from Orillia, Ont., a few years ago...The Toronto Flyers Football Club will have about 200 airwomen supporting from the stands when Flyers meet Navy in the O.R.F.U. opener here tomorrow...Lester Patrick said yesterday his star New York Rangers line, Neil and Mac Colville of Edmonton and Alex Shibicky of Winnipeg, will report to the R.C.O.C. in Ottawa Oct. 1 .... Chicago Hawks' Joe Cooper is reported headed the same way, at the same time.

BROOK AMERKS IN NHL MAY FOLD FOR THE DURATION

Plans for Season Will be Announced After Today's Meeting

DUTTON SILENT

By SCOTT YOUNG
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Toronto, Sept. 25 (CP)—Plans for the 1942-43 season of the National Hockey League are expected to be announced late today after a meeting of the league's Board of Governors here.

The general public will be most interested in that part of the announcement which will deny or verify the rumor that Brooklyn Americans will fold for the duration.

(The Montreal Gazette, in a Toronto dateline sports story today said it was learned from reliable source that Brooklyn were being dropped from the N.H.L.)

League officials had no comment on matters discussed yesterday during closed sessions of the N.H.L. management committee. They pointedly avoided committing themselves on the question of Brooklyn's future.

Dutton is Silent

On this, Manager Red Dutton of the Americans said: "I don't know. It's up to the league." Frank Calder league President, said there could be no announcement on the subject "until it comes before the Board of Governors."

There was little doubt that it had been discussed by the management committee, which spent part of its sessions drawing up a league schedule. Questioned later, Dutton said he had not attended the afternoon meeting, at which the schedule was considered, and did not know whether Americans were included. He had attended an earlier session and said he would be present at the governing board's meeting today.

Represented in the gathering of high hockey officials here are the seven clubs which made up the N.H.L. roster last year—Toronto, Detroit, New York, Boston, Chicago, Montreal and Brooklyn.

Guest Star

Al Hirshberg, Boston Post: "Here's are greatest double play combination of the season: The fans at Little Rock gave a purse of $1,000 to Manager Willis Hudlin in appreciation of the fine job he did there. . . Hudlin promptly turned the money over to players. . . . And the players, in turn, donated it to the Army and Navy Relief Societies".

SYRACUSE CHIEFS WIN FIRST ONE OVER COLUMBUS

Three-Run Outburst in First Frame Enough to Coast Home

SCORE IS 6-1

Columbus, O., Sept. 25 (AP)—A couple of pretty fair hurlers are billed to take the mound tonight in the second game of the 25th junior world series. Syracuse Chiefs of the International League took a one-game edge in the four-of-seven series last night 6-1, over the defending champion Columbus Red Birds of the American Association.

Manager Jewel Ens of the Chiefs has nominated Charley (Red) Barrett, 190-pound right-hander, while Manager Eddie Dyer of the Birds is countering with Harry Brecheen, brilliant left-hander.

Barrett won 20 and lost 12 during the current campaign, and Brecheen won 19 and lost 10.

The Birds used three hurlers last night while Clayton Lambert allowed the Red Birds only five hits.

Syracuse blasted Bill Crouch from the hill in the first frame with a four-hit, three-run barrage from which the Birds never recovered. The Chiefs kept pecking at relief hurlers Francis (Red) Barrett (no relation to the Syracuse Barrett) and Kenny Burkhart, for single runs in the second, seventh and eighth frames. Columbus' lone threat was in the seventh when two walks and a pair of infield outs produced the lone run.

The Chiefs got 10 hits. Outfielder Gee-Gee Gleeson got three of the Columbus hits, and shortstop Floyd Young the other two.

After tonight's game the clubs play the next three at Syracuse and then, if necessary, return to Columbus.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

By the Associated Press

MORT COOPER, Cardinals—Shut out Reds on two hits for his 22nd triumph and seventh straight.

DOLPH CAMILLI, Dodgers—Knocked in two runs with double to climax winning rally against Braves.

TED LYONS AND EDGAR SMITH, White Sox—Former kept nine hits scattered and latter allowed only four safeties for double victory over Indians.

BILL LOHRMAN, Giants, and GEORGE HENNESSY, Phils—Former pitched four hit shutout in first game and latter limited New York to three hits in seven innings to win second game.

R.C.A.F. STRONGEST TEAM OF FOUR TORONTO CLUBS

Conceded Navy in Better Condition and Beaches Have Best Line

HAYMAN WITH FLIERS

Toronto, Sept. 25—(CP)—An argument on the comparative merits of Toronto's four senior football teams this year could last all afternoon, but it seems clear the R. C. A. F. is strongest on paper, Navy has an edge in condition and training, Balmy Beach has the most powerful line and Oakwood Indians are hoping for the best.

Flying Officer Lew Hayman coaches the Flyers, who will meet Navy at Varsity Stadium here tomorrow in the first game of the Ontario Rugby Football Union's 10-week season. Other clubs in the six-team league also will swing into action tomorrow, with Toronto Beaches at Hamilton and the Oakwoods at Kitchener to meet the Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers.

Hayman, former Toronto Argos coach, had so many players turn out to his first practice—100 of them—that he had to cut his squad to men he knew were experienced. In the backfield he has Argos' star quarterback of last year, AC2 Bill Stukus, one of the best of the celebrated football-playing family of the same name; Flight Lieutenant Eddie Thompson, ex-Beach star; Don Crowe and Jack Alexander, also former Beaches; Art west, ex-Argos; Norm Geller, a former star halfback with Regina Roughriders; Pop Poplowski, formerly with Montreal Bulldogs, and other wellknowns.

Need Strong Centre

Along the line he has fewer good players. He needs a strong centre and a couple of ends.

Much of Navy's support stems from its earlier training start, but it has a full share of former senior stars. Coaches are Ted Morris and Jim Palmer. The navy backfield will be built around quarterback Elwyn Morris, former Argos, Russ Merrifield, a McGill star, and Hugh Cuddie, ex-Beach. Steve Levantis, Les Ascot, Pat Reid and Jack Wedley give the line strength and experience.

Beaches may have the stuff to take it all. Coach Alex Ponton's line is the best one to show in training. He has such veterans as Bob Reid, Leo Deadey and Len Staughton. His backfield isn't quite as good, but if Sammy Sward has a good season he could fix all that.

Big names are hard to find on the Oakwood lineup, but Annis Stukus, an Argo Stalwart for years, is playing backfield coach and the opposition knows it would have to watch big Stuke, even if his team-mates all were recruited from the ladies and society.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

FO. RAY BARRETT, DIRECTOR of sports at the Mountain View Bombing School, was elected President of the Bay of Quinte R. C. A. F. Sports Association recently and today he announced that an extensive all-Air Force sports program between the six district R. C. A. F. stations is in the making. Included in the set-up are Picton R. A. F., Mountain View, Trenton Air Station, No. 6 A. R. D. and No. 5 I. T. S. here. The propsed program is to include soccer, basketball, hockey, Borden Ball and indoor sports for winter entertainment of the armed services. A five-station loop as compact as the Bay of Quinte R. C. A. F. Sports Association is bound to prove successful if for no other reason than all competition can be staged after 19.30 hours without interferring with the individual players' training or classes. There was a little ripple of hockey emanating from Belleville heard up around Peteboro' way, so Fred Craig tells us, but with the R. C. A. F. proposing an all-service league in the Quinte district hockey may yet take on a difference local complex.

THE TRAGIC DEATH OF BERT Corbeau this week brought to mind the only time an Allan Cup hockey play-off game was ever seen at the Hume Arena, yes or in any Belleville rink. The late Bert Corbeau coached the Port Colborne "Sailors" back in the 1936-'37 season and won the Senior "B" championship. The Trenton R. C. A. F. won the Intermediate "A" crown and met the Sailors in the Allan Cup play-offs, losing two straight decisions. While playing for Canadiens in the N. H. L. Corbeau had many a stormy session at Dey's old rink in Ottawa. Incidentally Cy Denneny, of the rollicking Senators of the roaring 20's likes to tell the story of when Corbeau had been a stormy petrel all evening and the crowd had heaped insults on him, not to mention anything else that was handy. Later in the evening Cy met up with him, and Corbeau, though ever quick to forget hockey proceedings when it was over, kept reviewing the evening's events at the Arena.

"You guys get my nanny here. You think Nighbor is the cleanest player that ever played. So does the crowd. Well, take a look at my legs now."

With that Corbeau rolled up his trouser legs and put his beefy shanks on view. He pointed to welts just below the knee and again where the boots were laced—both spots which his pads failed to cover. "Poke-check, eh?" he muttered is disgust. "Well, I don't carry a puck up where those welts are. That Nighbor has the most convenient poke-check I ever saw. When he wants to he can give anyone the business."

"WHAT DO I HAVE TO DO TO win a rasslin' match around here," screamed "Big Earl" McCready after Referee Phil Lawson awarded Wednesday night's British Empire elimination scrap to John Katan, the Calgary "eye-opener." Of course Katan wasn't kicking. why should he with a shot at Whipper Watson's crown tossed into his lap. The week before McCready was by far the better man when the hour time limit saved Katan, then along comes Lawson to select the most inopportune time to go blind as Katan gained his winning hold with the assistance of the ropes. If Lawson can't see what's going on in the ring, then the Wrestling Commission should appoint a referee qualified, goodness knows they collect enough gravy for the amount of work they do. Or perhaps better yet have two referees in the ring, one to go to the mat for falls and the other to watch for infractions of the rules, something similar to a judge of play in a hockey game. At least it's better than the questionable manner in which Wednesday night's main bout terminated.

REMEMBER WHEN WHITLOW Wyatt's five-hit shut out gave the Brooklyn Dodgers their first National League pennant in 21 years at Boston just one year ago today? Climaxing a hard stretch battle with the St. Louis Cardinals, the clinch came only two days before the close of the season. Wyatt also pitched Brooklyn's only world series victory over the New York Yankees.

WHEN MEMBER O'TOOLE OF the House of Representatives in Washington, put the blast on the Louis-Conn fight picture seems Mr. O'Toole broke the picture wider than a County Cork free-for-all. Even War Secretary Stimson doesn't like this idea of "fighting under the cloak of the United States Army to pay Louis and Conn's debts to Uncle Mike Jacobs. Secretary Stimson says he was "shocked" over the arrangements for the fight, but aside from paying Uncle Mike nobody seems to know what else there is to be "shocked" about. Incidentally Billie Conn was made corporal yesterday and will enter the ring a subordinate to Sergeant Louis, in both army and fighting life. While the heads of the program battle it out Cpl. Conn and Sgt. Louis are going right ahead with their training, while the scrap is getting thousands of dollars worth of free publicity. So don't say Uncle Mike ain't smart.

THIS AND THAT — COME what may the Cardinals can't finish any worse than a tie for first place in the National League race ....Don't look now, but the St. Louis Cardinals have won more games than the New York Yankees....And they talk about odds for the series....Whit Wyatt chalked up his 19th win of the year yesterday as the Dodgers beat Boston, but Dem Bums can't stumble from here in, else it's curtains.... When the Cards blanked the Reds yesterday it was Mort Cooper's 22nd victory, and his tenth shutout of the year....The directors of the Queen's University lost out on the training of the Cleveland Barons at Kingston....Seems Al Sutphin, business manager of the Barons, thought the $1,500.00 rental fee was too high, but it shouldn't after taking into consideration the Barons would be permitted to play several exhibition games in the Jock Harty arena at one hundred per cent profit.....The urge was too great so Sweeney Schriner, who quit hockey last spring, is heading east to train with the Maple Leafs ....They're none too old.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Sept. 25. (AP)—It was just a year ago today that them beautiful bums won the National League pennant, so what could be more appropriate than if them Bums (no longer beautiful) should lose their last chance today? . . . They've been going baskward this season just about as fast as they moved up last year. . . But this is one time the Dodger fans can holler "wait till next year" and mean it (even if Durocher leaves along with Macphail) . . .Those middle aged guys with families may be the best ball players left by next summer.

One-Minute Sports Page

The army is running up quite a printing bill on the Louis- Conn fight. First they made Joe a sergeant, which required some alterations in the printing, and now Billy has been advanced from private to corporal. . . Don't go talking too much about the Cards' pitching staff. Tiny Bonham of the Yanks has given only 23 passes in 226 innings. . . Looking ahead to a big sandlot baseball season in '43, the National Semi-Pro Congress already has named the sites of 32 State tournaments.

Fighters Depend on 'Move-Around' Money to Keep Going Says Jacobs In Explanation of Stimson's Statement

By SID FEDER
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Sept. 25 (AP)—Mike acobs doesn't know what War Sectary Henry Stimson is investigatg about the Joe Louis-Billy Conn out, but since there's been so uch hollering over $94,000 the two oxers owed him, Mike wonders if olks realize that fighters depend n promoters for "move-around" oney to keep going between fights. Stimson announced his investiation in Washington yesterday, aying he was "shocked" over deails of the arrangements for the ct. 12 fight in Yankee stadium.

One "detail" of the fight is that he War Department originally anounced it as a 100-per cent charity or Army Emergency Relief, alhough several days before this anouncement a representative of the Var Department had seen Louis at ort Riley (Kansas) and discussed ith him payment of certain of his ebts from the bout.

Another "detail" is that a total f $135,461 is to be taken from the ate to pay debts listed against ouis and Conn. Of this sum, Mike ays $94,306 is owed him—$59,805 by ouis and $34,500 by Billy. The ther $41,146 is owed by Louis to ohn Roxborough, one of his co-managers.

Won't Call Off Bout

While officials handling the bout aid today they didn't believe the ight would be called off, Jacobs asserted that there's nothing unusual about fighters owing promoters sizeble chunks, especially when the fighters are the heavyweight champion and his No. 1 challenger.

"Fighters have to go to someone for money between fights," said Jacobs, who was asked by the War Department to promote the bout. "So they ask a promoter for an advance on their next fight. Why, right now there's about $150,000 outstanding on my books—all money advanced to various fighters. They'll pay it back as soon as they get a fight.

"Don't forget that Louis hasn't made a quarter since he fought Lou Nova last September and that Conn hasn't had a good 'touch' since he took on Joe a year ago last June.

Joe Louis Paid Off

"Before the Nova fight, Joe owed me $64,000. He paid me off out of his purse and took care of a lot of other debts. That left him almost broke again, so by the middle of October he started borrowing again, figuring he'd have a fight early this year and could straighten it out once more.

"But in January he fought Buddy Baer and turned his entire purse over to Navy Relief, and in March he knocked out Abe Simon and gave his whole end to Army Relief. So, with no income in a year, he's had to borrow. One of the things I paid for him was a $21,000 tax bill.

"It's been almost the same with Conn. Since his first fight with Joe, he got married and built a house in Pittsburgh. He asked me to loan him money until his next fight. Y'see, a fight promoter is just like a loan company — only without charging interest."

AT THE CAPITOL

With two six-guns pointing at him and another gunman holding his hands, Charles Starrett is definitely on the spot in this action scene from Columbia's "West of Tombstone," which is now at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program "My Favorite Blonde," starring Bob Hope and Madeleine Carroll.

GETTING READY TO TOSS CONFETTI IN ST. LOUIS

Need Only One Game to Win Pennant and Can't Get Worse Than Tie

DODGERS ON SPOT

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 25—(CP)—They're getting ready to toss the confetti and haul National League pennant out of the excelsior in St. Louis today.

The Cardinals, although idle and resting in preparation for the final two games of the season, should gain the championship before sundown as the challenging Brooklyn Dodgers must again play Boston and, if defeated could not possibly catch the Red Birds, who continue to lead by two and a half games. A postponement in Brooklyn also would finish the beautiful Bums, as they are scheduled to finish the season against Philadelphia Saturday and Sunday. The unplayed Boston game would be definitely out.

The Cardinals are certain of one major issue—they cannot finish the season with less than a tie, even if they lose to the Chicago Cubs Saturday and Sunday. The Cards already have 104 victories compared to 48 defeats, whereas Brooklyn has won 101, and lost 50. To gain a tie, which would necessitate a play-off, the Dodgers would need to win their last three games.

In the event of a tie, the first game of the play-off would be played in St. Louis next Monday night, with the remaining two in Brooklyn, if necessary, the following Wednesday and Thurday. As a result, the starting date of the world's series would be set back.

All this does not worry the Cardinals, who are convinced they cannot miss. They were so certain that they held a meeting in their club house today to decide upon their world's series split. That could mean the winner's share, the loser's part or second place money.

FLANKING DRIVE

all classes, from light to heavy. The enemy tanks as a rule advance in small groups and frequently operate singly. Usually small groups of German automatic riflemen take cover behind them.

"In the first few days this tactic gave the enemy a certain success, but now the defenders of Stalingrad had learned the enemy methods . . . streets and alleys are controlled by our artillery fire. Antitank riflemen also entrench themselves there, grenade-throwers and infantrymen take up positions on the street crossings and in the corner houses.

Grows In Violence.

"The fighting is growing in violence . . ."

Still denied Stalingrad, the German high command threw a new weight of numbers into the Caucasus penetration, struggling to develop an attack toward Grozny, the big oil town.

The Russians contained this new offensive effort generally, dispatches said, but the Germans made some progress in the area of an unidentified village. The Russians also were reported still stoutly resisting axis assaults southeast of Novorossisk, on the Black Sea coast.

An Izvestia dispatch from the Mozdok area o fthe Grozny front said that the Russians had attacked 67 German tanks ,destroying sixteen of them.

OnO the Leningrad front, in the Sinyavino area to the east, the Germans were said to have sent more bombers and tanks into the fighting, trying to recapture lost positions, but the Russians held firm, dispatches asserted.

At one place the Germans tried to cross an unidentified river, but were reported badly defeated.

The extent of the fighting northwest of Stalingrad was not specified in the Russian accounts which continued to credit the Germans with "stiff resistance". At one place, however, the Russians struck deep into the German defences, Red Star said.

THE WAR TODAY

By DE WITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Tokyo and Berlin are making noisy propaganda today of the claim that a fraction of the Mikado's navy, size unstated, has managed to get into the Atlantic and that there has been an equally mysterious "German naval operation in the Indian Ocean". The one specific claim is that a Japanese submarine has called at a German naval base—"in Europe", cording to the Berlin version—and "again set sail for strategic waters".

This much may well be true. It would be no great feat for one of Japan's long-range submersibles, of which she has a dozen or more with cruising ranges of 10,000 miles and up, to start from Singapore, skirt the Cape of Good Hope at a safe distance and turn up somewhere in the South Atlantic, along the west coast or even reach Bordeaux, as the Berlin story hints.

But the military value of such a cruise would be negligible. Its primary purpose—assuming it actually was made — therefore must have been to create material for the propaganda blast loosed on the world's air waves this morning.

The United Nations, it is apparent, are not the only ones assailed by the misgivings and misunderstandings that inevitably plague Allies in a life-and-death struggle of the kind we are fighting now. Japan, friendless in the midst of her broad "Co-prosperity sphere" and separated by the greatest of continents and all the seven seas from her allies, must at times feel terribly alone. Even the Japanese people, fed on a steady mental diet of assurances that they move from victory to victory and that the virtue of the emperor assures their final triumph, like the further assurance that they are not one people against all the world.

The factors making for division among the United Nations are grave enough. The task of keeping them spiritually together in the common purpose of ending the Nazi and Nipponese aggressions is one that challenges all the statesmanship at their command. If there were any doubts of this the atmosphere surrounding Wendell Willkie's visit to Moscow, the formal politeness of his hosts, the constant questions about the second front, the mounting evidence of Russia's disappointment in the aid of her allies have dispelled them.

But at least none of the allies has to contend with the dreadful feeling of physical isolation that must beset the Japanese. Today's blare of trumpets about the submarine that sneaked into the Atlantic only serves to emphasize the strange nature of the German-Japanese alliance, between two powers that have no really effective channels for the direct exchange of aid.

AT THE CAPITOL

"My Favourite Blonde"

Bob Hope, king of the comics, needs every gag he's got to get him out of trouble in his latest and fastest Paramount film, "My Favorite Blonde," the riotous spy chase opus that opened last night at the Capitol Theatre. Unquestionably the funniest film in the long line or Hope hits, the picture owes much of its hilarity to blonde and beautiful Madeleine Carroll, not to mention the part played by a penguin named Percy.

Heading the heavies as the boss Nazi spy is Gale Sondergaard. Her partners in crime include George Zucco, Lionel Royce, Walter Kingsford, Victor Varconi, and Otto Reichow, as villainous a crew as ever sent shivers down a film fan's spine. Sidney Lanfield directed.

"My Favorite Blonde" is exciting film fare, fast, furious and funny. It's a typical "Bob Hope" entertainment with the added attraction of Madeleine Carroll who once again proves herself to be as excellent a comedienne as she is a dramatic actress.

"West of Tombstone"

One sure way to produce a rip-roaring, rootin' bootin' western adventure is to put Charles Starrett, Russell Hayden and Billy, the Kid together on the same screen! And that's just what Columbia Studios have done with "West of Tombstone." Directed by Howard Bretherton, the new hit opened last night at the Capitol Theatre, packing more, excitement in its sixty minutes than any action film we've seen in a long time.

All of the performances are above par, with the work of Starrett, Hayden, Cliff Edwards and Gordon DeMain standing out above the others.

The 7th chapter of the thrilling serial "Spy Smasher" and a fun cartoon make a pleasing week-end bill for all.

AT THE BELLE

"Wild Bill Hickok Rides"

Those are notched six-shooters Bruce Cabot is wearing as Wild Bill Hickok in Warner Bros. "Wild Bill Hickox" now on the Belle Theatre screen.

They originally belonged to the famous marshal and were loaned to Bruce for use in the picture by William S. Hart, whose hobby is collecting authentic firearms of famous characters of the early-day West. His collection numbers several hundred pieces.

Stars of Stage in Film

Two stars of the legitimate theatre are featured in "Thru Different Eyes," the romantic murder mystery now showing as the companion feature. They are Frank Craven and June Walker. Appearing with them in the 20th Century-Fox film are Mary Howard, Donald Woods, Vivian Blaine, George Holmes and Jerome Cowan.

"Wabbit Who Come to Supper" a color fun cartoon completes the program.

"This Above All," Timely

Hailed by the critics as one of the great novels of our generation, and America's Number One Best-seller for many months, Eric Knight's "This Above All," has at last been brought to the screen by 20th Century-Fox, and arrives at the Belle Theatre this week-end.

Co-starring Tyrone Power and Joan Fontaine, the film was produced by Darryl F. Zanuck, Academy Award producer, under the directional aegis of Anatole Litvak. The screenplay was fashioned by R. C. Sherriff, famed author of "Journey's End."

Telling the story of two young lovers caught in the turmoil of war in Britain, "This Above All," has aptly been termed "the first great love story of our generation." It takes the two principal character through a great emotional crisis, which every man and woman is facing today, and brings them through to a decision which is fundamentally vital for the continuance of their happiness together.

Featured in the cast of the film are Thomas Mitchell, Henry Stephenson, Nigel Bruce, G. Cooper, Philip Merivale, Sara Allgood, and Alexander Knox. Their performances have been acclaimed by previewers as outstanding.

Fresh from his triumphs in "Son of Fury" and "A Yank In The R. A. F.," Power is said to turn in the finest dramatic performance of his career, while Joan Fontaine, as the young W. A. A. F. recruit, demonstrates conclusively why she was awarded the Academy Award for the best performance by an actress for 1941.

"This Above All" has been faithfully brought to the screen, with all of its dramatic and emotional values intact. Producer Zanuck has seen to it that the story retains all the elements which made it so great a success in novel form. Already adjudged a great film, it is bound to be reckoned among the best of the year.

"This Above All" is a stirring story of love in this war-shadowed generation. Movie-goers are assured of a tremendous emotional experience, when they visit the Belle Theatre this week-end.

A funny Terrytoon color cartoon "All About Dogs" and the Belle News of the World will also be exhibited. On Saturday matinee a new chapter of "The Sea Raider" serial will be presented. Continuous shows will prevail Saturday.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was the last one down to breakfast, saying, Yee gods this coffee's cold. If there's one way of starting the day wrong, it's with a cup of cold coffee, and this coffee is as cold as a sargent's morning smile to his sleepy men. How do you expect me to go through the day scattering sunshine and cheer if you start me off with a cup of coffee with little chunks of ice floating around in it? he said.

Now William dont exaggerate, ma said. I pored your coffee because I thought I heard you coming down a little while ago, she said, and pop said, Well I wish you only thought you'd pored the coffee. When coffee ceases to be hot it ceases to be coffee, that's an old law of physics, he said.

It's a new law of your old imagination, that's what it is, ma said. And anyway, excessive heat is apt to burn the interior membranes of the mouth, any doctor will tell you that, she said, and pop said, Extreme, cold is apt to chill the tonsils, any iceman will tell you that.

Now really, William, I mean really, there's one thing I'd like you to explain to me if you think my faltering femnine intelligence can stand the strain, ma said. Yesterday morning you let your steaming cup of coffee get as cool as a cucumber while you lurked behind your paper but when I pointed out to you a few times what was happening, you snapped back that it was your coffee and that was the way you liked it. Now please explain that, she said, and pop said, The explanation is simple. A man enjoys suffering by his own negligence, but when suffering is thrust upon him the game loses all its sense of sport. Now how about a nice cup of membrane burner? he said.

Meaning hot coffee, and ma pored it for him and pop left it there and got in back of his paper.

REMEMBER WITHOUT WANTING

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER THREE
Doubts and Fears

Time moved too slowly that week. Judith ceased to plan and decided not to write her parents that she was coming home the following week-end because of the persistent and disturbing hope that Max would want to see her then. In anticipation of Friday evening she was impatient and restless and—a little frightened. For there was something frightening about Max, a power in him that made her less of the self-possessed girl she had been. Her mind turned to clothes and the probable place where he would take her to dine.

Would she be found wanting? That had never occured to her before in her friendship with the boys at home and the young men she had met in New York she had never tried to be other than completely herself. No one had ever mattered very much. No one before had ever sent sparks flying across her mind, lighting her imagination. Never before had her own face interested her so much—because it was a face that Max would see and study and either accept or reject.

Giles Benson, the advertising manager, a small, dynamic man invariably informal with his staff, rode down on the elevator with her on Wednesday evening.

"Swell sketch you turned in yesterday, Judith. Had something special. If you keep it up, I'll have to give you a raise."

She smiled at him. "Thanks. Then I'll have to keep it up, won't I?"

Stepping onto the crowded street she thought, "Emily has moved in and I'm going to meet Tim Stevens. My mind is a sieve."

Emily and Tim and Sid were obviously enjoying a pleasant conversation when she reached the apartment. Emily, in a new gray velveteen frock, was sitting on the divan beside Tim, her face radiant. Judith smiled at Sid, a young man of medium height with close-cropped curly hair, thin lips and kind eyes, and received his mild but always approving smile in return before she turned to Tim.

Emily had been right. He would send you orchids and make you laugh, this tall, black-haired, black-eyed person with a dimple in is chin and mischief in his eyes. All the better things of life, Emily had said, too. Judith sensed in led with irresponsibility, a warmth him vitality and restlessness coupand friendliness to which she responded at once.

You would never spend a quiet evening with him, she thought. You would play with him, play hard and merrily, never pausing to think what you had lost or gained. And though today he sat in her living-room holding Emily's delicate hand, Judith saw him on the beach at Nassau, at a debutante's ball, in a stately dining-room in Connecticut with his family, saw him holding the hands of an assortment of girls in the past and in the years to come.

Emily said, "Judith, this is Tim . . . ."

Tim held out his hand and smiled his easy, charming smile. "Hi, Judith. I delivered your roommate safe and sound." He did not weigh his words, as Max did. "We had one casualty, however. Coming through the lobby of the morgue where Emily's been living. One of her bags came open and I had to go down on all fours to pick up the stuff."

"After that, I would think you'd want a cocktail," Judith said.

"I'll mix them," Tim said. "I'm an old hand. We'll mix them, Emily. Let's go, honey . . . . Where's the kitchen?"

When they went to the kitchen Judith said to Sid, "Aren't you afraid of what they'll bring us to drink? I'm going to freshen up a bit. I won't be long."

She went to her bedroom and changed from her business suit to a black silk frock, hearing through the closed doors Tim and Emily's laughter. Standing still before the dressing table with a lipstick in her hand, she thought, "Will Max and I be like that? Will I wear my feelings on my face as Emily does? Is it wiser to show them or wiser to hide them?"

Tim became a self-designated host while day ended and evening began and the four of them sat around a crystal cocktail shaker. Tim was charming and entertaining, the centre of attention which, Judith felt, he had always been. Unlike Bob, a painful memory, Tim was natural and unself-conscious and Judith sensed in him no design to be in the limelight, but rather that, having been in it so long, he was accustomed to it. Of the many places he had been he spoke with modesty and in his stories invariously poked fun at himself.

"I got stranded in Italy once and in a small city where I was walking down the street I saw that soft drinks were for sale. An American drink was just what I wanted and I went in the store—it was a sort of five and dime place—and tried to buy one. I couldn't speak Italian so I pointed to the bottles and held out Italian money. Nothing doing.

"I didn't know what the clerk was saying but I knew from his wild gesticulations that he wouldn't sell me what I wanted. By this time everybody in the store was cluttered about us and trying to help, but nobody knew English. I couldn't buy a five-cent drink for any amount of money. After a long time the clerk sent out for somebody who could speak English and the chap came running in and explained that you had to buy a certain amount of notions and then they would give you a soft drink. They'd give you one, but they wouldn't sell you one unless you bought a lot of safety pins and elastic and stuff. So I bought a lot of junk and they gave me a drink and everybody stood about gawking and grinning while I drank it."

"How did you happen to be stranded?" Sid asked, drawing in on his pipe.

"I missed my ship and had a wooping good time for a few days with practically no money. More cocktails, folks?"

Fannie announced dinner then and they went into the dinette where candlelight shed a pale radiance over silver and lace and autumn flowers.

It was in the soft candlelight that Judith saw Tim and Emily sweet, intimate glances. Tim's glance was as warm and as tender as Emily's. That it was also sincere comforted her as she thought, "He's in love with Emily-terribly in love with her. Will Max and I be in love? What is it to be in love like that?"

After dinner Tim and Emily did not linger long. They departed like two excited children going to their first picnic.

Sid laughed his quiet laugh. "He's a sort of tidal wave, but he's very likable. Are you sure you didn't want to go with them?"

Judith smiled. "Do you think we were wanted?"

There was no strain in talking to Sid who was like a gentle, older brother and she was certain he had never had a romantic thought about her. Presently he lighted his pipe again, crossed his legs and spoke of his family, friends of her family in Clinton for many years, of books, or current world events and an amusing episode at his office.

Usually an evening with him not only relaxed her but added to her knowledge, a mutually satisfactory evening because Sid liked to talk and seemed disinclined to broaden his circle of acquaintances. But tonight Judith's thoughts drifted and several times she had to call herself to strict attention. Several times, too, she thought, "I'm not listening. I wish he'd go," and felt ashamed.

She was asleep when Emily came in. So much time was lost in awakening Emily in the morning that there was time neither for breakfast nor conversation. Downtown they parted, Emily seeming to feel her way rather than see it. Later in the morning she called Judith, saying, "Tim will be with his family tonight so I'll meet you at our little tea room for dinner."

She was late and sweetly apologetic. Sitting opposite Judith in the small attractive place, she said, "I've been half asleep all day. I know I shouldn't be out so late during the week. Tim doesn't have regular office hours. It's any time he gets there. But last night, Judith, we had such a gorgeous time. You liked him, didn't you? And Sid liked him. You'd think he'd be spoiled with all he's had, but he isn't at all. When you've always had a lot, you take it for granted."

Judith thought, "This is Thursday and tomorrow night I'll see Max Worthington. Will I know why first impression was like a terrific impact? Will I ever know? I couldn't fail in love with Tim, and Emily couldn't fall in love with Max. Perhaps you never know why."

Emily said, "And I won't be in town over the week-end. Tim's calling for me after work tomorrow and I'm spending the week-end with the Alexanders."

The Alexanders, Jim and Lois, were a conservative young married couple who had liked Emily since she had worked for Jim two years ago. They had been instruments in placing her in her present position and who frequently invited her up to their charming Connecticut house.

Judith said, smiling, her voice conspiciously quiet and low in comparison to Emily's excited one, "A week-end with the Alexanders is also a week-end with Tim."

"Yes. They live only a few miles apart and Lois' mother and Tim's mother have known each other for ages. That—that helps a lot. Otherwise Mrs. Stevens may think I'm something Tim—well, something he picked up."

"You're not worrying, Emily?"

"Worrying?" She laughed. "I should say not! I'm too happy. I've never been so happy." Happy she looked, though there were faint shadows beneath her wide brown eyes and her thin hand, stirring the coffee, shook ever so slightly.

Judith wanted to say, "Emily, I met Max Worthington the day Phyllis and Ames sailed and I've scarcely thought of anything else sanely since. We met, he called me and I want tomorrow night more than I've ever wanted any night in my life. And yet I'm afraid. I'm afraid of his taking possession of me. I'm afraid of myself."

Junior 'Y' Girls Present Awards

Thursday night at the Y.M.C.A., the Girls' Summer Fun Club wound up its activities for the season with a supper. Chairman for the evening was Eleanor Legate, girl leader of the section.

Following supper, which was served by the Women's Auxiliary, a good sing song was enjoyed with Mrs. Grace Calvert at the piano and J. E. Shortt as song leader. Mr. Alec Gordon showed moving pictures, including his well known "A Day at Belleville Boys' Camp" and Miss Joyce Cooper favored the group with two song and tap dance routines. Ed. Shortt, Physical Director provided the humor of the evening with monologues.

During the summer the girls were divided for competition into four teams, their final standing being . . . Betty Holway's team, 218 points, Joyce Cooper's team, 214 points, Barbara Forhan's team, 164 points and Patsy Neal's team 154 points.

Letter awards for sewing on windbreakers were awarded to the winners as follows—Betty Holway, Patricia Lizotte, Betty Snare, Shirley Clarke, Corrine Spring, Kathie Cameron, Barbara Diment, Audrey Stewart, Betty Flynn, Donna Flynn, Patricia Kellett, Theresa Lorimer, Loyola Chapelle, Dorothy Flintoff, Agnes O'Connor, and Marjorie Ingraham.

The supervision of the activities of the Club was done by four of the members of the High School Girls' Gym Class Shirley Oliphant, Yvonne Younghusband, Mary Wright, and Arlie Gilbert, as a voluntary service to the Y, and they were presented with coveted Service Recognition Award Crests by the General Secretary on behalf of the Association, while he expressed appreciation of their work.

A fine, noisy, happy evening was spent, and the season was closed in fine style.

Most of the girls will carry on in the regular Fall and Winter program of the Girls' Department of the Association which will get under way in full as soon as the Gymnasium and Swimming Pool redecoration is completed.

NO ORNAMENTAL LIGHTING PERMITTED

In co-operation with Hydro Electric authorities regarding the recent order-in-council pertaining to the elimination of store and store front lighting, Belleville police have been asked to make observations regarding store lighting following closing hours, Acting Chief Harman stated today.

"Our night men have been asked to make observations of store and advertising lighting while patrolling their respective downtown beats. Besides all outside lighting, no ornamental inside lighting for advertising or such purposes is allowed and this includes such ornamental neon lighting as is found around store clocks. Such lighting is unlawful either inside or outside," warned Acting Chief Harman, following conference with Hydro officials today.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED.

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store, and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

VAUGHAN NAMED CHAIRMAN OF C. N. R. BOARD

Succeeds S. J. Hungerford as Director Who Retires From Board

HUNGERFORD'S SERVICE

Ottawa, Sept. 25.—(CP)— R. C. Vaughan, president of Canadian National Railways, has been appointed chairman of the Railways' Board of Directors, succeeding S. J. Hungerford, whose term as a director expires Sept. 30, Munitions Minister Howe announced today in his capacity of Acting Minister of Transport.

The Minister also announced reappointment of James A. North of Toronto and Wilfrid J. T. Gagnon of Montreal, as members of the Board for a further three-year term beginning October 1.

When Mr. Vaughan became C.N.R. president in July 1941, R. Hungerford continued as chairman of the Board. He reached the age of 70 last July 16, and with his impending retirement from the Board, Mr. Vaughan becomes a Board Member and Chairman.

Although ending his active connection with the C.N.R. Mr. Hungerford will continue to act as President of National Railways Munitions Ltd., a government owned company engaged in manufacture of munitions for the Department of Munitions and Supply.

Trenton and District

Windstorm Causes Damage at Wooler

Trenton, (Special) Sept. 26 — A cyclone of intense velocity struck the district just north of Wooler about 6 a.m. Thursday morning doing a considerable amount of damage. On the farm of Charles McColl about forty rods of stump fence was torn up and several huge basswood trees completely uprooted. A silo on the Bryant farm was destroyed and on the farm of W. J. Stacey a barn blown over. Heavy rain followed the cyclone and much damage was done to apples and other fruits.

Mr. Mark Tripp, local merchant has left by plane for Calgary and Jasper Park to spend a much needed holiday. Mr. Tripp has been ill for several weeks past.

Drift on Raft For Three Weeks

Bridgetown, Barbados, B.W.I., Sept. 25. (CP)—Seventeen American men, women and children of missionary families have reached safety here after drifting on a raft from their torpedoed ship for nearly three weeks every day of which they prayed and sang hymns led by children.

A mere announcement of the arrival of 17 fatigued survivors last Friday night was made Saturday, but not until last night did authorities identify the group, whose full stories were not available until several days' convalescence in the local hospital.

There were four children, and it was they who kept spirits from flagging during the days of drifting. At times the party's plight seemed hopeless, but the children did not falter. Hymns and prayers kept them going.

Mrs. Ethel Bell of the Missionary Alliance, New York City, was one of the group, and with her were her children Mary and Robert.

"They kept us going", one member of the crew said of the children. "They sang every day and were always completely cheerful, and they maintained faith in God all the while'.

Carol Shaw, seven years old, and her brother, Richard, of Pawnee City, Nebraska lost their mother and sister as their vessel went down fast after the torpedoing. Their father also is missing but was believed safe on another raft.

McAllister Elects Trial by Jury

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., revealed in City Police Court, held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here today, that 36-year-old Glen A. McAllister, Montreal man charged with the breaking and entering of the Elite Jewelry store here, had been transferred to Toronto for trial.

"McAllister revealed he would elect trial by jury so I transferred him to Toronto where he will be first tried for being found in the possession of a quantity of diamond rings knowing the same to have been stolen", Mr. Donnan informed His Worship. McAllister was granted a postponement in the breaking, entering and theft charges until the Toronto trial has been disposed of. When arrested in Toronto, McAllister is alleged by police to have been found in possession of a large quantity of diamond rings. Previously over $500 worth of diamond rings had been stolen from the Elite Jewelry store by a "smash and grab" robber.

'Freezing Quite Hard' Says Bancroft Story

Autumn weather has descended in real earnest to the northern part of the county, it is revealed by Mr. B. Blatherwick, village postmaster at Bancroft who this morning reported that for the past several nights it had "frozen quite hard", in his part of the county.

Residents in Bancroft quite generally have started their stoves and other heating equipment in their dwellings with some families already having two stoves going. Indicative of the cool weather being experienced in the northern part of the county is the fact that on Thursday afternoon several flurries of snow were observed in Bancroft.

Six Appointed To Information Board

Ottawa, Sept. 25 (CP)—Appointment of six men—one of them an American—to executive positions with the new Wartime Information Board headed by Charles Vining of Montreal, was announced by the Board today.

They are:

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 25 (AP)—Stock market followers were unable to resist the temptation to cash in some of their profits today.

While small advances were widely distributed at the opening in active dealings, the pace soon slowed and the best that could be said of the list was that it was irregularly higher near the fourth hour.

At the start a number of stocks posted new tops for the year or longer before slipping. Holding their own were General Motors, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Santa Fe, Pennsylvania, Southern Railway Pfd., Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, J. I. Case, Douglas Aircraft, DuPont, Dow Chemical, Kennecott and Sperry. Intermittent laggards included Youngstown Sheet, American Telephone, Union Pacific and Westinghouse.

Most Canadian stocks moved to higher ground. Canadian Pacific, Dome Mines, Lake Shore gained 1-8 and McIntyre 1-2 point.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept .25. (CP)—Trade continued at a slower pace on Toronto Exchange today. Among newcowers was C.P.R. on a half-point rise. Ford B touched a new high for the year at 18 3-4, up 7-8. Bell Telephone added 1 to its opening advance of 2 and touched 133.

Golds were mostly improved with Base Metals irregularly higher. Steep Rock, yesterdays feature, lost part of its gain with a 2-cent dip. Ventures lost 5. Waite Amulet, International Nickel and Pend Oreille were higher.

Golds held around their early morning levels, 2 to 5-cent advances showed for Chesterville, East Malartic, Hollinger, Kerr Addison and Malartic Goldfields. Lake Shore was down ten.

Military Miracle Being Wrought At Stalingrad

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

A military miracle hardly less startling than those of Verdun and Dunkirk has been wrought by the Russians at Stalingrad. Even its ultimate fall cannot detract from the fact that it has endured more than thirty days under all the massed power in men, armor and planes Hitler could bring to bear against it.

Russian valor has never been questionable; but Stalingrad has written a new epic of heroism into history. Supreme devotion by soldiers and citizens alone could account for the fact that the ruins of a once great, modern, industrial city still are blazing defiance at the foe from every rubble pile, every shattered doorway or window, every gutter or sewer manhole, weeks after Hitler decreed the capture.

Yet the story that historians ultimately will tell of that fight probably will give chief credit for that miracle to something other than Russian valor. It will go to Mother Volga, the great river that flows on to the sea below the cliffs on which the blood-bathed city stands. It is the shelter of her mighty arm, thrown about Stalingrad from north to south, that has balked Nazi striking power so long, forced Nazi reversion to the bloody business of frontal attack.

Thwarted by Volga.

Elsewhere in this war except when it reached the North Sea and English Channel, that Made-in-Germany juggernaut has relied on panzer break-throughs to spread confusion and cripple communications far in the rear of the main objective, be it fort or city. Mother Volga has prevented that at Stalingrad. If the mighty river was loved before by all Russians as the legendary guardian of their homeland, she will be worshipped hereafter if Stalingrad defies all precedent and survives the Nazi bludgeoning.

In Poland, the Low Countries, France, the Balkans, the Nazi war technique has never varied. It was: Cut off, confuse and capture. The German march across Russia saw that war pattern develop time after time against cities and against even Russian armies in the field.

On the Volga at Stalingrad, however, that Nazi victory pattern has not availed. They could not surround the city. Though it lacked natural defence terrain to the north, the west and the south, once the Don was passed by the foe, it was and still is secure to the east.

Mother Volga offers more than a broad water hazard. East of the wide stream from well above the long and narrow city that crowns the cliffs on the west bank to far below it lie the islands of the Volga bend. They are low-lying for the most part. In the flood season, when the whole drainage flow of Central Russia from the Vladai Hills comes down the Volga, they are virtually submerged. Even in the dry season they are criss-crossed by Volga estuaries, bordered by swamps.

Tremendous Obstacle.

There is no hamlet of any consequence shown on recent maps east of the river in the vicinity of Stalingrad except the village of Krasnaya Sloboda, and almost no roads. The Volga islands are all but uninhabited. They are commanded by the bluffs west of the river where the city stands and have afforded Nazi attackers no means of complete encirclement of sites for batteries.

That the river has been and still is a tremendous obstacle to the Germans is further emphasized by Moscow reports that the Red naval flotilla in the Volga has joined in the conflict to shower Nazi attack lines with shell fire. Those gunboats or light cruisers must have steamed up the Volga from the Caspain to deny the German claim of having choked off Volga traffic wholly by air attack even without capture of stalingrad.

Perhaps the most astonishing element of the Stalingrad battle as its thirtieth day waxed and waned, however, was a rising chorus of confidence in the Russian press that it could and would hold out. That is a new note. On just what it is based is far from clear as there still seems no sound reason at this distance to hope for ultimate Nazi defeat in the effort to capture the shattered city.

It may turn on Russian counter-attacks northwest of the city, which even Berlin accounts confirm, but say have been repelld. Indications are, however, that Russian reserves are coming into action there probably from the north and east and are inching forward in the Don-Volga corridor to threaten the outflanking of German supply and communication lines well in the rear of the main point of attack that has reached the streets and buildings furthr south.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

It is Unwise to Delay Necessary Operations

A patient consults his physician and is told that the symptoms are due to gall bladder trouble. To make sure of the diagnosis a gall bladder dye test with X-rays is made and the patient is advised to have the gall bladder removed. Naturally the patient wishes to avoid the operation and asks whether treatment by medicine and diet would not give relief and perhaps tide him over so as to avoid operation.

The physician may, perhaps, be willing to try non-surgical treatment for a while as he remembers that most all gall bladder operations give satisfactory results but there are some which do not. He therefore lays out a diet which involves eating small meals four or five times a day, and cutting down on certain foods which irritate liver and gall bladder.

What happens in these cases?

In some cases the small meals, the cutting down on fat foods, the daily walk, and perhaps some medical treatment such as bile salts, gives considerable relief. In others, despite faithful following of the physician's instructions and in a great many because they do not faithfully follow instructions, the symptoms are not relieved. Some of these patients keep consulting their physician until he finally has to tell them that operation is necessary to give relief.

Unfortunately, by this time the condition of the patient is such that operation may not give very satisfactory results and the physician (and sometimes the patient) blames himself for delaying the operation.

Dr. Walter Alvarez, Mayo Clinic, a few years ago pointed out that after suffering for years with a peptic ulcer, the patient when he undergoes operation expects the operation to not only give him an absolutely new stomach but clear up anything and everything else that ails him.

Similarly with the gall bladder patient. By the time the operation is performed neither he nor the gall bladder and other organs are in as good condition as they were some months or years previously.

The lesson is that when the gall bladder is giving constant trouble, if the physician advises operation it is better to undergo same than delay it.

In acute cases operation is immediate or delayed but a few days.

NAZIS FIND ONLY BURNING OIL FIELDS

Undoubtedly the German propaganda bureau thought that a picture showing Nazi troops in the Russian Caucasus, would have a stimulating effect on German morale. This is the first picture showing Nazis at the Maikop oil fields. However the ominous black smoke clouds in the background are the unspoken words of their hollow conquest. Untamable fires rage where the vital stores of oil once spouted. Russia's "scorched earth" policy is being carried out to the letter.

Flying Fortress Victor in Duel To Death With Jap Flying Boat

By EUGENE BURNS
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

An Air Base in the South Seas, Sept. 24 (AP).—Giants of the air—20-ton Flying Fortresses and Japanese four-engined Kawanishi flying boats—have clashed in monster dogfights over the South Seas.

One battle lasted 25 minutes and carried over an area of 60 miles or more. About 1,500 rounds of .50-calibre machine-gun ammunition were fired with "at least 50 per cent" hitting their target.

Two enemy planes were scored as positives, definitely believed to have been destroyed. A third fled into the clouds. The Americans returned to their bases without casualties.

The air battles occurred during the past month.

Usually the story of fighting aloft is pursuit plane against pursuit, or pursuits against bombers. Rarely is it bomber against bomber.

The pilots, whose planes each reported a positive kill are Capt. Walter Lucas of Starkville, Miss., and Lieut. James W. Lancaster of Temple, Texas.

Capt. Lucas told of a death struggle in which the bomber and flying boat got so close "it was just like formation flying".

Both these ships were hundreds of miles from their bases.

"We sighted the Jap off to our side going in the opposite direction and up around 8,000 feet," Lucas said.

Lucas' Flying Fortress nosed around and started for the flying boat. Coming up from below and to one side, he surprised the enemy and started firing at the maximum range.

Evasion Tactics Futile.

Immediately, the flying boat started weaving from side to side, trying to swing its stinger—a cannon in the tail—across the Flying Fortress. Lucas closed in to 1,000 yards.

"First we would be on one side and then on the other," he explained. "The Jap was trying to get down to the water and he would sideslip under us. Once we were almost wing tip to wing tip."

For 25 minutes the giants slugged it out, trading blows in a death battle which was carried on for 60 miles. The flying boat, with machine guns firing wildly, twisted and turned, trying to throw off the persistent army bomber.

Finally the enemy's side gun was silenced and his No. 4 engine, knocked out. Then two more engines were hit and set ablaze.

The enemy flying boat soon landed near one of the islands and turned toward shore. As he was taxiing for shelter, Capt. Lucas flew low across his wing. As the Fortress pulled up, the tailgunner sprayed the Jap craft with his .50 calibre bullets. The plane exploded and burned.

Although the Japs fired until they were forced down, they hit the Fortress only nine time, one of the hits being a cannon shell which tore a hole in the bomber's right wing. None aboard the Fortress was injured.

Washington Spotlight

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Sept. 25 —(CP)— Remember the Gremlin, the whimsical little plague of all pilots the tiny elf-like creature who plugs carbueretors, ices wings and generally makes life miserable for fliers?

Well, Walt Disney is trying to put him on paper and he isn't having much success. In fact, the creator of Mickey Mouse, Pinnochio, Donald Duck, Pluto, Bambi and the Seven Dwarfs has tried 12 times and 12 times he has failed.

So. Flt.-Lt. Roald Dahl, assistant air attache at the British embassy here, will go to Hollywood one of these days to assist him in producing a film about the whole Gremlin family—Papa Gremlin, Mama Gremlin Son Widget and Daughter Flippity-Gibbet.

Dahl, who wrote the scenario and who will donate all profits to the Royal Air Force Benevolent Fund, says a genuine gremlin is a bulbous-bodied little fellow. He has spindly legs in big-topped suction boots that hold him to the surfaces of a plane; a knotty, round head with stubby horns. He wears a derby hat, a boxy red jacket and corduroy trousers.

Incidentally, Dahl claims the gremlin is really a friend of all fliers and that his picture will prove it.

Russia Snubbed.

One of the great mysteries around Washington is what happened to Russia's offer to assist in expediting the United States rubber program and why wasn't it accepted.

Last February the Russian government offered to send to Washington experts and formulas on synthetic rubber. No reply was sent to this offer although Russia has been producing synthetic rubber for years and the United States knows little about the complex process.

"Had the offer of the Soviet government been accepted," the Baruch Committee which studied the rubber situation reported, "it is conceivable that plants for producing rubber might well be on the way to completion."

Although Russia in mid-August suggested again that it send the information, the offer still has not been accepted and nobody seems to know why.

One possible explanation is that the Russian process uses alcohol from grains whereas the American process and also the Canadian have a petroleum base. Proponents of the alcohol process have been unable to persuade Washington officials of its superiority over the oil process.

Japs Boast.

The Japanese are losing no time establishing their new cultural order in the territories they have conquered. Their radio asserts that only two languages will be heard in Asia and Europe when the war ends—Japanese and German.

Tokyo has sent 30,000 men and women into the conquered Pacific countries to indoctrinate the native population. Their first order always is that only the Japanese language may be used in schools.

Mr. Smith Stays Home.

Michigan, which has produced such political figures as Father Coughlin and 80-year-old Governor Dickinson, nearly fell for one of the champion rabble-rousers of the country, Gerald L. K. Smith. In the primary election last week, the former preacher and disciple of Huey Long came close to winning the Republican nomination for the United States Senate. For weeks he campaigned the state, haranguing every cross-roads on a one-man platform of "Tires for all." He was defeated.

Smith has been a national figure for years and in 1936 was mixed up with Father Coughlin and the other leaders of the "funny money" third party.

News Notes.

The United States Office of War Information has opened a branch office in Dublin under Richard Watts, former drama critic of the New York Herald-Tribune. It is the first time a member of the United Nations has attempted to tell the people of neutral Eire about the Allied cause . . . . Vice Admiral John M. Towes, recently appointed commander of the air forces of the United States Pacific Fleet, once held the world's endurance record for seaplanes. It was six hours and 10 minutes.

War Secretary Henry Stimson celebrated his 75th birthday this week. The Roosevelt cabinet is beginning to resemble the supreme court when the President said its members were too to serve: Stimson, 75; Hull, 71; Knox, 68; Ickes, 68; Jones, 68.

Col. Caleb V. Haynes, head of the United States Bomber Command in China, is a grandson of one of the original siamese twins brought to the United States by P. T. Barnum in 1830, Chang and Eng. After years in the show business they married two North Carolina girls and settled down on adjoining farms in Surry County, N.C.

Congress is beginning to get jittery about Claire Boothe Luce, Republican candidate for a House seat from Connecticut. Imagine the author of "The Women" sitting in the House of Representatives! What she did with a few feminine weaknessess is nothing to what she could do as an inside observer of Congress.

REDS CAPTURE STRATEGIC POST AT STALINGRAD

BRITAIN'S MIGHTY SEA ARMADA POWERFUL AS EVER

Repeated German Counter-Attacks Declared Repulsed

Soviet Communique States More Than 3,000 Nazis Killed In Day's Fighting PRISONERS TAKEN

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Sept. 26 —(AP)— The Russians announced the recapture of strategic positions both within besieged Stalingrad and upon the German left flank today and the roll of invasion dead was reported increased by about 3,000.

Repeated German counter-attacks against the Red army striking northwest of Stalingrad for relief of the battle-worn garrison were declared repulsed with heavy losses.

"One Soviet infantry unit killed about 300 Germans and captured 200,000 rounds of ammunition," the noon communique said. "In another sector Soviet troops repulsed an enemy counter-attack, advanced and occupied more advantageous positions.

"In this engagement 600 Germans were killed and 10 tanks, 12 guns and several mortars and machine-guns were destroyed."

Recapture of a valuable position by Stalingrad's Soviet street fighters had been announced at midnight.

Many Prisoners Taken

"In one fierce street engagement," it was added, "a guards unit destroyed 10 enemy tanks and killed 285 Germans. In another sector our troops repulsed an attack, wiping out a company of enemy infantry and capturing six machine-guns, six mortars, 130 rifles and a quantity of ammunition."

Give Germans Stiffest Opposition

Russians within Stalingrad, fighting from make-shift barricades, fire-blackened buildings and foxholes in the damp earth, were undoubtedly giving the Germans their stiffest opposition in toe-to-toe slugging in this war.

The army newspaper Red Star said German forces were wearing out and it was possible for the Russians to hold them.

Heavy squadrons of the German Air Forces switched their attacks to Volga River crossing, evidently fearing to rain more bombs upon the complicated battle area lest they annihiliate their own ground detachments.

Nazi dive-bombers maintained their raids upon Russian-held sectors both by darkness and daylight. Despite both the high-altitude and low-level assaults, dispatches stressed that food and munitions continued to flow to the defenders from supply stores on the east bank of the Volga.

Red army forces in a sector of the battle front northwest of Stalingrad were credited with repelling 32 German counter-attacks within a period of 48 hours.

Perform as "River Tanks"

The Red navys Volga River flotilla, performing as one dispatch said "like river tanks," went into

The Red navy's Volga River flolery, armored concentrations and troops.

A Russian gun battery was declared to have knocked out about 100 Nazi tanks and more than 100 troop-laden trucks in the last 20 days.

The gravity of the defence position anew against German artillstand and counter-attacks—was emphasized by Red Star in a graphic sentence on the ebb and flow of the scores of engagements which go to make up the whole of the confused battle.

"The Fascists are crawling ahead across mountains of bodies and burned tanks, it said.

Heavy fighting persisted in the Upper Don theatre. Dispatches said the Germans launched a four-pronged attack south of Voronezh, 300 miles northwest of Stalingrad, with one regiment striking in each direction. The manoeuvre was declared unsuccessful.

North of the city the Russians captured an artillery position and turned two captured guns upon the Germans. The Russians said they killed 800 Germans in a day.

Prisoners of war—human trophies always denied to an army in retreat—straggled to the rear under Soviet guards.

R.A.F. Bombers Break up Rally Of Axis Puppet

London, Sept. 26 —(CP)— Striking at a moment of rising Axis dissension in Norway and violent new anti-German outbreaks in Oslo, the R.A.F. made a daring daylight assault upon Nazi headquarters in the Norwegian capital yesterday and sent the followers of Vidkun Quisling's puppet regime scurrying to cover from a nearby rally.

Four raiding British bombers swept in low and dropped their bombs from about 100 feet altitude to score hits on Gestapo buildings, the Air Ministry announced. One British plane was lost and the Air Ministry said tartly that "German allegations that three of the attacking bombers were shot down confirms the effects of the attack."

Quisling, who had summoned members of his Nationalist Socialist Party to the rally in Norway in an effort to quell discontent, denounced the raid in an address before his followers today as one by "R.A.F. murder planes."

Quisling said the raid casualties were four dead and 40 injured. He asked the rally for approval to bury the dead at state expense.

Stockholm dispatches reported that another flight of 25 planes, believed to be British, swept Thursday night across the Swedish west coast, which might well be in the region southwest of Oslo.

The Germans, who have shown increasing nervousness at developments in Scandinavia, immediately pounced upon this incident to broadcast a tirade against what it called "the latest violation of Swedish neutrality by British bombers." The Swedes themselves were verbally attacked last week by the Germans following town elections in which the Communists showed gains and Swedish Nazis lost the last one of their five seats of the country's several hundred.

Swedish Batteries Down Plane.

Exchange Telegraph, British News Agency, said in a Stockholm dispatch that Swedish anti-aircraft batteries were believed to have hit one of the planes engaged in Thursday night's operations and that a protest over their appearance would be made to Britain.

The connection between this action and the small-scale raid on Oslo, the first upon the Norwegian

Four-Day Running Battle With Axis Subs Cost Life of Destroyer Ottawa

By JOHN LEBLANC
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

An East Coast Canadian Port, Sept. 26 (CP)—A four-day running battle with Axis submarine packs in mid-Atlantic cost the life of H.M.C.S. Ottawa, but survivors of the Canadian destroyer who landed here believe the enemy lost heavily for his attack on the convoy the Ottawa was helping to guard.

Some of the U-boats, too, will not be getting back to port, according to the Canadian navy men who lived through two torpedo explosions and hours in the chill, oil-scummed water. They said the escort also took its toll.

Members of the 76 survivors of her crew of 189 told how the Ottawa whose loss was announced Sept. 21 by Navy Minister Macdonald at Ottawa, plunged to the bottom 25 minutes after the first torpedo blow. Struck forward and amidships, she broke in half.

Many Die of Exposure

About two-thirds of her crew survived the blasts but, worn from the days of hard fighting and ceaseless vigil, many slipped to death from life rafts during the four to six hours they drifted before rescue.

In the long battle with the strong Axis forces, merchant ships of the Ottawa's convoy were sunk. The Ottawa herself was carrying 22 British seamen she had rescued from a torpedoed merchantman when she was hit.

"But we got some of the subs, too, though we can't prove it," said Lieut. Dunn Lantier of Montreal.

"Not our own ship," he added, "though the Ottawa had some good tries."

"There was one," chimed in WO. Lloyd I. Jones, a gunner from Vancouver. "We've a pretty good idea we got that one before the old Ottawa went."

Chase Had Some Success

"That's possible" conceded Lantier, a stocky 26-year-old dressed in civies provided by the Red Cross. "At any rate, we gave it quite a kicking around."

So intense was the fighting that, even as the surviving Ottawa men were being picked up by two corvettes in the darkness, other ships of the escort were starting off on a chase after two submarines that had ventured boldly to the surface.

"I think that chase had some success," Lantier said.

And on the morning of the Ottawa's last day, Sept. 13, she had pursued a surfaced U-boat. But it was about 10 miles away on the horizon when sighted, and it submerged before the destroyer could get within range.

That was about 12 hours before the Ottawa was struck, and she was back at her routine convoy post when she became the target.

It was at night, and most of the crew were asleep without warning the first, tohpedo struck, smashing into the port bow just under the No. 1 gun.

Parties rushed below to survey the damage and bring up the wounded. On getting their report, Lt.-Cmdr. C. A. (Larry) Rutherford

Allied Patrols Aided By Artillery Force Japanese to Leave Advanced Positions

TRANSPORTS BOMBED

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Sept. 26 —(CP)— Aggressive Allied patrols, fighting in driving rain and aided for the first time by artillery, have forced the Japanese to withdraw from some of their advance positions in the Owen Stanley mountains north of Port Moresby, Allied headquarters announced today.

It was the first announced retirement on the part of the Japanese in this theatre since they landed at Gona Mission on the southeast coast of New Guinea July 21 and launched an overland push which has been stalled for the last 10 days near Ioribaiwa, 32 airline miles from Port Moresby.

An Allied spokesman warned, however, against undue optimism, declaring the Japanese still were in force in that area and that their movement could not be considered a general withdrawal.

Another local Allied success, meanwhile, was reported in the Salamaua area some 140 miles north of this battle zone. In a sharp counter-attack, a communique said, Allied patrols drove the Japanese from a position near Mubo, 12 miles south of Salamaua.

Announcement of these gains was complemented by a communique from the Navy Department in Washington reporting that United States army bombers had damaged docks and buildings and scored three hits on Japanese transports in attacks on enemy bases and shipping in the Solomon Islands.

The bombing of the transports, off Shortland Island in the Western Solomons, was carried out despite the opposition of 20 enemy fighters, one of which was shot down, the bulletin said.

Japs Still Hold Villages.

The Japanese bases attacked were situated at Gizo Island, in the New Georgia group of the Solomons, and Rekata Bay, on the northern coast of Santa Isabel Island.

The navy communique also disclosed the Japanese still are holding several villages on Guadalcanal Island, 215 miles southeast of Gizo and site of an important, newly-won American base.

Nothing to Indicate Change in the Status Of West African Port

London, Sept. 26 (CP).—The Paris radio reported last night that the "Allies are blockading Dakar" and "will attack it soon", but a fighting French official here said "that's news to us" and there was nothing else to indicate a change in the status of the strategic west African port 1,600 miles east of Brazil.

The German radio has spoken frequently recently of Allied designs on Dakar, but until last night there had been no charge of overt action.

Vichy French sources have complained of a British blockade against Dakar, but they have also boasted of the defences of the African port and ability of French ships to pass through the blockade.

The Paris statement was made by a political commentator identifying himself as Jean Awema.

Two weeks ago the Germans published stories that Britain was practising extensive landing manoeuvres at Gibraltar.

In July, 1940, the Free French, assisted by the British, made an unsuccessful attempt to land at Dakar.

MANPOWER CRISIS IN UNITED STATES IS INDICATED

Heavy Intake Into Armed Forces and Absence of Authority to Allocate Labor Causes

NO FEDERAL AGENCY

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26 — (CP) —Long lines of men in New York this week applying for work in the west coast shipyards of Henry J. Kaiser graphically demonstrated the manpower crisis facing the United States and which many people believe will lead to chaos unless Washington steps in with drastic control measures.

The immediate cause of the crisis is the unprecedented intake of men to the armed forces under the draft law and, at the same time, the absence of any national authority with power to allocate manpower throughout industry and agriculture to take up the slack.

When Kaiser wanted men for his shipyards, he simply combed the east for them, across country and put them to work — there was no Federal agency to which he could apply for the thousands of men he wanted with any hope of having his employment needs satisfied and no Federal agency with power to stop him from picking up labor wherever he could find it, no matter what effect it might have on other industries or the war effort as a whole.

No Pirating of Labor

(As a matter of fact, Kaiser's agents were careful not to pirate labor from other war industries and finally his New York employment agency was taken over by the United States Employment Service which, however, lacks legislative authority to order anyone to take a job or forbid him from accepting one.)

There have been plain indications lately that manpower legislation, along the general lines of Canada's Selective Service system, will be passed eventually by Congress. Paul V. McNutt, director of the war manpower commission, has called it "inevitable" and agriculture secretary Claude Wickard this week said it was necessary if a food shortage is to be averted in 1943 through the loss of farm labor to industry and the armed forces.

Need of Distribution.

Although the need of compulsory manpower distribution is admitted on all sides, insiders at Washington predict that nothing will be done until after the November Congressional elections because a "work-or-fight" law passed on the eve of voting would contain too much dynamite to suit the politicians.

At the present time there is no national authority in the United States, except local draft boards and they all lean the same way, that decides whether a man goes into the armed forces or remains at work. The United States plans a combined industrial and fighting army of 65,000,000, or 50 per cent of the population, by the end of 1943, 13,000,000 in the armed forces and 52,000,000 in industry and agriculture.

To give some idea of the magnitude of the American manpower problem, it has been estimated that to replace men inducted into the armed forces and to offset shifts from non-essential to essential work, 18,000,000 workers will be placed in new jobs and 11,000,000 trained for semi-skilled production jobs in the

HEPBURN, CONANT ASK FOR RELEASE OF COMMUNISTS

Tim Buck and 12 Others Who Surrendered to the Police Now Incarcerated

BOARD TO MEET

Toronto, Sept. 26 —(CP)— Premier Mitchell Hepburn and Attorney-General Gordon Conant joined late yesterday in a telegraphic appeal to Dominion Justice Minister L. S. St. Laurent for the release of Tim Buck and 12 other members of the Communist Party of Canada who came out of hiding here yesterday and surrendered to Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

The men who have been sought for more than two years, are now in the Don Jail. Shortly after the 13 surrendered, Oscar Kayne, Communist Party organizer, gave himself up at Windsor, Ont.

The telegram to Justice Minister St. Laurent, signed by Mr. Conant urged "the internment orders be revoked and these men allowed their freedom so that the morale and unity of the nation in the present war emergency may be no longer disturbed by this situation."

Situation Altered is Claim

This was urged "in view of the materially altered situation since the orders were originally made and the recommendation of the parliamentary committee that the ban on the Communist Party be lifted and the avowed desire and intention of these men to co-operate and assist in every way in the prosecution of the war . . ."

In addition to the 14 who gave themselves up in Ontario, William Cecil Ross, alias Cecil Zuken surrendered at Winnipeg. J. L. Cohen, counsel for the men, said he would be brought to Toronto. Leslie Morris, who is also in Western Canada, will also surrender, said Mr. Cohen.

Buck and 12 others met in Mr. Cohen's office shortly before noon yesterday and went in taxicabs to the R.C.M.P. office here. They were transferred four hours later to the Don Jail.

An advisory board under the Defence of Canada Regulations will sit in Toronto next Tuesday morning to consider their cases.

IRRITATED BY STORY

Kansas City, Sept. 26 (AP). — When a patron asked Russell Teel, theatre manager, for a war bond, Teel drove to two widely-separated post-office sub-stations to get him one. The story got in the newspapers, including one in Dayton, O. Yesterday from Dayton came this note: Such stuff as this is one reason we are short of rubber. The law should give you about a $25 fine."

WRANGLING LAWYERS TIRE JUDGE

San Jose, Calif., Sept. 26 —(AP) —Judge William F. James tired of hearing lawyers wrangle over whether the evidence was inconsequential, irrevelant and immaterial in an alimony case. He told the opposing attorneys to return to their offices, study up on the case, and write him letters incorporating their arguments.

ELUSIVE DRAFTEE

Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 26 (CP) — Robert P. Hawkins was arrested twice for failure to answer a draft call and each time wandered unnoticed from the induction centre. Last week he was arrested for the third time and police stood guard while he was given his physical examination. He was turned down and now is in custody for alleged draft evasion.

WORK ON PLAN TO SECURE CARS FOR WAR WORKERS

Transit Controller Faced With Problem Of Getting Co-operation Of Car Owners

FOR TRANSPORTATION

Toronto, Sept. 26 (CP) — Manager Stuart B. Brown of the Transportation Department, Canadian Manufacturers' Association, announced here today the Dominion Transit Controller now is engaged on plans to secure the use of passenger automobiles by co-operative effort of the owners to secure needed transportation for employees to munitions plants.

Mr. Brown also told the 18th. annual business conference of the Canadian Purchasing Agents' Associations here the Transit Controller "has under contemplation an order which would require, subject to a number of exceptions, all carload freight to be loaded to the maximum weight-carrying or cubic space of railway freight cars."

Canadian railways in 1941 carried 57.75 per cent more ton miles of freight than in 1939, which topped the previous peak year of 1928.

Traffic in Canada is still increasing and the peak of production has not yet been reached, although H. J. Carmichael, Canadian Co-ordinator of Production, estimates it will be reached in February, 1943, he said.

Mr. Brown said the Canadian ship building program would likely produce 3,000,000 tons of merchant shipping by the end of 1943, compared with between 23,000,000 and 25,000,000 tons in the United States.

British Subs Sink at Least 5 Supply Ships

London, Sept. 26 —(CP)— British submarines have sunk at last five and probably seven Axis supply ships recently in the Mediterranean and have seriously damaged another, the Admiralty announced today.

The communique said the undersea attacks had dealt "further heavy" losses on enemy sea communication, already hard-pressed to keep Axis armies in North Africa reinforced and supplied in the face of Allied attacks on ships and harbors.

One of the ships sunk and one probably sunk were described as large and all the others as of medium tonnage.

Newly-Discovered Military Service Evasion Fraud Being Investigated

MONTREAL, Sept. 26 — (CP) — The Gazette, in a newspage story today, says "A newly-discovered military service evasion fraud was reported under investigation by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police yesterday with unofficial statements holding that physically unfit persons substituted for service evaders before medical boards."

The story continued: "The Federal police refused to comment upon the investigation but from reliable sources it was learned that one man was under arrest and subject to court prosecution while a second was under qestioning."

"According to reports from usually reliable sources, the substitution fraud had been under investigation for several weeks after it was discovered that an unidentified man, discharged from the army for medical reasons, had come before a medical board in the name of another man of military age who had not yet been called for compulsory service.

"The substitution was furthered by the possession by the fake volunteer of the evader's National Registration certificate. This identification was accepted at face value by the army medical authorities. After the substitute had been rejected, the registration card, the rejection slip and other documents were turned over to the evader who received his volunteer button in due course.

"While the Federal police withheld all statements concerning the case except to admit that two men were being questioned and that one man was under arrest and facing court prosecution, it was learned that the present investigation has failed to show that the substitution fraud is widespread.

"The man under arrest in the case at the present time faces prosecution on a 'holding' charge of having failed to notify the divisional registrar and the Dominion statistician of his change of address while the investigation is being continued.

"Both principals in the case were reported to be residents of a district near Montreal."

Fleet's Losses In Capital Ships Now Replaced

1,200 Naval And Merchant Vessels Lost in Three Years Of War

CANADA'S NAVY GROWS

(By JERRY YALE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

New York, Sept. 26 (AP) — Despite a loss of more than 1,200 naval and merchant vessels in three years, Britain's mighty sea armada is as powerful as ever, thanks to steady replacement of losses, an Associated Press review of announcements showed today.

Approximating 4,000,000 tons, losses in the three-year period were greater than any other country's, but A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, declared early this week the fleet's losses in capital ships, aircraft carriers and cruisers had been replaced. His report apparently supplemented the BBC's announcement a few weeks ago that shipyards had turned out more than 500 warships in 30 months—more than replacing a reported loss of 476 fighting ships.

In addition, British merchantmen, designed to replace an announced loss of 731 cargo carriers, are being delivered 40 days after keel-laying, with 28 recently re-opened yards joining Britain's vast network of maritime production units in the race to strengthen the Empire's might at sea.

War in Europe in 1939 saw Britain's mercantile marine 9,488 ships strong, a total of 21,215,261 maritime tons. Since then, shipyards put 35,000 damaged merchantmen back into service and made 23,000 warship repairs.

Stiffening Britain's maritime spine, Canada's navy has grown from a pre-war total of 15 ships, manned by 1,800 sailors, to a present force of 400 warships, staffed by 41,000 officers and men. Plans for expansion, it is authoritatively announced, will boost that number to 550 fighting ships, with a total man-force of 45,000.

3 Battleships Lost

Britain's losses include three battleships, six aircraft carriers, two battle cruisers, 20 cruisers, 92 destroyers and 44 submarines. The U-boat-sinking of the 42,348-ton Empress of Britain in October, 1940, probably represented the Empire's greatest reported marine loss of the war in point of tonnage.

Records indicate June, 1940, as Britain's costliest month of the war, with 39 warships totalling 113,999 tons, reported sunk. Included were the 20,277-ton Corinthia, then used as an armed merchant cruiser; the 22,500-ton aircraft carrier Glorious; the 13,241-ton converted naval auxiliary Vandyck; and the 16,046-ton Scotstoun, which was the former passenger liner Caledonia.

Six Aircraft Carriers Destroyed

Battleships and battle cruisers destroyed by enemy action include the Royal Oak, Hood, Barham, Repulse and Prince of Wales. Aircraft carriers include the Eagle, Ark Royal, Glorious, Courageous, Hermes and Audacity.

Despite her maritime fatalities, Britain now probably has 15 battleships, 200 destroyers, 200 corvettes, nine aircraft and seaplane carriers, including the 23,000-ton carriers Implacable and Indefatigable due for completion this year, and the Empire's newest battleships, the 35,000-tonners Anson and Howe, both reported ready for action.

Losses Tabulated.

The following tabulation includes British losses in three years of war and denotes, in parentheses, the number of ships for which the total known tonnage is listed:

Class	Number	Tonnage
Battleships	3	96,150	(3)

BLIGHT AFFECTS POTATO YIELD

While the extent of the damage has not as yet been fully estimated, farmers and potato growers on the city market today stated that grubs and blights are taking toll of potato crops.

The early variety escaped the ravages of the disease which has been noted in various parts of the district, but it is feared the late crop will be seriously affected by the scurge.

The blight was caused, it was stated by Department of Agriculture officials today, by a series of foggy nights which started a vine blight, a peculiar disease which settles on the vines and travels downward to the tubes.

Farmers in widely separated parts of the district reported the presence of the blight.

SOLDIER CONVICTED OF FRAUD CHARGES

On charge of fraud preferred in Belleville, Pte. Arthur Barr, of the R. C. O. C., was sentenced to six months at hard labor by Magistrate Browne in Toronto police court this week. Barr was apprehended in Toronto on charges of fraud and later it was disclosed he was wanted in Belleville for the alleged passing of two worthless cheques in local banks. Informations were preferred here by Acting-chief Harman and sent to Toronto where Barr pleaded guilty as charged. The sums in both local incidents of fraud were identical in each case, $10 issued on an Oshawa account.

D. B. DOUGLAS NOW SERGEANT PILOT

Only son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Douglas, Alexander Street, D. B. Douglas received his pilot's wings at a graduation ceremony at No. 13 Service Flying Training School, St. Hubert's, Quebec, on Friday.

Sergeant Pilot Douglas has been in the Royal Canadian Air Force for over a year and spent much of that time as a wireless operator. Recently he remustered as a pilot.

His father, Mr. Douglas, is the Canadian National Railways City Ticket Agent here.

RESERVE ARMY UNITS TO WEAR UNIFORMS

Reserve army units of the city, the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank), the 34th Battery, C. F. A., and the Canadian Woman's Service Force, will wear uniform today, and Monday, Thursday and Saturday of next week in conformance with orders issued by Lieut.-Colonel A. B. Gribble, senior officer of the city garrison.

The troops will wear their khaki in connection with the drive for recruits for all units which begins next week.

HORSE KILLED WHEN STRUCK BY CAR

Wandering at large on Highway No. 33, less than four miles south of Trenton, a horse belonging to Dr. R. C. Titus, Trenton veterinary, was instantly killed when struck by a truck early Friday evening. The animal was apparently grazing alongside the highway and as the south-bound truck approached from Trenton the animal ran out directly into the path of the heavy vehicle, which was driven by Vernon Westfall of Carrying Place. Motorcycle Patrolman W. G. Milton investigated and no charges were deemed necesarry. Later the carcass was removed.

DIM OUT REGULATIONS MUST BE OBSERVED

One local merchant, who forgot to extinguish a single store window electric light, was cautioned by city police early last evening. Merchants who do not co-operate in endeavouring to save Hydro power by eliminating their store window, advertising and ornamental lighting are in for serious trouble, local Hydro authorities warned today. City police were asked to report any future infractions. "Every merchant has received ample warning regarding the new dim-out regulations and subsequent offenders are liable to fines up to $500 upon conviction," warned Acting Chief Harman.

2ND POTATO CROP FROM SAME PLOT

Two crops of potatoes from the same plot of ground in the same season is the unique production story reported by Mr. Cecil Sine, 5th. Concession of Sidney Township. Early last Spring, Mr. Sine planted Cobbler potatoes and after digging them in July for market purposes planted a second crop of Khatadins. The second crop was planted on July 11th. and today Mr. Sine was marketing the second crop of potatoes from the one plot of ground.

SCRAP IRON STOLEN

Another report of scrap iron being stolen came from Prince Edward County this morning when Mr. Clarence Vanclief complained of a quantity of metal being taken from in front of his house without his consent. According to Mr. Vanclief a buyer of scrap metals was reported to be in his neighborhood on Friday afternoon with the iron disappearing from his farm in the absence of the owner.

"It is not the value of the iron that I mind," stated Mr. Vanclief, "it's only the principle of the thing."

Belleville Bowlers Win Top Honors

Belleville lawn bowlers captured all major events at the C.P.R. Recreation Club of Havelock, this week. The Belleville Lawn Bowling Club sent four sets of trebles to the "railway town" and captured the three top honors of the day.

High score and the championship went to Ab. Wonnacott's team, while second in line was Cliff Argue's trio with Clarence Clapp's team third in line. The remaining prize was won by L. Glover's Campbellford trio.

Wonnacott's team received smoker stands; Argue's trio hostess trays and Clapp's team prizes consisted of sandwich trays for each contesting member.

The winning team was composed of Wilf Price, W. J. Davison and Ab. Wonnacott, skip; second, L. E. MacLean, J. Bean and C. Argue, skip; and third D. Roe, Col. Bonisteel and C. Clapp, skip.

Police Court

Magistrate J. L. Lloyd presided over police court in Trenton on Friday afternoon with E. O. Denhan K.C., Crown Attorney, prosecuting. Harry Corby was given 15 days on a charge of theft of money and registration card, etc., from John Knox. A case of vagrancy against the same man was enlarged till October 31. The Magistrate took into consideration his splendid war record of the last Great War, when he was a machine gunner, otherwise his sentence would have been more severe.

Pleads Guilty of Assault

Fred Vardy on a charge of assaulting his wife in which case a knife had been used, pleaded guilty to assault and was ordered to pay costs of $5 and given suspended sentence of one year and bound over in the sum of $200 to keep the peace. A charge against his wife for inflicting grievous bodily harm by stabbing was dropped after the evidence in the first case had been heard as it was evident the husband had been the aggressor.

Two Years for Forgery

Isaac Sewlyeh for forging a cheque last April against LaMorre's taxi was sentenced to two years in Kingston penitentiary. For obtaining the services of a taxi from Trenton to Hamilton on the same date, April 16th., tendering a worthless cheque for same, he was given six months.

Case Enlarged

Douglas Atkinson charged with reckless driving under the code, figuring in an accident wherein Mr. Con VanAlstine had been seriously injured on the 15th of August last, in view of the length of the court the case was enlarged till Oct. 30th., after the first witness had been heard. His counsel, Col. H. J. Smith will then be ready to go on with the case. Atkinson was also charged with driving without a license and on this count was fined $10 and costs.

Charles Hyatt for being intoxicated paid $10 and costs. Ira Mountenay on a charge of disorderly conduct was let go with a warning.

Rentals Case

Orval Cooney was before the court on a breach of regulations of the War Time Prices and Trade Board, and was fined $15 and costs of $6.15, default ten days.

This was the first case in Trenton to come before the Court. Cooney had raised the rent from $8 per month to $12 without permission of the Rent Control Board. Mr. Bernard Collins, K.C. of Belleville, prosecuted for the Board.

Boost Sale of War Savings Stamps By Newspaper Ads

To aid the Government's drive to sell more War Savings Stamps through retail outlets, Christie Brown & Company Limited, have launched an extensive advertising campaign in newspapers right across Canada. The ads. urge the reader to take some change in War Savings Stamps from the grocer regularly.

In commenting on this unusual newspaper campaign, Mr. S. H. Young, Vice-President, said:

"Our Company is 100% behind the drive to sell more War Savings Stamps. Because of our long-standing and friendly relations with grocers in every part of the country, we felt we could be of real assistance to the National War Finance Committee. Our offer to help was promptly accepted and our salesmen now carry books of War Savings Stamps for the convenience of grocers and food distributors in their territories. Naturally, we turned to newspaper advertising as the best means of assisting our grocer friends to sell more War Savings Stamps to their customers."

capital in more than a year, was not clear but the R.A.F. recently has been engaged in a spreading aerial mine-sowing campaign in German shipping lanes. A Vichy broadcast today quoted Stockholm advices as saying two ships had struck mines "laid by British planes" off Sweden's Baltic coast in the last 24 hours.

One thing was clear though, and that was the Germans were finding themselves in deeper hot water in Norway.

With that strategically-located Scandinavian country commanding heightened attention from both Britain and Germany, official Norwegian sources said in London that Quisling's party was so badly split that Gen. Nikolaus von Falkenhorst, Nazi occupation commander, had asked Hitler to dismiss Quisling and fully "Germanize" Norway.

Quislings Split Internally.

The Quislings were reported split internally as well as snubbed by Norwegian labor and industry.

Norwegian industrial associations followed the labor lead, these sources said, in overwhelmingly rejecting Quisling's plan for a co-operative parliament based on the Fascist order.

Even while the Quislings were meeting during the week-end continuing outbreaks were reported in Oslo.

The Norwegian Telegraphic Agency said patriots broke into buildings of the Bislep sports stadium where the Quisling party was forming for a parade and smashed standards, then made a bonfire from stacks of the Quisling newspaper Fritt Folk.

Stadium buildings were reported damaged by fire. A number of arrests were made.

"The Norwegian capital is in a virtual state of emergency," the news agency said. "Patriots are distributing pamphlets in the streets advising the population to boycott the Quisling youth organization and there were numerous fights."

London — (C P) — Bandsman Jack Langley wields a darning needle as deftly as he does his drum sticks. He entered a competition at an industrial exhibition and copped first prize for best darned sock.

GETS SILVER CROSS

London —(CP)— Joyce Fagg, 17-year-old voluntary hospital worker whose prompt action saved a man wounded by German shell fire, has been awarded the Silver Cross of the Girl Guides' Association for gallantry.

Weekly War Commentary

By Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Gwynn

London, Sept. 26 (CP).—There has been no lull in the battle for Stalingrad but there has been a noticeable slowing down of German progress without any apparent reduction in the cost. Although the situation remains extremely critical, it has tended to become more favorable for the United Nations.

Marshal Semeon Timoshenko now appears to be attacking from the northwest to relieve German pressure within the city. If the Nazis cannot increase their rate of progress the question arises of how long will—or can—they continue to expend men and material on an objective that already has lost some of its value.

They have lost time to an extent that must have entirely upset preconceived plans in which siege operations, except at Leningrad, can have played no part.

Although they may have accomplished part of their objective by temporarily closing the Volga to through traffic and limiting the value of Stalingrad as a centre of war industries, it seems probable that by continuing their attempts to capture the city they may damage their own army more than that of their opponents, as well as diverting their force from other purposes.

It may not yet be too late for the Germans to abandon their attempt to take the city by assault. If they are content to establish an investing force and secure the advantages they have already won such a step might enable them to switch their striking force to another objective.

Their thrusts toward the Grozny oilfields and the shores of the Caspian have been seriously held up but reinforcements might set them in motion again. Relation of their effort at Stalingrad also might result in the freer flow of material to the Caucasus front.

Nazi Friction.

Some switch seems entirely possible but the capture of Stalingrad may have become so much a matter of prestige that Hitler would not agree to such a revised course. It almost seems as though this is the case and there have been rumors of friction between Hitler and Field Marshal von Bock which suggest a clash between military and political considerations.

The steady increase in the weight of Soviet counter-attacks, especially northwest of Stalingrad, may seriously complicate von Bock's problems. He apparently must use a substantial part of his force to meet them, especially his panzer troops.

If he is contemplating a switch he is faced by the necessity of leaving not only an investigating force at Stalingrad but also a mobile force to deal with counter-attacks from outside. Nevertheless, it obviously is of great importance for him to set in motion his advance toward the Caspian for unless he can establish air control over this sea route armaments and other supplies from Iran will continue to reach the Russians without much more serious interruption than the freezing of the Volga would have caused normally.

The Caucasus

On the Caucasus front, not only has Russian resistance in the Terek Valley been successful, but at Novorossisk, since that town was captured, the Nazis have made no further progress.

It may be that here Timoshenko's armies have made good from Allied sources their losses in equipment. The Black Sea fleet evidently is still able to operate so the capture of Tuapse remains too important an object to allow the supposition that the capture of Novorossisk was all the Germans hoped to achieve.

Russian pressure at Voronezh and all parts of the front from there through the Leningrad sector appears sufficiently heavy to prevent reinforcements from the north being sent to Von Bock. This pressure also might be increased dangerously at any point that is weakened by snow, which has begun to fall in the north, and rain in the south is likely to add to the Nazi difficulties.

Mobile Columns

On the Egyptian front, lulls continue but whether the full moon will rouse one side or the other into activity is again being discussed. The raid on Gialo Oasis appears to have been a successful harassing operation. The fact that more than 30 enemy airplanes were destroyed on the ground in the area of Bengazi and Barce also shows the [illegible]fective use that can be made of long-distance mobile columns.

Renewed and larger-scale Japanese landings on Guadalcanal Island appear to have led to some heavy fighting which led to no important successes. The appearance of a strong Japanese fleet in the neighboring waters, and its retreat when attacked from the air, isn't easy to interpret.

Possibly it would have taken greater risks if the enemy land forces had captured Guadalcanal airdrome. It seems evident that the Japanese fleet will not now be risked in a decisive naval action unless under cover of a superior shore-based aircraft umbrella.

To keep their fleet in being, ready to fight only when air superiority is assured, must be the fundamental principle of Japanese strategy. Unless her fleet remains formidable Japan cannot hope to retain her hold on her conquests.

Ultimately the United States fleet will be justified in taking greater risks than the Japanese but for the present that balance is too uneven.

Glancing Back 25 Years.

Operations against the enemy forces in German East Africa shared interest toward the end of September, 1917, with the campaign in Flanders where Allied armies made slight advances through the muddy terrain of the Ypres salient.

In the German colonial territory, British forces under Lt.-Gen. Sir J. L. Van Deventer drove enemy troops led by Gen. Paul von Lettow-Vorbeck from the coastal region near Kilwa southward across the Mbemkvro River to points just north of the Portuguese East Africa border.

MANPOWER CRISIS

next sixteen months.

It is generally admitted that chaos would result if anything approaching this employment shift was attempted without strict government supervision and control but so far the power is lacking, except by indirect methods.

Lack of Authority To Shift Labor.

Already there are serious general labor shortages in many parts of the United States but, unlike in Canada, there is no authority with power to shift labor or freeze it. Metal miners in some western states were kept in their jobs by forbidding them to migrate without permission of the United States Employment Service but this was done on a voluntary basis and was an isolated case. Occupational deferment under the draft law also has been used to keep men in specific jobs but only as an expedient.

For the last two or three weeks, the editorial columns of many American newspapers have been holding up Canada's man-power legislation as an example to be followed by the United States. It has been studied from every angle by officials of the Manpower Commission and although conditions vary between the two countries, it is likely that many of its features eventually will be adopted.

Dublin —(CP)— The government has issued an emergency order providing for blackout tests throughout Eire during the winter.

FOUR-DAY

of Montreal, the destroyer's youthful skipper who was subsequently lost, decided the ship would be able to make port, perhaps by limping in stern-first.

Lighting System Not Affected

The destroyer's general lighting system had not been affected by the blast.

"We were almost at a standstill and swinging to port," Lieut. Lantier said, "when we got the second fish. It struck amidships on the starboard side, in the boiler room.

"The ship started to settle and we got the order to abandon ship. She was heeling to starboard when we abandoned her."

In another five minutes, he said, the Ottawa broke in two amidships. Her bow and stern reared up simultaneously, and the two halves went down together, seen dimly by the swimmers in the darkness.

The lights had gone out after the second explosion and both the ships' whale boats had been shattered. Only the Carley floats were left, and the crew managed to get overboard eight of the nine the Ottawa carried.

A corvette racing past tossed some more floats as she joined the hunt for the attacking sub.

"And we'd like to say how grateful we are to the men of that ship", Lantier added. "They were slimming their own chances of life if they should be sunk".

Unprimed Depth Charges.

The young lieutenant also singled [illegible] particular praise WO. Jones, who immediately after the first explosion unprimed all the Ottawa's depth charges. "That saved many lives," he said, "for an exploding depth charge will cave in a swimmer's stomach." The "ash cans" would have detonated as the ship sank.

For his part, Jones handed the biggest bouquet to the ship.

"She stood up under that first explosion like the lady she was," he said, "and we'd have got her into port if the second hadn't come along."

Other officers arriving here were Engineer Lieut. Donald McGillivray of Sarnia, Ont., and Sub.-Lt. T. H. Buchanan of Calgary. Lieut. T. C. Pullen of Oakville, Ont., the ship's First Lieutenant, and Sub.-Lt. L. B. Jenson of Calgary flew home earlier.

Lantier was in the water four hours. Jones floated about for another hour and 40 minutes before rescue. All of those saved, the men agreed, had been on the life rafts; those who failed to reach one had not survived.

Sea Thick With Oil.

For a large area near the sinking, the sea was thick with oil from the Ottawa. It calmed the waves, but it weighed down the swimmers and got into their stomachs to sicken them.

Cmdr. Rutherford was one of those who got into the water safely but failed to survive. Wearied by days and nights on the bridge without let up, he clung to the lines of a carley float for a while but then, in the words of Lantier, "exhaustion got him".

On Jones' float, 22 men started off. By the time the rescuing ships had arrived, only eight were left. Another two died of exposure aboard the corvettes that saved them.

JAPANESE DRIVEN

The action on the New Guinea land front also was strongly supported by Allied aircraft which have been subjecting to almost continuous bombardment the bases supplying the Japanese spearhead at Ioribaiwa.

Buna again was blasted by heavy bombers which were credited with destroying an enemy bomber on the ground and silencing anti-aircraft positions. At the same time fighters attacked Japanese communication lines between Buna and Ioribaiwa, demolishing one end of the Wairopi bridge which the enemy has been using to transport supplies across the Kumasi River.

Hit Scored On Cargo Vessel.

In other widespread aerial operations planes braved an intense anti-aircraft barrage to bomb Japanese shipping at Rabaul, New Britain, while medium bombers attacked Dilli, Timor. A direct hit was scored on a cargo vessel at Rabaul. At Dilli two of four intercepting enemy fighters were shot down.

All Allied planes engaged in these missions returned safely.

Elaborating on the situation at Ioribaiwa, an allied spokesman said the fact that artillery had at last been brought into play against the Japanese probably was at least partly responsible for their enforced withdrawal.

The Allied troops, he said, are making good use of 25-pounders shoved and hauled across rugged terrain. The Japanese earlier had been reported using light mountain guns which they had dragged across the range piece by piece.

POLICE BLOTTER

Police throughout Hastings and Prince Edward Counties have been instigating reports of the stealing of small quantities of scrap iron, especially from farm yards. It is believed an organized gang travelling in a truck make systematic tours about the countryside and when passing farm houses quickly snatch up any loose scrap iron or loose small farm implements left within easy access. Police urge that farmers store any metal not being immediately used.

Brockville Car Stolen.

Brockville police reported the theft of a 1925 model Ford roadster bearing Ontario licence plates number 383-N-2 Friday night. In the vehicle were several musical instruments and a quantity of music belonging to an orchestra.

Two inebriates were apprehended in Belleville Friday night and placed in the confines of the station lock-up. One of the men is alleged to have driven a motor car into a barricade on Dundas street damaging two lanterns left to warn motorists of the excavation.

Acting Sergeant Wm. Evans has been confined to his home through illness for the past several days.

Scotts Church, Sidney Twp., Celebrates 50th Anniversary

Rev. E. B. Cooke of Toronto a Former Pastor is the Special Speaker

HISTORY OF CHURCH

Scotts church on Sidney Circuit celebrated its fiftieth anniversary on Sunday Sept. 20, with a full congregation both morning and evening to hear Rev. E. B. Cooke of Toronto, a former preacher of Sidney circuit some thirty years ago.

His morning text was: "All these were honored in their generation and were the glory of their times leaving a name behind them that their praises might be reported".—Ecc. Chap. 44: verse 7. His subject "The significance of the past in the light of today".

He said this fiftieth anniversary was a call to an appreciation of the past and a challenge to us for the future and that we have been privileged to enter into the heritage of those who have gone before us.

He climaxed his morning sermon with the challenge to our responsibilities for the future.

The choir rendered two beautiful anthems "Wonderful grace of Jesus", and "Jesus leads".

The choir was under the leadership of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Dafoe.

The text for the evening service was found in Second Peter, Chap. 3: verse 13—"A new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness".

The subject of the address was: "God's Tomorrow".

The speaker referred to the world conditions of today and said out of it all a new world would arise, a world with new economic and social conditions based upon the Golden Rule,—and that it is ours today to plan for such a world.

Mr. Howard Dafoe sang a most fitting solo for the occasion "God's Tomorrow".

The manifest interest of these two congregations showed their appreciation of these two addresses.

The choir rendered two beautiful anthem at this service.

The pastor, Rev. L. W. Scott took charge of both morning and evening service reading letters from former members of this church. Mrs. J. A. Lott gave the development and church activities of Scotts neighborhoood for the past one hundred and eight years.

(History compiled and written by Mrs. John A. Lott)

From the year 1834 to the year 1942, over 100 years ago Sidney in the neighborhood of Scotts church was nearly all covered with a thick pine woods, the settlers enduring great hardships, and with great labor were making clearings and settlements.

Among the oldest settlers are: Mr. and Mrs. Noah Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Vannorman, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Smith, Mr. and Mrs. James Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Smith, Mr. and Mrs. James Turnbull, Mr. and Mrs. Luke Woodbeck, Mr. and Mrs. James Sharp, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Collins, Mr. and Mrs. David Coon, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Bell, Mr. and Mrs. George Lott, Mr. and Mrs. Chester Nicholson, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hulett, Mr. and Mrs. Norris Westover, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sine, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Sine.

Many Descendants in Neighborhood

Many of the descendants of these people are still living in the township of Sidney and look back with pride to the sturdy settlers who so bravely and diligently carved out the splendid homesteads now existing in this locality.

At this time there was no church in the neighborhood and the nearest church was Frankford. People used to go there for service and particularly to attend the quarterly meeting service, when many people walked the five miles, the women with their Summer sun-bonnets made Quaker fashion and print dresses; the men in their jeans and homespun; in the Winter, the women wearing their hoods and dresses made of flannel while the men wore the gray full cloth, the material which was taken from their own sheep, spun in their own homes and woven at their looms.

The first religious service held in Scotts neighborhood was held at the residence of Mrs. Isaac Scott on Lot 18, 6th Concession of Sidney, where his son, Peter Scott, grandson, Charlie Scott and great grand son, Willmott Scott, have all lived. In the olden days before churches were built the circuit riders used to go around stopping in the neighborhood and holding service in the different homes.

First Church in 1856

The first church was built in this neighborhood in the year 1856 and was finished in the year 1859, the building was a frame structure, costing three hundreds dollars and was erected by subscribers who furnished the work without charge. The land was donated by Mr. Chas. Scott.

The trustees of this church were: —Mr. Samuel Hulett, Mr. George Lott, Mr. Gilbert Dafoe, Mr. Isaac Scott, Mr. Robert Boyce.

To these men we must give great respect as they were the men, who represented the great interest of the gospel in the locality.

The early members of the church had to undergo hardships and give liberally of their small means.

When revivals were held it was customary to go from house to house and hold prayer meetings in the afternoon, the church members feeling that the matter was of such importance that they could afford to give up their business for the time and assist in God's great work.

This church was under the charge of the Methodist Episcopal Conference.

First Church Preacher

Rev. Mr. Pomeroy was the first church preacher and Mr. Samuel Hulett was the class leader.

The Rev. Hiram Wilson was the last of a long line of sturdy eloquent faithful preachers, before the union took place and Mr. Charlie Lott acted as recording steward for the circuit before the union for twenty-three years.

In 1883 the union was formed between the Wesleyan Methodist, the Episcopal Methodist, the Primitive Methodist and the Methodist, new connection.

After the preliminary step had been taken the first conference was held in the City of Belleville in the old historic Bridge Street Church.

After the union the Scotts appointment was separated from the Frankford appointment and became a part of Sidney circuit.

The first Sunday School was organized during the ministry of Rev. Mr. Empy and Mr. Alexander Wright was the first Sunday School suprintendent.

Superintendents Named

Among the different superintendents were, Mr. Samuel Hulett, Mr. Sanford Griffin, Mr. James Dafoe, Mr. Ira Lott, who filled the position for twelve years, Mr. Arminus Playter, Mr. J. J. Reid, Mr. John A. Lott, Mr. H. W. Rose, Mr. Morley Sine.

One wedding in the frame church was Mr. Wesley Yateman and Miss Cousins.

The late funeral in the frame church was Mr. Ira Lott.

Mr. Charlie Lott and Mr. Chas. Scott must receive credit for this early information.

The brick church was built in the year 1892. Mr. Geo. Potter and Mr. N. Sweetman of Frankford were the masons and Mr. James Dafoe was head carpenter.

On May the 24th, there was a large gathering present to witness the laying of the cornerstone by Mrs. Levi Massey of Wallbridge, first Women's Missionary Society president of the Dominion.

This stone came from Glen Ross on the Trent River, and was cut from solid rock. Mr. Walter Scott brought the stone from the river to the church grounds

The ladies of the community served a bountiful dinner which netted them $350. Rev. Amos Campbell was guest speaker for the day. The first trustees for the new church were Mr. Charlie Lott, Mr. Chas. Scott, Mr. Arminus Playter, Mr. Peter Scott and Mr. Hiram Dafoe.

While the Rev. James Paul was preacher in charge, the brick church was completed at a cost of twelve hundred dollars.

The first funeral in the new church was Mr. Peter Scott.

The only wedding in the brick church was Mr. Horace Yateman and Miss Myrtle Bell.

On October 30, 1892, the dedication service took place with preaching services both morning and evening.

Rev. Edmiston was guest preacher and Rev. Lambley was a visiting preacher. These two preachers and Mrs. Edmiston were guests for a few days of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Scott.

The Sunday collection was sixteen dollars and the proceeds from the tea meeting amounted to $178.

Some of the young lads had their first taste of coffee at this supper.

We can thank Mr. Morley Scott and his fifty-year-old diary for this information about the dedication service.

Acted as First President

The first Woman's Missionary Society was united with the Wallbridge W.M.S. In 1901 it severed its connection with Wallbridge and was organized as Scotts W.M.S. by Mrs. Levi Massey assisted by Mrs. (Rev.) E. A. Tonkin. Mrs. J. J. Reid, acted as first president.

The Ladies' Aid Society was organized over fifty years ago. In the year 1892, the Ladies' Aid of Scotts Church, promised to pay $100 on the new church.

The members of the Stone Church choir furnished the music for the dedication service fifty years ago.

The first church organist was Miss Bessie Playter, the organ was bought from Mr. Riggs, Belleville, for the sum of $90 in December 1893. About 25 years ago, while Rev. L. M. Sharpe was preacher here the church was re-decorated and the beautiful picture of Christ and The Doctors was placed on the wall at the same time. The new choir loft was built and the two front pews were placed in the northwest corner. There are only six people left of this church who were her fifty years ago. Mr. Maitland Sine, Mr. Egbert Sine, Mr. J. A. Lott and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Moon. There are still twenty-nine people living beside these six, who were living here at that time.

Church of Great Value

The Church has been of great value to the neighborhood. The children have grown up under its influence. The gospel has been preached to the people; prayers have been answered; sufferers comforted on their dying beds and men and women have gone out from this neighborhood to other parts of the world carrying with them a faith, which stood the test of the storm and the stress of life. The people today are living in luxury and schools are on every side. It is well for us in looking at the history of the church today not to forget how much we owe to Our Heavenly Father for His kindness to us in placing in our midst such an influence for good and for which this church and its officers and preachers have meant to us in the days gone by. It should encourage us to greater things. It should stimulate us to greater loyalty. It should make us grateful and above all we should remember that in giving us these great privileges and blessings God expects us to pass them on to others.

Roll Call of Ministers Before The Union

Rev. Wm. Pomeroy, Rev. Mr. Newson, Rev. Robert Earl, Rev. Mr. Empey, Rev. Tobias Meyers, Rev. Wm. Bird, Rev. Amos Campbell, Rev. J. A. Simpson, Rev. John Black, Rev. Mr. Howard, Rev. Alex. Martin, Rev. Geo. Jones, Rev. David Wilson, Rev. Hiram Wilson.

After Union

Rev. Gleynn Beatty went forth from this church into the ministry.

Mrs. J. A. Lott was appointed first president of the Presbytery Women's Association of Hastings and Prince Edward County in the year 1933.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Dafoe presented a mirror to the church on the Anniversary Sunday, which was dedicated by Rev. L. W. Scott, in memory of their son, Raymond, recently deceased.

GOOD OLD BUFFS WERE SHATTERED BUT "FIT" AGAIN

Allied With Canada's Queen's Own Rifles British Regiment Has Balked Nazis in France and Libya in Present War

This is one of a Canadian Press series on British regiments writing new deeds of valor into their records.

(Written For The Canadian Press)

(By CLAUD GOLDING)

London, Sept. 26. — (CP)—The Buffs have been fighting against odds almost since they were formed in the 16th century. The present war hasn't made any change.

In France and Libya the Buffs—The Royal East Kent Regiment—were ripped to ribbons. For a time they were temporarily out of action while their files were bolstered by recruits who swore to uphold the regimental motto: "Veteri Frondescit Honore"—"May it Flourish by its Ancient Honor".

The Buffs, allied to the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, were among the first in the field when the British Expeditionary Force moved to France after this war started. They helped cover the retreat of the main British force from Dunkerque. During 19 days of furious fighting the Buffs suffered 450 casualties. Most of the officers and men who survived were imprisoned.

Then, as the Allied position on the continent rapidly worsened, the Buffs, in two other battalions, crossed the channel in a futile attempt to stem the advancing Nazis. They made the Germans pay heavily for their gains until the remnants were evacuated by way of Boulogne and Havre.

In Arid East

Meanwhile in the sweltering Middle East another battalion helped restore order during disturbances in Palestine and later fought in the arid desert wastes of Libya, standing firm until thining ranks were shattered.

During one desert engagement in December, 1941, the regiment held off a German panzer division for 24 hours, finally being overcome by sheer force. In another it made a gallant stand against 25 German heavy tanks, destroying almost half before falling back.

This war, however, hasn't been the first time the Buffs have been almost annihilated. In 1811 the 3rd Buffs fought a glorious but disastrous encounter with Napoleon's troops in Spain. They were almost wiped out, but the furious hand-to-hand fighting of the Buffs helped send the French army reeling toward Seville.

The Buffs made their initial fight against odds in the 16th century when London Merchants and craftsmen refused to tolerate dictation from kings and raised trained bands to act as citizen guards. One unit in later years became known as the Buffs from the color of their facings.

SOUTH AFRICAN WOOL

SAVE ON FUEL THIS WINTER

INSULATE

The Government insists that the public save on fuel this Winter. There is a definite shortage of fuel and transportation. Insulate your home now and keep your fuel bill down.

Make your home comfortable — keep the temperature even — install insulation and be assured of proper levelled heat and a guaranteed fuel saving. CALL E. D. MOTT TODAY.

INSULATE WITH ROCK WOOL

Winter and Summer insulation pays. It pays in fuel economy and year round comfort. We can advise you.

What a relief to settle down to a real night's rest, and awake fully refreshed, ready for the day's duties. I was tortured by fretful nights—tossing, turning — never comfortable. Half awake days —over-tired, driving body and mind to work when they needed rest. "Try Dodd's Kidney Pills," said a friend — "it may be your kidneys". Dreiser Rebuked

Theodore Dreiser, the American novelist, came to deliver a lecture in Toronto but he did not have the opportunity for an official ban was rightly placed upon his appearance on the public platform, because he had given utterance to anti-British sentiments after his arrival there. He had attacked Britain's contribution to the war effort of Russia against the Germans and made derogatory statements about the British people.

Dreiser's words and his thanklessness well merited the rebuke he received when he was banned from public utterance in Canada.

Dreiser knows as well as anyone that Britain in the early days took the blows of the war heroically as Britons can take them. After Dunkirk for a year or so Britain bore the entire war alone, though she was not then armed in a way to compare with the power of the Germans who had plotted for many years and piled up reserves of weapons, material, food and men, for the planned conquest of Europe.

Dreiser was not so ignorant of world affairs not to know this, he was not ignorant of what Britain has done and is doing on the sea, in the air, in North Africa, and yet he allowed his spleen to burst out. He must know something of what Britain is doing today.

In an open letter the London Daily Mail attacked Dreiser in an article which was headed "The Poison Tongue of Mr. Dreiser." The article, written by George Murray, says "the anger yon have aroused among the American public shows that though you may have had a hearing the half-baked isolationism you are still crying is now dead and damned." Murray also says that only the eminence of Dreiser "gives your statements any sort of interest. You specialize in morbid psychological studies of human character" and Murray suggests that "your next analysis should be into the queer mentality of Mr. Dreiser."

Washington Post says that the prohibition of any further public statements or speeches in Canada "hardly fits the crime. The expression of such views was an affront to Canadians and an outrageous abuse of their hospitality." The attitude of Canadians, the Post says, "as Canadians must surely know, is warmly seconded by the vast majority of their neighbors to the south."

Dreiser later at Port Huron described himself as "the No. 1 victim of the four freedoms." Of newspaper editorials he said, "I don't give a damn about those comments, I've been getting them all my life." Dreiser is the kind of man who is certain to be knocked or attacked because of his very attitude. At Port Huron he said he thought the U.S. was doing fairly well in aid to Russia, "'but I don't think Britain is doing anything."

If he would quit "'thinking" in the Dreiser way and would read what Britain has been doing in the war, he could not fairly utter such sentiments. At one time Britain was sending a great mass of her guns and planes to Russia and is still giving aid in many forms. Her war production, a good share of which has been reported as exported to Russia, is the admiration of the world for population.

What purpose he thought he would serve in coming to Canada to say what he did only a Dreiser can understand. He has found the Canadian people would not take it from him and he wins no favor in the United States either.

The Writers' United States War Board has condemned Dreiser for his utterance, stating that "it was not aristocratic snobs who rescued the British army at Dunkirk, or who, greatly outnumbered, blasted the luftwaffe from the English skies in 1940, or who stopped Rommel in his tracks last month," and added that "the people of the British Commonwealth are fighting this war as our brave and faithful Allies." There was also this remark of the Writers' Board, "'certainly our enemies would pay him well for his disservice to our country's cause."

The British radio states that Ley, Nazi labor leader, has changed the tune of the Nazi slogan from the "certainty of victory" to "determination not to capitulate." The last phrase is taken from Ley's speech at Nuremburg. It is noticeable that Hitler in his third anniversary speech did, as Ley has done, omit any reference to the length or end of the war.

THE RESERVE ARMY NEEDS MEN

The Lord gave us two ends to use
One to think with, the other to sit with,
The war depends on which we use
Heads we win, and tails we lose.
—Penn. Guardian.

Next week the Reserve Army units of the city are putting on a drive for recruits. The 34th Battery and Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) Regiment hope to recruit to wartime strength. Hundreds of eligible men are needed.

By the same token the Belleville Company of the Canadian Women's Service Force needs additional recruits for its ranks.

All are Canadian Reserve Army units.

In the light of recent events it is the duty of every one who can possibly do so, to join one of these units at once and learn how to protect their homes and loved ones, should the worst happen.

Canada may not be invaded. God forbid. But it CAN happen.

Outside of the active service members of Canada's armed forces in Belleville, what could the rest of us do should invasion occur?

True, we could arm ourselves with sticks, clubs, pitchforks, etc., but these would be of little use against a well-trained, well-equipped fighting force.

ALL ELIGIBLE MEN IN THE CITY SHOULD TAKE ADVANTAGE, NOW, OF THE OPPORTUNITY TO LEARN TO HANDLE MODERN WEAPONS.

Trained men in the Reserve Army units here have this knowledge at their finger-tips.

The greater majority of these men are civilian soldiers, many of them employed in vital war industries.

Hours of training are light. Two hours, two nights weekly.

There are a great many men and women in Belleville who can afford to spend this much time training themselves for an emergency.

It is to these people that the Reserve Army units are issuing their appeal.

It is all very well to sit back, smug in our complacency and "Let George Do It."

That attitude never won anything—let alone a war.

To correct a false impression, the Reserve Army units will not be sent out of the district unless invasion occurs. They will not be sent to Iceland, Timbuctoo or the Libyan desert, as some rumor-mongers have it.

The Reserve Army has been organized to train civilian soldiers in the use of modern weapons with which they can protect their homes and their loved ones should war conditions demand.

And every man in this city who can so do, should get this training, and get it immediately. Napoleon hesitated once—and lost a battle. Nero fiddled while his city burned.

We, in Belleville, should not fiddle, with the enemy almost at the gates.

It is time we wakened up to a danger that has become suddenly real. A danger that is not actually in the possibility of invasion but our inability to cope with it, should it come.

Next week is Reserve Army Week in Belleville. All units will endeavor to secure as many recruits as possible. Every man and woman should study the situation, and if eligible, join the ranks of one of these units.

What could YOU do if we were invaded?

IT'S THE STYLE

I'M sure that Adam must have laughed
When Eve went first on dress parade,
And thought her just a little daft
To wear that thing of fig leaves made.

And later, when the style was changed,
I'm certain Adam had to grin
To see the way she had arranged
A covering of rabbit skin.

All down the ages men have mocked
At garbs their women chose to wear;
And some with laughter loud have rocked,
But never women seemed to care.

They pay no heed to smirk or grin
Or what is said behind their backs;
Else how could females, fat or thin,
Walk round about the town in slacks?

German Flanks Exposed to Danger At Stalingrad

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

There apparently is growing hope in Allied capitals that Stalingrad can be held by the Russians until winter freezes the East Front and snarls Nazi communication lines.

Moreover, this hope is supported by the words of Axis spokesmen. They are obviously trying either to explain away the delay or to distract German attention from the Stalingrad siege and its enormous blood cost.

Nazi patentees of the war-of-nerves technique as a psychological complement to the blitzkrieg are getting a taste of their own medicine. Their spokesmen are busy on the nerve front; but now with tonic doses for war-frayed German nerves, not with verbal attacks on Allied nerves. Their propaganda machinery is working overtime; but in reverse.

Examples are numerous. The most recent and most curious, prehaps, is a Japanese report that Japanese naval forces have arrived to co-operate with German and Italian allies in Atlantic waters. In confirmation, Tokyo reported that a Japanese submarine had touched at a German base. Berlin amended that by adding that it was a base "in Europe."

Quick Rebroadcast

It was be true. Little as Japan could spare even one submarine from her own vast sphere of sea action, she may have sent one or more into the Atlantic. It could be done; but the only reason for doing it is sufficiently clear.

It gave Hitler a chance to underscore to his own people the strangest remark he has ever made to them to assure them, not that victory was certain, but that defeat was impossible. In his war anniversary broadcast from Russia Sept. 1, he said the Axis pact with the "majority" of the peoples of the Far East insured Germany against Russia and the Anlo-American fellowship.

Less than a month later he had urgent need, due to the Stalingrad stumbling-block, to enlarge on that. The Tokyo report of Japanese naval co-operation in the Atlantic served that need, even if only one submarine was specifically mentioned. That explains Berlin's quick rebroadcast of the news for German ears.

That is only one evidence of a backfire in Nazi war-of-nerves technique, however. Even more impressive is the utter exaggeration Berlin has employed recently in claiming smashing successes against Allied convoys in the Atlantic and the Arctic.

On the word of the British admiral who commanded that big Arctic convoy, not only did a majority of its cargo craft win through a week-long attack by Nazi planes and submarines, but nearly three-score enemy planes were shot down. (A more conservation Admiralty report said forty planes were destroyed.)

No escorting Allied surface war-craft was lost or seriously injured on the trip to Russia, the admiral said, although on the return journey a destroyer and a minesweeper were lost.

A German wildcat radio voice, which Hitler's police have never been able to silence, did more than confirm the Nazi plane loss. It alleged that as a result of it and other command failures in Norway a Nazi project for attacking Murmansk to choke off the Arctic supply route had collapsed.

Still another evidence that the Russian defense of Stalingrad has disarranged Hitler's war schemes lies in a German broadcast designed for home consumption. This attributed the delay in the city's capture to the wish of the High Command to avoid the terrible blood price of frontal attack. No other form of attack is possible. Stalingrad cannot be outflanked or surrounded and starved out, even if Hitler could spare the time for a sit-down siege.

The exact line of battle about Stalingrad cannot be traced from either Russian or German progress bulletins. But its general contours and the nature of the struggle are quite clear.

Both northwest and southwest of the city the invaders are on the defensive. They are being harried by the fire of Soviet river craft which Nazi air power has strangely failed to sink or silence. It is German, not Russian, flanks that are exposed and in danger.

POLICE TURN OVER KEYS

Toronto, Sept. 26—(CP)—Toronto police have turned over to salvage workers 75 pounds of keys, recovered from house and shop-breakers. The keys had been accumulating in the basement at police headquarters since the department moved into new quarters in 1934. Four hundred pounds of broken bicycle frames and old license plates will be waiting for the salvagers when they make their next call.

BOY DRENCHED BY HYDRANT

Kitchener, Ont., Sept. 26—(CP)—The city of Kitchener lost 2,000 gallons of water and a 12-year-old boy was drenched and knocked own when he turned the handle on a Hydrant Reducer Apparatus the wrong way. The youngster, swept to the pavement by the stream, vainly tried to put cap back in place, then took to his heels as a crowd gathered. Watch-works employees shut off the flow.

Oumansky, member of the collegium of the people's commissariat for foreign affairs, but better remembered as former Soviet ambassador to the United States. Willkie received a tremendous ovation at the ballet not long after, when he made a short speech and kissed the prima ballerina.

MAGGOTS ON MEAT

Two hundred and seventy-four years ago an Italian named Francesco Redi made what was then regarded a remarkable scientific discovery.

The ancients believed that maggots were produced on dead fish by what is known as "abiogenesis" or "spontaneous generation"; that is, the production of living from non-living matter.

Aristotle taught spontaneous generation as an accepted theory and stated as an observed fact that some animals spring from putrid meat.

The belief in abiogenesis (literally genesis without life) persisted through the Middle Ages and as late as the 17th century.

But many people even in those days knew, without being able to prove it, that maggots on meat were hatched from eggs laid there by blowflies.

In "Love's Labor Lost," written about 1590, Shakespeare has the witty Biron say: "These summer flies have blown me full of maggot ostentation."

The first scientific refutation of the theory of spontaneous generation was supplied in 1668 by Francisco Redi (1626-1698), then court physician at Florence.

Redi advanced that every living thing comes from a preexisting living thing, and made a simple experiment to prove it. He exposed meat to the air during hot weather. It soon began to putrify and within a few days was covered with maggots. Then he put similar meat in a jar covered with a fine gauze or wire screen and exposed it in the same manner. The meat began to putrify as before, but no maggots appeared on it. Blowflies, however, swarmed over the wire screen covering the jar and within a few days the gauze was covered with maggots.

The Florentine court physician properly concluded that the maggots were not "generated spontaneously" by the corruption of the meat, but were hatched from eggs laid by the flies.

Redi was not only a good doctor and a sound scientist; but he was a brilliant poet as well.

He composed what is regarded as one of the rare pieces of genuine dithyrambic poetry since the days of the ancients. His "Baccho in Toscana" (Bacchus in Tuscany), translated into English by Leigh Hunt, is a lyrical poem describing the frenzy felt by the worshippers of the wine-god.

CANADIAN DEPARTMENT STORES

Inside Nazi Europe
Warsaw

By An Eyewitness
(BBC Overseas Service)

The old saying "Warsaw is the heart of Poland" has taken on a new, tragic sense. From the ruins, the bombed houses and the fighting spirit of the defenders, has come a force which gives Warsaw great strength in comparison with other Polish towns. Any observer of Polish life under the occupation can see that wherever, in September 1930, the slightest skirmish was fought, the spirit of resistance to the occupying authorities is stronger than where there was no fighting. People from the provinces try to visit Warsaw, even for a few days, to breathe more freely and to return with a new reserve of strength.

Apart from this there are other factors which play a part in giving Warsaw an important role. The Germans are less noticeable in such a great Polish centre, for there are now more than two million inhabitants in Warsaw. There is not the same daily contact with the Germans, and economic control is more difficult for the Germans as far as the individual is concerned. But, of course, in Warsaw there are mass arrests, which make the provinces seem a paradise.

The difference between Warsaw and the provinces is evident in the streets. In the provinces, people pass a German as though he were a mad dog. They often go on the other side of the street to avoid him and walk faster. In Warsaw, you pass a German as if he were a tree, or as if you did not see him.

Living Costs High

On the other hand, Warsaw pays for being the heart of Poland, with the highest cost of living in the whole country. As often as possible the people of Warsaw send members of their family out of the town so that they can eat a little better. Some how or other they manage to live, because they must. On any sunny day you will see thin children lying in every other doorway in the main streets, with a cap or a bowl beside them for alms. In the better-class houses the bell rings ten or twenty times a day. When you open the door you find a child standing outside. You give him a piece of dry bread or a bowl of soup, he sits down on the stairs and eats it up at once.

There is only one theatre, which plays all German farces in a Polish translation. Naturally this theatre is boycotted. Concerts are rare, and it is forbidden to play Chopin in public. There are many cabarets. Twenty-five percent of what is taken in cinemas goes to the German Army, so that there is a general boycott of the cinema. On the walls of Warsaw you see written in chalk: "Only swine go to the cinemas". On the other hand, cafes are full of life. All sorts of people meet there to drink coffee made of corn and tea made of strawberry leaves. All trade is carried on there, and it is there that you hear the news and the latest jokes. Actors and singers with self-respect perform in the cafes rather than in the cabarets, and the programs are of a very high level. Germans have to wait a very long time to be served in cafes.

The Polish women, although they have only old clothes and wear wooden shoes, have managed to maintain their traditional elegance. A hat is turned three times, but the cock's feather in it is new.

Life in Warsaw goes on against a background of arrests and shootings. On one day that I can remember in August 1940, twenty-five thousand people were arrested, and there were numerous similar arrests, for instance, those during May and June of 1941.

Manner of Mass Arrests

How are these mass arrests carried out? Here is a picture from one of the main streets of Warsaw. Two S.S. men are standing in a doorway. From time to time they approach one of the passers-by and politely ask him to enter the doorway. A few minutes later they come out, alone. They have picked someone. The scene repeats itself until a group of about thirty has been collected. Then the doorway opens and a big lorry drives out. The arrested are taken to prison, where they will spend a day, a month, half-a-year, without further enquiry. Some of them are released. Some are sent to the Oswiencim prison camp. Some of them are shot. The fate of most of those who are arrested simply depends on chance. How does Warsaw react? As soon as it is known that something like this is going on, people look out for doorways, cross the street from right to left, and run through dangerous parts of the town. Soon the streets are bare of people. A friend of mine, seeing a cordon drawn across a street, entered the first house, in which he knew nobody. He went up the stairs and rang at one of the first doors. A lady opened. "There is a polico razzia. May I come in?" A minute later he was sitting drinking tea. Everybody treated him as if he was a friend of the family. A little while later, the bell rang again, and a workman came in, for the same reason. A few minutes later, he was busily engaged with some tools in carrying out repairs in the house.

Many Gestapo

In none of the other occupied countries through which I have passed was there even one-third of the number of Gestapo who have been permanently stationed in Poland throughout the occupation. And furthermore, remember how difficult it is for news to reach us in Warsaw and in Poland. The death penalty is immediately applied to those caught listening to the radio. It is only permissible to listen to the public loud-speakers which give German communiques three or four times a day. But those who return to their dinner from factories, shops or offices bring with them the news broadcast on the previous evening by all the great wireless systems of the world. Those who return at night from the cafes bring with them the news broadcast that morning. It is a point of honor for every citizen of Warsaw to spread the latest news. In Warsaw alone twenty clandestine weeklies appear regularly, and I am not referring to those which are roneoed, but only to those published in secret printing works. There is nobody in Poland who does not from time to time read newspapers of this kind, even in the remotest countryside, and in my experience there is nobody in Warsaw who does not read them regularly.

But Warsaw has always had two faces—one revolutionary, mutinous, independent—the face portrayed in the magnificent rhythm of the 'Warszawianka"; the other cheerful, malicious, joking, witty, humorous. Today Warsaw is engaged in combat. Remember the year of the young men of 1830, the year of the Reds in 1863, the year of the Polish Socialist Party in 1905, the year of the underground Polish military organizations in 1916;—multiply by the resolution, faith and hatred of the whole nation, and that will give you the reality of the years 1939 to 1942.

Assailant Stabs Kingston Girl

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 26 —(CP) —Condition of Nancy Mylks, eight-year-old daughter of Dr. Gordon Mylks, who was stabbed by an assailant riding a bicycle last night, was reported as good this morning. Despite severe gashes on the neck and hands, it was reported she will recover.

The little girl was walking home in the residential section of the city and going down a poorly lighted street when a young man on a bicycle asked her a direction and then stabbed her with a knife. The child's cries brought assistance and the young assailant made his escape. The girl was rushed to the hospital and given a blood transfusion.

This was the fourth stabbing affair in Kingston in the last three months, none of the victims, however, being critically injured.

Police were investigating today.

Making Life Easier

(From New York Times)

There is perhaps another duty to be added to the long and necessary list already formulated in Washington. It too will help win the war, or at least make the time of struggle a little less unpleasant. This is the duty to be cheerful, in spite of battles that go against us, of people who rub us the wrong way, of failure to get enough sleep, of taxes, shortages and the hundred annoyances that constantly beset a people and a world at war.

It is very easy to fall into a chronic attitude of ill-temper in these times, when things are not moving as smoothly as we might wish, and it is a weakness to which those in high places as well as the worker at the forge are subject. About the only way to meet the problems is to call up the reserves of strong character.

A Lesson From Arnold

Matthew Arnold, when he was a school official travelling about England a great deal inspecting the educational system, used to make a practice of turning over in his mind for hours on end some great precept from the past. He found this a path to wisdom. Perhaps it is a time to get out the scrapbook we kept so sedulously as young people, when our world was freighted with unashamed didacticism.

Does anyone keep scrapbooks any more? Many were constanly on watch in earlier days for something good to clip out, and our newspapers and magazines were published with one eye on the reader with scissors in hand. There was a great deal of "moral" verse, and the magazine publisher was not ashamed to do a good deal of preaching in prose also to his readers on the conduct of life. It was felt appropriate to build character. The Sunday school paper had a larger place than now in the home and in the life of the child, and a certain weekly journal called The Youth's Companion was eagerly awaited from the postman's hand as a source of inspiration to child and adult alike.

Great Sayings of the Past

We approach our character building more subtly now and almost nobody takes the trouble to clip out anything to read and re-read on a rainy day. This seems a pity, because some of those things we saved in our youth still read pretty well today.

"The most manifest sign of wisdom is continued cheerfulness . . . If you intend to be happy don't be foolish enough to wait for a just cause . . . Drop the subject when you cannot agree; there is no need to be bitter because you know you are right . . . If you happen to be beaten return to the charge . . . One should take care not to grow too wise for so great a pleasure of life as laughter . . . I'll bind myself to that which, once being right, will not be less right when I shrink from it . . . Do not wait for extraordinary circumstances to do good; try to use ordinary situations. . . . Don't be content with only doing your duty. Do more than your duty . . . All that a true soldier needs to know is that he understands his orders . . . Shall we make a new rule of life? Always be a little kinder than necessary . . . The past has cancelled and buried deep all yesterdays. There let them sleep . . . To be popular at home is a great achievement . . ."

True Then and Now

How well these rounded, carefully phrased homilies of the past, from Marcus Aurelius, Beecher, Brooks, Epictetus, Browning, Lowell and the others, fit the need today! Yes, they seem a bit "preachy" of course, but we are in a sober frame of mind in which a preaching is more acceptable than a few months ago.

"Those who live on the mountain have a longer day than those who live in the valley. Sometimes all we need to brighten our day is to rise higher . . . If you think you are beaten, you are; if you think you dare not, you don't . . . To bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, and to await all occosians, hurry never; in a word, to let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious grow up through the common; this to be my symphony . . . Be not uneasy, discouraged or get out of humor because practice falls short of precept in some particulars . . . Let us be of good cheer, remembering that the misforunes hardest to bear are those which never come . . . Have you missed in your aim? Well, the mark is still shining . . . Master of human destinies am I! . . . I would be true, for there are those who trust me . . ."

Help to Bear Up Bravely

We are more self-conscious than we used to be about reading aloud. We are harder and less given to a show of emotion than when we used to have reading circles, and Browning clubs and Tennyon societies in every small town. Perhaps in time the radio, in its ravenous search for material, will turn more frequently to a recollection of the best that was thought and written in the past, a true function of education. A recent article in The Observer in England criticized the British Broadcasting Corporation for keeping the ration of poetry too low and allowing too great a proportion of light entertainment. Perhaps we in this country could enjoy and profit by a bigger serving of poetry, with its attendant good effect on the spirit.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and I said, G pop, it's funny how people's ambitions change. I can remember when I thought the greatest thing in the world to be was a elevator starter in a big office building just standing there in your uniform signalling to all the elevator men when to close their doors and start up full of people, but now I feel all different, I said.

Who's the big hero now? pop said, and I said, An airoplane squadron leader, giving commancs and orders away up there in the air through his mikerophone. Oh boy that's what I think I'll be, I said.

You'll have still other thoughts in other years, pop said. The ambition that fills my thoughts this evening is far different from my aspirations of earlier years, he said, and I said, Well what were some of them, pop?

Well, the first one I can remember was to be able to turn like a pinwheel about 200 times without a pause, like a lady bally dancer I saw on the stage, pop said. My next ambition, as far as I recall, was to swing by my teeth from a strap attached to a trapeze high above the heads of thousands of rasping and shuddering people, all perfect strangers to me. As I grew older my ambitions grew gradually more modest, such as my ambition to emulate my first employer and smoke 20 cigars a day without showing any sign of dizziness, until now at my present ripe age my ambition tonight is to keep my appointment with the dentist tomorrow and to be able to hear him proclaim in a hearty voice that he cant find a thing that needs his attention, pop said, and I said Well anyways, pop, I still think I'll be a squadron leader.

That's quite natural, you're still practically the same age as you were a few minutes ago, pop said.

Which I was.

Mido
THE WATERPROOF WATCH THAT WINDS ITSELF

PROOF: SOLDIER GIVES PROOF OF THE MECHANICAL GENIUS OF "MIDO"

Angus McFee,
216 Front St.,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sirs:-

About the middle of April 1940 on the recommendation of your watchmaker I purchased a Mido Multifort Watch from your firm before proceeding on Active Service Overseas.

I would like to tell how pleased and satisfied I have been with this watch after 2½ years of use.

I have used this watch through all sorts of situations and it certainly has been knocked about. Through it all it never failed to function and kept perfect time. I had occasion to ride a motorcycle for 6 months more or less steadily and even the violent vibration it suffered then was not detrimental to its working in perfect order. The watch was also exposed to immersion in water for prolonged periods and xxxx exposed to shock of violent nature xxxxxx being close to the gun positions of several heavy batteries on coastal defence work in England. Today it is still like new.

I know of several other cases where chaps have these watches, all working in perfect order, and nothing but praise from them all so to you I say again "Its the best" and I can recommend the Mido Multifort to any Serviceman and he can be assured of extra special service.

Yours sincerely
G Milton Dawson
Captain

Absolute time — constant, unfailing precision—the miracle of SELF-WINDING MIDO is the mechanical era's masterpiece among watches. Think of it—your arm's natural motion replaces old-fashioned stem winding. Nothing to disturb the delicate mechanism even momentarily—nothing can get out of order from over winding, a common hazard of ordinary watches. Self winding means Sure Timing. Mido watches are invaluable to men in military service—and to doctors, executives and athletes.

WEDDINGS

PASCOE—BADGLEY

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in the Melrose United Church on Wednesday September 23, when Evelyn, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Badgley, Shannonville, became the bride of Ernest Frank Pascoe, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Pascoe of Melrose, with Rev. Wm. Sterling officiating. The wedding music was played by Mrs. Chas. Bates, who also rendered an instrumental during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was charmingly gowned in a floor length frock of white sheer over taffeta with finger-tip veil of richly embroidered net. She carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses and her only ornament was a gold heart-shaped locket, the gift of the groom. Her sister, Jean, acted as bridesmaid and wore a dainty gown of pink sheer over taffeta with matching headdress and carried a Colonial bouquet of pink roses, mingled with delphiniums and fern. The groom was ably assisted by his brother, Vernon, while Mr. Vincent Pascoe and Mr. Earl Badgley acted as ushers.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home for the immediate relatives and friends. Mrs. Badgley, mother of the bride, was becomingly attired in navy with rose trimmings and corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother, who assisted, chose a wine colored ensemble with matching hat and wore a corsage of red roses. Assisting with the lunch were the Misses Ruth McLaren, Helen McAvoy and Beatrice McFarlane under the supervision of Mrs. J. McFarlane and Mrs. E. Morse, aunt of the bride.

Later, the bridal couple left for Toronto and other Western points, the bride travelling in a grey tailored suit and Queen's blue hat with matching accessories. Upon their return they will reside at Melrose.

BAPTISTE—BRANT

A quiet wedding was solemnized in Tabernacle United church parsonage on Tuesday evening, September 22, when Rev. R. E. Spencer united in marriage Phyllis May Brant and Levi Harold Baptiste.

The bride and groom were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Weymark.

DAFOE—IRWIN

On Wednesday afternoon, September 23, at three o'clock, the marriage took place in Tabernacle United Church of Phyllis Irwin and Francis Dafoe. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. E. Spencer and the attendants were Miss Emma Dafoe and Mr. A. R. Moore.

THOMPSON—HARDING

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Saturday, September 19, at the home of Reverend and Mrs. A. W. Harding, Bethany, when their eldest daughter, Dorothy Gertrude, became the bride of Robert Wendell Thompson, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Thompson, Springbrook.

The living room where the ceremony was performed by the bride's father, was tastefully decorated with ferns and baskets of white asters. The bride was becomingly attired in a street length dress of heaven blue crepe, and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses and fern. She was attended by her sister, Miss Joy Harding, wearing a dress of gold colored wool and carried a bouquet of pink roses and cornflowers

Mr. Robert Marshall of Galt, assisted the groom.

For travelling the bride wore a jacket dress of burgundy red wool jersey with black accessories:

Upon their return from a honeymoon in Muskoka, they will reside in Ottawa, where the groom holds a position with the Bank of Canada.

Newly-Married Couple Honored by Friends

Foxboro — On evening of Sept. 19th, about seventy relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Ford Derry in honor of her brother Allan Howes and his wife (nee Vera Wickens) who were recently married.

Mr. Leon Wilson and Mr. Earl Bird on behalf of the Foxboro Orange Lodge presented Allan and Vera with a beautiful table lamp.

Mr. Clifford Wilson acted as chairman and a very nice program was given after which the bride and groom unwrapped their gifts and thanked everyone for the very useful things which they received. The evening was brought to a close by all singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows." Lunch was served.

Allan Howes is now a gunner on Active Service now at Cornwall.

Unsolved Worries Appear in Dreams

He Dreams He's Taking a Test

A strange dream for a grown-up to have, yet it's surprisingly common—that you're back in school taking a test and scared stiff that you'll fail!

Some fear or other is percolating in your "subconscious"! It may be just a natural anxiety before meeting a new boss—or, not so naturally, it may be part of a fear pattern you realize but dimly.

Perhaps a dangerous feeling of inadequacy is hampering you, you may imagine that people are judging you revery action.

When your dreams follow any such pattern it's advisable to find out why. Knowing why, you may solve many problems.

Constantly dreaming you're late shows you fear you're running your life inefficiently. Dreams of being imprisoned show you're giving way to a feeling of discouragement.

Or do you dream of falling, flying, appearing nude in public? Our 32-page booklet by a psychologist interprets these and many other common dreams; shows their relation to your daily life and your problems. Discusses sex dreams, "prophetic" dreams.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "The Meaning of Dreams" to Ontario Intelligencer, Home Service, 166 Front Street, Belleville. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Hair Trim Must Be Just Right

Joan Bennett Prefers a Short Bob

By HELEN FOLLETT

BEAUTY SHOP operators have attained a high degree of efficiency. They go through an extended term of training before working on the cash customers. Facial treatments have improved in the last 10 years. Permanent waves are done more quickly, with less discomfort to the candidate for curly hair. Shampoos, as a rule, are satisfactory. Scalp treatments rub the worries out of your mind.

But hair trimming! On that you take chances. We are saying this at a great risk, as the beauty industry is likely to get after our scalp, and not with soothing fingers, either. Getting a trim is your editor's pet peeve, and she's had them all over Uncle Sam's domain and in many cities in Europe. If you have found a careful, conscientious, experienced hair snipper, stick to him or her.

With coiffures as they are, the cut is all important. A roll should be just so long and no longer if it is to stay in place. The rear portion of the brain mop must have special attention. A few longer, straggly wisps will drive you crazy.

Home Trimming

Should it happen that it is not convenient to have a trim, and you are in need of one, it is possible to do the job yourself.

Give yourself a shampoo. As you take each strand to roll around a metal curler, snip off half an inch or so. Easy as pie.

Women with hair thin at the sides complain bitterly that operators taper that portion as they do locks on other areas of the head. The poor dears have to fight to keep the few fuzzers they have at the temples.

How many miles a man will walk for a cigarette is no walk at all compared to the distance a woman will travel to follow the peregrinations of a favorite hair cutter.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

No Shower Necessary

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be a bridesmaid for a very dear friend of mine. I have been told by many people that this means that I must give a shower for the bride-to-be.

I would love to give shower for this girl, if you think I should, but I am hesitating because eight showers have already been given for this girl. Since many of the guests were invited to most of these showers, this has meant quite a large expense to them.

We are all girls who are employed in offices, and while we don't want to be selfish about giving as many presents as we can afford, it seems to some of us that there have already been enough showers. What would you advise me to do?

Marion.

I advise you not to give a shower. In the first place, the people who have told you that a bridesmaid must give a shower are not right; this is not necessary, and depends entirely on circumstances.

Buying gifts for so many showers is certainly hard on any pocketbook and these friends have been most generous already.

Your friend has certainly had enough showers given for her. She would or at least should be uneasy and embarrassed if she knew that any friend was planning another, with guests expected to bring another present.

"Junior" or "3rd"?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

John Jones had a son, whom he named John Jones, Jr. After the death of John Jones, Sr., John Jones, Jr., had a son, whom he named John Jones, 2nd.

We are having a lively discussion as to the correctness of this form. Is it correct or should the baby have been named John Jones, 3rd?

If it is not correct to name the baby John Jones 2nd, when is it correct to use this form?

A. M.

When the senior John Jones died, his son (who had been John Jones, Jr.) should have dropped the "Jr." from his name. Then his son would be John Jones, Jr.

There might, however, be a definite reason why John Jones Jr. wished to retain the Jr. after his name, after his pather had died. Sometimes the son of a very celebrated man considers that it would be better taste for him not to assume the name of his celebrated father. Or sometimes, when he has always been known as John Jones, Jr., he feels that is would be more practical for him to keep his name as John Jones, Jr., the name that identifies him in his business or profession.

So, if for any important and exceptional reason he does not wish to drop the "Jr." from his name, his son, if named for him, would be John Jones, 3rd.

In any event, the son of the man in your question should either be John Jones, Jr. (if his father dropped the "Jr." after his father's death), of (if his father didn't drop the "Jr.") should be John Jones, 3rd.

John Jones, 2nd, would not be correct; "2nd" means the nephew or cousin of a man of the same name.

That soldier or sailor will probably be a "divine dancer."

But if, by chance, he shouldn't be, follow his steps as well as you can . . . look happy and serene . . . and give the impression that you're having a grand time.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Respectability Often a Cloak for Heinous Crimes

Whether it's the concentrated horrors going on in every part of the world that have managed to send cruel and malignant influences over here, I never recall a time when there were so many printed evidences of human cruelty in the newspapers.

A mother chained her daughter to a tree for eight hours and taped the child's mouth so she couldn't cry. A father chained four of his children, because the poor, half-starved little creatures had taken a coin to buy food. But enough of horrors.

As far as my own mail is concerned, I have never had so many women write to me about being beaten within an inch of their lives by their husbands. Worse, several of these women were pregnant; one gave birth to a deformed child.

When I write to these women and beg them to invoke the free Legal Aid Society or an equivalent agency, or even to call in the police, they write back tear-drenched letters and say their husbands are such respectable men they don't want the neighbors to know they're given to wife beating—as if the neighbors didn't know about these "respectable" men and their brutality.

It's the same with other hidden horrors of domestic life. They're all so respectable, these skeletons in the cupboards. Respectability, that glib little tag meaning "worthy of esteem" according to the dictionary, has lost its face value, and the sooner we rid ourselves of that sort of thing, the better.

If a woman has a wife-beating husband or even one who lashes out on his grownup daughters and sons, the law should be his keeper, not some poor miserable little woman who pleads: "Don't John, please don't."

Not long ago I covered a murder trial. The man was slowly poisoning to death his wife to whom he had been married for twenty-five years—a case of another woman, of course. The attending physician, his family, even the wife herself were aware of pronounced symptoms of poisoning. Everyone was suspected but the "respectable" man who was practically the leading citizen of that community. He was head of the Boy Scouts, a Sunday School superintendent and goodness only knows what other tokens of respectability he had acquired.

His daughter, a splendid modern girl who had taken a course in chemistry in Columbia University, informed on him. At first she could not believe—he was so "respectable." But finally the law was invoked. I covered the father's trial and saw him taken off to jail where he served a life sentence. He would have killed his wife if it hadn't been for his modern daughter, who knew when respectability ceased to be respectable.

BRITISH LAND GIRL HAPPY IN HER JOB

Milton Ernest, England, Sept. 26. (CP)—Forty girls, half of them Londoners from West End shops, hair-dressing salons, offices and tailoring firms, say they are happier in this Bedfordshire village with the Women's Land Army than they were in the old jobs.

Miss Felicia Taylor, warden of the hostel where they stay, says, "Most of them are glad to be in bed before ten o'clock. Harvesting is slogging work but I never hear a moan. Shop girls make good farm workers because they are used to being on their feet for long hours and office girls, while they find it harder at first, soon get into the habit of continuous effort."

CLASS IN COSMETICS

Sheffield, England, (CP)— Sheffield Education Committee has opened a cosmetics class where girls can learn the art of make-up. "Our purpose", an official said, "is to teach them, if they must do it, at least to do it intelligently".

Wife Preservers

A thorough chilling is necessary if you want to whip evaporated milk. It must be chilled to a temperature around 40 degrees Fahrenheit. A good method of chilling it sufficiently is to put the unopened can of milk in the freezing tray of the refrigerator until fine ice crystals begin to form around the edges. The unopened can may also be chilled by packing it in ice and salt.

HEALTH CHATS

Painless Injection Method Alleviates Hemorrhoids

A painless method of treating hemorrhoids has been suggested. In this injections of certain drugs are used to dry up and shrink the hemorrhoids. This treatment may be carried out in the doctor's office and does not require any long absence from work.

Hemorrhoids are swollen or enlarged veins around the opening of the lower part of the bowel. The veins not only become stretched but are likely to rupture as a result of any slight injury. Furthermore, a chronic inflammation may develop around these veins. It is fortunate, perhaps, that this occurs in some instances because as this scar tissue shrinks it may put pressure on the veins and get rid of them.

The chief symptom of hemorrhoids is bleeding. Sometimes the veins may protrude from the bowel opening. This is known as prolapse. In occasional instances there may be itching. If a blood clot forms in the vein, pain is present.

If it is suspected that hemorrhoids are present, an examination with a sigmoidoscope should be carried out. This is an instrument made up of a metal tube with lights which makes it possible to look directly into the bowel to examine the tissues. The hemorrhoids may be treated by operation, by electricity or by injections.

Dr. Frank C. Yeomans of New York says that a cure may be brought about in 95 per cent of the cases by surgery. The surgical operation is not a difficult one. In some instances electrical treatments are used, such as diathermy, which destroys the tissues through the heat produced. This treatment is not recommended because it is a prolonged one and its effects cannot always be carefully controlled. Injection treatments may be used if there are no complications present, such as infection and inflammation. The injection treatment also may be advisable in old persons, in those with diabets or tuberculosis or in bleeders, as in such cases the surgical procedure may prove dangerous.

Various solutions are used for injecting the hemorrhoids, such as phenol and quinine and urea hydrochloride. Usually just one enlarged vein is treated each time. From four to eight treatments are generally sufficient in an average case. Unless after three weeks the hemorrhoid shrinks, a re-injection is carried out.

The injection treatment for hemorrhoids can be carried out in the physician's office. It usually is not necessary for the patient to go to the hospital, and complications occur only occasionally. Some tissue destruction may take place if too much solution is injected, and when this happens, there may be more or less bleeding. As a general rule, the treatments are painless. Infection may develop occasionally in about one-fifth of the patients. It has also been noted that recurrence of the hemorrhoids may take place in from one to five years, but if this happens further injections may be given to get rid of the enlarged veins. Relief of the symptoms occurs promptly when the injection treatment is used, and this method may be found quite satisfactory in many instances.

FRENCH STAR WEDS

HYDRO
THERE IS A POWER SHORTAGE

● Hydro powers hundreds of plants that produce the weapons to bring peace. The tempo of the war effort is increasing . . . More weapons must be produced . . . As a result, the demand for electricity is intensified.

Before the War . . . there was power to spare . . . Now, even with greatly increased supplies . . . as a result of important new developments, either completed or under construction . . . a critical power shortage threatens our War effort.

To meet this shortage, lights in streets, shops, show windows and signs are being strictly curtailed or turned out, by Order of the Dominion Power Controller. This however, will provide only part of the saving necessary.

Why these restrictions now? The effect of the shorter hours of daylight and the seasonal changes in the use of electricity during the Fall and Winter months together with added war load, impose greatly increased demands on present plants now loaded to capacity.

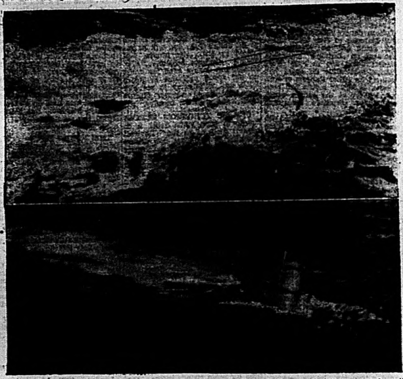
ELECTRICITY MUST BE CONSERVED —UNTIL THE WAR IS WON

Each one of us must do our "bit." In the home, office or shop, the "turning-on" of one unnecessary switch is a waste of Hydro. Our War plants must have the power they need. Do your part—see that they get it! Save electricity today and every day in every way possible.

THE HYDRO-ELECTRIC POWER COMMISSION OF ONTARIO

R. C. A. F. Planes Seek Out Skulking U-Boats With Considerable Success

Long hours of wearying patrol in the fair weather and foul over the Atlantic waters off Canada's East Coast brought reward to this Royal Canadian Air Force crew of a Hudson bomber. They caught a Nazi U-boat full surfaced and scored what has been assessed as a "kill." Secrecy which necessarily surrounds the activities and successes of airmen on operations in Canada who are just as much in an active theatre of war as their comrades overseas, was broken sufficiently by Air Minister Power to provide four typical examples of their attacks on U-boats. Catching the Nazi's napping in the conning tower, the Hudson skippered by Squadron Leader E. N. Small, AFC of Hamilton and Vancouver, approached within 300 yards before the U-boat crew realized its danger and scrambled to close the hatches. As the submarine crash-dived, depth charges rained on it and the sub was thrown to the surface again by a great explosion. When it sank, oil slick and wreckage told of its doom. The victors, pictured from LEFT to RIGHT are: Flight Sergeant R. A. Coulter of Vancouver, wireless operator-air gunner, Squadron Leader Small, Pilot Officer G. E. Francis of Stellarton, N.S., navigator, and Flight Sergeant D. P. Rogers of Edgeby, Sask.



Caught by the camera in what are believed to have been its death throes was the Nazi U-boat pictured from an attacking Royal Canadian Air Force bomber off the East Coast of Canada. The top picture was taken as the big Bolingbroke bomber skippered by Warrant Officer C. S. Buchanan of London, Ont., and Ottawa, roared down to the attack. The U-boat is crash-diving and only its "jumping wires" designed to ward off mines and submarine nets, appear above the surface. A few moments later the second picture was made as the U-boat was blown to the surface at a crazy angle by the big depth charges dropped by the bomber. Another depth charge was dropped the sub sank and the only remaining signs were bubbles of air and then a big patch of oil.

Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons on Canada's East Coast are steadily increasing the intensity of their attacks on U-boats in the North Atlantic and they have had considerable success in rooting out the undersea marauders. —

Major the Hon. C. G. Power, M. C., Minister of National Defence for Air, revealed this increasing success in general terms today and at the same time related details of several attacks on U-boats typical of a long list of forays by R.C.A.F. aircraft stationed on the East Coast. Mr. Power explained that, to keep the enemy guessing about the fate of their submarines, it is not possible to reveal the dates, locations or numbers of attacks but he did, in some measure, lift the veil of secrecy which necessarily has hidden the operations of the R.C.A.F. against U-boats.

The Air Minister made no large claims of success emphasizing that, like the Admiralty, the Air Force is very conservative in its claims of U-boat "kills." Furthermore, he pointed out, the Air Force has far more difficulty in establishing claims of sure "kills" because it is impossible for aircraft, unlike naval vessels, to pick up wreckage in proof of claims.

Mr. Power said he was revealing as much as he possibly could with respect to R.C.A.F. operations against submarines, not only to keep the people of Canada informed but particularly as a tribute to those aircrews who, through fair weather and foul, maintain a constant patrol of the Atlantic approaches to this Dominion. Theirs, he said, was a story of constant and continuing heroism, not as sensational perhaps as in the more active theatres of war but none the less real.

Four Attacks Related

The Air Ministry related the details of four different attacks on submarines which, he said, were typical of a long list of forays. The details were as follows:—

The weather was foul. It was raining and the clouds were almost down to the water. A Hudson bomber was on patrol. Its captain was Pilot Officer W. Graham of Vancouver, his observer was Flight Sgt. W. H. Bott of Ottawa, the wireless operator was Flight Sgt. J. P. Doble of Owen Sound, and the air gunner was Flight Sgt. N. W. Gardner of Toronto.

Sub Sighted

Suddenly through the murk the crew sighted a dim outline on the surface of the sea. It was two miles away. A little closer, the swell could be seen breaking over the conning tower. The U-boat was stationary on the surface and, although it crash-dived at first sight of the aircraft, it was still partly on the surface when the Hudson roared down to the attack. Depth charges straddled the U-boat and they exploded just forward of the conning tower apparently very close to the hull. The U-boat disappeared and a few moments later considerable debris floated to the surface. The crew reported that this appeared to be wood, which would be reasonable since it is customary for subs to have a wooden catwalk built for use when running on the surface. A small amount of oil came to the surface with the debris but 10 minutes later a large patch of oil started to bubble up. This patch finally was estimated at 2½ miles long and 25 feet wide. The aircraft remained in the vicinity for nearly four hours but finally had to be recalled to its base as the weather became worse.

Their foray was assessed as "an excellent attack" in which the U-boat "must have received considerable damage."

The message which the captain of the aircraft sent to Headquarters was simply:—"Hudson sighted and attacked U-boat while on surface. Depth charges dropped."

Another Victim

A Bolingbroke doing a "creeping, line-ahead search" for a U-boat reported chasing a freighter was responsible for the second attack cited by the Air Minister. Sgt. (Now W.O.2) C. S. Buchanan of London, Ont., and Ottawa, was captain of the aircraft and his crew composed of Sgt. (Now W.O.2) W. M. Howes, of Toronto, navigator; F/Sgt. H. B. Wilson, wireless operator, of Winnipeg, and F/Sgt. R. A. Mattern of Ponoka, Alta., the airgunner.

The sea was calm with a heavy swell but the crew's vision was limited to 2½ miles by a mist which hung over the sea. The crew reported that the sub was first visible as a continuous wave but "its shape soon became apparent."

"We went towards it at full throttle and dropped our first depth charge. It exploded right under the U-boat and blew it out of the water the bow going up at an angle of over 45 degrees." the report read. "It then slid down tail first out of sight. We then circled to drop sea markers and the sub floated to the top again. The whole of the deck was visible. A picture was taken as it came up. Another depth charge was dropped and the sub sank and did not reappear. Bubbles of air came up immediately and lasted for about ten minutes. Oil came up later and covered a large area. We stayed in the vicinity for an hour or so until our remaining fuel and weather reports made us decide to return to base."

The modest claim after this attack was, "It is considered that this attack resulted, at least, in severe damage to the submarine."

On another occasion, the Air Minister related, a Hudson swooped to within 300 feet of a U-boat before the Huns in the conning tower sighted it and scrambled below without any attempt to man their deck gun in defence.

The captain of this Hudson was Squadron Leader N. E. Small, AFC., of Hamilton and Vancouver. His crew—Pilot Officer G. E. Francis of Stellarton, N.S.; navigator; F/Sgt. R. A. Coulter of Vancouver and F/Sgt. D. P. Rogers of Edgeby, Sask., both wireless operator air gunners.

In Full View

The Hudson was engaged in a sweep of an area of the Atlantic when, a U-boat was sighted full-surfaced. Squadron Leader Small approached within three hundred feet of the sub before the startled Nazis realized their danger. As they closed the conning tower hatch, depth charges dropped around the U-boat's hull and there was continued blowing of its tanks. Fifty five minutes later there was a heavy explosion which, the crew said, caused a much greater upheaval of water than had the big depth charges. The sub surfaced immediately, apparently from the force of the explosion and its deck was raked by machine gun fire from the circling aircraft. Then as the sub sank again oil patches and some wreckages were observed.

The assessment by officers who analyzed the attack was, "It appears evident that this can be considered a "kill."

The last attack related by the Minister was by a Canso—an amphibian version of the giant Catalina flying boats. Flight Lieut. T. V. L. Mahon of Colgan, Ont., and Toronto, was the "skipper" and his crew was Pilot Officer J. L. Francine, of Philadelphia (Since transferred to U.S. Army Air Corps), co-pilot; Pilot Officer R. M. Smith of Vancouver, navigator; F/Sgt. P. P. Burrows of New Glasgow, N.S., and Sgt. C. W. Landale, Mimico, Ont., airgunners; and LAC. L. R. Wheatcroft of Winnipeg, and LAC. R. W. Hawke, East Parnham, P.Q., engineers.

They were on a routine patrol when the submarine was sighted on another course. The aircraft turned sharply to intercept and attack but the U-boat crash-dived as the aircraft was making its final approach. Bubbles coming to the surface showed the U-boat making a distinct turn to port so depth charges were dropped to cover that course. Oil appeared on the surface immediately in the area close to where the first salvo was dropped and oil continued to well up for approximately an hour and spread out over a considerable area estimated by the crew to be at least an acre in extent.

The assessment . . . "definite damage, possible kill."

Roblin Brothers Given Permission To Erect Dairy

At the committee meeting of the City Council on Thursday evening, the members recommended that Roblin Brothers be given permission to construct a dairy on part of lot E, on the west side of Coleman Street as per their application filed with the City Engineer providing that their smokestack is at least 20 feet above the roof of the Corbin Dock building in the future of such distance as the City Engineer or Council may direct.

The Reliance Aircraft and Tool Company was sold a part of lot 7 owned by the Corporation for the sum of $100 and a committee composed of Alderman Marshall, Rollins, Wotten and Mayor Thompson was appointed to interview the manager of the firm regarding this matter. It was recommended that upon the surrender of the deed held by Harold J. Scott and Jean M. Scott to the Corporation dated October 27th, 1941 for a lot on the north side of Parker Street, the Corporation will issue another deed in similar form but without the covenants dealing with building restrictions but that the City Engineer's approval be obtained for any type of building, that may be erected thereon.

The committee of Finance was authorized to purchase a machine from the National Cash Register Company at an approximate cost of $1350. This machine will be used [illegible] Treasury Department in the City Hall. It was also recommended that every copy of every recommendation made by the City Council be given to the Comptroller, who will follow same through to see that the Council's wishes are carried out promptly. The building covenant entered into between the Corporation and William Warham was ordered released and that a proper release be drawn up. These recommendations will be either ratified or turned down at the regular meeting of the Council to be held on Monday night.

W. Huntingdon Teacher Honored by Friends

Take 1—West Huntingdon teacher

West Huntingdon — Mrs. J. M. Williams who has been engaged as teacher in the Plane Settlement near Madoc was tendered a surprise party by her neighbors on Wednesday evening when they assembled at her home. Mr. Kenneth Stewart was chairman for the program and Mrs. Scott read an appropriate address to Mrs. Williams while Mrs. Angus Mumby, Mrs. Frank Herity and Mrs. Wallace McInroy presented the gifts from the community to Mrs. Williams and children.

Anniversary Services Held

The autumn anniversary services started on Sunday when the Beulah and Moira United churches held their annual special services. Each church presented an attactive appearance. Special music was furnished by good choirs with Mrs. James Vanderwater at Moira and Miss Phyllis Twiddy at Beulah as pianists.

Each congregation chose as their anniversary minister their regular pastor, Mr. Kenneth Stewart at Moira and Rev. O. Wager at Beulah and each delivered appropriate and helpful sermons. The appearance of many visitors who were accorded the usual hospitality of the people added to the memorable day in the life of these churches.

Fowl Supper

On Monday evening the Beulah congregation held a fowl supper in the community hall and sacred concert in the church when large numbers were present.

Edeavors Class Meeting

The monthly meeting of the Endeavors Class was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Wright on Tuesday evening. Mr. Clifford Green presided. Mr. Clayton Wright read the Scripture lesson and Mr. Stewart offered prayer and gave the topic.

Musical numbers were given by Mrs. W. J. Fitchett, Mrs. Ambrose Wright, Mrs. Clifford Green and Mrs. John Moorcroft.

The ladies of Fuller United and Fuller Presbyterian churches sponsored a delicious dinner at the Presbyterian dining hall Wednesday afternoon. The entire proceeds were for Red Cross work and two fine quilts were completed for the same organization.

Here is the
DONNACONA
Wartime HOME CONSERVATION Plan

1. CONSERVATION OF FUEL: Coal and oil must be conserved today to make more fuel available for urgent war needs. Proper home insulation, such as provided by Donnacona, conserves fuel—for insulation checks heat waste, cuts fuel consumption. Donnacona insulates as it builds or renovates. It is decorative, too.

2. CONSERVATION OF FUNDS: When you insulate with Donnacona, fuel savings quickly repay the small initial cost of insulation. You permanently reduce your overhead; more money is available for War Savings and other necessities.

3. CONSERVATION OF SPACE: Today the nation is fighting waste, and this includes waste space. Idle space can be converted simply and inexpensively, through the use of Donnacona Board, into useful rooms for the family or for paying guests. You can help your budget and help relieve an acute housing shortage at one blow.

4. CONSERVATION OF HEALTH: A healthy nation works and fights better, and good health begins at home. Elimination of drafts, through the use of Donnacona Board, an even warmth in winter and coolness in summer, all help to promote better health at home and added comfort.

5. CONSERVATION OF VALUES: Today values are liable to rapid change, but a house will always be the best and safest investment in times of economic stress. That investment can be protected and enhanced through remodelling and renovation with Donnacona Board.

6. CONSERVATION OF EFFICIENCY: It is at home that we gather strength for tomorrow's job—and that job may be of vital importance to Canada. Donnacona will make your home more comfortable —a real haven of peace in which everyone, including the night shift worker, can sleep undisturbed, thanks to the sound-deadening properties of Donnacona.

Assess your home on these six points

CAN WE BUILD OR RENOVATE?

YES! There are no restrictions on the building of homes costing up to $5,000 or on renovations up to that amount and no special permit is needed. Small home construction and renovation are rated as wartime essentials and are badly needed to relieve housing congestion.

ARE MATERIALS AVAILABLE?

YES! While no one can accurately predict future supplies, the necessary materials for most forms of construction and modernization are readily obtainable. This applies to the many Donnacona and Murray products listed at the right.

For further information, get your free copy of the Booklet describing the Donnacona Plan in detail. Your Donnacona dealer has it. It tells you how you can obtain the maximum of economy, efficiency and comfort in your home — easily and inexpensively.

. . . THEN CALL YOUR DONNACONA DEALER!

Murray Products for new building or renovating include:

Donnacona Roughcast Insulating Board — Veelap Board and Plaster Base — Donnacona Hardboard — Donnacona Modernite (Hardboard, prefinished in colour) — Insulated Brick Siding — Asphalt Shingles — Roll Roofing — Sheathings and Felts — Fibreen (the wind and waterproof reinforced building paper) — Waterproofing and Preserving Coatings, Paints and Stains, etc.

Cards Determined to Clinch National League Flag Today As Only One Game is Needed

Dodgers Keep Race Alive by Downing the Boston Braves in 11 Innings

CAMILLI HOMERS

(By JUDSON BAILEY)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

St. Louis Cardinals are in a position to clinch the National League pennant today and maybe it's time to start feeling sorry for Brooklyn Dodgers—who never felt sorry for anybody when they were kicking the other clubs in the circuit around and aren't wasting any time grieving about their own plight now.

Today they are two games behind with two to play and the best they can hope for is a tie that would force a post-season playoff. But they still are battling.

They could have been eliminated either Thursday or Friday if they had lost—but they won and now, days after they had been counted out of the running, they have crowded the Cardinals so that the Red Birds must administer the knockout themselves. The Dodgers haven't quit.

It took 11 innings to beat Boston Braves yesterday, but the Dodgers made it with a 6-5 score for their sixth straight triumph. Max West hit two home runs to put the heat under the Dodgers—and Dolph Camilli countered with his 26th roundtripper of the year and Arky Vaughan came through with a clutch triple to tie the score in the eighth.

Then in the 11th Camilli led off with a single and the Dodgers loaded the bases with one out. The pressure made the Braves crack and when Billy Herman smacked a grounder to second baseman Sibby Sisti he threw wild over catcher Ernie Lombardi's head as Camilli slid home with the winning run.

102nd Victory for Dodgers

This was the 102nd victory for the Dodgers, who never in National League history had won as many as 100 games until they bagged that number to win the pennant last year.

Only one other club, Chicago Cubs of 1939, ever won as many as 100 games without earning the pennant and many championships have been won with 90 victories—or less.

Thus the Dodgers, mostly a collection of oldtimers bound together with baling wire as a sort of one-year wonder to win the 1941 pennant, have played good enough ball to win the flag again in about 29 out of 30 years.

They may lose the pennant today, but they have proved they are a real first rate ball club.

Leiber Takes Turn in Box

What other fun there was in the National League yesterday was largely concerned with Hank Leiber 30-year-old veteran of 10 years big league service as an outfielder, making his debut as a pitcher for New York Giants.

The big fellow, who used to pitch for the University of Arizona and who did some batting-practice turns for the Giants this season to keep down his weight, went the route in the second game of a doubleheader with the Phils, allowing only nine hits and striking out four. But he walked five men, hit one batsman, made two wild pitches a balk and an error to lose 9-1.

New York won the first game 6-3 behind Hal Schumacher.

In the only American League game Chicago White Sox cuffed Cleveland Indians 8-1 before only 200 fans and tossed the Tribe into a tie for fourth place with the idle Detroit Tigers.

Detroit and Cleveland, who finished in a tie for fourth last year, have a two-game series today and tomorrow and if they split will wind up in another deadlock.

"SOLDIER" JONES DIES IN SLEEP

Former Heavyweight Boxing Champion of Canada Once Fought Tunney

Toronto, Sept. 26 —(CP)—Pte John Horace (Soldier) Jones, 46, former heavyweight boxing champion of Canada, died in his sleep early Friday at the Long Branch Small Arms Training Centre where he was on service with the Canadian Army as physical instructor. Death was believed due to heart trouble.

A native of the Gaspe District in Quebec, Jones won more than 250 bouts in Canada, the United States, Britain, Europe and South America. He boxed Gene Tunney in the semi-finals at the Dempsey-Carpentier bout.

He served overseas with the Canadian forces in the last war, starting his boxing career at the training camp at Valcartier.

On his return to Canada after the war he took up boxing as a profession and won the Canadian boxing championship with a "one-punch knockout" over Jim Stockly at Toronto Island.

During his career he met such fighters as Harry Greb, the famous middleweight who gave the doughty Jones a beating.

Sports Roundup

New York, Sept. 26 (AP).—War Secretary Henry Stimson probably wouldn't know what to do with a pair of padded mittens, but there's no doubt he deserves the heavyweight thinking championship. . . . Of all the people who had anything to do with the Louis-Conn affair, he was the only one in authority to realize that the prestige of the United States army was a great deal more important than any amount of dough the fight might bring in for army relief . . . and he didn't hesitate to do the one thing that was best for the prestige of the army.

NOT MUCH CHANCE OF SECRETARY CHANGING MIND

Soldier Heavyweights Offer to Put on Fight for Nothing

JACOBS OUT $15,000

By SID FEDER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Washington, Sept. 26 (AP). — Army circles didn't think there was much chance today that War Secretary Stimson would change his mind about cancelling the Joe Louis-Billy Conn bout, in spite of the offer of the two soldier heavyweights and promoter Mike Jacobs to stage the fight "for nothing".

The heavyweight champion and his No. 1 challenger made the offer last night, several hours after Stimson had called off the Oct. 12 bout with the statement that "the standards and interests of the army did not permit the proposed contest to be carried out".

Both Sergeant Joe and Corporal Billy thought it was a "shame" that the $300,000 worth of tickets already sold for the tussle would have to be turned back "instead of going to army emergency relief".

Would "Bankroll" Fight.

Jacobs, who had been requested by the War Department to promote the fight originally, immediately added that if permission were received on the offer of the fighters, he would even be willing to "bankroll" the fight, "which is something no one has done up to now." Earlier Jacobs had eplained that War Boxing, Inc., the organization the War Department had named to run the bout, was supposed to have financed the show for $75,000, but that this had never been done and that he had paid $15,000 in promotional and ticket expenses for the organization.

Many Hours of Conferences.

Stimson's cancellation of the fight followed several hours of conferences with Major General A. D. Surles, head of the army's public relations, and various members of War Boxing, Inc. One of the "details" was the $135,451 which the war department had promised the fighters were to get to pay certain of their debts. This total had been broken down this way: $59,805 owed by Louis to Jacobs; $34,500 owed by Conn to Jacobs; $4,146 owed by Louis to John Roxborough, one of his co-managers.

The war secretary did not say just what there was about the arrangements that did not meet with the army's "standards and interests" nor did he explain just which details had shocked him and caused him to start his investigation 24 hours earlier.

Canada's Athletes at War

By MIKE GEENSTEIN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Sept. 26 (CP). — Naval headquarters at Toronto seem to get a pretty full share of local athletes joining the services and it isn't doing their entry in the Ontario Rugby Union Football Union senior league any harm either.

Latest addition to the tar's O. R. F. U. twelve is Pat Reid. In enlisting with the Navy, Reid joins Jack Wedley. Both were starting ends with Toronto Argonauts last season. Steve Levantis and Elwyn Morris are two other Argo players who adorn the sailors' lineup.

A look at the navy's prospective lineup resembles a panoramic view of some of Toronto's better known sport stars of former years. On tap are Hugh Cuddie, brilliant Balmy Beach ace; Bob Goldham, former Toronto collegiate grid star and member of the Stanley Cup winning Leafs; Lloyd White, another local high school star, and Shag Park, basketball wizard with the famed Simpson Grads.

From Vancouver we hear that Ken Feeney who is overseas with the Canadian Forestry Corps has been making a hit with the corps track team and recently ran a practice mile in 4:16. What's more young Ken is still in his 'teens.

Mert MacKinnon, former Niagara Falls Stamford Collegiate Institute athletic instructor, is getting some pretty deserving bouquets from soldiers stationed at Uplands Camp near Ottawa. Mert now is associated with the Y.M.C.A. as an athletic supervisor and is doing a fine job of directing sports for the troops in the camp.

Fraser Heartwell, well-known Rosetown curler, who played third position with Saskatchewan's curling champions (1942), is stationed at Ottawa with the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps.

* * *

Les Johnstone and Tom Spencer, two former sandlot ball players in Galt, are members of the newly-formed mouth organ band at number 10 training centre in Kitchener.

* * *

Ralph C. Bone, prominent Guelph sportsman, has enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

* * *

Another news item from Guelph says that the annual Thanksgiving Day road race there will consist of a series of varied races designed for soldiers instead of the usual cross-country run.

Allan McSween, well-known Vancouver soccer player now holds a commission in the R.C.A.F.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Sept. 26 (CP).—Five will get you five almost anywhere in Canada today that there will be a Canadian football final this year . . . the navy-air force opener of the Ontario Rugby Football Union in Toronto has aroused as much interest as the Big Four's palmiest openers, and if Ottawa and Montreal leagues can get moving within the next week or ten days plans will go ahead for an eastern playoff . . . the west seems well set, with Winnipeg Blue Bombers intending to take an all-star club out of its city league come playoff time.

In case you had forgotten, the Winnipeg League teams all use the T-formation laid down by Reg. Threlfall, the league's head coach. . . . He confers with team coaches on new plays and formations so he'll be fully qualified to coach the all-stars, which will be chosen in a few weeks.

Incidentally:

Ken (Halifax Herald) Chisholm reports that Bill Benson, winger with Brooklyn Americans last year, will be available for hockey in Halifax. . . . Benson is with the navy. . . . Bax (Montreal star) O'Meara would like to see Montreal get Gordon Drillon, as who wouldn't? . . . Bax believes Drillon will score 20 goals this season with any club in the league. . . . The doubters around Toronto think Drillon will have a tough time without Syl Apps to feed him passes, but it's a shaky theory. . . . All Drillon needs is someone to get the puck through the defence for him, and more than Apps know how.

* * *

For people who would like the idea of national juvenile and midget playoffs, Vince (Winnipeg Tribune) Leah offers an indication that they needn't be a financial flop. . . . He recalls that when a Western Canadian midget final was held in 1939, the backer made $12—not much, but a moral victory. . . . Unless I'm thinking of four other good hockey players, Red Tilson, the Oshawa junior Toronto Leafs are hoping to use this year, played for the Regina club in that midget final. . . . Mrs. D. C. Coleman's Western Prince, British Columbia futurity winner, is laid up with shipping fever and may not be ready for the big eastern juvenile stakes. . . . He is in Toronto.

RCAF HURRICANES READY FOR NAVY IN TODAY'S GAME

Stirring Music of Service Bands to Mark Opening of Football Season

BEACHES STRONG

Toronto, Sept. 26 (CP).—The stirring music of service bands will today mark the opening of the Ontario Rugby Football Union's 1942 season, when teams representing the Royal Canadian Air Force and Royal Canadian Navy meet at Toronto's Varsity Stadium, while at Hamilton the Wildcats—1941 champions—play Toronto Balmy Beach team and at Kitchener Toronto Oakwoods and Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers clash in their opening game.

To their tussle with the naval team from H.M.C.S. York, Coach Lew Hayman's R.C.A.F. Hurricanes bring a strong backfield, which will be directed by AC2. Bill Stukus, who was the Toronto Argonauts' star quarterback in 1941.

The navy team, coached by Ted Morris and Jim Palmer, lacks reserves, but has been training for some time and has in its lineup several gridders who gained fame in senior company.

Only eight members of the 1941 club are playing with Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers this year, and the team has combed Stratford, Guelph, and the Canadian Army's No. 10 training centre for material. How they will perform is anyone's guess at present.

Football followers have centred their attention upon the game between the Wildcats and Balmy Beach at Hamilton. Even though the services have taken ten players from Wildcats' championship team, Coach Fred Veale is confident this year's lineup constitutes a powerful crew.

Veale's squad includes Al Lenard, top passer of the O.R.F.U., George Slinn, kicker and plunging back, backfielder Mike Hedgewick, Jimmy Mumio, outside wing, and snapback Hardy Awrey.

Coach Alex Ponton's Balmy Beach team has the services of many veteran players, including Bob Reid, Leo Deadey, Len Staughton, Sammy Sward, Doug Smylie, Butch Alison and Jack Leeming. Earl Selkirk, mentioned as a possible starter, will not be playing, however.

'FRIDAY' DAINARD GETS COMMISSION

Former Picton Hurler Continues Good Work With His Team at Coast

Picton, Sept. 26 — Pitching for Picton Intermediates in the Ontario O.B.A. finals before the war, Gordon "Friday" Dainard is continuing to hurl championship ball. Not only did he pitch his team, the Prince of Wales Rangers, to the title in the 16th Infantry Brigade League at Prince George, B.C., but he received his commission as 2nd lieutenant as well. He went overseas with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment as a member of the First Division but returned to Canada to act as an instructor last April. He has a brother, R.S.M. Garnet Dainard with the local regiment overseas.

In the final of the baseball playoff, Dainard hurled three-hit ball, with his team getting 14 hits. The score was 12-1.

Members of the champions are well known throughout Ontario, and included catcher, Jeskari, of the Pitt League in Toronto; at 1st base, Minarski, of St. Catharines Sr. A. team; 2nd base, Maynard, of Hamilton Seniors; at short shop, Samborski, of Mercantile, Toronto; 3rd base, Brooks, Peterborough Seniors; right field, Fruitman, of Detonia Park; centre field, Burton, Peterborough Seniors; left field, Grass, Dentonia Park.

League president is Greg. Kabat, famous quarterback of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers of three years ago. Umpire in chief of the 16th Infantry Brigade is Sgt. A. Lloyd, formerly of Belleville.

BROOKS SCUTTLED FROM N.H.L. SAYS MANAGER DUTTON

Claims Madison Square Garden Forced Team Out of Hockey Loop

NO PLAYING DATES

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Sept. 26 —(CP)— The most colorful manager in modern hockey has been benched for at least a year, perhaps for the duration. Red Dutton rides no more. But he galloped off the National Hockey League scene last night with a verbal blast in the best Dutton tradition.

"Brooklyn Americans haven't quit the National Hockey League—we've been scuttled," said Dutton.

"We're out of the league because Madison Square Gardens forced us out and for no other reason.

"I say we were scuttled because we had every reason to believe at the National league meeting in May that the Americans would get Madison Square Garden gates as usual. It wasn't until Sept. 16 that I was advised by telegram by President Frank Calder that no dates were available for the 1942-43 season for the Americans."

Dutton made his statement yesterday after the board of governors voted unanimously to suspend the Brooklyn franchise for one year. It is unlikely it will be resumed before the end of the war. President Calder said when announcing the decision the Americans had only four players left from last year's last-place team—two veterans, Mel Hill and Buzz Boll; one youngster, 19-year-old Harry Watson and one shipyard worker, Pat Egan.

Not Quarreling With League

"I'm not quarrelling with my National League Colleagues," said Dutton heatedly, "but how in. . . is a guy going to go shopping for a rink to play in at this late date?"

Lester Patrick, vice-president of Madison Square Garden and General Manager of New York Rangers, could not be reached for comment on Dutton's statement. Several weeks ago in New York Patrick said while no dates had been set for either Rangers or Americans, 48 hockey nights had been provided for at the garden which would have permitted Americans playing dates.

Calder said Dutton realized he couldn't continue, and that there was no opposition to the decision to suspend the franchise. Dutton was asked to remain a member of the board of governors. He accepted.

Schedule Drawn Up

A schedule for the 1942-43 season was drawn up and the season will start Oct. 31 with Rangers at Toronto and Boston at Montreal. Each of the six remaining clubs—Boston, New York, Toronto, Chicago, Detroit and Montreal—will play 50 games during the season, 25 at home. The schedule last year provided 48 games for each club, 24 of them home contests.

The schedule will end March 18, and the Stanley Cup playoffs will be limited to four teams.

The governors voted to discourage employment in professional hockey of players eligible for army service, and approved the report of the league's amateur relations committee on a tentative agreement reached with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association. Referees and linesmen for the season were named.

The board of governors' meeting ended a two-day league session here. Delegates from all clubs are on their way home today.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

DID YOU KNOW—WHEN THE Kingston Combines were accepted into the Ottawa Senior Hockey League recently there was one dissenting voice? That came from Group Captain W. D. Van Vliet, the one and same 'Van' who championed hockey and football at the Trenton Air Station before the war..Scribe Bill Walshe, of Kingston, suggests Van Vliet was carrying the rivalry with Kingston that started back in the old Van Horne Memorial series days....Well, there was a day when Mister Walshe was quite elated with the "bush league" hockey provided Kingston fans in the Van Horne series, but apparently he's forgotten when Kingston was only a "city league town"....It seems the ever-faithful Van Vliet suggested that the Trenton R.C.A.F. sextette be accepted in place of Kingston, as Belleville is directly connected via the C.P.R.....That one didn't last long and why should it, after all the Ottawa Senior loop commences early and plays late, thanks to the advantages of artificial ice....No doubt good old "Van" was having another of his puns at Kingston's expense....However with the class of former professional pucksters at the Trenton base the only reason Belleville could not be included in a senior "A" program is the absence of artificial ice....Incidentally Group Captain W. D. Van Vliet is manager of the Ottawa R.C.A.F. team, present holdrehs of the Allan Cup (remember)....Besides the Flyers and Kingston, the Hull Volants, Montagnards, Ottawa Canadiens and possibly the Postal Department will compose the loop ....The boys up at No. 5 I.T.S. are saying au revoir to F/O. Robt. Hunter, popular head sports officer at the local R.C.A.F. initial training station....Genial Bob has been posted to the Air Observers School at St. John's P.Q., and will be replaced by F/O. Alex Munro, wall known Toronto athlete...."F/O. Hunter has done a swell job lining up our sports programs at No. 5 I.T.S. and we're sorry to see him leave,' comented superior officers upon learning of his transfer.

ONE OF TORONTO'S BETTER known athletes, Eddie Sobel, is at present included in the Physical Training School class now being conducted at the Trenton Central Flying School. Eddie Sobel held the middleweight wrestling championship of Ontario, he played rugby with the Toronto Argonaut juniors and starred at softball with the noted Jewish Tri-bell nine and boxed several seasons under the colors of the Elmgrove Athletic Club. Prior to the war Eddie Sobel proved a popular wrestler, when the light-heavies held sway at the Hume arena during which time he made many local friends through his genial sportsman-like manner and undoubtedly Eddie Sobel will prove a successful "P.T." instructor, as he is a clean living chap, who lives for the exercise and fun he receives from sports.

REMEMBER WHEN MAX Schmeling, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, stopped Mickey Walker in eight rounds at New York ten years ago tonight? The same night at Chicago Max Baer—who became titleholder in June 1934—pounded Tuffy Griffiths for seven rounds before the fight was stopped.

HERE THEY GO AGAIN — YEP, Skipper Frank Tunney is coming back with John (is he sore) Katan versus Earl McCready in a finished bout Wednesday night, but this time the Wrestling Commission stepped in and named Al "Bunny" Dunlop as commission referee for the Empire elimination. Now Katan's mad, Lawson's face is red and McCready is vowing vengeance. However, aside from the rematch Promoter Tunney sprang a real surprise, as he's bringing in four brand new wrestling faces including the two Burns' ruffians from Omaha, Neb. There's Jake and George (no relation to Gracie Allen) Burns, the Nebraska Wildcats. 'Tis said the only difference between the Burns' boys and the Dusek quartette is the fact there's more of the wild and pugnacious Duseks." I'll have suitable opponents for the Burns' brothers because they're a tough pair of ring hombres. Why in Des Moines recently Jake was on the short end of a scrap when Brother George entered the ring and it was necessary to call police to quell the riot they created," revealed Tunney in lauding the Omaha pair's ring prowess.

During his career as a pitcher with the New York Yankees, Charlie (Big Red) Ruffing has racked up the unusual number of nine double-figure shutout wins. The list follows:

September 17, 1931—17-0, St. Louis.
July 10, 1936—18-0, Cleveland.
June 11, 1937—10-0, St. Louis.
July 5, 1937—15-0, Boston.
May 30 1938—10-0, Boston.
May 14, 1939—10-0, Philadelphia.
August 13, 1939—21-0 Philadelphia.
July 18, 1942—12-0, Chicago.
August 17, 1942—15-0, Philadelphia.

MIKE JACOBS MIGHT HAVE "control" over all boxing in the Eastern States. But he doesn't control the United States Army. Actually a promoter in the east (that's anywhere east of the Mississippi) hasn't been able to promote a championship boxing bout without Mike Jacob's "go-ahead and cut me in" sign. Yesterday Secretary of War Stimson ordered Cpl. Billie Conn and Sergt. Joe Louis to report back to their respective military bases and called the Louis-Conn fight off. Just what Secretary Stimson meant when he said Thursday he "was shocked over some of the details surrounding fight", may never be made public, but it's safe betting that Jacobs and a well known American newspaper syndicate were both mixed up in something smelly, but then the War Department isn't quite as gullible as the general public. Now Jacobs is crying to the high heavens relative to the alleged loss of $15,000., said to have been lost in preliminary arrangements for the bout. Already over a third of a million dollars worth of tickets have either been sold or ordered. Oh yes, no reflection was cast on either fighter, says Stimson. But then—who signed the articles—

THIS AND THAT JACK Doyle, Broadway's batting expert, places the Yankees 5 to 2 better than the National League winners for the world series. . . .The Yankees are pulling for the Dodgers to win the senior circuit title if for no other reason than to prove to dem Bums last year's series winning was no fluke . . . They seem to think Big Ern Bonham will get the opening pitching assignment for the Yankees . . . Buff Horton's Trenton R. C. A. F. mushballers lost 6 to 5 to the Toronto St. Agnes and now play the third and final game at Oshawa. . .Horton says his Airmen out-hit the Queen City seniors 6 to 4, but errors made the difference . . .We'll see what happens today. . . .Red Dutton says Madison Square Gardens forced him and his Brooklyn Americans out of the N. H. L. . . ."We were scuttled," admits "Mervin the Red". . .Upside down, with care.

BASE RUNNING NOT LIKELY TO UPSET YANKEES

New York Can be Beaten Only Hard Way Say the Experts

COOPER A STANDOUT

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Sept. 26 (AP). — St. Louis Cardinals probably should be warned in advance that the reckless, hell-raising base running that has served them so well in the National League is likely to back-fire on them if they try it on the Yankees in the world series.

The Yankees are not a stampeding ball club, and the first time Billy Southworth's wild young men start tearing around the sacks on undisclosed missions the chances are that they simply will be swatted firmly. A sure thing is that the Yankees will never become flustered and present the Cards a cluster of runs, as several of their league rivals have done lately.

There is only one way the Cards can defeat the proud American League champs. That is with superlative pitching, tight fielding and timely hitting. The Yankees will give nothing away. They can be beaten, of course, but only the hard way.

Study of the two clubs has shown—to the satisfaction of this writer, at least—that the Yankees have a far more explosive outfield than the Cardinals and a better infield, with Joe Gordon an absolute stand-out at second base. In Gordon and Rizzuto they possess the best double-play combination in baseball.

Cards Strong In Pitching.

Pitching undoubtedly is the Cardinals' strong point, and if Mort Cooper and Max Lanier are at their best in the series the National Leaguers will stand a chance of battling the Yanks right down to the last hitter out in the seventh game. If Cooper, in particular, gets belted around at the start, it could be over in four games.

National League batters who have seen more of Cooper this year than they might have wished, say he is a truly great pitcher when "right" and they are looking forward to his joust with the Yankees. One manager, who will remain anonymous at his own request, predicted flatly the other day that Cooper would handcuff the Yanks every time he faces them. That is a large order, but it indicates the respect in which his league rivals hold the Card ace.

There is some difference of opinion as to the second best St. Louis curver, but a majority of National League players picked Lani Lanier, the southpaw. They think he has a good chance of setting the Yankees down, and the same for Ernie White if his ailing left wing is recovered fully. Johnny Beazley, no — even though he is a 20-game winner. They say the kid is too inexperienced to face men like DiMaggio and Keller and Gordon in the tight spots pointing out what happened to Junior Thompson of Cincinnati, a similar freshman sensation, when he tackled the Yankees in the '39 world series.

Yanks' Pitching Good

One thing no one seems to think of doubting is that the Yankees will get fine pitching. It is a sort of tradition with them. Last year, for instance, Manager Joe McCarthy couldn't find a spot for Ernie Bonham until the fifth game of the series, and then Ernie sat Brooklyn down with four hits and a single run. They have about the same bunch of flingers to toss against the Cards.

The official odds before Cooper pitched his two-hitter against Cincinnati the other day were understood to be fluttering around 5-2 against the Cardinals winning the World Series. The report was that they would shorten somewhat in view of Mort's fine showing.

The Yankees figure to win it, all right, but it should go at least six games.

SYRACUSE CHIEFS DEFEATED 3 TO 2 IN MOUND DUEL

Columbus Red Birds Score Two Runs in First Innings and Never Headed

SAUER HOMERS

By FRITZ HOWELL)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Columbus, O., Sept. 26. (AP)—The Little World Series scene shifted today to Syracuse, N.Y., after the Chiefs, International League playoff winners, and Columbus Red Birds, champs of American Association playoff, split the opening pair of contests here.

The Birds, after losing the opener 6-1, came back last night to win 3-2 as southpaw Harry Brecheen scattered six hits over four frames to best Charley (Red) Barrett in a mound duel.

Tonight, under Syracuse flood lights, Skipper Jewel Ens of the Chiefs plan to tart 19-year Ewell Blackwell. Manager Eddie Dyer of the Birds will rely on George Munger for the pitching chore.

Blackwell won 15 and lost 10 this year, while Munger had a 16-13 season.

Win in First Frame

The Red Birds, defending minor-league champions, sewed up last night's game in the first frame. The 2,741 chilled fans hardly had taken their seats before two runs were in. Second baseman George Myatt took Barrett's change of pace ball in the Birds and first baseman Harry Davis followed with a sharp single to left.

Left fielder Henry Sauer juggled the ball for an error, Myatt reaching home and Davis second. Gee-Gee Gleeson sacrificed Davis to third, and outfielder Eddie Luskon singled him home.

Sauer, first up for the Chiefs in the second, blasted a homer into the left-field stands, but from then on until the ninth Brecheen set the Chiefs down with two hits. In the ninth second baseman Roland Harrington opened with a double, and Sauer sent him home with a single to centre after first-baseman Eddie Shokes had fanned.

From the third inning on, Birds had only one hit, Myatt leading off the seventh with a single which proved futile.

Brecheen fanned six, getting three in a row in the fourth, and walked two, while Barrett struck out four and issued three passes.

RED BIRDS READY TO TAKE ON CUBS IN CRUCIAL SERIES

Billy Southworth Will Send Southpaw Lanier or White to Mound

PLAYERS JUBILANT

By CHARLES DUNKLEY
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

St. Louis, Sept. 26 (AP)—The first National League pennant in eight years may be fluttering over Sportsman's Park, home of the St. Louis Cardinals, before dusk tonight.

The amazing Cardinals, behind the pitching of either Ernie White of Max Lanier, both left handers, play Chicago Cubs today in the first of a two-game series that comes to a jittery end tomorrow. If the Cards win just one game—or Brooklyn loses either of its remaining two games—the championship goes to St. Louis for the sixth time since 1926. The Cards now lead by two games.

Warneke to Oppose Cards

Lon Warneke, the old Arkansas hummin' bird, figures to draw the pitching assignment for the Cubs. Warneke, sold by the Cards last July, lost a heartbreaking 1-0 game to the Cards in Chicago last Sunday—with a double steal beating him, and with big Mort Cooper, St. Louis ace right hander, registering his 21st victory.

Warneke, bearing no malice against his former club for selling him, and cutting him out of a possible $6,000 world series share, nevertheless will bear down to the limits of his physical capabilities to win.

"It's either me or them," he drawled in his Arkansas Dialect. "I've got to keep the wolf away from the door, too. I started Brooklyn on the tailspin. I'll go after the Cards, too."

Cards Are Eager

Refreshed by a day's rest, and with three ailing players, suffering from colds, immensely improved, the Cards are ready, eager, and determined for the finals that comes tomorrow. Although supremely confident of triumph, they're not mentioning the word "pennant," not yet. They have won more games than any National League team since 1910 when the Cubs won 104, and will be seeking their 105th. The all-time high is 106 set by the Cubs of 1906.

The sniffling players—outfielder Enos Slaughter, first baseman Johnny Hopp, pitcher Cooper—all displayed signs of improvement. Terry Moore, laid up for 10 days with a pulled muscle in the calf of his left leg, may return to centrefield.

The Cards already have decided on the split of the world's series put, but the division will not be revealed until it has the approval of Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, to whom it must be submitted.

Manager Billy Southworth is getting ready to sing the song of victory. "What the hell! We'll win it ourselves today. We can win one out of two games from anybody, anytime, and you can get ready to start your celebrating tonight. I think the boys feel the same way about it."

"I Killed That Man"

(First Belleville Showing)

Hollywood has one perpetual casting problem; what to do about hard-faced tough-looking character actors who are to be used in motion picture scenes. However, Director Phil Rosen who turned the camera on "I Killed That Man," starring Ricardo Cortez with Joan Woodbury and Iris Adrian, starting Sunday midnight at the Capitol theatre, solved the problem by getting his makeup man to turn his players into hardened criminals.

The fact is that Hollywood has always attracted people who wanted to get into pictures. But the trouble is that for the most part those who come to Hollywood are usually good looking or reasonably handsome. As a result there is a dearth of hard-character players and directors are usually at their wits' end when casting a prison or gang picture.

"The Awful Truth"

Commencing Sunday midnight at the Capitol, Columbia's romantic comedy, "The Awful Truth," starring Irne Dunne and Cary Grant, with Ralph Bellamy, Alexander D'Arcy, Cecil Cunningham and Robert Allen in support. Also in a prominent role is Skippy, the "Thin Man" wide-hair pup, masquerading as Mr. Smith.

The films highlight is the final sequence set in a swank mansion at which a dinner party is being tendered to announce Cary Grant's engagement. Irene worms herself into being invited by posing as his sister. Scandalous is the word for what happens after that.

Leo McCarey, who won memorable fame for his "Ruggles of Red Gap," directed "The Awful Truth" from Vina Delmar's adaptation of Arthur Richman's famous stage play.

AT THE BELLE

"This Above All"

In "This Above All", the Darryl F. Zanuck picturisation of Eric Knight's best-seller, which is now playing at the Belle theatre and stars Tyrone Power with her. Joan Fontaine delivers what is probably the longest uninterrupted speech ever to be recorded by a camera sound track—a speech that consumes three minutes of running time, during which the lens is focussed on her and her alone.

It may well be the most consecutive lines in film history. But, at best, it can be rivalled only by Jimmy Stewart's filibuster in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington." And it is surely calculated to test to the utmost the emotional floodgates even of the actress who has two years running won the coveted film critics' award, as well as the Academy Award this year.

The speech is an impassioned plea for England, but more essentially, it is an argument for unity and concerted effort in the war. "Whatever may happen, let us decide and not the enemy"—that is the keynote of her speech.

Miss Fontaine is to many already the first lady of the screen. Her haunting portrayal in "This Above All" is expected to add untold legions to this following by experts who are already boosting her for the 1942 Academy Award.

"This Above All" is a stirring story of love in this war shadowed generation. Moviegoers are assured of a tremendous emotional experience, when they visit the Belle theatre to see this picture.

The Belle News of the World and a color fun cartoon will also be exhibited. Continuous shows will be presented today.

AT THE McCARTHY

"A DESPERATE CHANCE FOR ELLERY QUEEN"

Ellery Queen, super-sleuth of radio, fiction and screen, returns to the McCarthy Theatre next in Columbia's "A Desperate Chance for Ellery Queen", latest in the thrill-packed series of detective comedies. William Gargan again plays the title role, with Margaret Lindsay continuing as Nikki Porter, his lovely, crime-hunting secretary. Other familiars include Charley Grapewin, as Inspector Queen, and James Burke, as Sergeant Velie.

"A Desperate Chance for Ellery Queen" was directed by James Hogan, one of filmdom's better fabricators of action and adventure dramas. Supporting players include such capable character actors as John Litel, Lilian Bond, Noel Madison, Jack LaRue and Frank Thomas.

The new film has its major activity set in San Francisco, to which Ellery and Nikki go in quest of a banker, believed drowned the year before. The case is brought up at the instigation of the banker's wife. In their efforts to locate the man and learn the reasons for his mysterious disappearance, they become entangled in one of the wildest webs of mystery and crime ever brought to the screen, according to enthusiastic Hollywood report.

The disappearance, they learn, is due to a blackmail and embezzlement plot. Ellery's efforts to straighten out that situation lead right to a murder. Ellery's efforts to solve that crime make him and Nikki almost immediate suspects in the eyes of the San Francisco police department. Before he is through with the case, he establishes himself as one of San Francisco's most "wanted" men . . . wanted by both the police and a sinister crime ring operating from a lavish night club and gambling den.

"A Desperate Chance for Ellery Queen" reaches its climactic moments amidst the blaze of gun-fire and breath-taking excitement.

The players are said to be uniformly excellent, and the film itself one of the best in the Ellery Queen series.

"Tramp, Tramp, Tramp."

America's latest Army Camp feature hit "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp", starring Jackie Gleason, Jack Durant, Florence Rice, Bruce Bennett and Borrah Minevitch and his Harmonica Rascals, will be presented also at the McCarthy in addition to "A Desperate Chance for Ellery Queen". These two feature attractions should certainly not be missed. Latest news events with the Universal Cameramen will also be presented.

WRIGHT RETAINS FEATHERWEIGHT BOXING TITLE

Champion Declares He Will Quit Ring on First of Year

BEATS CONSTANTINO

New York, Sept 26 (AP)—Chalky Wright, his Featherweight championship (New York version) safely wrapped up to be kept indefinitely, was doing the talking.

"I'm going to quit at the end of this year", he announced. "I've had a lot of fun for 16 years, but 16 years of fighting is enough. I may go into the service—I'm going into something. I'll take as many fights as I can get up to January first, then I'm through".

Nobody could tell just how serious Chalky was in statement last night. He had just finished pounding out a surprisingly easy 15-round victory over young Lulu Costantino of New York to retain his title and he still was busy defending himself—against questions about his age.

"Maybe after I quit I'll tell you how old I am", he said "This time I'll say 32. No, I don't want a commission if I go into service. I want to start off from scratch like Clark Gable".

Trained Hard For Fight

Grinning and jigging around, the ancient Los Angeles fighter insisted he hadn't found the 15-round distance tiring, "because I trained this time", and he seemed to have something there. It was the 21-year-old Constantino, who fought as if he was performing his rope-skipping exercises, who tired in late rounds.

Chalky just shuffled around, tossed punches when he could see an an opening, picked off Lulu's jabs with his gloves and elbows and was plenty strong enough at the finish. Constantino did his best work in the first five rounds. Then in the fifth he dropped his guard once and Wright smashed him a left-right on the chin. That weakened him, but he made it close up to the 11th round. From there on it was mostly Wright.

The official decision was split, with two judges voting for Wright and Referee Billy Cavanagh giving it to Constantino. The Associated Press score card gave Wright nine rounds, Constantine five and called one even.

A crowd of 12,65 paid $24,378 to see the first featherweight title fight in Madison Square Garden since Henry Armstrong whipped Petey Sarron back in 1937.

REMEMBER WITHOUT WANTING

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER FOUR

A New Experience

Friday. . . . Just another bright, Autumn day. Just another busy morning at the office, another hurried luncheon, another long afternoon. But to Judith it was a day to be remembered as the date would be remembered in all the years to come.

She would see herself riding down on the crowded elevator, saying good night to Giles Benson, the advertising manager, then signaling a taxi in the early twilight and looking anxiously at her watch, wondering whether an hour and a half would be time enough to dress. And thinking, "I'm glad Emily is away this week-end. She wouldn't understand me at all now."

There was mail for her, a letter from home, but she did not read it. Lamps lighted in the apartment, the shower running, her steps quick and graceful, her reflection in the dressing-table mirror saying, "You don't need rouge. Your face is flushed and warm. Your gray eyes tell how much you want Max to like you. See, your hand trembles, your lipstick is smeared and you'll have to take it off and put it on again. Where is your humor? Go ahead. Laugh at yourself for feeling this way."

She wore a two-piece black wool suit. She left the small black hat and her white gloves and black purse on the table in the foyer when she went to the living-room and opened the letter from her mother and had to read it twice in order to grasp its full meaning.

Was she coming home this week-end? Her sister Harriet and Larry were celebrating their fifth wedding anniversary and Larry's uncle was giving them a party at the country club, a hastily-arranged affair, but she, Judith was invited and please let me know as Harriet was eager to complete the plans. Couldn't she leave the store just a few hours earlier so that dinner would not be delayed too long? Folding the letter, slipping it back into the square white envelope, she thought, "I'll send a telegram tomorrow morning. Not until then . . . . And felt guilty that she was keeping them waiting because she must wait for Max.

She glanced around at the dimly-lighted room, thinking that this particular setting would never have existed and she would not be sitting here tonight, more nervous than she cared to admit, waiting for a man named Max Worthington if something strong in her nature had not driven her on. When something tremendous happens to you, she thought, you always think it was meant to be.

At a quarter to eight the harsh buzz of the bell brought her to her feet.

It was still the same, the power, the impact, when she saw him again. So many things had been said and written about falling in love and all the things had been difficult. But this was it, looking at Max's strong body in a gray suit and at the blue eyes that were smiling.

"Hello," Max said. He chuckled. "Hello. Come in."

He stepped inside, saying, "Um . . . . Nice," as he surveyed the comfortable, cheerful room before looking at her again. "All for one small girl?"

"No. I share it with Emily Travers who is in Connecticut this week-end." She thought, "He's so poised and he looks as if this were an amusing little game he's enjoying very much. He makes me feel so young. He's older than I thought. How old I can't guess . . ."

"We've missed entirely too much time. Shall we go?" When she turned to put on her hat, he said, "You're very lovely, Judith. And you'll soon discover that I don't say things unless I mean them."

His eyes swept over her, making her very young again.

Fifth Avenue was different when you were riding beside Max Worthington in a low maroon-colored car.

He said, "I'm nothing if I'm not honest, Judith. I am not a rich man. So it won't be the best place in town." Then he remarked, "My full name is James Maxwell Worthington and there are some people who like to call me Jim. Sounds homey and comfortable. I want you to call me Max."

"People never call me Judy because my mother loathes nicknames and wouldn't allow it."

"Judy wouldn't become you. It's too frivolous and shallow."

"What am I?" she thought. "I thought I knew myself rather well until now; and now I'm only what you want me to be, Max. What are you? You were a baby once, then an adolescent, now a man. You have a family, friends, a business or profession. You live somewhere. . . ."

He took her to a night club in Greenwich Village, a place new to her, and when the waiter led them to a table near the orchestra, Max objected so strenuously that the waiter, seeming to reduce in stature, meekly let the way to an isolated table.

A man who made demands and got what is demanded.

"This is much better, isn't it?" Max asked, sitting opposite her at the table.

"You sound as if you are accustomed to giving orders."

His eyes narrowed. "I am. Shall we dance? We'll no doubt become better acquainted dancing and saying nothing than sitting here telling each other the story of our lives. But I warn you. . . . I dance badly."

He did not dance badly. Rather he danced casually, his touch light. She could not say the usual things. She could say nothing because of wonderment as to what he would say next. But he said nothing as they danced, his touch became no longer light and casual; it was enclosing her in a world in which the only music was the music in her. She thought, I feel lost. Utterly lost."

With the table between them again she asked, "Who are you, Max? I don't think I've met anyone like you before."

He laughed. "I haven't either . . . . met anyone like me before. I don't know that I've ever met anyone like you before. You make me romantic. I never expected to feel romantic toward any girl again. Who am I? Does it matter?"

"No. Not very much."

He laughed again, But this time he was laughing at her. "It does matter to you. Very well. I was born and raised and educated here in New York. My parents are dead, but I've a host of rather mid-Victorian uncles and aunts to whom I'm quite devoted." He hesitated. "I'm an engineer and I've traveled extensively both for pleasure and business. I live in a hideous hotel room. . . ."

There was so much more, she thought. Girls and places and events. So much that had made him into a man who always knew what he was going to say next.

He said, "You're a well-bred girl, Judith. I knew that the first time I saw you." Reaching for her hand, he drew it to the centre of the table and held it tightly. "You're young and a little arrogant, but very adorable. No, you've never met anyone like me before, anyone who has lived as violently as I. We won't go through the usual polite preliminaries, Judith, because we aren't usual people. There are depths in you you haven't discovered. And I—I care very much where we go from here. Do you?"

"I've never been in love, Max. I've never been hurt."

"I'll never hurt you, my darling."

They had been riding a long time through the unexpected rain that pecked at the windshield of his car. Just riding, nowhere, anywhere, after they had left the night club which had become crowded and noisy. And Max held her hand firmly, not releasing it even when he changed gears.

Her sense of belonging to him was overwhelming. She had talked to him of herself as she had never talked to anyone—of her childhood, her school years, her ambition in her work, her likes and dislikes. Dormant thoughts awoke, and she had been speaking breathlessly, her words rushing as though tonight he must know all there was to know about her. At times she thought, "This isn't real. This isn't I." But it was real and this was she. . . . This was Max and this was love. . . . Had Phyllis felt like this? Had Emily? Then she could understand their inconsistencies.

In these few hours she had felt that she knew Max better than she had ever known anyone. In the flow of talk and despite the tumult of her feelings she had felt his personality and character unfold. He was tender and patient. His voice did not command her. He did not make conversation merely for the sake of conversation yet in their silence she had felt that they were in unison and that to him had come in full measure what had come to her.

Finally she said, "I should think such a brief chase would make me uninteresting."

He turned his head and smiled at her. "Not with me. Your affection for me will bind me. Through your gloves, Judith, I can feel how vital your hands are." After a while he said, "I'm going to take you home now and I'll see you—shall we say Tuesday? I'd like to make it sooner, but I had engagements before—"he chuckled—"before you flashed like a meteor across my sky."

"And I should be going home this week-end." A meteor across his sky?

"To a boy friend at home?"

"There isn't any boy at home."

When he smiled, she thought, "Perhaps I shouldn't let him feel too sure. But I want to be honest. I want him to know there isn't anyone else."

"I'd reconciled myself to keen competition."

"Had you? I don't like to be with people just to be going somewhere. You called me arrogant. I don't feel arrogant now." Exhilarated and yet humble and small and immensely grateful.

It was to become very familiar, his low, brief laugh which told her that what she had said had touched him and pleased him and amused him.

Half a block from the apartment house he stopped the car and drew her to him and kissed her long and ardently. Then he got out and together they walked up the street.

"Good night, Judith," he said rather gravely in the quiet hall and left her. . . . She entered her apartment slowly and went into the bedroom, thinking. "Are you lonely immediately? He has scarcely walked to his car and I'm lonely for him. It's so new. It's so awfully new."

4 CHILDREN KILLED

Middletown, N. Y., Sept. 26 — (AP) — Four high school children were killed and 24 others injured, at least six of them critically, about midnight when a tractor-trailer plowed into the back of a wagon in which they were enjoying a hayride. Civilian Defence workers in nearby Goshen were summoned, and helped provide first aid and transport the injured in station wagons and two light trucks.

Weekly Livestock Report

Toronto, Sept. 26.—(CP)—Cattle trade was dull on the Livestock Market here this week with prices down 25 cents or so.

Veal calves were strong to fifty cents higher. Hogs lost 25 cents. Lambs gained 25 to 35 cents and sheep held steady.

The quality of the cattle supply was no better than last week. Stockers were sixty per cent of the run. The killers offered were mostly cows and bulls with a sprinkling of common to good light steers and heifers. Most of the decent steers and heifers went to small local and country butchers at $8.50 to $10.25 cwt. Fed yearlings were $10 to $12 and bulls from $7.50 to $9.50. Good stockers and feeders sold at $10 to $11 and plainer stockers were draggy selling downward to $8 cwt. Good milkers and springers sold at $125 to $150 each with others downward to $75 each.

Calves closed at $15.50 to $16 for choice vealers with occasional tops at $16.25. Common vealers sold downward to $9 and grass calves sold between $6 and $8.75.

Hogs opened 25 cents lower at $15.25 dressed and held for the balance of the week. Sows were $12..75 to $13 dressed with a keen demand from small buyers for sausage meat.

There were a large number of small buyers on the lamb market this week, mostly proprietors of city butcher stores. Good lambs opened at $12.25 and closed at $12.50 to $12.60 cwt. with bucks at $11.50 to $11.60.

Sheep were $6 to $9 cwt. for good, ewes with culls downward to $4 cwt.

Weekly summary of receipts:

	Cattle	Calves	Hogs	Sheep & Lambs
This Week	4,525	2,076	3,085	4,425
Last Week	4,770	2,055	3,506	4,506
1942 to Date	193,477	97,676	141,144	60,395
1941 to Date	200,226	107,265	168,378	96,565
This Week 1941	6,427	2,595	4,386	3,353

Another Advance In Egg Prices On Local Market

Egg prices took another sharp advance this morning on the local produce market with Grade "A" bringing 47 cents the dozen, the highest price asked since 1941 when for several weeks eggs sold at 50 cents the dozen. The quotation was two cents higher than the price asked one week ago. Mediums brought 43 cents and pullets 40 cents the dozen.

Chicken prices were a bit higher than formerly with several vendors asking as high as 32 cents the pound for well-finished fowl. Good specimens were quoted as high as $1.75 each with the average bird being held at from $1. to $1.35. A few ducks were offered at from $1.25 to $1.50 each. Butter held at the usual prices of 40 cents the pound.

Grapes predominated on the outside market with vendors asking 50 cents the basket generally, although Rogers Reds were quoted at 55 cents the basket. Pears brought 50 to 65 cents the basket with Blue Damson plums being held at 40 cents the basket.

Good Variety of Apples

The varieties of fall apples being offered on the market are increasing each week with Talman Sweets making their initial apearance this morning at 25 cents the basket for grounders. Good grade McIntosh sold up to $1.75 per hamper or at 50 cents the peck and corresponding prices per six-quart basket. Cookers ranged in price from 90 cents the bushel to $1.25.

Potatoes still held at the 45 cents level for pecks with bushel lots bringing $1.50 and tomatoes 20 cents the basket or 75 to 90 cents the hamper. Cauliflower ranged up to 30 cents, watermelons up to 40 cents and muskmelon up to 25 cents each. Onions were 30 cents the half peck and vegetables at the usual figures.

Two vendors offered fish on the market with whitefish bringing 30 cents the pound and mudcats 20 cents the pound.

PROPOSE "HITCH-HIKING STATIONS"

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 26—(AP) —"Hitch-hiking stations" would be established beside three strategic highways for the convenience of men in the armed forces, under a proposal to be placed before the next meeting of the city council. The stations, sponsored by the Board of Public Works, would have benches for comfort, and signs inviting motorists to give rides to the men in uniform.

COUNTRY-WIDE GAS RATIONING DECREED IN U. S.

Order Issued Says W. M. Jeffers, to Conserve and Save Tires

EFFECTIVE ABOUT NOV.

Washington, Sept. 26—(AP)— Rubber Czar William M. Jeffers went to limit today and ordered country-wide gasoline rationing to save tires.

In his first public order since the issuance of the special rubber committee report the Union Pacific Railroad President charged with conserving the United States stockpile of rubber, directed the office of price administration to extend to the entire country the same restrictions now enforced in the east.

"This is a game," he said, "In which we can all win, or all lose."

The date upon which the order will become effective, probably not before Nov. 1, was left undetermined and Price Adminstrator Leon Henderson will decide whether the basic four-gallon weekly ration will prevail throughout the United States, as it does in 17 eastern seaboard states.

At the same time Jeffers appealed to drivers to slow down to the 35-mile-an-hour limit recommended last week by the committee headed by Bernard M. Baruch, which went deeply into the whole rubber question.

The price administration's coupon plan in the past provides a basic ration of 2,880 miles a year at 15 miles to the gallon. Supplemental rations permitting up to 470 miles a month for ocupational purposes are issued also.

ITS EVER FIGHT WITH CORVETTES IN CONVOY LINE

Canadian Boys From Coast and Inland Provinces Find Lots of Adventure on Ships of the R.C.N.

By FRANK LOWE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Halifax, Sept. 26. (CP)—Sailors in the Royal Canadian Navy are not supermen. They have no desire to be frozen stiff as boards off Iceland or burnt to a crisp shark's dinner. Yet they keep sailing and fighting despite unnumbered dangers and mishaps.

Men of this type manned the corvettes that took me on a two-way Atlantic voyage this summer, and here are a few I met who follow the sea-lanes despite scorching heat and bitter cold, screaming bombers and speeding U-boats.

There was, for example, Harold Morris of Advocate, N.S., a tousle-haired youth barely in his 20s who had come into the R.C.N. to pay off a few scores with the Germans. Early in the war, when he was a merchant seaman, a torpedo ripped his tanker apart, leaving him alive, but badly hurt. Rescued from his life raft, he was taken to England and placed in hospital, only to live through a bombing raid that laid the building in ruins.

So He Joined Navy

Back to the sea he went, this time aboard another tanker. Again a torpedo ripped his craft in two and he and five of his buddies were the only survivors. After that he joined the navy and now lives in a pitching corvette, wanting only to see a submarine crumble before he goes back "and lives a civilized life ashore".

Other men aboard the corvette young fellows who never saw salt water before the war, had already had a "real do" with the Germans.

That was about a year ago, in the icy waters around Greenland. For 72 hours swarms of U-boats pressed home their attacks, spotting the sea with burning wreckage, dirty oil splotches and men clinging to mats and rafts. But they brought the biggest part of their convoy through and made the marauding metal sharks pay for their depradations.

Another Scrapper

Of similar calibre were the men in an accompanying ship. Typical of their group was Art Manning of Toronto, a short, dark scrapper who got off the corvette Levis when a torpedo splintered her hull.

Picked up by another corvette, he immediately volunteered to take his place at the depth charge rack, and for hours kept the barrels of TNT rolling down onto the vulnerable submarine. The fact that he was bleeding from his wounds and exhausted from his time in the water made no difference.

"We got the guy who got us", he said, "but we should have gotten him first, that's all".

Tanker Beats Off Surfaced U-Boat With Deck Gun

Halifax, Sept 26. (CP)—A North Atlantic battle that saw a tanker beat off a surfaced U-boat with her deck gun was disclosed here when the body of one of the tanker's crew was brought in for burial.

The tanker managed to make port after a fight that lasted several hours, though she was badly crippled. Down by the stern after a torpedo from the submarine and ripped into the port side, she still managed to limp along and put out a shell barrage that keep the sub at a distance.

Only casualty aboard the vessel was Edward Dick, 21, Hull, Eng. He was reported missing at first, but after the tanker had made port and then put to sea again, his body was found in the section.

It was brought in here by another vessel.

Excitement of Paratroop Training Causes the Men to Lose Weight

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in England, Sept. 25 (CP).—Whether it's due to the special physical drills or the nervous tension which precedes their jumps, paratroop training takes weight off the tardy candidates for the latest type of soldiering.

When a paratrooper, or at least a student paratrooper, lands after a jump, he's soaked with perspiration. Within a few months, he's experienced the extreme of nervous excitement accompanying his jump from a transport, and then at the opposite end of the emotional scale, sudden, complete relief as his parachute opens.

"Some of our boys have lost as much as 12 pounds since they started this training," said Sgt. Jim Nicholson of Meaford, Ont. "I lost about seven and I think it's because of nervous tension. But tension or no tension, this is still the best job in the army. From the point of view of an infantryman, it's perfect."

"When I go into action now," he laughed, "I won't have to walk there on my flat feet. "I'll ride up to the fight in an airplane."

Lieut. Peter Griffin of Toronto, member of the 48th Highlanders, admitted he had lost some weight since he started paratroop training but didn't know if nerves or exercises were responsible.

"I must say I was green with pink spots, before I made by first jump," said Griffin. "I don't think I was ever under such strain, to be quite frank."

But Griffin thought paratroops go into battle the "most progressive way".

Field Unlimited

"It seems to me the scope of paratroops is terrific and not nearly fully developed," Griffin added. "It really seems unlimited."

Lieut. Rickey Smith of Montreal, who attended Queen's University before enlisting in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, suggested if Canadian girls in uniform do their jobs as thoroughly as WAAFS who pack paratroopers' chutes, their duty will be well done.

"When you think of it," said Smith, "the packing of those parachutes is sort of important to us. They're all perfectly done. The test of the WAAFS' work is whether the parachute opens, and all of them open."

Smith said though the girl packers aren't supposed to, they write notes on the parachutes they've made ready for the soldiers of the air.

"For instance, you find a cheerful little note of good luck in your chute," said Smith. "Or perhaps, the girl writes her name and adds her best wishes."

Lieut. F. G. Boyd of Toronto, member of the Perth Regiment, said student paratroopers before their jumps shout to one another the wartime British travel slogan: "Is your journey really necessary?" A big cabinet where their 'chutes are kept also bears the slogan across its doors and the Canadians smile every time they line up before it as they prepare for a plane trip.

Lieut. Bev Hart of London, Ont., member of the Ontario Tank Regiment, said another saying among the paratroops is: "Well, if I'm the last man to jump, who's going to push me?"

CANADIAN PARATROOPS IN BRITAIN

Rough and ready and well disciplined are these Canadian paratroops who have just completed a stiff course in Britain. All passed with honors and are now fully qualified to instruct other Canadians in this modern type of warfare. In the group ABOVE: Corporal S. Twaddle, Hamilton; Sergt. E. Bush Flier Now in the R.C.A.F. Recalls Experiences in Dominion

(By CHARLES BRUCE)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in England, Sept. 25 (CP)—Halfway up the hill from the docks at a Northern Ontario air base there is—or used to be—a hotel and pub. There the bush fliers would gather after freighting a spot of machinery in to the mines of dropping a prospector somewhere back of nowhere.

And, like as not, they would hardly have settled down to a first beer when Operations Manager Dale Atkinson would come steaming up the hill to announce: "So-and-So at Pickle Lake has busted a leg. One of you mugs'll have to go in for him." So the fliers would match coins for the chore, and one of them would get up and do down to the lake and warm up his motors.

Frequently it would be Len Fraser, a tall, hazel-eyed youngster from Vancouver. He is now Wing Commander Fraser, leader of a Canadian bomber squadron with an enviable record in the pounding of industrial cities along the Ruhr. Still, apparently, he prefers reminiscing about seat-of-the-pants flying in Canada's northland to talking about his present job.

Fraser has been a flier since his boyhood. He learned to fly in 1926, and had to wait until 1930, when he was 19, to get a commercial licence.

It is bush flying that wakens the nostalgic twinkle in his eyes. He had plenty of it. Out of Sioux Lookout, on the Labrador, from Rimouski, Que., and out of Vancouver.

Fraser has had more than 100 hours of operational flying to enemy territory. I saw him talking to his boys as they prepared to fly over Duisberg, and obviously it was a harder job to stay behind than to climb into a Halifax and go along.

Doesn't Like Destruction

He talks about a bombing in a voice so low as to be almost inaudible. Frankly, he doesn't like the idea of letting loose destruction, though he recognizes that it's got to be done. He would probably look a bit scornful at any suggestion that he's something of a philosopher, yet without drawing any conclusion from the circumstances, he recalls such things as this about his bush flying days: "Maybe we'd get a call to pick up a country boy going in to make his fortunes in the mines, a year or later we'd fly him out to get married, another year and Atkinson would come running up the hill. Sort of a circle."

The second big bombing of Essen is one that Fraser will always remember. His bombardier passed out. Their bomber was caught in a searchlight cone, and Fraser took violent evasive action. Then they flew smack over Duesseldorf and were caught in another cone of light while the flak came up in barrels. Escaping that, they hit Antwerp on the nose, and it was the same thing again. Finally Fraser took to hedge-hopping, flying close to the ground. Searchlights caught him again, but his rear gunner got them with a burst of fire and Fraser flew home, 50 feet or so over the soil of Holland. What he remembers best are the church steeples he had to watch out for until they hit the coast.

Likely to Change Subject

Talking to him, he is more than likely to change the subject by calling over one of his boys. For instance, there's PO. Ronald, (Taffy) Knight, a flaxen-haired youngster from south Wales. "This boy's had 20 operational flights in two months," Fraser says. "If he thinks his approach to a target isn't right, he goes out and back in again to get it just so. That's bombing."

And PO. Howie Hall of Montreal. "It was 40 below," he says. "In fact, the temperature had gone off the clock. The oxygen froze up and the captain and navigator passed out, the captain with his head on the stick. Howie hauled him off and got her straightened away. The captain came back to consciousness, but not in very good shape, and he told Howie to fly her home. He did.

Unnecessary Travel Should be Avoided Says Munitions Chief

Ottawa, Sept. 26. (CP)—An appeal to Canadians to avoid all unnecessary travel—including postponement of conventions and similar gatherings for the duration—was issued by Munitions Minister Howe.

"We are rapidly approaching the point where railway airplane, and bus systems will be operating at peak capacity", he said.

"Shortages of critical materials make it exceedingly difficult to replace existing transportation equipment, for which reason we must use our transportation systems to the best advantage.

"All pleasure and unnecessary travelling should be ruled out for duration if our transportation facilities are to be available for war purposes".

Mr. Howe, in a specific reference to conventions, said convention travel throws an added burden on already-overloaded transportation facilities.

"Travel to and from conventions creates heavy peak loads which interfere with essential travel and essential traffic", he said. "I therefore appeal to all Canadians to postpone the holding of conventions and other similar atherings for the duration of the war".

Study of Bus Travel

Transit Controller George Gray in a recent address dealing with interurban bus travel said rationing of travel was as certain as the rationing of tea and coffee.

He implied it would come in the form of a reduction in available service on bus lines operating between cities. A careful study now is being made to determine the essentiality of these lines and it is expected they will be put on a schedule allowing them to operate a specified number of miles each month.

Action has already been taken toward the reduction on bus services which duplicate railway lines.

Willkie Within Sound Of Battling Guns On Russian Front

Moscow, Sept. 25—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie returned to Moscow today from a 14-hour trip to the German-Russian front which took him well within earshot of duelling artillery.

With Lt.-Gen. Lilyushenko of the Red Army and a party of Americans, Willkie rode for miles across seas of mud. He said he had a first-hand opportunity to study the Russian troops at work and was much impressed.

The soldiers asked him, as Tad Moscow workers, when Britain and the United States would establish a second front, he said.

Maj.-Gen. Follett Bradley, chief of a United States supply Mission; Lt.-Col. Joseph A. Michela, United States Military Attache; and Gardner Cowles and Joseph Barnes of the office of war information made the inspection with Willkie, who is acting as President Roosevelt's personal representative.

Former Immigrant Scraps Railroad To Help Gov't

New York, Sept. 25.—(AP)—To the furnaces of freedom, a former Russian immigrant boy offered today the small railroad which was the realization of his earliest ambition.

Samuel R. Rosoff, 60, now a wealthy subway contractor, will scrap his upstate 41-mile railroad, the Delaware and Northern, for metal to be converted into guns and armament for his adopted country. It is estimated the 7,000 tons of scrap metal in the road would supply sufficient scrap for 400 medium tanks.

"Everything I have, I owe to this great nation which gave me my start', Rosoff said. "I came here as a poor immigrant boy from Russia and today I have everything I need in life".

Rosoff bought the railroad December 15, 1926, for $70,000 at a receiver's sale and spent more than $600,000 improving it. The line was appraised at $10,000,000 in December, 1939, he said.

RUSSIANS BLUNT GERMAN DRIVE AT STALINGRAD

Reds Hold City In the 35th Day Of Bloody Assault

Nazis Being Steadily Reinforced in an Attempt to Overwhelm Defenders

FIGHTING FIERCER

(By EDDY GILMORE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Sept. 28 (AP) — Fresh German shock troops rushed to the front by transport plane poured into the debris-choked streets of Stalingrad in an effort to clinch victory, dispatches said today, but the Red army, fighting from window and rooftop and in the streets, held the city in the 35th. day of bloody assault.

Northwest of the city, the Russians were blunting the German drive and unloosing an offensive of their own in an effort to slow the more direct Nazi attack on the city. In one sector, a large Soviet unit killed 2,000 Germans in two days, the mid-day communique said.

Dispatches from the front estimated that 36,000 Germans were battling from positions inside the city and said they were being reinforced steadily in an attempt to overwhelm the defenders, who were relying on bomb-harassed communications of the Volga.

The fighting for the city is "growing fiercer and bloodier," a correspondent for Pravda reported.

"The whole city is in convulsion from the incessant explosions of bombs and shells," he said.

A Zig-Zag Front

The fierce fighting of the last 24 hours, with the Germans lunging into the city from several different points, has resulted in a zigzag front with the Germans slightly advanced in some sectors and the Russians established in new positions to the west in others, one dispatch said.

The Russians were reported to have taken two more streets from the Germans at one point. The mid-day communique said two enemy companies had been wiped out in one smoking and shell-marked neighborhood.

Writing from the city, the Pravda reporter said the bursting of the shells and bombs was so constant that the dust of the city didn't have a chance to settle.

Gone from the Volga, he wrote, are the former pleasure boats and steamships. In their places are armored ships and fast cutters, darting from bank to bank, taking in supplies, ammunition and fresh troops and carrying out the wounded.

Fighting in the city was a house-to-house scramble for advantageous positions with a liberal and deadly use of hand grenades, fire bombs and machine guns.

At one place in the city, a Russian communique said, 600 Germans were killed as Red army troops drove the invaders out of buildings they had captured.

Defence Line Impregnable

The Russians told of another Stalingrad district where their forces killed 1,000 German tommy-gunners and captured a number of prisoners.

"For many days the Germans have been standing still in the Stalingrad district," said a dispatch to Izvestia. "Our defence lines in the city remain impregnable."

Northwest of the city, the Russians were reported lunging at the German flank in a desperate and at least partly successful effort to slow the assault on the city. The Germans, recognizing this threat, were throwing attack after attack at the Russian lines here.

In one sector, German infantry supported by 40 tanks, attacked eight times during one day, a communique said. In another sector one Red Army unit was credited with killing 2,500 Germans and destroying 18 tanks, 30 guns, four batteries of six-barrel mortars, nine other mortars, 19 machine-guns and three planes.

The army newspaper Red Star said the battle for Stalingrad, in the number of German casualties and the stubborn resistance of the Russians "greatly exceeds the combats at Verdun" in the First Great War.

ALLIED MERCHANT SINKINGS LOWEST SINCE U.S. ENTRY

Announced Sinking for 7-Day Period Touches Lowest Since Last December

SINKINGS TABULATED

(By The Associated Press)

The lowest number of announced Allied merchant sinkings in the Western Atlantic over a seven-day period since the United States entered the war was reported last week with disclosures that five merchantmen had fallen prey to enemy submarines.

The greatest toll taken of Allied and neutral shipping in the Western Atlantic over a seven-day period occurred between June 21 and June 27 with announcements of the loss of 28 merchantmen. Previously, the lowest number for a similar period never tallied less than seven.

Sixteen seamen perished in the Western Atlantic encounters reported last week, but 183 others were rescued and reached safe ports. Nineteen crew members were reported missing.

Successful enemy submarine attacks on shipping in Western Atlantic waters since Dec. 7, 1941, mounted to 477 craft, an Associated Press count of announced sinkings revealed, with disclosure Sunday of the torpedoing of the 4,048-ton Spanish merchantman Monte Gorbea.

Spain Loses 22nd Ship.

The Madrid foreign ministry's announcement of Spain's 22nd ship loss of the war reported that the vessel was sunk 60 miles east of Martinique last Saturday. Twenty-eight passengers and crew were saved, but 19 others were reported missing.

Loss reported between Sept. 20 and 26 included destruction of two United States ships, one Panamanian, one Egyptian, and one unidentified Allied.

HERMAN BEGEEST DENIED AUTHORITY TO SELL BEER, WINE

TORONTO, Sept. 28 — (CP) — Officials of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario said here today Herman Begeest, hotel proprietor at Niagara Falls, Ont., had been denied authority to sell beer and wine at his establishment.

Begeest was convicted last Thursday on charges of having two Canadian army uniforms in his possession.

GERMANS SEIZE 300 AMERICANS IN OCCUPIED FRANCE

U.S. Citizens Held As Potential Hostages Diplomatic Quarters In Berne Learn

TENSION HEIGHTENS

Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 28 (AP) —The Germans have seized some 300 Americans in occupied France as potential hostages, diplomatic quarters here learned today, in a move which added to the tension in Pierre Laval's government in Vichy.

News of the seizures came from private sources in Paris. American diplomatic sources were without official word but it caused no surprise, since Americans in the occupied zone are liable to internment by the Nazis as enemy aliens.

Those held were Americans who for one reason or another remained in occupied France pending negotiations for their repatriation. It was assumed that if repatriation were permitted the Germans would ask for the return of an equal number of Germans in the United States.

The roundup and other incidents, especially the United States' endorsement of the British occupation of Madagascar, have served to create the most critical situation thus far in American-French relations, French observers of the Vichy scene said.

Faced with Difficulties

Laval is faced with the greatest difficulties in the negotiations with Germany for 120,000 French workers, which private sources said had been demanded within three weeks. Mindful of the sentiment of the French, Laval declared that this would involve strong compulsion which he dared not exert, information from Paris said.

According to these advices, Laval is determined to pursue collaboration in his own way. If he chooses to stand against full conscription of workers, there is a possibility of his being pushed out of the government, it was reported. In such a case he could adopt the role of having stood for the rights of Frenchmen. There was one rumor that he had even threatened to go to North Africa.

It was reported without confirmation that Charles E. Bedaux, friend of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor whose wife is the former Miss Fern Lombard of New York and Tours, France, was among those taken into custody.

Four Women and Baby Killed at Crossing

DETROIT, Sept. 28 — (AP) — Four women and a baby bound for a family reunion were killed yesterday when their automobile collided with a Michigan Central passenger train at a crossing near suburban Wayne.

The dead are Mrs. Susie Szeregnsi, 55, Dearborn; Mrs. Elizabeth Etlinger, 27, Detroit; Mrs. Mary Szenas, 28, Detroit, and her year-old son, Fred; and Mrs. Vera Nemeth, 23, Dearborn township. Mrs. Szeregnsi was the mother of the other three women.

Rescued After 20 Days on Raft Supplies Reduced to Gallon of Water

Bridgetown, Barbados, Sept. 28 —(CP Cable)— After a grim 20-day ordeal on a life-raft, survivors from the passengers and crew of an Allied ship have been landed here by a warship that found them when their supplies had been reduced to a gallon of water.

Many of them dressed only in swimming suits, the survivors had only two minutes to escape from their sinking ship after it had been torpedoed twice. The lifeboats had been smashed, and the men, women and children crowded aboard four rafts.

Only one was picked up, as far as was known here. It started off in the direction of land, leading a procession of the four tied together.

Sharks followed the rafts day and night, the survivors said.

On the fourth day, one man died after going crazy. The captain was the next to die.

A strong wind blew up on the seventh night, and the rearmost two rafts were blown away. They were not seen again.

Next day, planes flew overhead but failed to see the signals from those on the rafts.

Then the second raft broke its lashings and was carried off.

Those on the remaining float were sighted by a bomber. The plane circled about and dropped a package of food. Next morning a destroyer appeared on the horizon but passed on without seeing the shipwrecked group.

On the 15th night, the survivors saw lights which they took for land but they disappeared.

A destroyer in convoy spotted them on the 20th day, but at first took them for a decoy put out by a submarine. The warship, one of the survivors said, threw a number of shells in their direction but eventually closed in and picked them up.

36-Hour Deluge Caused Road, Rail, Crop Damage In N.S. One Week Ago

Halifax, Sept. 28 (CP).—Raging flood waters from a 36-hour deluge which lashed large areas of Nova Scotia last Monday and Tuesday caused three deaths, brought about the worst transportation disruption in 25 years, and did thousands of dollars worth of damage to roads, railways, buildings and crops. Censorship regulations prohibited any mention of the storm until today, when conditions were nearly normal again.

Parts of New Brunswick felt the impact of the storm, but to a lesser degree than southern and central Nova Scotia where most damage was done. Prince Edward Island and Cape Breton escaped the full fury.

Tons of water fell during the downpour which let up for only short intervals. The ground, hard-baked by nearly two months of dry weather, was unable to absorb the torrents of water, which raced along every available ditch and gully in small rivers.

Two Months' Supply in 36 Hours.

The Halifax area received 9.4 inches of rain—an average two-month supply—in 36 hours.

Three deaths were attributed to the flood conditions brought about by the cloudburst. Near Stewiacke, N.S., Reuben McCave and Robie Lively, lumbermen, were drowned in the swollen Shubenacadie River. At Dartmouth, N.S., Charles P. Marshall, 48 was swept away in a stream near the rope plant where he worked. He was trying to rescue a fellow worker who was subsequently saved by another man.

Canadian National Railways authorities at Moncton said the downpour was the worst on record and only good maintenance work prevented any accidents along the lines. As it was, the C.N.R. said, "delay was the only disability."

All rail traffic on the main line of the C.N.R. from Truro, N.S., to Halifax was tied up for 48 hours starting Tuesday morning. A mass of logs from a broken boom above Stewiacke, menaced the railway bridge there as the flood surged to within inches of the structure, and traffic was halted.

Near the Fairview underpass just outside Halifax a washout stopped rail communication and clogged the main highway entrance to the city with 12 feet of water. Rail traffic was not resumed until Thursday morning but the highway reopened 24 hours earlier when the water subsided.

Rail Line Interrupted.

The Dominion Atlantic Railway line to the Annapolis Valley was cut for three days, and traffic on the C.N.R.'s Halifax and southwestern branch was not resumed until Saturday morning. The Musquodobit Valley line is still under water over a three mile stretch.

All disruptions were due to flood conditions, which washed away road beds and threatened bridges.

Washouts on several of the main highways halted traffic for hours until the flood waters subsided. Bus communication with Québec and Ontario was halted, and was just getting back to normal today.

Car ferry service from Pictou to Prince Edward Island was stopped Monday, but resumed Tuesday after the rainfall ended.

Telephone lines were put out of commission in parts of Halifax and through central Nova Scotia, as floods uprooted poles and water seeped into underground cables.

In Halifax a serious milk shortage threatened when communication with the source of supplies were disrupted. Many dealers rationed customers to one quart daily until communications were resumed.

The rainfall was also felt in New Brunswick, but no damage was reported. Instead, it was a boon to farmers and dried-up municipal water supplies. It ended a two-week forest fire menace and enabled hunters to get into woods which had been closed to forest travel before the rain.

AXIS SATELLITES IN THE BALKANS FEEL U.S. WEIGHT

American-Made Bombers Raiding One Capital After Another

NATIVES BEWILDERED

Istanbul, Turkey, Sept. 28 (AP)—American-made B-24 Bombers, flying from undisclosed bases with bomb loads as great as four tons, have been spreading the message of the United Nations' growing might among the Axis satellites in the Balkans for the last two weeks, bringing blackout and bewilderment to one capital after another.

The targets in Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria and the puppet state of Croatia can be reached either from Russia or the Middle East but where the bases are is not being given.

Nor are Allied authorities revealing the nationalities of the bomber crews.

But it probably is not wrong to assume that American fliers are becoming acquainted with the Balkans along with Russian and British pilots. American airmen raided Rumanian oilfields in June, some of them being forced down in Turkey on the way back to their secret bases.

Targets Very Important

Reliable reports reaching here of Axis movements of troops and war materials across the Balkans recently toward Africa and Russia bring into sharp focus the importance of the Balkan targets.

In early August train after train carried German and Italian troops through Yugoslavia. More German troops in African uniforms were reported to have moved southward late in the month and during the last half of August the Axis sent 50,000 trucks, 400 pieces of heavy artillery and 89 trainloads of other war materials southward through Belgrade.

It is no secret there were more air raids in the Balkans recently than Russian and British communiques accounted for. The Russians raided Budapest September 9

WAVELL PLEDGES A SECOND FRONT ON CONTINENT

Invasion Sure but When and Where Not Disclosed by Leader

WAR REVIEWED

LONDON, Sept. 28 — (CP) — A declaration by Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell that British and American troops would fight their way onto the European continent as soon as possible shared attention today with labor leaders' demands for an immediate government answer to Wendell Willkie's call for a second front to aid Russia.

Gen. Wavell, Commander-in-Chief of British forces in India, spoke in New Delhi in a review of the global aspects of the war and voiced his firm conviction that Britain, Russia, the United States and China would fight on together to ultimate victory.

"It is quite certain that as soon as ever possible both American troops and ourselves will start a second front, but I can't tell you when or where," he declared.

"It's a biggish problem starting on the continent. We'll have some casualties — very considerable — both American and ours — before we get back into the continet. But we'll get back."

While Gen. Wavell was giving this assurance, Lord Strabolgi, labor peer, was demanding in a speech at Wimbledon that the Churchill government reply "without delay" to Willkie's assertion in Moscow that the best way to aid Russia was to open a second front before next summer.

Lord Strabolgi said he did not see how the labor party could continue to give "blind support" to the Churchill government unless military aid were given Russia at once.

Impressed by Willkie

Emanuel Shinwell, a labor critic of the government, said at Newport that he had been greatly impressed by Willkie's outspoken statement and expressed the opinion that Britain and the United States should take the initiative

SEE BATTLEFIELDS AS 'UNITY' SAYS CLEMENT ATTLEE

Those in Charge Of Allied Plans Cannot Be Affected By Irresponsible Persons

CANADA PRAISED

OTTAWA, Sept. 28 — (CP) — Rt. Hon. Clement Attlee, Dominions Secretary in the United Kingdom Government, says the men who have the responsibility for United Nations war plans regard the various battlefields as a "unity", and that their decisions cannot be affected by "demands made by irresponsible people."

He made these statements last night in an address over the National network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

"You will not expect me to tell you anything of our war plans or to indulge in prophecies as to the future," Maj. Attlee said. "Our war plans have to be worked out in concert with our Allies and with the best technical advice which we can command.

"Decisions are made in the light of a full knowledge of facts. They involve the lives of men and cannot be affected by demands made by irresponsible people.

"I would like to assure you that those who have the responsibility regard the battlefields of the war as a unity. They are animated by a single purpose: that of winning the war. It is, of course, part of the technique of enemy propaganda to suggest to the various Allies that some are not doing as much as others."

Canada's Part

Maj. Attlee said he wanted Canadians to know that the Old Country appreciates to the full the "splendid effort that Canada is making in this war."

"In every sphere, military and civil, Canada is giving of her best."

He spoke of the "great services" performed by the Canadian Navy and of his grief at hearing in Newfoundland from a French Canadian survivor of the loss of the destroyer Ottawa and part of her crew.

The Royal Canadian Air Force was making its "full contribution" to the growing air attacks on Germany and in other operations. All British reports went to show how great is the effect of the bombing raids, now increasing in frequency.

Mourns Loss of Brave Men

"I mourn with you," he said, "the loss of the brave men who took part in that effective reconnaissance at Dieppe. I know how willingly the inevitability of losses in an offensive operation of this character was

Fifty 10,000-Ton Cargo Ships Built In Canadian Yards During Past Year

Ottawa, Sept. 28 (CP)—The Canadian shipbuilding industry this week will deliver into service its 51st 10,000-ton cargo ship, all but one of them completed this year, Munitions Minister Howe announced today.

"Only one cargo ship was completed prior to Jan. 1, 1942," said the Minister in a brief statement. "The output for nine months of this year represents 500,000 deadweight tons of shipping.

"Favored by ideal climatic conditions which permit year-round launchings, and operating seven days a week, British Columbia yards have led the way both in number of ships built and in speed of construction."

In a statement issued earlier this month Mr. Howe said contracts have been negotiated for construction in Canada of nearly 3000 10,000-ton cargo ships, at a cost of about $[illegible]00,000,000. In addition there are a number of 4,700 ton ships to be constructed all on the east coast.

Mr. Howe's statement today did not disclose whether Canada will live up to earlier predictions that launchings of merchant ships during 1942 would total about 1,000,000 tons.

Dominion Day Changed to First Monday in July

Order-in-Council Names Days Apart From Sundays Or Rest Days

FOR DURATION

Ottawa, Sept. 28 (CP). — By order-in-council, the Federal Government today declared that only six statutory holidays should be observed by employers and employees for the duration of the war, apart from Sundays or weekly days of rest apart from Sunday.

The government order set forth the following as statutory holidays:

New Year's Day, Good Friday, the first Monday in July (in lieu of July 1), Labor Day, Thanksgiving Day and Christmas Day.

In his announcement of the order, Labor Minister Mitchell said that in the interests of the war effort and to promote uniformity among employers and employees in the observance of statutory holidays throughout the Dominion, "the government has found it expedient to declare its policy in the matter."

The order is designed "to remove the present uncertainty as to whether employees generally should or should not be required to work on each such holiday."

Opportunity For Religious Duties.

While the order provides that only the statutory holidays provided for should be observed during the war, it also sets forth that "reasonable opportunity should continue to be allowed to employees for the performance of their religious duties."

Any collective labor agreement which is inconsistent with the order's provisions should be suspended for the duration by mutual consent of the parties concerned, but pending such suspension, should remain in force and continue to be observed, the order said.

While the provisions of the order concerning statutory holidays in private employment are a declaration of the government's policy, the holidays recommended for business are made mandatory for the civil service, and will be observed by the members of that service, with time off for the performance of religious duties as provided for other workers.

Dominion Day.

The order suspends for the duration the provisions of the Dominion Day Act and declares that throughout Canada the first Monday in July will be a legal holiday and will be kept and observed as such under the name "Dominion Day".

Officials said the observance of this holiday on Monday only meant there would be no break in the middle of the work week if the holiday continued to fall on July 1.

NUMBER OF PEOPLE BURIED

JAPANESE BASES BLASTED WITHOUT LOSS OF PLANE

Communication Lines West of Salween River Heavily Raided

NEW PLANE SEEN

Chungking, Sept. 28 (AP) — Bombers and fighters of the United States army air forces blasted Japanese bases and lines of communication west of the Salween River in southwest Yunnan Province yesterday, inflicting considerable damage without loss of a plane, United States headquarters announced today.

Numerous direct hits were scored on buildings at Mengshih and Tengyueh, starting a number of fires, the bulletin said.

"Five separate groups of Japanese barracks were strafed when American planes swept along the Burma Road to Wanting," the communique added. "Eight trucks were destroyed along the road and three Japanese tanks were seriously damaged in Wanting."

The attacks represented the second assault by American airmen in as many days on Japanese communications in Yuanna Province.

Troop columns were strafed Saturday along the highway between Lungling and Chefang. Ten enemy trucks and a staff car were destroyed. This assault too, was carried out without loss.

The previous day fliers raided the Japanese air base at Hanoi, French Indo-China, for the first time since August 27, shooting down three of the enemy's new two-engined, two-seated 1-45 fighters.

A communique said that at least two more of these craft probably were destroyed and several others were damaged. No American planes were lost. It was the first time the Americans had encountered the 1-45, described by the pilots as a fast and manoeuvreable craft armed with a 20-millimetre cannon and two 13-millimetre guns forward, plus an additional gun operated by a rear gunner.

Action Limited To Night Patrols

CAIRO, Sept. 28 — (AP) — R. A. F. planes strafed Axis supply and ammunition columns along the Gambut-Bardia road west of the Egyptian battlefront yesterday but aerial activity generally was on a reduced scale, a communique said today.

The bulletin reported the loss of one British plane and said a German aircraft was shot down last night in the Suez Canal area.

Action on the land front was limited to night patrols.

PARTRIDGE BREAKS NECK BY IMPACT WITH BRICK WALL

There is at least one resident of the city who won't have to go hunting for his first partridge.

Walking down East Bridge Street shortly after seven o'clock this morning, he heard a dull thud, as he approached the Hotel Quinte. Puzzled, he turned, and saw a plump partridge in its death throes on the grass near the south side of the hotel.

The bird had flown into the wall, breaking its neck with the impact.

KNITTERS WANTED BY I.O.D.E. CHAPTER

Information was received today by the Regent and members of the St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. from United Kingdom Air Liaison Mission, Ottawa, stressing the urgent need of warm knitted necessities for members of the Royal Air Force stationed in Canada.

In accordance with this appeal, members of St. Julien Chapter are passing it on to the knitters of the city.

Required immediately are 500, pairs gloves; 26 pairs mittens; 190 helmets; 200 pullovers; 100 pullovers with roll necks; 500 scarves, and 500 pairs sox.

The chapter will supply all the wool necessary and knitters desirous of assisting in this urgent work are requested to get in touch with the Regent, Mrs. Neate at 1475M or Mrs. George Watkin, 1390.

"Y" BOYS ENJOY WIENER ROAST

It was a noisy, happy, clean-looking group of boys that left the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday afternoon full of pep and with bundles and loaded knapsacks It was a quiet, smudged, tired-looking crew that got back to the building around eight o'clock the same evening without bundles, and with empty pack-sacks, but with happy and contented smiles on their faces.

What happened in between is a story—and a good one—of fun, games, a long hike, and a bonfire, and wieners, buns and mustard making a very short appearance between package and mouth. And, then, that long tough hike back home again.

24 boys from the Boys' Division of the Y, under the leadership of Physical Director Ed Shortt, really had a fine time at the flats across from Cannifton. They had an impromptu rugby game, and at one time the ball managed to get into the river, they started to have a swim, but got only as far as the knees before they decided a fire was preferable. They romped and played games, skipped stone and tore up cedar roots. And, finally, they built a fine fire around which they roasted wieners and sat and ate supper.

Arriving back in town, they were ready for baths and bed, and voted the expedition one of the best of the year's hiking activities that had been staged in connection with the summer program, which will have its final windup next Wednesday evening with a boys' banquet at the Y.

HORSE ON BREAD WAGON RUNS AWAY

Becoming frightened when a falling limb struck the wagon with considerable force, a horse owned by the Harris Bread Company and driven by Mr. Hubert Wagar, ran away as it was being driven down Benjamin Street on Saturday afternoon and proceeded several blocks before being brought to a halt.

The driver and a young boy were in the wagon when it was struck by the limb but fortunately both escaped injury in the following runaway, the boy managing to make his exit from the wagon as the horse ran out of control across vacant lots between Ponton and Howard Streets and down Holloway. Turning on Dunbar Street the horse ran into the guywire of telephone pole bringing him to a stop. The front of the wagon was considerably damaged, but the horse and the occupants of the wagon fortunately escaped injury.

MOTOR RUGS STOLEN FROM PARKED CAR

Sneak thieves entered a motor car on Catherine Street Saturday and stole two valuable motor rugs. The theft was reported by Squadron Leader R. M. Trites, of the Mountain View R.C.A.F. base, who resides at 109 Catherine Street. The robes were taken from Sqd.-Ldr. Trites' car, which was parked in front of his Catherine Street residence Saturday evening. Police were notified.

CHARGES PENDING POLICE STATE

Upon complaints of a citizen regarding a motor car being driven in an alleged careless manner on Dundas Street late Saturday night, George Keegan, 164 Mary Street, was detained at the city police station after being apprehended by Constables Wright and Arnott. Keegan is alleged by police to have sideswiped two motor cars, while driving along Dundas Street during the heavy rain of Saturday night. The driver told police the tires on his car were worn smooth and resulted in the vehicle skidding slightly on the wet pavement and he was not aware that any serious damage resulted, he assured police. Today, however, city police stated that careless driving charges were pending.

ROBBERS ENTER SERVICE STATION

Robbers broke and entered the Shell gasoline service station, operated by Stanley Wilson at the intersection of Dundas Street and Foster Ave., some time Sunday night. Breakin was discovered by Mr. Wilson as he opened the premises to resume business today.

Entrance was gained by means of rolling several empty oil drums into position and piling them atop each other at the rear of the building. Then the robbers climbed up the drums and broke open a window to gain entrance to the oil pits. It was an easy matter to force entrance into the station office, where the cash box was broken open and a small amount of loose change taken. The cash box was damaged beyond repair, Mr. Wilson revealed as he reported the robbery to the police today. The office portion was ransacked indicating that money was the object of the breakin.

MAN IS INJURED BY PASSING CAR

While walking along Highway No. 33 near his home, Robert Tyer, of Frankford, was struck by a passing motor car and injured. Mr. Tyer was attended at the scene by Dr. E. A. Carleton of Stirling, and later taken to the Belleville General Hospital suffering from a severed left arm muscle and tendon, bruises and lacerations. Mr. Tyer was walking along the highway with his wife on Sunday when two motor cars met on the narrow highway immediately alongside the Tyers. In passing the door handle of one of the vehicles struck Mr. Tyer in the left arm severing the muscle and tendons and hurling him to the ground. The name of the motorists passing were not available today.

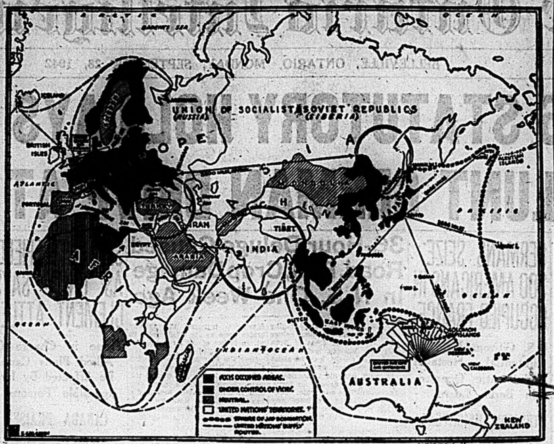
WAR AS IT STANDS—AND WHAT MAY HAPPEN



and makes it easier for the reader to understand what could, or might This excellent map, gives, at a glance, the status of the war today happen in the months to come. Study the key first and you'll be set right on Axis territory, supply lines, etc. What will the Axis do next? Will Japan move against Russia, hoping to seize vital bases such as Vladivostok to prevent the U.S. from using them for bombing attacks on Japan proper? Or will Japan invade India? Looking at the map one can readily see what a blow it would be to the United Nations if the Axis could be able to gain control of territories indicated by circles above. On out side, however, definite moves are being made. The air offensive against Nazi industrial cities in Europe is striking a telling blow at Axis supply centres. The southwest Pacific offensive especially the successful Solomon Islands action, has prevented the Japs from making a large-scale attack on Australia and has given the United Nations vital harbors and airfields for additional air and sea assaults on other enemy holdings.

Argylls Offer Training In Modern Weapons

Proud of years of tradition behind it, the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank), offers a wide variety of training to the potential recruit.

Highly trained officers and non-commissioned officers, assisted by instructors of the active army are now available to teach the rookie the mysteries of the modern weapon.

The regiment is one of the reserve army units of the city and is desirous of recruiting to its full wartime strength. It has long been this city's own infantry unit, and is justifiably proud of its past record.

Today it needs hundreds of men, and the onus of recruiting is not so much on the part of the regiment as it should be on the desirability of men of the city to join its ranks.

The Argylls offer congenial surroundings for its training. Recruits will be taught the assembly and use of such up-to-date weapons as the Bren Gun, the Reising and Vickers machine-guns, the rifle and revolver. Modern war defence tactics such as anti-gas and decontamination are also part of the regimental curriculum. Field tactics are also taught and many pleasant hours will be spent at this phase of training.

This is Reserve Army Week in the city and units here are going all out to bring their strengths to wartime footing. Officers state it is the duty of everyone to have at least a working knowledge of the handling of modern weapons and be able to defend his home should the need arise.

The Argyll Light Infantry Regiment (Tank) offers congenial surroundings, well-trained, efficient officers and instructors and earnestly urges all eligible men to join its ranks or those of other units in the city.

Obituary

LATE EULA HORSLEY
(Wooler)

The funeral service of Miss Eula Horsley, daughter of Mrs. Horsley and the late Joseph (Joe) Horsley was conducted at the family residence, 4th concession of Brighton Township, on Wednesday afternoon, September 16th, with Rev. R. D. Harrison officiating.

She was born in Murray Township, where she spent most of her previous early years and her passing has brought sincere regrets to her many friends. At the funeral the friends who gathered to pay their last respects and the beautiful floral tributes testified to the high esteem in which the departed was held.

Surviving to mourn her loss are her aged mother, Mrs. Horsley and eight sisters, Ethel, Mrs. E. McKnight, New Toronto; Mabel, Mrs. Charles Leduc, Toronto; Maggie, Mrs. Charles Gaston, Willowdale; Bessie, Mrs. Walton, Toronto; Jean, Mrs. Felix Generoux, Hilton; Marion, Mrs. Norman Martin, Ravenscliffe; Isabel, Mrs. Alex Roote, Hilton; and Aletha, Mrs. Basil Romano, Toronto; six brothers, Elmer, Grey and Simcoe Tank Regiment, Camp Borden; Harold of Hilton; Roy of Toronto; Gordon and Leland of the R.C.A., and Kenneth of the R.C.A., Petawawa.

Pall bearers were Wooler friends, Messrs Wesley Down, Lorne Terrill, Homer Lowe and Fred Stewart.

Interment was made in the Wooler Friends cemetery.

ABRAHAM LUTHER DAFOE

Abraham Luther Dafoe died at his home, 44 Great St. James' Street on Sunday morning, Sept. 27th. He was in failing health for the past six months.

The late Mr. Dafoe was born seventy-eight years ago in Huntingdon Township, and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Dafoe. For many years he was engaged in farming in Huntingdon Township, and twenty years ago he came to Belleville to reside. He was a member of the United Church and was well esteemed. Fraternally he was a member of Loyal Orange Lodge No. 300, West Huntingdon, and of the Black Preceptory, Stirling.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Ida Gunning; one daughter, Mrs. Reuben Walt, Foxboro; two sons, Mr. George Dafoe, Belleville, and Mr. Windsor Dafoe, Plainfield.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street; the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

HENRY BLAIR JACK

Henry Blair Jack died suddenly at his home, 148 Victoria Avenue, on Saturday evening, Sept. 26th. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jack and of late years lived retired here. Surviving him is one sister, Miss Ida Maud Jack, Belleville.

The funeral took place this Monday morning from his late residence, and the service was conducted in the home and at the graveside in Belleville cemetery by the Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister of Bridge Street United Church.

The bearers were Messrs. H. C. Thompson, David Martin, George Keith, John Carr, William Leslie and Hugh Ross.

Heavy WindStorm Visits District

Orchardists and farmers of the district breathed sighs of relief today when it was discovered that the feared loss of apples and other tree fruit, was not as great as was anticipated following the near-gale like wind and rain of Saturday night.

The heavy wind swung in from the south an unusual quarter for blows of such strength. It ripped leaves, branches and twigs from trees and caused some damage to what standing crops are still out.

The rain will not improve the present condition of tomato and corn crops and will retard harvesting of root and other field yields.

Indicentally it will not improve the blight condition that is apparent among many potato crops of the section.

In the city it showered lawns with pieces of tree branches and leaves. It whipped the waters of the Bay of Quinte into a frothing mass of white-caps and in the harbor off Victoria Park drove practically all the boats lying at anchor in the stream to the shore. Some extensive damage is reported to some of the craft.

During the height of the blow a large elm tree was uprooted and blown down across Highway No. 2 a few hundred feet west of the city limits blocking all highway traffic. Fortunately there were no motor vehicles passing as the huge tree crashed thundering across the highway. Motorcycle Patrolman W. G Milton investigated and later it was necessary to divert traffic by way of the Institute Lane and the Marshall Road. Later Bell telephone crews removed the tree from the highway.

GERMANS SEIZE

Only One of Problems

Bedaux recently had been in Cannes, in the unoccupied zone, but it was stated there was reason to believe he might have gone to Paris recently.

The round-up was only one of a number of problems involving Americans in France.

The United States embassy in Vichy has asked Pierre Laval's government to explain why citizens of the United States had been barred from travel in unoccupied France along with other Allied nationals.

It was understood the embassy also wanted to know why American motion picture films have been stopped in transit at the Spanish border for the last eight days and why American film distributors in the unoccupied zone have been notified to close their offices October 1st.

Air Travel Restricted.

Announcement of the restrictions on air travel, which threatened to increase friction already existing between Washington and Vichy, was made by the French Air Lines as Laval, Vichy chief-of-government, conferred with German officials in Paris after ousting the ardent collaborationist, Jacques Benoit-Mechin, as secretary of state in his foreign ministry.

The ouster of Benoist-Mechin followed a week of rumors of plots against the Laval regime and was accompanied by a statement from Laval in which he said.

"I shall under no circumstances allow the authority of the government to be attacked. This is more necessary today than ever. The government stands firm and there is no reason why it should not do so in the future. I am firmly resolved to carry out to the end my mission."

He did not elaborate on the reasons for Benoist-Mechin's dismissal.

Some observers, however, believed his action had upset a plan to have Benoist-Mechin take over from Laval at the head of a group of "young collaborationists" pressing for a pro-German program at a pace which Laval thought too rapid.

These quarters, who could not be named, recalled that the day before the ouster the Frankfurter Zeitung had published a lengthy article reviewing Benoist-Mechin's career and praising his work.

Flying Officers Want to Get Back

MONTREAL, Sept. 28 — (CP) — Flt.-Lt. J. Grant Fleming, D.F.C., formerly of Calgary, Alta., and FO. R. G. (Bob) Keefer of Montreal, a former McGill University football star, who became bosom pals in an Eire internment camp, are back in Canada — anxious to return overseas to get "another crack at the Axis." Both are 25, with Keefer celebrating his birthday today.

Neither would say how they escaped from the Eire camp, but they said an earlier attempt to flee failed when a ladder collapsed, drawing guards to the scene.

For Keefer his temporary curtailment of operations against the Axis came Oct. 25, 1941, when he and his crew were "forced to bail out" from a Wellington bomber over Eire.

His navigator on the flight was FO. Jack Calder of Goderich, Ont., former member of The Canadian Press staff at Toronto, who still is in internment with the four other members of the bomber's crew.

Fleming escaped with an R.A.F. service-gunner when his flying boat crashed into the Atlantic Ocean four miles off the coast of Eire in December 1941. Nine other members of the crew were lost. The two survivors swam the four miles through choppy seas to the shore where they were arrested and interned.

In the internment camp they met the other men, and plotted the original escape which ended in failure.

Sgt. W. R. Probert of Trenton Appointed Chief Constable Of This City by Commission

Sgt. Arthur Harman Named Deputy Chief of Police Department

CHIEFS INDUCTED

Walter R. Probert, former constable of the Belleville Police Department and more recently sergeant of the Trenton Police Department, was today named Chief Constable of the Belleville Police Department. Chief Probert, who is a native of Toronto, was introduced to the members of the Belleville Police Department this morning before His Honor Judge C. A. Cameron, His Worship Mayor G. E. Thompson, and Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., at the police station; all members of the department being present. At the same time Judge Cameron announced that the Belleville Police Commission had also named Arthur Harman, dean of the local police force, Deputy Chief Constable.

"The Police Commission feels that Mr. Harman is deserving of promotion for his many years of service to the department and perhaps more so during the past two months, following the death of the late Chief Alex Kidd, during which time he has done yeoman service as Acting Chief. I might add that the Commission recognizes to the fullest the 35 years of service completed by Deputy Chief Harman and the creation of his new post was made in recognition of his many years of faithful service," Judge Cameron stated today after welcoming Chief Probert to his new post.

Here in 1928

Chief W. R. Probert came to Belleville from Toronto in 1928 as a special officer with the Canadian National Railways and six years later resigned to take a position as constable with the Belleville Police Department. Only a few months later he resigned to accept a similar post with the Trenton Police Force under Chief Wm. Bain, and a year later was promoted to sergeant. A native of Toronto, Chief Probert is 46 years of age and a married man with one son, Sergeant Lloyd Probert, now with the R.C.A.F. and stationed at the Mountain View Bombing and Gunnery School.

Belleville's new Chief of Police comes highly recommended by Chief Bain and other members of various district law enforcing agencies.

35 Years' Service

Last May Deputy Chief Harman completed 35 years of faithful service with the Belleville Police Department, joining the force in May of 1907 under the late Chief Newton, when Patrick Hayes was the only sergeant. At that time the police station was situated in the City Hall building. Deputy Chief Harman was made sergeant and automatically became Acting Chief Constable upon the recent death of Chief Alexander Kidd, a post he has filled with integrity until appointed Deputy Chief today.

Speaking on the matter of the appointing of two sergeants for the Department, Mayor Thompson stated this matter would be left in abeyance for some time until Chief Probert and Deputy Chief Harman could make a survey of the department and present recommendations for consideration at the next Commission meeting. The vacancies for the sergeants were made by the promotion of Deputy Chief Harman and upon the resignation of Sergeant Arthur Booth some time ago.

Inducted to Office

At the police court rooms this morning all members of the department in uniform were drawn up and introduced to their new Chief Constable by Deputy Chief Harman, prior to which Mayor Thompson welcomed Chief Probert to Belleville on behalf of the citizens and Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., spoke regarding unity and co-operation in the department.

"As you all know we lost the late Chief Kidd last July, a loss that was keenly regretted in all walks of life. However, your commission feels that in Chief Probert and Deputy Chief Harman, Belleville has a very efficient police force, and I feel each and all of you constables are capable men in your positions," stated Judge Cameron.

At the Court House today Chief Probert and Deputy Chief Harman were sworn in to their new offices before Judge C. A. Cameron.

PECULIAR STONE FOUND IN GARDEN

The finding of a stone in her garden upon which was imprinted a perfect letter "V" with a dash and the number seven is reported by Mrs. Maude Booth, 48 Moira Street East. Mrs. Booth was digging potatoes in her garden, with her daughter, Mrs. Thompson when the stone was discovered underneath a hill of potatoes.

LOUD, FOUL LANGUAGE SENDS MAN TO JAIL

Goderich, Ont., Sept. 28 —(CP)— John Spain is serving 300 days in jail here for using foul language in speaking of his neighbor at whose home a bridal shower was in progress. Evidence disclosed Spain uttered the offending words from his threshold, but loudly enough for a woman sitting on her verandah across a 100-foot street and a policeman sitting in a car 60 feet away to hear.

SCHOOL CLOSED FOR REPAIRS TO HEATING PLANT

Guelph, Ont., Sept. 28 —(CP)— Students of Loretto Academy here had the cool weather to thank for a one-day holiday they enjoyed. The heating system required repairs, and to effect them it was necessary the fire be out. The pupils left for the day.

They Don't Want Swamps and Jungles . . . .

Don't kid yourself, Mister. Do not be confused by this war. Do not be deluded by goose-headed thinking. When the Nazi chiefs howl of "Lebensraum", do you think they are talking of Britain? No. There's no living room in Britain—that tiny island now overcrowded by its forty-four million people. When the gangsters of Berlin scream about colonies, do you think they are talking about some strip of Banana land, or some unholy spot in the malaria-ridden jungle? Let us not be idiotic. Germany and Japan don't want swamps and jungles. They want you—great, rich, sprawling Canada, rich with her endless wheat-bearing acres where a "Master-Race" could lord it over a slave population. Those are the goals of war—Canada—Brazil—United States. CANADA MAY BE INVADED. WHAT CAN YOU DO TO PROTECT YOUR OWN HOME? ACT NOW. JOIN CANADA'S RESERVE ARMY. Spend two hours a night, two nights a week, in pleasant surroundings; and all the time learn something you may need soon. Apply to the Belleville Armouries or Phone 1499.

Y.M.C.A. War Services

BELLEVILLE

Tonight's Red Triangle Club dance, as last week, will be held in the auditorium of St. Michael's Academy through the kind co-operation of St. Michael's separate school board. The servicemen are to meet at the Y. about 8.15, and time permitting, the hostesses are also requested to come to the Y. at the same hour.

Many thanks are due to the citizens who have opened up their homes to servicemen for a meal or overnight but we still have many chaps for whom we are unable to make these happy arrangements. Anyone desirous of joining this most important war work is asked to phone the Y. or T. Hill at 2738.

In addition to providing reading and writing facilities for men and women of the forces on Sunday, along with small games, etc., a special sing-song and musicale has been arranged for the lobby at 8.30. We are indebted to Bert Bissette for his assistance in this event.

Miss Mary Forster hopes to have convalesced sufficiently by next Monday to again take over supervision of the dancing class. This will be held at 8 p.m. in the games room and we are most happy to have Mary back again.

The Red Triangle Club program for the balance of the week is as follows: Tuesday, Motion Pictures; Wednesday, Dance (Hostesses provided); Thursday, Musical Evening; Friday, Small Games Night. Events start at 8 p.m.

At present, we are short of magazines for adjoining stations.

The dance at the Quinte Club will have St. Michael's Hospitality Club as hosts.

In connection with providing entertainment for personnel stationed in this district, we have been asked to develop a concert company from local talent. Miss Forster is making arrangements for a dance line-up, etc., and there seem to be excellent prospects of interesting capable performers to sing, play, dance, take part in skits, etc. A tentative audition is scheduled at the Red Triangle Club one week from Monday, but in the meantime those interested are asked to phone T. Hill or Miss Martin at 2738.

Contact Club for Airmen's Wives
Home Hospitality for Women's Division R.C.A.F.

The housing situation is particularly serious at present, especially for Airmen's families. The need of places for children is most acute.

Contact Club

The Thursday afternoon group had an enjoyable time bowling and sewing. The members of the club agreed to fill a ditty bay for sailors next Thursday afternoon. The Women's Bowling League at the Y have invited the Contact Club to enter a team in their fall tournament. All airmen's wives wishing to go on this team are asked to play off next Thursday afternoon.

Members of the club and their husbands are welcome to a free movie which will be arranged in the lounge room by the Y.M. War Services each Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Home Hospitality For W.D'S

It is urged that more and more homes be opened to the many young girls in the service. Many of these girls are far from their own homes and crave the opportunity of spending their 48's or at least part of them in a home. A committee comprised of members of each of the local churches was formed some time ago and is anxious to have names of homes available as soon as possible. These representatives can b contacted through your minister or Miss Martin Y.W.C.A. War Services Secretary. Phone 2738.

R.C.A.F. TRENTON NEWS

Wednesday night was a gala night on the station, starting off at 6.15 with a track and field meet with representatives from all sections taking part. Competition was keen and the Women's division made a fine showing with their many entries. Following this, entertainment was provided in the sports hangar, where over 2000 airmen and airwomen were entertained by their fellow workers, to various skits and song numbers, and "loads" of talent was uncovered. The party then adjourned to the Sports Field where a huge fire was lit and a mammoth corn roast took place. There were 2400 buns and wieners handed out along with 3000 cobs of corn then everyone gathered round the fire and a big sing-song enjoyed before lights out was sounded.

The entertainment field at Trenton this week was very full. We were fortunate in having with us, outstanding Canadian talent, Marquetta Linda, internationally famous classical dancer, Miss Olive Blakely, well known Canadian contralto, and Mr. Simeon Joyce, pianist. These artists together with the R.C.A.F. band, proved most popular with the personnel Fl. Doney, well known Canadian baritone, acted as master of ceremonies for evening. Much enthusiasm was shown at the initial get-together of the Station mixed chorus. The Women's Division were out in good numbers and from all indications, things appear to be bright for a successful season.

3rd Sidney

3rd. Sidney — Mr. and Mrs. Joe Vallau of Bermuda, who have spent the last few weeks in Toronto, are staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Latta and visiting other friends and relatives.

Several from here attended the fiftieth anniversary services at Scott's Church, 6th. line, on Sunday which were in charge of the pastor, Rev. L. W. Scott. A former pastor, Rev. E. B. Cooke, of the Toronto Conference, was guest speaker at both services.

Mrs. Arthur Saylor spent Tuesday with Mrs. Wilmot Bailey.

Mrs. George Bonter, Mr. Roscoe Vanderwater and Miss Margaret Vanderwater of Chatterton, were dinner guests on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot Bailey.

Rev. E. B. Cooke who was an over night guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Spafford, called on Mrs. Harley Hubble on Monday afternoon.

Miss Marjorie Simpson of Belleville, spent the weekend with Miss Jewel Bailey at her home, 2nd. Line.

The many friends of Miss Bessie Beatty will regret to learn that she is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital, where she underwent an operation on Tuesday. Her condition is reported as being favorable.

Mrs. H. Hubble and Mr. Everett Hubble spent Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. Dan Bowers, Thomasburg.

C-I-L PAINTS FOR LASTING PROTECTION

RAJAH OF INDORE SAID ABDICATED

By PRESTON GROVER
Associated Press Staff Writer

New Delhi, Sept. 28 — (AP) — Rumors persist that the temperamental Maharaja Yeshwant of Indore has abdicated, and that he will not return from a trip to the United States as head of the state.

British official quarters insist the report of the abdication, carried by Indian papers, is "entirely untrue." But Indian observers assert that the young Maharaja, if he has not actually made the decision, at least is toying with the idea of giving up his throne, as did his father and grandfather before him.

These observers describe the Maharaja as weary of numerous clashes with British authorities and seeking the solace of his American-born wife, who now is in the United States.

History of Indore

The history of Indore has been exciting for more than 50 years. It was one of the last of the Indian states to come to terms with Britain and its territory was cut up, portions of it going to neighboring states.

The grandfather of the present Maharaja abdicated after the murder of a British agent.

Then the father of the present ruler chose to step down when he was given the option of abdicating or standing trial for the slaying of a young Bombay merchant in a row over a dancing girl.

Immediately on abdication he left on a trip around the world. In the United States he met Nancy Miller of Seattle and married her after a sensational courtship. They now are living in Indore and the British residents here say the Seattle woman has had "a very good effect" on the spirited ex-ruler.

The present Maharaja's Indian wife died in Switzerland three years ago. Later he married Mrs. Marguerite Lawler Branyen, the American nurse who had cared for his first wife and his son.

His U. S. Trip

Rumors that the present trip to America indicated he had been squeezed out grew out of a series of events the last several months.

First he addressed a letter to President Roosevelt asking him to intervene in Indian affairs. He is said to have been rapped on the knuckles for that by the Viceroy because the foreign affairs of the princely states are, according to treaty, the exclusive concern of Britain.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Four-Fifths of the Population Have Some Dental Infection

When we read of the great percentage of recruits rejected for army service, we are apt to be discouraged about the health of our young men. When we read further and find that the cause of the greatest number being rejected is infected teeth, we are apt to give a sigh of relief because "everybody has some bad teeth."

What we are forgetting, however, is that while infected teeth are common and 'apparently' cause little or no harm to the body, it is known to physicians and dentists that infected teeth are the cause of a great many symptoms and even diseases and result in pain and a great loss of time from work.

In an article 'Dental Infections and the Industrial Worker', in The Journal of the American Dental Associate,' Dr. Ernest Goldhorn, of Chicago, states: "Statistics reveal that, regardless of age, sex or economic condition, 80 per cent of the people suffer from one or both of the two classes of dental disease, tooth decay and pyorrhoea (inflammation of the gums.) Dental infection has long been recognized as a predisposing cause of rheumatism, arthritis, lumbago, neuritis, particularly sciatica.

Sometimes an industrial worker will have a fall or slight injury to the joint and the pain and disability which follow is considered due entirely to the fall whereas infection from the teeth or gums is already present in the joints or in the ends of the muscles moving the joint (fibrositis) and of course the injury or fall aggravates the condition.

On the other hand, a joint that has been injured is often the first spot to which infection from teeth and gums is carried by the blood.

"Dental infections may cause ulcers of the stomach and intestines, colitis, appendicitis, gall bladder infection and even cancer. Most physicians feel that it would be safe to say that there is not an organ or tissue in the body that cannot be damaged by infection from teeth and gums.

In these days when industrial workers, all of us in fact, should be at our best physically and mentally, and we know that nothing makes one quite so tired or "lazy" as infection, then the commonest infection known—dental infection—should not remain so common when a visit to our dentist twice a year will prevent it.

He Went Snipe Hunting

(From the Australian News-Letter)

It was a mixed mess—Australians and American—and the M.O., who hailed from the part of the United States where they don't have snipe, was prevailed upon to tell the story of how the boys took him snipe hunting.

"It was at our duck camp, about 20 miles from here," he said.

"It's a place we go when we want to forget about the war for a while. The only food you get there is what you catch yourself.

"One night out at the duck camp the boys thought they ought to take me snipe hunting. They prepared me for snipe hunting for two days.

"They told me all about it. They told me what snipe tasted like. They made me want nothing but snipe.

"So we went snipe hunting. We were armed with lanterns searchlights and a bag.

"We climbed into a jeep and travelled about eight miles into the dense woods in search of snipe.

"At a very secluded spot the jeep stopped and we walked half a mile to a much more secluded spot.

"They hung a lantern on a tree. They showed me how to hold the sack, and told me to remain very still and very quiet while they went out to round up the snipe.

"They ran in all directions, and I remained very still and very quiet, waiting for them to round up the snipe, which would be attracted by the lantern and which would run into my sack.

"About half an hour later I got very tired of remaining very still and very quiet.

"But I didn't want to spoil the snipe hunt, so I decided to remain very still and very quiet for another half hour.

"After another half-hour I thought I didn't care much for snipe anyway, and thought I'd go back to the jeep and rest while they rounded up the snipe.

"But there was no jeep there. There were no Australians there. There were no Americans there either.

"About this time I began to see there were no snipe there, too. I also decided it was time to go home, so about 2 a.m. a very weary doctor sneaked into the camp carrying a lantern—and an empty bag.

"I think there's some more Australians coming to this camp soon. I don't want to eat snipe no more, but I do want to take someone snipe hunting."

Trenton and District

Trenton, Sept. 28 (Special)—Sergeant R. W. Probert who has been a member of the Trenton police force since August 1934, tendered his resignation last week, to accept the position of Chief Constable at Belleville. While in Trenton Sergeant Probert made a host of friends who are delighted to hear of his promotion. Chief Constable Probert took over his new duties this Monday morning.

The huge sum of $500.00 was collected on Saturday by the tag day in aid of Chinese relief. This is ample proof of the admiration of the Trenton citizens for the heroic stand which the Chinese have taken in the past five years against our common enemy. Mr. J. H. Matson, chairman of the committee, extends to all who assisted in any way to make this tag day such a success, the profound thanks of his committee and the Chinese War Relief Fund.

Mr. Sam Finger, 18 King Street, Trenton, reported to local police the theft of a distributor from his Ford car which had been parked near the fire hall during the past week. The distributor was valued at $5.00. Police are investigating.

Two cars were damaged in a collision on Saturday night on Dundas Street east when a Graham's taxi, driven by Junior Graham of Byron Street, driving west on Dundas pulled to the centre of the road at Herman Street to make a left turn. Another car owned and driven by Lycle C. Hartman of Ontario Street also proceeding west attempted to pass the taxi and the two collided, the Hartman car leaving the road and striking a telegraph pole breaking it. The left rear fender, left side and left front fender of the taxi was damaged and the front fender, rad and grill of the Hartman car also smashed. Trenton police investigated.

A Jordan taxi driven by Gerald McDonald, Dundas Street West, was damaged to some extent at 12.40 a.m. on Sunday when it was allegedly sideswiped by another car on Highway No. 33 near Carrying Place. The front and rear left fenders were badly damaged and although the other car stopped apparently the name was not taken by the taxi driver, although the number of the licence was.

Base Metal Mines Require 700 Men

OTTAWA, Sept. 28 — (CP) — Gold mines will be asked to provide a substantial proportion of the manpower required by base metal mines, Selective Service officials said in a statement last night reporting a two-day meeting of the manpower advisory committee for the gold and base metal mining industry.

An immediate shortage of 700 men required at the International Nickel Mines at Sudbury, Ont., received particular attention in a discussion on the general shortage in the base metal industry. Various methods of transferring men were considered and it was decided to rely on voluntary transfer at the outset at least, with care to keep the disturbance of family life at a minimum.

"As in the case of many other non-essential industries or industries of low essentiality, the gold mines will be asked to furnish at least a substantial part of the current manpower needs of the base metal mines," the statement said.

"Various methods of arranging the transfer of men from gold mines to more essential operations were discussed and included full recognition of the inconveniences and occasional hardships involved for their being transferred from one locality to another. The committee decided to keep the inconvenience and hardship to a minimum.

"The meeting decided, in regard to the actual transfers, to reply on a voluntry migration as far as pos- a voluntary migration as far as possible. more recent employees of the gold mines and especially the unmarried men will be canvassed with this end in view. The disturbance of family life will be kept to a minimum."

Second Front Demand Reaches New Intensity

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Bolstered by a month-long Russian defence of Stalingrad that has stirred the whole Allied world to amazed admiration, public demand for Anglo-American second front operations now, not next year, to relieve pressure on Soviet lines reached new intensity at the weekend.

Warnings of high Allied spokesmen against premature action went unheeded. Even the grim portents of heavy Canadian casualties at Dieppe and indicated reverse for the British forces in the Tobruk raid failed to abate the calls for aggressive Allied action in the West voiced not only in Moscow but on both sides of the Atlantic.

Wendell Willkie's talks with Soviet officialdom as President Roosevelt's personal emissary added fuel to the fire. He also noted keen Russian disappointment at Anglo-American failure as yet to move in —effectively except by air to divert German pressure.

Need Information

Yet decision as to both the when and where of so stupendous an undertaking cannot conceivably be reached overnight or be based on any but utterly realistic military appraisal of the possibilities.

There is none too certain indication that the Allied strategic councils in Washington and London are fully informed as to either Nazi or Russian dispositions or the actual inroads into Axis reserve strength the five-month battle in Russia has cost. That they have been heavy is certain; but just how heavy, or to what extent they have weakened Hitler's resources to man two fronts simultaneously is another matter.

It seems obvious that even in Africa, where the tables appear to be turned or turning strongly in Allied favor, the British command in Cairo lacks wholly dependable knowledge of the straits to which Marshal Erwin Rommel's once-conquering Africa Corps has been reduced. British land and sea forays, including an astonishing desert dash through Axis lines to Bengazi, west of the Libyan hump, and to Gialo Oasis, 250 miles south, probably were seeking information primarily.

Hit-and-Run Raid

The British raiders were 500 miles behind Rommel's front in Egypt at Bengazi. They were on the main communication nerve of his armies, the Bengazi-Tripoli coastal road, but it was a hit-and-run affair. That it foreshadows a major Allied offensive is wholly probable. That of itself could have a second-front influence on the Russian-Axis battle.

The need of a second front has never been in dispute. The will to achieve it or a multiple-front attack to catch the Axis with its lines now vastly extended in both Russia and Africa in a deadly crossfire is not lacking. Allied might is mustering with accelerating momentum; but the when, where and how of it still must remain the most closely guarded military secret until the hour strikes.

It will come, somehow, somewhere; but if it came prematurely disaster could result which could only increase, not decrease, Russia's peril. Moscow authorities know that as well as Washington and London for all the disappointment they voice.

Canada to Hold New Registration Of All Workers

OTTAWA, Sept. 28 — (CP) — Registrations of all workers in given industries, similar to the National Registration of 1940 but on a much manpower scale, are likely to be held as the National Selective Service Administration seeks detailed information for use in connection with curtailment of non-essential activities, it was indicated today.

Informed sources have disclosed that an order which will reduce industrial activity in many of the less-essential civilian fields has already been drafted and is expected to be put into effect shortly.

Selective Service officials say that a more widespread registration than was carried out in 1940, would prove highly valuable in channelling Canadian manpower, but it is not considered feasible to conduct such a registration now. As an alternative, attention will be centred on those industries which are likely to be replaced.

It is expected that as soon as it is determined that an industry will be curtailed the employees will be asked to fill out special registration forms to determine as fully as possible their skill and experience and also their family responsibilities — an important factor should they be asked to accept employment in another community.

Orchards Undamaged At Point Traverse During Wind Storm

Point Traverse, Sept. 28—As soon as favorable weather permits, several thousand dollars worth of valuable machinery, aboard the sunken tug "Florence," off Timber Island, will be removed from the lake and taken to Kingston.

Leaves Island

Mr. Stanley Rankin, commercial fisherman at the Main Ducks, has completed the fishing season at the island, and will return to Salmon Point, from where he will operate his fishing boats.

Orchards Undamaged

South Bay apple growers state that last week's severe wind storm did not seriously damage the crop of McIntosh apples, which are being harvested and packed at the present time.

Giant Puffball

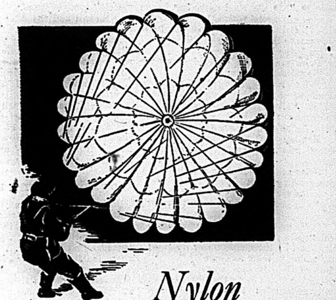
A huge puffball weighing some 13 1-2 pounds, and having a circumference of 54 inches, was found by the writer this week.

Equinoxes

High winds, which at times attained gale force proportions, lashed Lake Ontario waters last week, retarding lake traffic and hampering commercial fishing operations. Fishermen state that the high winds were attributed to the autumnal equinoxes.

Fast Swimmers

Two dogs staying on the False Duck Island, owned by Ken McConnell, lighthouse tender, recently swam from the Ducks to Timber Island, a distance of a mile and a quarter in twenty-five minutes time.



CHEMISTRY HELPS TO WIN THE WAR

Nylon

Now Saves Our Airmen's Lives

WHAT has happened to Nylon — that wonderful hosiery which came and went so quickly? Nylon yarn has gone active . . . into the fabric of man-bearing parachutes.

Remember the outstanding qualities of Nylon . . . soft as silk and much more durable? Well, those qualities of lightness, durability and tensile strength make Nylon the ideal parachute fabric. Today, our airmen have cause to praise the inventiveness of industrial chemistry, which devised this wonderful yarn.

Nylon is produced by chemical processes from abundantly available domestic materials. A new C-I-L plant at Kingston, Ontario, manufactures Nylon yarn — the entire output is earmarked for active service.

Nylon is only one of the many C-I-L products of Industrial Chemistry which are helping to win the war.

Allied Sea Strength

From keel to water in ten days is a record at Portland, Oregon, for construction of a 10,500-ton freighter launched last week — just 240 hours. This is the way things are going in production against the Hun.

Prime Minister Churchill has referred to the construction of 500 U. S. freighters in a year which have added over five million tons of shipping to the strength of the United Nations.

These are facts which count heavily in weight of the war against the Germans.

In a statement Saturday First Lord of the Admiralty A. V. Alexander said Britain's sea armada is as powerful as ever despite the heavy losses of more than 1,200 naval and merchant ships in three years of war. Britain has turned out more than five hundred warships in 30 months, which make up more than 476 ships reported lost. She is reported delivering 40 days after keel-laying, British merchantmen designed to replace the cargo ships which have been lost.

Fail to Teach Poles

So open is the Polish disregard for the German oppressors that the Nazi authorities of occupation recently issued an edict published in the guise of an "appeal to the Polish population," carrying with it the confidential memorandum to the Nazi party members admitting that "recent observations have shown that a part of the Polish population, both in the cities and in rural areas, continues to behave in a manner that leaves no doubt as to its refusal to yield to German order and discipline." So the Nazi party has begun a course of lessons which they call "educational ordinances" to teach the Poles politeness to the followers of Hitler.

Here is the Nazi ordinance:

"Poles are hereby ordered to abide by the following rules:

"Poles must greet all Germans, identified by their uniform, party button, 'Volkstum' insignia, or swastika, by tipping their hats, or, if no hat is worn, by bowing the head.

"Members of the German armed forces must, of course, be similarly treated.

"Poles are forbidden to use the German greeting (Heil Hitler).

"Poles are forbidden to walk in the streets in groups of more than three or four.

"Poles must always step aside to make room for Germans, who may be identified by their uniform or insignia; this is due to them as Germans."

One of the odd ordinances is that forbidding the Poles to do the "Heil Hitler." In all seriousness the Poles would not likely greet the monster for whose butchery of Poles they can never forgive Adolf Hitler.

This is a typical Hitlerism — brutal oppression which leads of course to terrible brutalities exercised on the Poles but also leads the way to a Polish enmity that can never be removed for it is against the Hun who defied the laws of God and civilization to provoke a war of aggression, terrorism and savagery.

The Hun shows by such measures how unfit he is to rule even himself. He not the people of occupied Europe, is the kind that needs to be dominated. Germans could never be masters, because they do not know how to rule. They use the centuries-old actions of tyrants all through history and universal history points to one end, the downfall of tyranny as fast as it raises its head. The soul that is in man and the principle of freedom do not take orders from Hun or any tyrant.

The German race has planned to set up a "new order" of tyranny. "Norway Fights" published by the Polish Labor Group in New York, reports the following scene in a village near Kuno. "The Nazis assembled a good part of the local Polish population in the main square for a public 'lesson in greeting Germans.' The lesson was begun and finished with the merciless beating of the innocent villagers. Three of them were so seriously injured that their fellow-sufferers had to carry them home." That is the typical Hun.

"It many times falls out that we deem ourselves much deceived by others because we first deceived ourselves."—Sir Philip Sidney.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS . . .

BY

AIREDALE DETECTIVE

If you lose a golf ball on the Bay of Quinte Country Club course, don't call for the pro, or bemoan the fact that no more are available.

Just call for "Mixer" and he will bring you any amount up to a dozen, providing you can prove they are your balls.

"Mixer" is a highly intelligent Airedale owned by Mrs. Zita Ryan of the Queen's Hotel, and is the son of the famous "Dudley" well known Front Street aristocrat of dogdom.

"Mixer" scours the "roughs" and the greens, the fences and underbrush, and his keen scent never fails to lead him to the lonely little circular orphans of the golf bags.

He has not quite finished two seasons at his favorite pastiime of pellet hunting, and this Airedale Sherlock Holmes has brought in todate over fifty dozen of the elusive pellets.

With his bosom pal, Mr. Robert Hart, manager of the Belleville Cheddar Cheese Company, "Mixer" tours the fairways and other terrain of the course. He never fails to bring in at least a half-dozen balls of all vintages.

Last year, the dog was the means of sending a substantial amount of money to the British War Victims' Fund, Toronto, from the re-sale of his trophies of the greens to theiir former owners and other golfers whose aim was a bit spotty and erratic.

Four dozen balls were turned over to the club professional for reclamation. Dubs and other golfers at the club are breathing easier. Shortage of balls has no fears for them, as long as the red ball-retriever is on the job.

"Mixer" was trained for his unusual job by Mr. Hart. It began one day when the pair were walking around the course and Mr. Hart tossed a stick in the bushes. "Mixer" brought it back. Next a golf ball was thrown and the intelligent dog soon laid it at the man's feet.

Soon, the dog became well acquainted with golf balls, and developed a remarkable yen for finding them in the most difficult places. Then it became an art and "Mixer" was launched on his canine detective career.

With golf balls the rarity they are today, the dog is proving to be of inestimable value to the boys of the greens. He has been adopted as Mascot No. 1 by the famous "Knothole Club" and his services needless to say, are always in demand.

1848 PROPHECY

Almost a century ago, in 1848 to be accurate, a French political candidate was hissed for making this prophecy: "Geographically Prussia has the form of a serpent, and, like it, she seems asleep, and to gather her strength in order to swallow everything around her—Denmark, Holland, Belgium, and when she shall have swallowed all that, you will find that Austria will be swallowed in its turn, and perhaps, alas, France also." The man who prophesied this is not remembered as a politician but as an author. He was Alexander Dumas.— Indianapolis News.

AUTUMN GARDEN

Along about this time of year
The garden, like a person old,
Worn by the shocks of life severe,
Dreads the approaching cold.

Wrinkled and pale the roses seem,
Only the bravest blossoming on!
The zinnias in the sunlight dream
Of blither mornings long since gone.

Already having left their seed
The gay petunias fade and die.
From pain and growth all things are freed
With winter swiftly drawing nigh.

Much as a person worn and gray,
And very tired and done with dreams,
Waiting God's final judgment day,
The late September garden seems.

NEW FLYING SCHOOL TOWN IN ITSELF

Beyond this training bomber, first to land at the new Centralia, Ont., flying school, can be seen glimpses of the crowd which attended the official opening by Air Vice Marshal G. O. Johnson. This school, in which flyers will be taught how to handle giant British bombers, is said to be the last word in flying schools. It is to be known as No. 9 Service Flying Training School.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Discomfort or—More Discomfort

New York, Sept. 28—The period of "sacrifice" is about to begin in earnest. We are to have nation-wide gas rationing, which we all know, since reading the Branch-Conant-Compton report, should have started at the very outset of the war, to save rubber.

Meat is going to be rationed. It also should have been rationed earlier. We need meat to be preserved and stored for our armed forces in areas all over the world where they must fight; we need meat for our British allies who can produce only half their home supply of food; and we need meat for the Russians, who, by their gigantic sacrifice, are being crucified for mankind.

I regret that Mr. Wickard does not suggest "meatless days." I would like to see two meatless days per week, one for our armed forces, and one for our Allies. I like the idea that twice a week, everybody, together, remembers, at all our tables, our sons and husbands and brothers who are fighting for us; that on another day we remember all together those who have suffered as we have not — those who have bought with their terrible bath of fire and blood our relative immunity. The thought of them would sweeten a mess of lintels.

Other Discomforts to Come

These are discomforts. And there will be others.

Wage ceilings and price ceilings are discomforts; the "freezing" and moving of labor is another, and a great one.

But none of them are the discomforts of the African desert, or of convoys at sea, or of menace from the air over one's home, or of the prisoner of war, or of Bataan or Corregidor, or of hostages shot against a wall, or of millions of refugees driven like leaves before the wind.

And there is the discomfort of taxes. They have been high and will be higher. Today every one receiving his salary, or wage, or income, must say: Only so much belongs to me—and the rest is taxes. This now concerns millions of people for whom the regular deduction of part of their income is new and strange.

The idea that for a certain period every one has to work to earn merely his living, without any surplus for luxury, is new in this country. The definition of luxury is new. Having a car was no luxury; buying a new radio set or mechanical refrigerator was no luxury—to millions. Having more clothes than any other people in the world think they need was no luxury. And throwing away into the garbage cans enough food to feed another small nation was also no luxury.

Today these are luxuries for twentieth century Americans—as they were also luxuries for most eighteenth century Americans. Our ancestors knew that the road to wealth was long and hard for the well-to-do of our generation it has been short. Yet we know that the interruption is merely an interruption; if we win, hardships will be over soon.

All these things we think as we pay our taxes.

Hedge Against Inflation

Now, our taxes are not only created for the financing of this war. They are a hedge against runaway inflation. With every one working the turnover of money is immense, while consumers' goods are scarce.

Under such conditions—plentiful money and scarcity of goods—spending becomes a crime against the economy. The Administration is obliged to curtail our purchasing power. It would be remiss in a chief duty if it failed to do so.

But to a certain degree the Government gives us a choice. We can either have the entire surplus taken away by taxes, giving up money which we will never see again, or we can save it, and get it back after the war.

But let us make no mistake; if we miss this opportunity of saving our surplus by buying war bonds, the Government must take the money away—in our own interests, in the interests of the whole society to which each of us belongs, and to the welfare of which the welfare of each is tied.

Discomfort With a Future.

So buying war bonds can hardly be counted among the discomforts. It is the allowed, and even recommended, individual escape from more taxation. If it is a discomfort to save instead of to spend—a discomfort which Benjamin Franklin would not have regarded as such—then it is a discomfort with a future, in the place of a discomfort with no future.

It involves changes of habits. One doesn't really need that new dress or suit. It's smart to be shabby. One doesn't need to begin collecting now, in flossy kitchen ware, the scrap of the future. In fact there is a certain relief in not having to buy what one doesn't really need, in order to keep the industries of the nation going.

At present, everybody has a job. But there is still an element of insecurity in life. Will everybody have one after the war is finished—especially in the transition period? How about a personal and collective reinsurance? The investment of millions and millions in war bonds is nothing but canned purchasing power for a canned prosperity to follow the war.

It oughn't to take Heddy Lamarr's kisses to convince an American that today's savings in the stocking will be tomorrow's bread and butter.

Queen Confined With Bronchitis

London, Sept. 28 (CP)—The Queen has been confined to bed for the last week with acute bronchitis, Buckingham Palace announced today, adding that there is no cause for anxiety.

"While the Queen is making good progress toward recovery and there is no cause for any anxiety, Her Majesty will be unable to resume her normal activities for the next three weeks," the Palace announcement concluded.

BOTH SIDES OR ELSE . . .

London —(CP)— A paper control order stipulates that both sides of notepaper for letters to government departments must be used or users may be prosecuted for waste.

DEW AS WEATHER SIGN

"It's going to rain today because there was no dew this morning." How often have you heard that observation.

Many people believe it never rains immediately after a heavy dew.

They, regard the presence of dew in the morning as a sign that it will be a fair day.

Apparently there is some scientific basis for this popular belief.

Experts of the U. S. Weather Bureau explain the relation between rain and dew as follows:

Dew is formed when objects near the ground cool to temperatures below the dewpoint. During the day the ground gets warm. After nightfall the moisture in the warm air arising from the ground comes in contact with the cooler air above the surface and condenses as dew on grass, plants and other objects. Dew forms when the air is still and the sky clear. These are the conditions near the centre of a well-marked "anti-cyclone," where rain does not occur. On the other hand, dew forms but slightly, if at all, on windy and cloudy nights and hence, in general, dew is a sign that the day will be fair.

Does dew rise or fall? is a frequent qquestion.

There are three different sources of dew. In many cases a large part of the dew, and in some cases probably all of it, is produced after nightfall when moisture already in the air before sunset comes in contact with and condenses on bodies cooler than the atmosphere. During the day the earth receives heat from the sun; after sundown this heat is rapidly radiated into the air, and the ground and objects near it become cool; if this cooling goes below a certain point—known as the "dewpoint"—any moisture that happens to be in the air will condense on objects near the ground in the form of dew. Such dew may be said to "fall." The "sweating" of an ice pitcher is an example of the dew-making process.

Some dew, however, is produced by the evaporation of water from the soil during the night. Such dew may be said to "rise."

Frequently in the morning "sparkling dewdrops" are seen on the tips of grass and other live vegetation. This is known as "false dew" and consists of exhalations from the plants themselves. Such dew neither "rises" nor "falls."

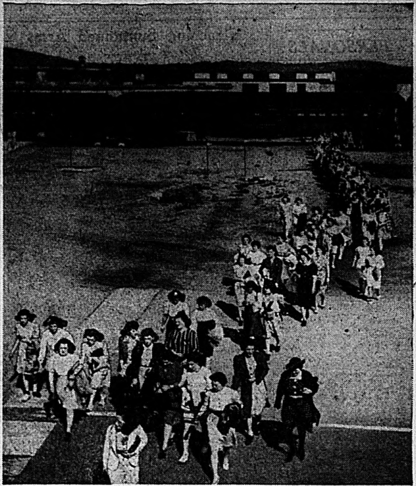
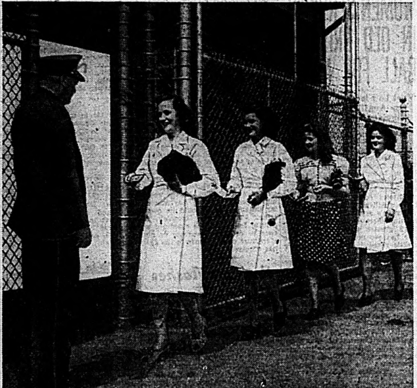
BIENVENUE A NOS VISITEURS
WELCOME TO OUR VISITORS
LA TRAVERSE-DE-LEVIS LTÉE LEVIS FERRY LTD

Three Perry sisters are welcomed to old Quebec by cheerful Levis Ferry sign. They hail from Cap Chat, on the Gaspe coast, where their father is a farmer.

Sisters apply for jobs at Dominion arsenals in Quebec City. After interview, they are fingerprinted, photographed and assigned to inspecting .303 shells. More than fifty percent of women working at the plant come from out of town.



After free train ride from Quebec City, evening shift arrives at arsenal in outskirts of town. Working day is divided into three 8-hour shifts, employees alternating from one shift to another each week. Girls do not work on Sunday.



Laurette Maurice, 19; Celine Perry, 21; Alphonsine Roy, 21, and Roberte Perry, 20, must show their passes to guard as they enter plant. Perry sisters live with a cousin in Quebec suburb of Ste. Foy, travel to and from plant in taxi.

Dark-eyed Gilberte Laberge, 18, operates an automatic gauging machine. A statue of the Sacred Heart watches over the workers in each hall of the great arsenals.

Girls get half-hour for lunch in plant cafeteria. Price of meal is 15 cents, deducted from their pay. Inspection department employees wear white smocks, eat in separate dining hall from overall-clad girls who operate the machines.

Perry sisters, used to the land, spend many of their leisure hours tending their cousin's garden in Ste. Foy. They thus combine country life and city work.

With foreladies and .303 ammunition forgotten for the day, Celine, Helene and Roberte Perry are carefree and gay. When girls work in evening or night shift, which happens two weeks out of three, they get plenty of outdoor recreation.

When working on the day shift, girls can invite their boy friends for dinner. Elected tonight are Corporal Pierre Levasseur and Private Leopold Desjardins (right). Smiling Roberte and her two sisters take machine age in their stride.

WEDDINGS

KETCHESON—FOSTER

A wedding of widespread interest was solemnized in Moira United Church on Wednesday afternoon, September 23rd., when Betty Jean Foster, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Foster, became the bride of Mr. John William Ketcheson, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Ketcheson of Foxboro. The officiating clergyman was Rev. L. W. Scott of Wallbridge.

The church was beautifully decorated with gladioli, asters, sweet peas and evergreen.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked charming with floor length gown of white duchess satin with sweetheart neckline fitted bodice and long full skirt. Her finger tip veil was of white tulle illusion, the halo being caught with white rose buds. Her shower bouquet of Dream roses were tied with satin ribbon.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Coleman Townsend, the bride's sister, wore a floor length navy American sheer dress, with navy halo hat and shoulder length veil. She carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses.

Miss Jane Ketcheson, sister of the groom, was junior bridesmaid. She was attired in a becoming gown of turquoise taffeta, with fitted bodice and long full skirt. Her ouquet was of pink Briarcliffe roses.

Miss Hilda Boldrick as bridesmaid, was becomingly attired in a floor length gown of pink chiffon over taffeta. She wore pink tulle illusion veil caught with pink rosebuds, and carried a shower bouquet of Talisman roses.

Little Miss Lou Ann Foster, niece of the bride, as flower girl, was very pert in long mauve sheer dress and carried a basket of flowers.

Mr. Elmer Young, Mountain View, was groomsman. Miss Allison Vanderwater, of Foxboro, cousin of the groom, played the wedding music, while Mrs. Milton Shaw, of Ivanhoe, cousin of the bride, sang "I Love You Truly", as the bridal procession entered the church, and "O Promise Me", during the signing of the register. The ushers were Mr. Gordon Foster and Mr. Douglas Ketcheson.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The mother of the bride, in rose fine crepe dress, with bronze rose corsage and large black picture hat, received the guests assisted by the groom's mother, gowned in heavenly blue silk two-piece dress, with silver corsage and black velvet hat.

Mr. Kenneth Stewart, pastor of Moira United Church, proposed the toast to the bride. The groom capably responded. Rev. L. W. Scott spoke of the excellent qualities of both bride and groom and their efficiency in the neighborhood.

The assistants at the tables were Miss Marion Wallbridge, Miss Margaret Reid, Miss Marion Daniels, Miss Margaret Vanderwater, Miss Doris Mullett and Miss Doris Farrel.

The groom's gift to the bride was a chest of silver, and to the groomsman and ushers, gold engraved tie clasps.

The bride's gifts to the bridesmaids, soloist and pianist were strands of pearls, and to the flower girl, a silver bracelet.

For travelling the bride wore a beige wool dress with black trimmings, black felt hat and polo coat.

After a short honeymoon to Peterboro and points north, the happy couple will reside at Guelph.

DAFOE—IRVIN

A quiet, but pretty wedding was solemnized Wednesday afternoon, at Tabernacle United Church, when Phyllis Marguerite Irvin, only daughter of Mr. Lindsay Irvin, Belleville, was united in marriage to Pte. F. G. Dafoe, Kingston, son of Mr. A. Dafoe, Belleville. The Rev. R. E. Spencer officiated and Mrs. M. Duff played the wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was charming in a street length dress of dusky rose wool. She wore brown accessories and carried a bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and bouvardia. Miss Emma Dafoe, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, and wore a street length wool dress in Queen's blue, with brown accessories. She carried a bouquet of Pink Delight roses.

The best man was Mr. A. R. Moore, cousin of the bride and Mr. Donald Dafoe acted as usher.

After the ceremony, a reception, for the immediate relatives and friends of the couple, was held at the Quinte Hotel. Mr. J. W. Moore proposed the toast to the bride, to which the groom responded.

Later, amid a shower of rice and confetti, the happy couple left for Ottawa, the bride travelling in mid blue wool with matching accessories. On their return they will reside in Kingston.

IVANHOE W.M.S.

Mrs. Harold Reid entertained the members of the Ivanhoe W.M.S., to an afternoon meeting on Tuesday, September 15.

The President, Mrs. S. Twiddy opened the meeting with hymn 282 followed by the Lord's Prayer. The roll call responded to by the keyword "Friend" showed sixteen members present. The minutes were read and business discussed. Mrs. Baldwin Reid then gave a few remarks and little Carl Reid presented Mrs. Charles Mitz with a bouquet of asters in honour of her 50th wedding anniversary celebrated recently. Mrs. Mitz has been secretary of the Society for over forty years.

Mrs. Cora Prest then took over the meeting. Hymn 380 was sung. The theme chosen for the meeting was "The Church in the Community". Readings were given by Miss Prest and Mrs. Hagerman. Hymn 449 was sung. Mrs. George Wood led in prayer. The Watch Tower was given by Mrs. S. Prest, Mrs. M. Reid, and Mrs. Arthur Wood. Hymn 378 and the benediction closed the meeting. The hostess served a delicous ten cent tea, proceeds of which were $1.65. The collection amounted to $1.04. A vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Reid for her hospitality.

KNOWLES—HEMPHILL

St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, was the setting for the marriage of Miss Grace Elizabeth Hemphill, Deloro, to Mr. George Victor Knowles, Montreal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Knowles, Ottawa. Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher officiated, and Miss Grace Bullen of Toronto, was at the organ. Miss Margaret Houston of Belleville, sang.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of tea rose chiffon, matching finger tip veil held with a Juliet cap, and carried a shower of white roses and bouvardia. Her only attendant was her cousin, Miss Virginia Brass of Montreal, wearing blue chiffon, flower-trimmed calot, and carrying Rapture roses. The groomsman was Mr. Harold McLellan, Ottawa, and the ushers, Mr. Walter Hilton and Mr. Roy Smith.

After the reception the couple left for the Laurentians, and will live in Montreal.

ELLWOOD—McCAULEY

Christ Church, Bolton, was the setting for the marriage of Miss Edith Mary McCauley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. McCauley to Private James Bannerman Ellwood, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Ellwood, Rev. J. J. Robbins officiated, and Miss M. Lockwood was at the organ.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white crepe, finger tip veil, and carried red roses and bouvardia. Miss Barbara McCauley was bridesmaid for her sister, wearing twinkle blue crepe, and carrying pink roses. Mr. William Ellwood, R.C.A.F., Belleville, was groomsman for his brother.

Immediately after the ceremony, the couple left on a short motor trip.

FORD—RIVERS

St. Carthagh's Church, Tweed, was the setting for the marriage of Miss Mary Rita Evelyn Rivers, daughter of Mrs. Rivers and the late William Rivers, to Mr. Jack Bernard Ford, Toronto, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Ford of Read. Rev. Dean Cullinane officiated, and Rev. Sister Mary Sheila was at the organ. Mrs. Fred Fobert sang.

Mr. James Rivers gave his sister in marriage. She wore white satin and lace, her finger tip veil held with a halo outlined with pearls and rhinestones, and carried Better Time roses. Miss Yvonne Rivers was bridesmaid for her sister, wearing yellow net, matching shoulder veil, and carrying Talisman roses. The flower girls, Miss Vera Rivers, niece of the bride, and Miss Shirley Ann Whalen wore mauve taffeta, shoulder veils, and carried nosegays. Mr. Jim Ford, Belleville, was groomsman for his brother, and the ushers were Mr. Leonard and Mr. Martin Rivers.

A reception followed at the Quinte Hotel, The couple will live in Toronto.

Bleaching Suntanned Arms

Georgia Carrol has pretty arms and hands.

BY HELEN FOLLETT

Time now to give attention to arms that have been bronzed by the sun. Complexions are creamed and petted, fingernails are made to bloom like red roses, hands receive balm, coiffures are divinely beautiful. But arms just go along and get no help at all.

Beauty shops offer softening and bleaching treatments. If there's no time for these indulgences, if the balance in the check book isn't as fat as it might be, much can be done at home.

First, a good scrubbing from fingertips to shoulders with warm soap suds and a heavy brush. Get after the elbows, rubbing the lather in with the fingertips. Rinse with warm water, dry thoroughly. You are going to apply cream and cream should be put on a dry skin.

A heavy emollient is better for this purpose than cold cream. Make a bracelet of fingers and thumbs, work round and round from wrists to shoulders. Smooth up and down. Then sprinkle on almond meal to form a pack. Wrap the arms in turkish towels that have been wrung out of hot water.

A mixture of equal parts of peroxide and strained lemon juice will take the heart out of summer freckles. It has a mild bleaching effect upon tan as well.

During the arm massage do not fail to work the cream into the cuticle that surrounds the fingernails and to thumb it into the knuckles.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Unwed Girl Faces Motherhood,

Sees Suicide as Only Way Out.

The papers were full of war news—the landing of the Commandos at Dieppe, Russian war news, Egyptian war news. On the inside of the paper was a bit of incidental war news evidently not considered of much importance.

A pretty 16-year-old girl, who saw no way out of her tragedy but suicide, threw herself from the fourth storey window of a Washington apartment house. She had come to the end of all things, it seemed to her. She was unmarried and she was going to be a mother. Terrifying experience for a girl of sixteen under the happiest of circumstances. But in this girl's case, only black despair faced her.

Her lover, a soldier not many years older than she, couldn't get a furlough to come home and do the right thing for this unhappy young creature. So her mother and sister went with her to his army post, not far from Washington, to see if the authorities would not allow the ceremony to be performed by the chaplain.

Meanwhile the boy had got into trouble. When the girl, her mother and sister arrived at camp, the boy was under punishment. No, he couldn't be married. Discipline was discipline and it was no time for relaxing rules for a soldier who was not a credit to his uniform.

They returned to Washington, the stricken three—the 16 year old girl who was going to face motherhood unmarried, the wide-eyed young sister who knew there was trouble in the family and hoped things were going to turn out all right, and the tight-lipped little mother, so crushed and respectable.

Not much was said on the journey back to Washington. The 16-year-old girl who had hoped to be married twisted her hands on the way home but didn't say anything. When they came to the door of the apartment house where they lived, she dashed ahead, ran up the stairs to the fourth floor and flung herself out of the window—that seemed the only solution to her. She was taken to a hospital, dying.

Two thousand years have passed since the Great Teacher said: "Let him who is without sin cast the first stone." And though the human race has become more brutal, more dreadful in the business of exterminating each other in warfare, the quality of mercy toward girls who, like this poor child, saw no way out but suicide, has grown more humane.

All faiths have considered the plight of the unmarried mother. The Florence Crittenton Home has turned a new page for her. She is received with kindness and taught to support herself and her child. All churches consider her case with mercy.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

G. S. O. Quiz Puts Searchlight on Girl's Manners.

If you girls want to join the Girls' Service Organization, to do your bit for the boys in uniform in your community, you'll be given a definite standard of manners and you'll be expected to measure up to that standard. That's a challenge to you—and a fine and stimulating challenge it is.

Throughout the country, girls are signing up with the Girls' Service Organization, which is to co-operate with the U.S.O.-Y.M.C.A. recreational program for men in the service. The function of the G.S.O. is to provide wholesome recreational opportunities for service men—dances, parties, informal gatherings, and special entertainment adapted to the needs of the local community. Each group of G.S.O. girls is under the supervision of the unit director.

Are you wondering how your manners would measure up to the G.S.O. requirements?

The quiz published in the G.S.O. Manual gives you the perfect opportunity to give yourself an honest self-examination. Grade yourself on the following points, to see if you can make a total of ten.

1. Personal Appearance

a. Is your hair combed, make-up fresh, seams straight, slip O.K.?

b. How about your posture .. shoulders back, tummy in, smile contagious?

2. Ability to Meet People Easily

a. Can you go more than half way without being fresh? Or sarcastic?

b. Can you make the other person feel as if he had "known you forever"? (Remember to let him do a little bit of talking.)

3. Social Responsibility

a. Are you willing to help "make the party go", to see when things are going "slow" and make suggestions?

b. Can you make introductions easily .. and help others have a good time?

4. Ability to See Things as They are (Reality vs. Glamor).

a. Is it the uniform or the man you are helping to entertain?

b. Do you realize that most of the fellows may have girls back home and that enjoying your company for three dances, or even for the entire evening, does not necessarily mean that he is seeking a permanent alliance with you for the duration?

5. Ability to Practice Your Ideals.

a. Did you ever think that democracy might mean just plain thoughtfulness, or dancing with a man who is not especially the best dancer or the most handsome man in the room?

b. Do you remember that lesson of long ago: "Be kind, one to another." That means a lot of things .. not being catty, sharing your personality, sharing your good times, knowing right from wrong.

So, young lady, when that service man says: "How do you do." to you, what kind of impression will you make on him? What will he see? What will he hear? Will you show that you are the kind of girl who should be given the responsibility of serving with that great organization, the U.S.O.? Will your personality and your way of thinking be on the "preferred list."

That man in uniform is going to war to preserve your way of life. You must show him that YOUR way of life is worth preserving. Hold your head high .. and take your place proudly on the assembly line of Service.

WOMEN SERVICES IN OLD BRITAIN CALL FOR MORE

Must be Flood of Volunteers for Auxiliary Services to Obviate Application of Compulsion, Officials Say

London, Sept. 28 (CP) — More than 5,500,000 of the eight million women registered with the Ministry of Labor are in fulltime war work but compulsion for women may soon be extended unless more volunteers come forward for the three auxiliary services.

Women's service directorates say nothing short of a spate of volunteers greater than anything the war has yet produced can abviate drastic revision of the voluntary system.

The Auxiliary Territorial Service and the Women's Auxiliary Air Force, it was reported, could use twice as many recruits as they get each week. More and more women are needed to replace men going overseas.

Even the Women's Royal Naval Service, closed for a long time to recruits, has called for 14,000 women before Christmas. The present call-up system is not producing women quickly enough to meet expansion of the forces.

Possible Extension

Extension of the conscription age, drastic examination of deferment and sweeping overhaul of regulations applying to married women are among suggestions put forward for increasing the intake of women.

Compulsion in the case of wives of soldiers will be avoided, it is understood, but a recruiting drive to interest them in service life may be run, with a series of lectures by the Army Bureau of Current Affairs, designed to overcome the aversion so many service men have of seeing their wives in uniform.

A government report recommended recently that the position of childless wives of men in the forces be reviewed.

TRACTOR ALSO SCRAPED

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 28 —(AP) —Scrap collection directors needed something to flatten out their scrap heaps. A. W. Witherspoon came up with a heavy tractor, which did the job. "And when you're done, just scrap the tractor, too," said Witherspoon.

HEALTH CHATS

By Dr. Herman N. Bundesen
President, Chicago Board of Health

MILITARY LIFE BRINGS FOOT DISORDER

During wartimes certain disorders occur in the course of military life which, at other periods, are rare. With many thousands of men marching long and unaccustomed distances, a condition affecting the feet, and known as "march fracture," seems to be developing quite frequently. In this a break in the second or third metatarsal bones occur. The metatarsal bones are those in the foot located just behind the toes.

There are certain conditions, such as inflammation of the muscles of the foot, flatfoot and disturbances in the circulation, that may tend to cause these fractures to occur more readily. However, it would appear that the real cause of the break in the bones, according to Dr. George R. Krause of South Carolina, is the putting of more weight on the foot than the bones can stand.

As a result of "march fracture" there is a pain in the foot which at first is sharp and severe. The pain comes on gradually and then becomes worse. It usually is noted only when pressure is applied directly to the foot. The back of the foot soon begins to swell. However, the swelling and pain tend to disappear when the foot is kept at rest in a raised condition. In the first period of the disorder—the first seven to ten days—it is usually not possible to show the fracture or break in the bone in an X-ray plate. During the next period, however, the fracture can be seen and a callus or a new bone may be noted in the X-ray plate around the place where the fracture occurred. At this time, also, a line where the break in the bone occurred is visible in the X-ray plate.

The treatment for the disorder consists of putting the foot in a plaster cast for from three to six weeks. Following this heat and massage may be used to lessen the pain and stiffness.

There are not many other conditions of the foot which cause symptoms like those of "march fracture." However, certain tumors, such as sarcomas, may develop in the foot and produce similar symptoms. Still, the foot is not a common location for this type of tumor.

It would appear important to use measures to prevent the development of "march fracture", since it does disable for a period of several months. A careful study should be made of the feet of any person who does a great deal of walking, particularly walking when carrying heavy loads. Flat feet should be treated with exercise and the wearing of proper shoes. Any muscular inflammations should be overcome. Those who complain of painful feet should be examined at once to determine whether or not a fracture of any bones in the foot has occurred.

Fashion Flashes

KEEP WARM with such durable and attractive furs as American opossum and muskrat. A grand all-purpose coat is a boxy, swagger model in opossum made with wide bell sleeves and big pockets and lined with gray rayon faille.

WITH ALL THE EXCITEMENT about color, the good black dress still goes its way. A dress to cherish is of fine black wool jersey, beautifully cut and styled with frills of coffee-colored hand-crocheted lace around the neckline and down to the waist, and also edging the long, tight sleeves.

EARLY FALL days are sometimes very chilly and that's when the short fur coat really goes to town. A beauty is in black Persian lamb, cut on Chinese lines, collarless, full and flaring and bound with black braid stitched in gold.

NEW HIGHS are registered in heights. A smart model is of fine black felt tucked and draped to a very high peaked crown and trimmed at either side with fans of pleated black lace held by tiny cerise satin bows.

THERE'S STYLE in abundance in the new clothes made for back-to-school girls. A neat suit has a long jacket of tan wool in a Shetland weave styled in cardigan lines piled and buttoned in brown velvet to match the brown velvet skirt.

To Win at Dances Learn More Steps

Diagram Shows Gay Rumba Step

Having a glorious time at a dance depends so much on your being sure of the steps!

When you can REALLY rumba—not just follow the basic step but turns like La Habana, too—the best dancers seek you out! And you can easily follow these steps with dance diagrams.

Come, try La Habana Turn from our diagram—it's so simple! Get that rumba rhythm, 1 AND 2, 3 AND 4, into your hips and—on Count 1—take a short step back on left foot; AND—take a short step back on right foot; 2—take a short step back on left foot and pause for half a beat.

Count 3 AND 4, repeat Counts 1 AND 2, starting with the right foot, and continue until the circle is completed.

Sway your hips whenever you transfer weight from one foot to the other, in the direction of the step—but smoothly, subtly!

Our 32-page booklet tells how to carry yourself, how to move your feet in every popular dance. Gives footprint diagrams, explains rhythm of rumba, Conga, tango, fox-trot, Westchester, shag, waltz steps.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "Home Course in New Ballroom Dances" to Ontario Intelligencer, Home Service, 166 Front Street, Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of the booklet.

SOMETHING NEW in the coat world is the coat cut on officer's greatcoat lines with half-belted back and double-breasted front, done not in woolens but in sleek handsome black velvet. Nice for after five and with furs.

CLAYT LAMBERT ENS' CHOICE

Syracuse Chiefs One Game Behind in Series With Columbus

Syracuse, N.Y., Sept. 28. (AP)—Manager Jewel Ens of Syracuse Chiefs is coming back at Columbus tonight with Clayt Lambert, big right-hander who handcuffed the Red Birds with five hits in last Thursday's opener of the Little World Series.

The American Association Club holds an edge in game, 2 to 1, in the 25th annual minor league classic, by virtue of Saturday night's 5-4 victory in an erratic game with the International League Chiefs.

Yesterday's scheduled afternoon contest was postponed.

Elwin Preacher Roe will take the mound for the Red Birds tonight. Roe, a lefthander won only six while losing 11 for the Birds, but is a late season hurler, picking up steam when the nights are cool.

Eddie Shokes, Syracuse first-baseman is expected to be back in the line up tonight after being sidelined with a cold. Ewell Blackwell, ace of the Chiefs' hurling staff, prevented by illness from pitching Saturday, is expected to be ready for the Tuesday contest.

The Chiefs won the first game of the series 6-1 and Columbus took the seconds 3-2.

Tightened Control Over Working Conditions in War Plants Likely

(By JOHN DAPHINEE)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 28 (CP) — Tightened control over working conditions—particularly in important war industries—is anticipatde as a move to reduce "absenteeism" which in some plants has gone as high as 20 per cent.

Reduced production because of the voluntary absence of workers is most marked in factories which employ large numbers of women. Selective Service officials believe working conditions are largely responsible.

The problem is accentuated now that the manpower shortage is bringing more women out of the home.

An intensive educational campaign, coupled with strict enforcement of existing Federal and Provincial regulations, is expected to make workers happier and cut down absenteeism.

Federal authorities have power through an order passed under the War Measures Act early this year to require employers engaged on war contracts to provide medical services for their workers and adhere to set standards of cleanliness, lighting and ventilation.

Factory acts governing conditions of employment are in effect in all provinces but Prince Edward Island but they differ considerably in detail. New Federal regulations may bring a greater degree of standardization.

This little story about a cabinet minister comes from the far northwest.

During their recent airplane trip to that region Resources Minister Crerar and Rt. Hon. Malcolm Macdonald, United Kingdom High Commissioner, stopped over at a small community where there were only two or three white families amongst the Indians.

There was a dance that night. The Indian fiddlers did a good job on jigs but didn't know anything else and one of the white women said sadly: "My, how I wish I could hear a waltz."

Mr. Crerar, admitting he used to play the violin at the odd country dance in the old days, played one. It sounded all right, too.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

(By LOUIS V. HUNTER)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

With the R.C.A.F., Somewhere in England, Sept. 28 (CP)—PO. J. T. Wills, a Saint John Hurricane pilot, enjoys the distinction of having been the first Canadian flier over Dieppe and of being a member of the R.A.F. squadron which made the first sortie of the day against that Nazi stronghold. Wills also enjoys the dubious honor of having had three aircraft he flew that day shot up.

No man in the squadron outside of the commanding officer made more trips over Dieppe. His work began in the pre-dawn darkness and he paused during the day only long enough to snatch a bite and a bit of rest or to step from one bullet and flak-riddled Hurricane into another new war horse.

Wills and his companions strafed ground defences and made low-level attacks against enemy shipping off the coast. They flew so low, Wills said, they were within revolver shot of the ground defences.

Flt. Lt. Edward G. Gilmore, formerly an optometrist in a Toronto department store and a pre-war member of the celebrated No. 110 City of Toronto Auxiliary Squadron, has been promoted to the rank of Squadron Leader and given command of a flight in an R.C.A.F. bomber squadron under Wing Commander Donovan (Tiny) Ferris of Edmonton. Gilmore, who has completed 1,500 hours of flying, is married and his wife lives at 125 Robina Avenue, Toronto.

Beaufighters of Fighter Command's Newfoundland squadron destroyed two Heinkel III's and damaged a third over the sea off the West Country recently. One of the Beaufighters was piloted by a Canadian pilot officer. The Canadian gave the Jerry five bursts. The raider dived, then burst into flames and crashed into the sea.

Another pilot shot up a HE-111 which, although hit, returned his fire in a chase through a spiral dive. The Jerry hit the sea in a glow of fire.

With the promotion of Flt.-Lt. K. G. Calvert, medical officer in an R.C.A.F. fighter squadron overseas, there now are two squadron leaders in the family. His brother, Squadron Leader L. S. Calvert, is accounts officer at "Y" Depot Halifax. The Doc is a graduate of the University of Western Ontario at London, Ont., and served at the Western Hospital, in Toronto. Since he enlisted he has been posted to Trenton, Ont., Regina, Calgary, Edmonton, Lethbridge, Alta., and Dafoe, Sask.

THE EXPERTS SAY

(By ISABEL ALLAN)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Sept. 28 (CP) — Expert's tips for housewives on the home front.

VEGETABLES—It's all in the way you cook them, Marion Harlow, assistant director of Nutrition Services, says of fresh vegetables. Here are some important dont's she recommends: Don't peel vegetables before cooking — don't overcook them — don't use a lot of water — and don't ever use soda. Soda destroys vitamins as well as flavor.

SUGAR—You'll be making your goodies early this year to send in boxes overseas. The sugar administration of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board says you are permitted to save small amounts of your regular ration .. not enough for your usual Christmas cooking and baking — but a few pounds for special treats. While buying your sugar this month the board reminds you to anticipate your October preserving requirements — remember your vouchers don't extend beyond September.

MEAT—Here's one for the book from Laura Pepper, chief of the consumer section, Department of Agriculture, to help solve that beef and pork shortage problem: Take one cup of liver, cubed, one-half tablespoon of fat or dripping, one-half cup canned tomatoes, one-half cup uncooked spaghetti, one-quarter cup chopped onions, one teaspoon minced parsley, one-half teaspoon salt and two tablespoons grated cheese. Brown onion in fat, add cubed liver and seasoning, cook slowly for ten minutes, add tomatoes and cook for 20 minutes. Cook spaghetti separately in water with salt, and when done drain and place on platter, pour liver mixture over it and sprinkle with grated cheese—it serves four.

SHOES—Some factories have had to cut their civilian production 20 per cent for several months, and those who know have these hints for saving on shoes: If Johnny gets his shoes wet, don't put them in a warm place to dry, but wash off all mud, dry as thoroughly as possible, place the proper size shoe trees in them, and polish when quite dry. If Mary has a new pair of suede pumps a good way to restore the nap is to hold at a safe distance over a steaming kettle—and if hubby's working shoes have to meet all kinds of weather, be sure to oil or grease them frequently to preserve the leather.

ELECTRICITY — Trying to save on electricity? Take a few tips from a consumer information service of the Wartime Information Boards: Keep bulbs washed and clean—and remember, a 100 watt bulb gives as much light as two sixty watts and costs less. When you are cooking use pans with tight fitting covers and see that the pan covers the whole unit — a blackened utensil bottom conducts heat better than a shiny one — and boil only as much water as you need.

TOLL OF FIRES

Boston — (CP) — The National Fire Protective Association says 10,000 persons in the United States lost their lives in 1941 as the result of fires. Property loss was nearly $306,000,000.

4th Thurlow

4th. Thurlow — The Annual Rally Day Service was held in Bethany Sunday School on Sunday with a goodly number present. The assistant superintendent, Mr. Frank Walker, was in charge. A number of promotions were also made. The Rally Day theme "Looking Unto Jesus" was carried out in readings, choir music, and address, with the Rev. Mr. Davis presenting the theme.

Mrs. Lydia Way is visiting relatives in Picton.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry McPherson, 3rd. Line, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Cole, on Sunday.

Several from this neighborhood attended Shannonville Fair on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Pound spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Hearnes, Deseronto.

Miss Florence McRae is visiting friends in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Cooley and Mr. John E. Cooley were Sunday guests of Mr. George English, Melrose.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley MacDonald Shannonville; Mr. and Mrs. George Garrison and Jack, Bancroft, also Mr. Fred Carscallen, Belleville, called on Mrs. Fred Garrison on Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Davis was a dinner hour guest on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Embury.

Baseball Closes Its First War Year of Present Era, Cardinals And Yankees Winning Leagues

St. Louis Had to Wait to Last Day of Season to Win Their Loop

A GOOD SEASON

By SID FEDER
Associated Press Sport Writer

The shooting and the shouting are over for baseball's 1942 season, and the only thing left for the boys to fight about is whether St. Louis Cardinals are a tired ball club after their skyrocket ride into the National League pennant, or whether they'll still be hot against the Yankees in the world series.

The first wartime campaign wound up Sunday, with considerable confusion over what baseball can look forward to for the rest of the war, and with the Cards winning both ends of a double-header from Chicago Cubs to knock the Brooklyn Bums off the National League throne.

It was this surge of St. Louis that had the folks bouncing around in their chairs as the race went right down to the wire with the Cards finally getting the nod by two games. Yesterday's twin win marked the 43rd victory the Cards had chalked up in their last 52 games to come from far back to take the flag.

Yanks Win by Nine Games

On the other hand, the Yanks were just waltzing along since they sewed up their sixth American League championship in seven years on Sept. 14 and in their finale yesterday they were nosed out by the Red Sox 7-6 to finish with a nine-game bulge over Boston. Tex Hughson got his 22nd victory of the year.

The Yanks go into the series Wednesday as 5-to-9 favorites in the betting, in spite of such St. Louis elbowing as may be offered by Mort Cooper and his sidekicks, among them Ernie White and Johnny Beazley, who turned the trick over the Cubs yesterday. It was in the first game, with White serving up a five-hitter, that the Cards clinched the flag by winning 9-2. Beazley took his 21st triumph of the year in the afterpiece, in which the Cards clicked by 4-1, just to prove to the folks there was no fluke.

Pirates Finish Fifth

The Dodgers ended their year yesterday with a 4-3 victory over the Phillies to run their closing streak to eight straight.

The two third-place clubs, New York Giants and St. Louis Browns, wound up the season by taking a day off.

The only change in the standings on the final day saw Pittsburgh Pirates pummel Cincinnati Reds twice, 8-7 in 12 innings and 7-4 in the regular nine, to climb over the Cubs into fifth place in the National League. The Reds held fourth place safely in spite of the double headache.

Cleveland clinched the rear end of the American League's first division by whitewashing Detroit 8-0 behind Jim Bagby's six-hit hurling. There was no other action on the big league front.

Game Forfeited

In Saturday's games, New York Giants won the first game of a doubleheader from Boston 6-4 and were ahead 5-2 in the eighth inning of the second when thousands of youngsters, admitted into the park with scrap-metal donations, ran on to the field, halting play. The game was forfeited to Boston by the 9-0 forfeit score. In other National League games, Brooklyn defeated the Phils 8-3 and Chicago at St. Louis and Pittsburgh at Cincinnati were postponed.

Only two games were scheduled in the American League, Cleveland defeating Detroit 3-0 and St. Louis at Chicago being cancelled.

SABOTAGE IN CRETE

London —(CP)— Greek advices from the Mediterranean indicate that more than 3,000 people of Crete have been executed by the Nazis in Crete for alleged sabotage.

BAD PEG

Second Baseman Billy Herman of the Brooklyn Dodgers goes high into the air for Catcher Mickey Owen's peg to second but he doesn't get the ball and the runner, Bob Northey of the Phils, is safe at second. Action is from a game in Brooklyn.

CARDS PREPARE FOR INVASION OF YANKEES

First Game of World Series Will be Played in St. Louis on Wednesday

GAME CALLED 2.30 P.M.

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sport Writer

St. Louis, Sept. 28 — (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals have solved the puzzle surrounding the world series and this joyous community noisily prepared today for the invasion of New York Yankees for the first game of the baseball classic.

There was a somewhat vague realization among St. Louis fans that elsewhere the mighty Yankees were being established as favorites to win their sixth world championship in seven years, but confidence in the Cardinals is supreme here.

Mort Cooper, winner of 22 games against seven defeats, is certain to pitch the opening game at Sportsman's Park Wednesday at 1:30 P.M. C.D.T. (2:30 P.M. E.D.T.) and Ernie Bonham is expected to lay his record of 21 and 5 on the line for the Yanks.

It was a perfect world series set-up, bringing together the two strongest teams in baseball and the two outstanding pitchers of the year before an enthusiastic crowd that is certain to pack the Redbirds' nest to its capacity of about 35,000.

The series shapes up as one of the tightest and most exciting in history and entirely disregarding the sentiment of the local fans, their Cardinals have to be granted probably the best chance of beating the Yankees any team has had in years.

Hit Stride in Midseason

The Redbirds did not hit their stride until midseason and they were 10 games behind Brooklyn on the morning of Aug. 6, but this does not mean that they aren't a great ball club at the present moment.

Even with a slow start the Cardinals won more games this season than the Yankees, 106 to 103, and they are sizzling now. Their pitching is as good or better than that of the world champions and they are faster than any other club in baseball.

They don't have the power, or the scintilating infield, or the experience of the Yankees. But their yearning for a championship is like a "hungry fighter's" and they have the equipment to force the series to the limit whether they win or lose.

Play Twice at St. Louis

After opening here Wednesday, the rivals will play at Sportsman's Park again Thursday, then take a day off for travel to New York where the next three games are scheduled in Yankee Stadium. If neither team has won four games by that time they will travel westward Tuesday and battle Wednesday and Thursday in Sportsman's Park.

Besides Cooper, the Cardinals' starting pitchers are likely to be rookie Johnny Beazley, a 21-game winner, and the two southpaw stars, Max Lanier and Ernie White.

The Yanks, who will not arrive here until the eve of the opener, will choose their starters from among Bonham, Red Ruffing, Spud Chandler, rookie Hank Borowy and Atley Donald.

Sports Roundup

(By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.)

New York, Sept. 28.—(AP)—The National League Race was a thriller all right, but we wonder if the Cards will be able to get themselves steamed up for the World Series by Wednesday. . . .the Yankees, who ought to know, insist there's an inevitable letdown when the pennant is clinched, whether it happens on the last day or a month before the season ends. . .

Today's Guest Star

Jim Schlemmer, Akron (O.) Beacon Journal: "Last year fans were calling them, among other things, the 'pennant Dodgers'. Few teams ever have done a better job of dodging a pennant which was practically nailed to the flagpole".

NAVY AND AIR FORCE FIRE OPENING GUN O F FOOTBALL SEASON

The 1942 football season was formally ushered in at Toronto's Varsity Stadium when the lads of the Air Force met the stalwarts of the Navy. This bit of action was snapped as the Air Force led the Navy 11-5.

Hayman's Hurricanes Swamp Navy in Opening of Football Season Before 16,000 Fans

Navy Opened Scoring but Airmen Soon Flying and Forged Ahead

SCORE IS 11-5

(By The Canadian Press)

Two service teams that packed real power along the line and speed in the rearguard opened the senior Ontario Rugby Football Union season here Saturday as Coach Lew Hayman's Toronto R.C.A.F. squad came from behind to down Toronto Navy 11-5 before 16,000 fans.

It was the most crowd-pleasing of the three opening games, the other two being at Kitchener, where Toronto Oakwoods defeated Kitchener-Waterloo Panthers 14-5 and at Hamilton where Tigers triumphed over Toronto Balmy Beach 10-6.

In the Toronto game PO. Hayman's stalwarts had to overcome an early major score, chalked up by the Navy in the first few minutes. Their performance marked them as real contenders for eastern Canadian senior honors, with their former stars from civilian life giving an outstanding exhibition.

The Navy initial count came when big Steve Levantis, ordinary seaman, blocked a kick deep in Air Force territory. After OS. Bill Balmer recovered for the Navy, Coder Elwin Morris plunged over the line for a touch. It wasn't converted.

Late in the same quarter Air Force got it back, as Bill Stukus snaked through Navy territory for a major, that went unconverted.

The Airmen ended the scoring in the third quarter, AC2 Don Crowe finishing an Air Force drive by romping over the Navy goal line for a touchdown with Stukus kicking the convert.

Oakwoods Win in Kitchener

At Kitchener, Oakwoods' Jimmy Cumming took personal charge of the Toronto scoring, driving across for two touchdowns, both converted by backfield Coach Annis Stukus, another former Argonaut stalwart.

Wally Gibb opened the scoring for Panthers early in the first quarter when his 27-yard placement winged between the posts. Oakwoods managed to eke out two singles as the Panthers fought back. In the second stanza Oakwood came back to score four times with a single and a convert by Stukus, a major by Cummings and another single by Dyce. Smith booted a single for Panthers in the third and Zizus was rouged off Gibb's long kick.

Oakwoods cinched the game in the fourth quarter when Cummings pounded through for a major and Stukus converted.

Balmies Beaten by Tigers

At Hamilton the Tigers, led by long Al Lenard, who scored two singles for eight of his team's 10 points, battered Toronto Balmies into submission.

Balmy Beach started the scoring with a touch in goal, booted by Sammy Sward. Norman Millen followed this up with a major as he smashed through the Tiger line from the eight-yard marker.

George (Scotty) Wright booting a touch in goal, tallied the only Tiger score in the first quarter after Hamilton had smashed and passed their way down the field, Wright also kicked the other Tiger point.

GROW TURKISH 'BACCY

Fresno, Calif. —(CP)— Another war emergency—Turkish tobacco, in peacetime imported into America to the extent of 60,000,000 pounds a year is now being grown in California.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SCOTT YOUNG
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Toronto, Sept. 28 (CP) — The Toronto Argonaut Football Club may be a-mouldering in the grave, to coin a phrase, but its soul goes marching on.

Old Argo fans wept quietly and wistfully into their rum at the familiar vista as they watched the Toronto R.C.A.F. Hurricanes beat Toronto Navy here Saturday in the first game of the Ontario Rugby Football Union season.

These fans couldn't help but think of great Argo victories of the past—how the illustrious ones would fumble away a touchdown in the first few minutes, get it back a few minutes later, start from scratch again about the middle of the second quarter, and usually win.

That is the mold in which Lew Hayman cast his great Argo teams, and it is the mold in which he has cast the Hurricanes. Those Argos of other years would fumble away a few points at the beginning of a game because Hayman would have them so hepped up with talk they couldn't do things right. Then the paralysis would wear off and Argos would start making amazing plays, recovering fumbles, intercepting passes, getting under their own kicks.

Many fans called them lucky. But you can't be lucky like that all the time. And Argos came up with those plays every game they played. It wasn't luck. It was the kind of a club Hayman—now FO. Hayman—always turns out.

Hurricanes are the same. In the first quarter, Navy blocked a kick and scored a touchdown. Hurricanes looked awful. Then they started to roll. They ran the legs off the Navy secondary with end runs, made up any temporary setbacks with some great kicking, and won pretty well as they pleased.

It was better than average early-season football. Three or four thousand people were turned away from the gates, although Varsity stadium was only full, not jammed. Enough ticket-sellers hadn't been engaged to handle that kind of a crowd. From this point, it looks as if football is in for one of its most successful seasons.

Incidentally:

The six-day race which started in Montreal last night has quite a wartime aspect...Torchy Peden is about to become a shipyards worker, and Rene Cyr is on leave from the Joliette regiment for the event.... After 30-7 beating Mimico-Brampton Combines handed St. Catharines the other night, the boys in the back room are saying New Westminster is a lead-pipe cinch for the Canadian boxla championship.... The Ontario contestants aren't consistent enough, and Quebec's hope is hot rated as strong as the Pacific Coast champs....PO. Bob Fritz, now 33, is still a great football player....Herb (Winnipeg Tribune) Manning called him the "dominant figure" of the Winnipeg City League after his R.C.A.F. Flyers had beaten and tied Bombers in two games.

6 CLUBS TO PLAY IN SENIOR O. H. A. BUT BUFFALO OUT

U. S. Team Not Allowed to Play for Trophy or Allan Cup

4 IN TORONTO

Hamilton, Sept. 28. (Special) — There will be at least six clubs in the senior O.H.A. race this season, but Buffalo will not be one of them.

When representatives from the four clubs in the Niagara district—Hamilton, Port Colborne, St. Catharines and Niagara Falls—gathered with members of the subcommittee of the O.H.A. in the Royal Connaught Hotel this afternoon it was pointed out that under the constitution teams from the land of Uncle Sam were not eligible to compete for the O.H.A. trophy or Allan Cup, both being for Canadians only, but there is the possibility that at least four Canadian teams will hook up in a special series with the Buffalo team and play for what will be known as the International Trophy.

The four clubs represented today all assured Fred A. Johnston, representing the Bison City club, that they favoured the inclusion of his entry, but on learning through W. A. Hewitt that points scored for or against with Buffalo, would not appear in the regular O.H.A. standing there was a certain amount of coolness to the proposition. Lengthy discussion, however, brought out the fact that the special series would be feasible, and in all probability Hamilton, Niagara Falls, St. Kitts and Port Colborne will tie up with Buffalo in a schedule for the trophy, with two-thirds of the games being played in the American city on Sunday afternoons between Nov. 1 and Feb. 28, when ice will be removed from the Buffalo Auditorium for the season to make room for the American Bowling Congress, which will continue there for forty days.

George Dudley, Past President of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association was present to explain the set-up regarding amateur hockey in war time and stressed the fact that only players on essential war work would be favored as members of the amateur clubs. He also stated that as amateur hockey had turned over $50,000 to war aid in past year it would be advisable for every club operating this coming campaign to make some contribution.

Previous to yesterday's gathering it had been rumored that Toronto would have at least four senior clubs, but the meeting learned through W. A. Hewitt that so far only two had entered although efforts, he said, were being made to secure two others, one from the John Inglis plant and the other from Small Arms. Should four go to the past there is a possibility that they will be placed in one group and Hamilton dropped in with the Peninsula teams. There was no thought of this until Niagara Falls representatives stated emphatically that owing to war work and gas and rubber shortage it would be impossible for them to get as far as Toronto for games. Should only two Toronto teams enter, however, all clubs will be placed in one group.

The group insurance plan adopted in 1941-42 whereby each club turned over 5 per cent of each game for equal division at the end of the regular schedule, will be carried on again this year, although slightly modified. When the matter came up for discussion yesterday Hamilton and St. Kitts objected, stating that it had cost them too much money. It was finally agreed by all clubs, however, that the group insurance clause be adopted on a game-playing basis, and this was satisfactory.

The player question was also discussed when Dr. Porter of Niagara Falls thought that each club should be restricted to the signing of fifteen players instead of eighteen, but no action was taken. Only ten players can be dressed for each game this year, it was pointed out.

TOUGH CHRISTMAS

London (CP)—A joint Treasury and Board of Trade announcement reports that restrictions on sending money and food abroad will not be relaxed for Christmas, and gifts may not be sent to Canada or Newfoundland except gift parcels to children evacuated under the Children's Overseas Reception Board.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

It's the Cardinals and the Yankees in the 1942 world's series, St. Louis clinching the flag on the last day of the National League schedule yesterday and today the defending Yankees are steaming across the continent to open baseball's classic on Wednesday. It marks the first time in eight years that the Cardinals have gained the top-money series, and it was back in 1934, that the Red Birds from the Mound City of Missouri made a sterling drive to win a pennant and then continue on to beat the Yankees in the world series. The St. Louis Cardinals have won the National League pennant six times, taking the honors for the first time in 1926, then again in '28, '30, '31, '34 and now 1942. The "Gas-house gang" won world series honors in their first year of winning major league honors 1926, and repeated in '31 and '34. As for the Yankees they've won world series honors nine times from 1923 to 1941, winning four in a row from 1936 to 1939 inclusive.

History was made in the National League race this year, when it marked the second time in the 65 years of the senior circuit when a team won over 100 games and yet failed to win the league pennant. Back in 1909 the Chicago Cubs won 104 games and yet failed to win the National League flag, as the Pittsburgh Pirates chalked up 110 victories. That was the year that Babe Adams pitched and won three world series games as the Pirates beat the Detroit Tigers. Incidentally the greatest number of wins ever chalked up in the National League was in 1906 when Frank Chance's Cubs won 116, losing but 36 games all season. The greatest number of wins registered in the American League for any one season is tied between the 1931 Philadelphia Athletics and the 1932 New York Yankees at 107. This year the Cardinals won 106 and the Dodgers 104.

VETERAN BASEBALL FANS like to refer to George Stallings' 1914 Boston Braves as the miracle team of all times. However, the 1942 edition of the St. Louis Cardinals set up a record that will be talked of for years to come. Six weeks ago Billy Southworth's Red Birds were hopelessly out of the running as the Brooklyn Dodgers enjoyed a ten-game advantage even after that date. The Braves of 1914 were only 11 1-2 games out of first place on the 4th of July, but the Cardinals were ten games down late in August. To show how strong this year's St. Louis team finished they won 42 of their last fifty games and will demand respect for the coming series crown. However, the Yankees have a definite edge in the outfield as DiMaggio and Keller are better than any pair that Southworth can put in his outer garden and the defending champions have Flash Gordon, considered one of baseball greats, cavorting around second.

WHEN GEORGE AND JAKE Burns, the Omaha, Nebraska, wildcat brothers climb into the Hume arena ring Wednesday night it will mark the first time two brothers ever graced the local sports palace as grapplers. The Burns' boys have invaded Canada highly recommended by Toots Mondt, the mid-western wrestling maestro, as top-ranking boys of their stock and trade. Although there are as many of them as there are Duseks, the Burns' boys have challenged the Duseks on more than one occasion without results, so says Skipper Frank Tunney, who has four new faces for the patrons Wednesday and this does not take into consideration the British Empire elimination between John (he's a toughie) Katan and Earl (the peoples' favourite) McCready in the main scrap.

REMEMBER WHEN ANDRE Routis, plucky little French featherweight stripped Tony Canzoneri of his world's championship crown nine years ago tonight at New York? Badly battered in the opening rounds, Routis staged a whirlwind comeback to take the decision in 15 stanzas.

THEY SAY THERE WON'T BE much of a scramble for the American Association baseball franchise which St. Paul is going to let revert back to the league until this winter when the future of baseball, particularly in the minors, will be more or less settled. Omaha and Wichita are said to be interested in the franchise, but neither town is large enough to support an AA. club.

THIS AND THAT—IT MUST have been quite a shock to pitcher Kirby Higbe and the Brooklyn Dodgers when the scoreboard at Philadelphia showed the Cardinals had scored four runs in the fifth yesterday....Higbe was pitching for the Dodgers against the Phillies and had just taken his position on the Brooklyn mound when the score board showed "four for the Cards" .... They do say Higbe practically froze in his position.... Cincinnati and Cleveland finished fourth in their respective positions ....Thus Ohio placed their two major league clubs in the covetted first division....FO. Buff Horton's Trenton R.C.A.F. senior "B" softball nine lay their third and final O.A.S.A. semi-final game at Oshawa on Wednesday versus the Toronto St Agnes club....The Flyers won the first game by default and lost in Toronto 6 to 5, so the third game should be interesting....The Picton R.A.F. soccer football team beat the Ulster United eleven from the Toronto and District Football League 3 to 0 on their home field Saturday....A crowd of over 1,000 watched the classy R.A.F. experts take full advantage of their soccer prowess....Tell it to the boys in the back room.

Referee's Life Most Uncertain

The life of a wrestling referee is never a bed of roses. Take for instance the history of wrestling referees since the Queensbury A.C. brought big time modern bending of the human pachyderms' muscles to the Hume arena nearly a decade ago.

First it was Jackie Forbes, then recognized as the middleweight wrestling champion of Canada, who Promoter Jack Corcoran first sky-rocketted to heights as a wrestling referee, who could hawl and pull as proficient as the the ring contestants. Forbes quit the business at his peak to become a hotel owner and the nimble and lithe Tommy McClure was introduced, but the heavyweight muscle benders were too rough for the petite Tommy and Alex Sinclair was tried in Toronto.

Then Corcoran retired as promoter of the Queensbury A.C. giving his rights over to his secretary, Frank Tunney, who immediately introduced Phil Lawson as his No. 1 policeman in the ring. However, Lawson has fallen from the graces of wrestlers in both Toronto and Belleville and was recently replaced by Al "Bunny" Dunlop, former wrestler and small time promoter himself and now the fans are to have Dunlop as the chief ring magistrate in the forthcoming British Empire elimination bouts. Dunlop is a fearless arbiter and may prove satisfactory to local grappling patrons.

BOMBAY PROTESTS GANDHI'S ARREST

Bombay city police had to use smoke to clear away the crowd that collected at a meeting to protest against the arrest of Mahatma Gandhi and other leaders of the Indian National Congress. The natives refused to clear the streets when ordered by the police and thus they had their first taste of tear smoke. Some of the people were lying down during the meeting, but some can be seen rising to make themselves scarce.

"Tramp, Tramp, Tramp"

Pack up your troubles in your old kit bag and smile, smile smile! In fact if you drop around to the McCarthy theatre to take a look at "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp" new army comedy you'll no doubt see it twice due to the uproarious laughs you'll have. The film also launches a new comedy team on the screen and if we're any judge Jackie Gleason and Jack Durant are going to go places in a big way. Jammed with laughs, "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," tells the story of two patriotic rejectees who start their own army after being rejected by Uncle Sam. Determined to do their bit, the boys enlist the aid of their willing neighbors and start what they call a Home Defence Army. After appointing themselves the chief officers, the boys really go to work and form the whackiest army that ever wore khaki.

The Sergeant gets his stripes off a barber pole, the corporal's crazy and the entire outfit is the dizziest bunch that ever marched around in circles. As if this isn't enough, Borrah Minevitch and his entire crew of Harmonica Rascals complete the company and add their roaring, riotous rhythm to the merry melange of mirth and melody.

"Tramp, Tramp, Tramp" insures itself a prominent place along with other uproarious laugh-hits of the season

The second feature "A Desperate Chance For Ellery Queen" co-starring William Gargan and Margaret Lindsay, is the latest in this popular series of detective comedy dramas, making the entire program one which is certain to be enjoyed by all McCarthy patrons. Latest Universal News events is also presented.

AT THE CAPITOL

"I Killed that Man"
(First Belleville Showing)

There's entertainment for all in the latest of Hollywood's offerings about life behind the newspaper headlines in the film production, "I Killed That Man," starring Ricardo Cortez, with Joan Woodbury, Iris Adrian, Vince Barnett and George Pembroke, now showing at the Capitol Theatre.

For mystery and suspense there's the unusual demise of one Ross, an underworld character who dies in a fashion not usually expected in films with this background. To solve the mystery there is Ricardo Cortez, who plays a convincing role as a clean-up crusading assistant district attorney. And for romance there is his helpmate in the person of newspaper woman Joan Woodbury who unravels the mysterious skeins only to find herself enmeshed.

For humor there's Vince Barnett as the drunk in another of his inimitable characterizations. And for action in general there's this suspenseful story of the girl and district attorney who go out to solve an unusual killing and find themselves faced with sudden and certain disaster.

"The Awful Truth"

Is it true what they say about Lucy?

That it was really more than her car that broke down the night she didn't come home? That she went to see that handsome Frenchman for more than singing lessons? That she is more "Theodorable" than she was in "Theodora Goes Wild"?

See "The Awful Truth" now showing at the Capitol Theatre with Irene Dunne and Cary Grant in the co-starring roles.

Really, Irene's a dream and Cary's a scream in the wildest romance ever seen on the screen! It's the maddest, merriest scramble of wives, ex-wives, mates and mis-mates that ever turned the screen into a delirium of howling laughter!

AT THE BELLE

"This Above All"

A truly great modern love story has been magnificently brought to the screen by Darryl F. Zanuck in his production of 20th Century-Fox's "This Above All" which is now on the Belle theatre screen.

With all the power and emotional impact inherent in the famous Eric Knight novel carefully preserved for its movie audience, "This Above All" bids fair to take its place among the screen epics of the decade. As he did in "How Green Was My Valley" and "The Grapes of Wrath," Producer Zanuck has given the film everything in the way of integrity. He entrusted the direction to Anatole Litvak, who has more than lived up to the trust placed on him.

Its stars, Tyrone Power and Joan Fontaine, in the principal roles of Clive Briggs, and Prudence Cathaway, are admirably suited to their parts, and both of them bring to the screen all the romance and beauty which made the novel such a best-seller.

The story has to do with the love of Clive Briggs, a deserter from the British army after the siege of Dunkirk, and Prudence Cathaway the WAAF member, who take a brief holiday jaunt after they meet, and discover their love for each other. Prudence wants Clive to give himself up to the authorities, and return to his regiment. But Clive is bitter about the war. However, any brief recapitulation of the mere framework of the extraordinarily well done story would spoil the haunting beauty of "This Above All." For here is a film that takes a universal theme, presents it in an understandable form in such a way that all will benefit from seeing it It's a truly great motion picture.

Featured in the cast of the film are Thomas Mitchell, Henry Stephenson, Nigel Bruce, Gladys Cooper, Philip Merivale, Sara Allgood and Alexander Knox. Anatole Litvak directed the film from a screen play written by R. C. Sherriff.

For what has been justly hailed as the great love story of our generation don't miss "This Above All."

The Belle News of the World, and "All About Dogs", a color fun cartoon complete the program.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking a cigar on our front steps, and Admiral Tricker stopped going past, saying, Good evening, what did you think of the elections?

Oh, the wrong men got in naturally, pop said. Did you vote? he said, and Admiral Tricker said, Well no I didn't, and I must say I'm heartily ashamed of myself, I should of been a better citizen. Of course my vote wouldn't of altered the result, but if you combine it with the votes of all the others who stayed at home you might have a different story. I believe the backbone and bulwark of a democracy is the free voting system. That's the principal this country was founded on, and it's every citizen's duty to vote, and what's more it's his highest duty. I was an unpatriotic slacker to stay away from the polls, I admit it freely, Admiral Tricker said.

By gollies I'd get out and work for any candidate that ran for office on the platform that every citizen would either have to vote or else pay a slacker tax of a hundred dollars, pop said. Part of the money could go tords presenting every voter with a good cigar, no matter what ticket he voted. Then voting would be practically obligatory and we'd have a real democracy at last, he said, and Admiral Tricker said, Oh no, that would never do, I beg to differ. That would be regimentation and a man would no longer be a free agent to act as he pleases. That really would be against the true spirit of democracy, he said.

In other words you wouldn't be free to be undemocratic, I see your point, go and sit on it, pop said.

Saying the last part just loud enough so Admiral Tricker couldn't hear it on account of being partly hard of hearing.

CHAPTER FIVE

Home and Stephen

As Judith walked to the office the next morning she felt that people stared at her as if she wore her love for all to see. At the office she went directly to Giles Benson, the advertising manager, and asked for permission to take an early afternoon train to Clinton.

"Oh, sure," he said. In his look, too, she felt a searching scrutiny. When she had sent a telegram to her mother, she went to work with a speed and inspiration that surprised and amused her.

But Max was in her mind. Several times she had the frightening thought that she would never see him again and that last night had been both the beginning and the end. But it was this busy office with artists bent over their drawing boards and telephones ringing and people coming in and going out that made last night and Max and what they had said to each other and what she had felt slightly unreal.

Leaving the office at 2.30, she was on the train for Clinton at 3.30. And it war as if Max sat beside her, and she were taking him home with her.

Four hours later a taxi stopped on a tree-lined suburban street where large frame houses, painted every two years, sat back from spacious lawns now covered with multi-colored leaves. Home. Here she had been born and here she had grown up. On the cement path that led to the house she had tumbled more than once from her bicycle. Here a small girl had decided that the normal way of life was not enough, here she had dreamed of places and people outside her sheltered life. While the driver opened the door, she thought, "I was right. Everything I've done has been right for me. I must have a good fairy. Because all my steps have been steps toward Max."

Her mother opened the door. A small, pretty woman with an enviable complexion, a sweet expression and gray hair softly waved, Isobel Barth folded Judith in her arms and kissed her.

"How are you, dear?"

"I'm fine, darling. How are you? How is everybody? Aren't you and father going to Harriet's party?" Harriet was Judith's married sister.

"Of course not. It's for the young folks and you must hurry. Harriet and Larry have gone. They went early to receive their guests. The children are in bed."

"I'm not," said her father, Nicholas Barth, six feet, two, and weighing 250 pounds. He came down stairs and kissed her loudly on the check. "You'll have to rush it. You're holding up the works. But don't wake the kids. I just got them to sleep and I've run out of stories. I'll take up your bag. . . ."

"But I haven't a gift for Harriet and Larry. I competely forget . . ."

Her mother smiled. "She'll be tickled to death that you came home to her party. You can send her something next week. Now hurry. . . . Larry's friend will be here any minute."

"Larry's friend?"

"Yes. To take you."

"Who is he?" It hadn't occurred to her she'd need an escort to a family party.

"What is his name, Nicholas?"

Her father laughed. "Darned if I know! Don't you know his name, Isobel? Well, we can't waste any more time. I'm glad Harriet doesn't have a wedding anniversary every week." A handsome, middle-aged man, he grinned at his younger daughter as they went up the steps together. Judith knew how happy he was when his family was under his roof. "What a to-do. Your mother was sewing on Harriet's dress as she went out the door and Larry has my new car. How's everything in New York?"

"Oh, fine. Phyllis was married last week, you know, and Emily is living with me now."

"Emily's the one I liked, isn't she? The one with the brown eyes? Opening the door to what was still called "Judith's room" he put her bag inside. "Now remember, no noise. Those little imps are asleep down the hall."

She was smiling. "But if you can't remember the name of Larry's friend—"

"Leave it to me. Now go and make yourself beautiful. Oh, yes, the nameless young man sent you some flowers. Gardenias, I think. Your mother has them in the refrigerator. Anything you need?"

"Just time."

Her room. Nothing had been changed. Nothing ever changed here. The four-poster single mahogany bed with the white bedspread, the mahogany dresser that had belonged to her grandmother, the desk, the cretonne-covered chair, the scattered hooked rugs were the same. You did not want anything to change here, your home, your parents, your room.

She thought, "But why did Harriet pick a strange boy to take me tonight? Why not someone I know? I didn't know she and Larry met any new people. Probably someone from Larry's office. . . . Gardenias! The usual gardenias. Max would never send the usual gardenias. Max. . . ."

Twenty minutes later when she was wearing a bright green dinner frock and gold sandals, there was nothing in her appearance to indicate the haste with which she had dressed. But the excitement that was in her heart and finger-tips was not for tonight, knowing well the provincial little country club and Harriet's friends who would sit in a semi-circle on the veranda, the girls talking about babies, the young man about business and politics. No, the excitement was in her heart and in her finger-tips because Max had accelerated her life and she was impatient for this week-end to pass and for Tuesday to come.

Would it be like that in the future, her concentration upon a certain day of the week, the day's name touched with magic because Max had said it? Oh, the questions, the questions that could be answered only by living the answers.

When the bell rang, she picked up the long black velvet coat, put it over her arm and came out of her room.

In the downstairs hall she saw her mother and father with a tall, dark-haired young man faultlessly dressed in evening clothes.

"Here's Judith now," her mother said and looked up and smiled proudly.

"Fast worker," her father said, grinning.

Almost before she reached the last step she was being introduced to Stephen Larrabee who was tanned and rugged-looking with blue eyes almost too large and beautiful for a man with a friendly, boyish smile in which there was an unexpected shyness. Added to the hasty first impression was the fleeting thought that in a young man as good-looking and as magnificently built as Stephen Larrabee it was disconcerting to find modesty and shyness. She thought, "He's very nice."

There were no demands in his voice. Nor were the tones precise and clearly cut. Nor would you ever stop still to listen to it. No . . . . It was just a nice, average masculine voice of a young man who carelessly blurred his words and who, despite and perfection of his appearance, was a little ill at ease to find himself in a strange house with strange people.

Not like Max, Judith thought. Max would not be ill at ease in rags in Buckingham Palace. And Stephen Larrabee obviously was making a great effort to be liked by the Barths, for he was the sort of person who could not bear to be disliked by anyone. Max was Max. Accept him or reject him, agree or disagree with him, he was still Max.

Though Stephen's look was not direct, she knew that a perceptive, intelligent mind lay behind those large blue eyes. She knew, too, his youth and his social inexperience. You could well imagine Stephen's having been a beautiful baby, a Boy scout, a high school and college athlete. You could well imagine his having a wholesome middle-class family, his brothers borrowing his ties and his mother worried over his diet. You knew, too, that he was careless neither in habits nor morals. He was a definite person with, in all probability, his future neatly charted.

He said pleasantly, "I'm sorry you had to rush this way. I had to rush, too. I'm not supposed to go to the office on Saturday, but today I did."

"And I'm supposed to and didn't except for three-quarters of a day. I mustn't forget my flowers, mother. Thank you for sending them, Mr. Larrabee."

She thought for a second that he was going to blush as he produced cigarettes and searched through several obviously unfamiliar pockets before he found matches while Mrs. Barth went to the kitchen to fetch the flowers from the refrigerator.

Stephen's car, a new black coach of modest make, waited at the curb.

"Anyway it won't take us long to get there," he said. "I've heard a lot about you from Harriet."

"I'm sorry I can't say the same about you. You're new here, aren't you?"

"Well, yes. Transferred here from Baltimore. That's my home I suppose after New York it seems pretty dull here to you. I've been in New York, but I can't say I like it. All right for a visit, but I'd hate to live there. You don't live there."

She smiled. "I do. And I love it. I wouldn't live anywhere else."

He laughed. "You can have it. I'd rather be a big fish in a little pond."

"So you want to be a big fish?"

"I hope to be. I'm trying to be."

"I wish you luck."

"Thanks. It's a tough grind when you're young today and not on your own. You've got to be good."

"Ambitious, aren't you?"

He laughed again. "That's what everybody tells me. I guess I'm just made that way."

"I guess I am, too."

At the country club, a flat, white building with an encircling veranda, Stephen parked his car meticulously so that he would have no difficulty in getting it out.

Walking to the club-house he said, scanning the night sky, "I hope it doesn't rain tomorrow. I want to play some golf."

"The short laugh and almost apologetic. "Yes. Every week-end. When you're chasing that little white pill around, you forget everything. It relaxes me like nothing else. . . I suppose we'll find them in the cocktail lounge, don't you?"

NINETY PERFUMES FOR 90 NIGHTIES

London, Sept. 28 (CP) — To illustrate "wanton" extravagance, Sir James Marchant, one of London's salvage chiefs, told the story of an American resident of this country who confessed to the birthrate commission that she had 90 nightgowns, each scented with a different perfume to please her husband. She maintained she had thus managed to retain the affections of her husband for 40 years.

IN MEMORIAM

CARTER — In memory of Mrs. W. J. Carter, who died September 28th., 1941.

A wonderful mother, woman and aid;
One who was better God never made.
A wonderful worker, so loyal and true,
One in a million, that, Mother was you.

Just in your judgment, always right,
Honest and liberal, ever upright;
Loved by your friends and all who you knew;
A wonderful Mother, that Mother, was you.

Sabotage Spreading In European Cities

LONDON, Sept. 28 — (CP)—The execution by German authorities of 10 more persons, six accused of treasonable activities and sabotage, were reported by Allied government sources today.

At the same time, it was announced by the fighting French that German authorities in Paris are offering freedom to French war prisoners whose families expose saboteurs and enemy agents.

"It is an indication that sabotage is spreading in Europe," said a fighting French official.

Six of the executions took place in Prague. The remaining four were those of Yugoslav students sentenced at Zagreb for "spreading Communist propaganda and enticing public officials to be disloyal."

WILLKIE ON WAY RUSSIA TO CHINA

Party Given at Kremlin by Premier Stalin for Noted American

Moscow, Sept. 28 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie was en route to China today after a whirlwind visit to the Soviet Union, climaxed by a Kremlin party given in his honor Saturday night by Premier Joseph Stalin.

Carrying a cane made from a tree of Tolstoy's old home, Willkie left by plane yesterday and dispatches from Kuibyshev reported his safe arrival at that provisional Soviet capital.

He wore the same double-breasted blue suit in which he left the Kremlin party in the early hours of Sunday. The affair was attended by Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov, United States Ambassador Admiral William H. Standley and British Ambassador Sir Archibald Clark Kerr.

3 CARS DAMAGED IN COLLISION

Following a three-motor-vehicle accident near Bayside on Highway No. 2 early Saturday evening Motorcycle Patrolman W. G. Milton advised against the practice of changing tires on the open highway.

It was raining at the time, when a tire on a motor car driven by Elvin Waldo, 10 St. John St., Toronto, blew out. The motorist stopped to change the damaged tire, when another motor car, driven by George McLeod of the Trenton R.C.A.F. base, drove up behind and stopped when signalled by the driver of the first vehicle. In the driving rain an R.C.A.F. truck, driven by Ainslie Ross, Trenton, and proceeding in the same direction later, struck the rear of McLeod's car forcing it forward into the rear of Waldo's vehicle. Fortunately no injuries were sustained, but considerable damage resulted to the truck and middle vehicle.

Constable Milton investigated and warned motorists regarding the practice of changing tires on the open hibhway. "Such practices usually result in accidents and when it is necessary to repair tires on the road, the best practice is to pull fully off the highway", advised Motorcycle Patrolman Milton following his investigation.

POLICE BLOTTER

City police today welcomed their new Chief Constable, the former Sergt. Walter Probert of Trenton. All constables assembled at the police station to officially be introduced to Chief Probert by Deputy Chief Arthur Harman.

On Sunday afternoon residents at 83 Great St. James Street complained to police, that an automobile containing three men had damaged a fence on the above property. The residents informed police the men showed indications of being intoxicated, but sped away before police could be notified.

A truck-car collision at the intersection of Bridge and Front Streets resulted in damage to a motor car driven by Henry R. Canning, 24 Wilkins Street. The truck was driven by George S. Edwards, 114 John Street. The accident occurred during the height of Saturday night's storm during which time visibility was exceedingly poor. No injuries resulted.

City police apprehended a military deserter over the weekend and held him for escort to his unit today.

Livestock

Toronto, Sept. 28 (CP)—Prices were about steady in dull cattle trade up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. Veal calves were firm and sheep steady. There were no sales of lambs and no price was established for hogs. Unsold from last week was 200 head of cattle.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 2,900, calves 960, hogs 1,100, sheep and lambs 1,800.

Prices in cattle trade were: A few butcher steers and heifers $8.50-$10.25, butcher cows $6.75-$8.50 with canners downward to $5, bulls $7.75-$9.50 fed calves $10.50-$12.

600 Men and Women Needed To Form Nucleus of Civilian Defence Corps in This City

McIntyre Hood, Secretary of Ontario Committee, Outlines Plans

SPEAKS IN THEATRE

Six hundred Belleville men and women are needed immediately to form the nucleus of a civilian defence organization for this city to protect Belleville homes and property against the results of possible air attacks by enemy bombing forces.

This was the number of persons suggested by Captain McIntyre Hood, —Secretary of the Ontario Civilian Defence Committee, as he spoke before a representative gathering of Belleville residents at the McCarthy theatre on Sunday afternoon at an organization meeting held for the purpose of laying the ground work for a civilian defence force in this city.

Answering the critics who maintain "It can't happen here," Captain Hood pointed out that distance from the actual fighting front was no guarantee of immunity from air attacks.

"The people of Tokyo were 3,000 miles from the war zone, but one quiet afternoon they felt the devastating blasts of bombs," he said. "And it is well within the range of enemy aircraft carriers in the waters contiguous to our costs to let loose their swarm of bombers.

"The enemy, by air, is nearer than people realise," he said, "and it is the duty of every citizen who is not in the fighting forces to prepare for the emergency. Our civilian defence force is growing in numbers and in preparedness, but it still has a long way to go before it gives us the protection it needs."

The speaker viewed the apathy and indifference of Canadians to the situation with great anxiety. The situation in Canada today, however, reminded him very forcibly of the condition which prevailed in Britain during the early weeks of 1940 after the war had been in progress for several months.

"It was difficult to persuade people to organise for air raid precautions and it was difficult to maintain interest in civilian defence work after months had passed with no air raids."

Don't Wait For Something to Happen

"The people of Britain at that period were in much the same state as we are today, indifferent and apathetic as long as the war stayed away from their doors. They were waiting for something to happen."

"It took the bitter experience of the Battle of Britain and the air raids which day after day and night after night rained death and destruction upon so many British communities, to arouse the people to the need for civilian defence."

"In that bitter experience the people of Britain found out how much their lives depended upon an adequate and fully trained civilian defence force, and then there was no lack of recruits. These people saved their country from destruction just as surely as the R.A.F. and the Royal Navy saved it from invasion in those dark days."

Speaking of the great fire raids on London during December 1940, Captain Hood claimed on one night 1,770 fires broke out and a great and historic section of the city was razed to the ground, largely because the fire fighting forces, even with auxiliaries, were found totally inadequate to the task of handling incendiary raids of such magnitude.

"Then came conscription for civilian defence, the inception of compulsory fire watching, by which every building of every kind was each night guarded and watched by trained fire watchers, ready to pounce on incendiary bombs that might drop on homes or factories."

"You see," stressed Captain Hood, "It took the actual peril of destruction to arouse the people of Britain out of their sleepy complacency and apathy and to organise on a scale sufficient to meet the emergency. Here in Ontario, we are fortunate that we can benefit from the bitter experience of the people of Britain. We know what can happen in an air raid and we know how to counteract these consequences."

Must Know How To Do It

"Knowing what to do and how to do it, is all there is to civilian defence," claimed the speaker.

"How many," he asked, "know the correct method of blacking out in an air raid, how many know where they can find a safe shelter from bomb blasts and splinters, or how many know how to deal with an incendiary bomb, how to use a stirrup pump, a bomb shovel or a sand mat?"

"These things all should know because if air raids do come to this province, they would probably be incendiary raids."

Quoting from a broadcast by J. B. Priestly, the speaker stated, "The places where civilian defence organization is most superb is where it came into being as a public response to a necessity, and from voluntary action, initiated by single individuals or groups of them, has been built up, unit by unit, community by community, finally to be integrated into an imposing system in which not a link is weak, since at every point it rests upon individuals who have volunteered for the job and who carry on each unit with the other."

"That is what built up the civilian defence in Britain, and that, too, is what will build up civilian defence in Ontario, and in the city of Belleville," stated the speaker.

Recently returned from Britain after 27 months with the Canadian Army, Captain Hood was able to give a first hand story of the effects the war is having on the people of Britain. Despite the strict rationing of clothes, food, coal, gas and electric power, the evacuation of children into country places and the great mass of men and women in uniform, there is never a whimper, never a grouse, never a complaint.

"The only criticism which I heard," stated Captain Hood, "was that the war was not being prosecuted with sufficient energy, that the people were not being asked to do enough."

Conscription All-Inclusive

"Conscription of the people of England is all-inclusive. Those not conscripted for the armed forces are conscripted for civilian defence, for war industry, or agriculture. And every fresh restriction simply makes them pull their belts a little tighter, square their shoulders a little more and lift their chins a little higher. They are proud and ready to make any sacrifice asked of them in order that they might preserve their normal, decent British way of living. They know they are fighting for their very existence."

Vice-chairman of the Belleville Civilian Defence Committee, Harold Seldon acted as chairman for the afternoon and stated frankly he was disappointed in the turnout of local citizens to the meeting.

"I cannot understand what the people of this city are thinking," he said. "This meeting was called in their own interests, as a measure to help protect their own homes, and yet they show indifference."

Two films were shown during the afternoon, the first, "Churchill's Island," depicting the manner in which British people are rallying to the call in the defence of their homeland, while the second, "Post 23", showed the night by night activities of a typical civilian defence corps. Discussion of the war and of the peace is only natural under such circumstances and the film ends with a statement by a member of the corps: "We're the people who are fighting this war and we will be the people to fight and to decide the peace."

The requirements in membership for a local committee were stated by Harold Seldon with application forms being handed out at the conclusion of the meeting. Additional forms are obtainable at Seldon's Drug Store or at the local police station.

The first lecture for members of the local defence committee will be held at the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday evening, it was announced, and every person in the city desiring to volunteer is asked to attend.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 28 (AP)—Stocks generally resumed the recovery jaunt in today's market without picking up any particular speed.

Fractional advances predominated at the opening and modest improvement was the rule near the fourth hour.

Stocks attracting support included Santa Fe, which touched a five-year peak; Norfolk & Western, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Telephone, Douglas Aircraft, Canadian Pacific, Anaconda, Dow Chemical and Allied Chemical. Homestake and Dome Mines were exceptions, dropping a point or more each. Slipping inclinations were shown by Chrysler, Consolidated Edison and N.Y. Central.

Among Canadian stocks McIntyre and Distillers Seagrams eased 1-4 and Lake Shores Mines 1-8.

THE WAR TODAY

(By GLENN BABB)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Speculation on Japan's next move begins to eliminate some of the possibilities. The British authorities obviously feel a growing confidence that India can be removed from the list and that Australia is not in immediate danger. Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, who ought to know something about Japanese conquest schedules by now, having directed the losing fight for Malaya and The Netherlands East Indies last winter, puts it picturesquely:—

"As to the Japanese, he's got his hands full. He's like a boa constrictor which has swallowed a big goat. He needs time to digest it in a corner. Japan is not likely to take on a job like the invasion of Australia or India."

The most indigestible part of Japan's goat continues to be, as for five years past, China. Last Spring, after the Japanese in a few weeks had seized the Oriental possessions of the United States, Britain and The Netherlands, there was a worldwide guessing contest as to the territory Japan would try next to add to her expanding Empire, which already had attained dimensions which neither Japan nor her enemies had believed possible in so short a time.

Then, as in recent weeks, it generally was assumed that the Japanese would try for some distant, glittering prize—India, Australia or Siberia. Then, as recently, little attention was paid to the likelihood that the next major effort of the Japanese army would be against China. But so it turned out to be, for since the occupation of Burma the only large scale operations of the Mikado's land forces have been in China's East-Central provinces of Chekiang and Kiangsi.

Back to Their Bases

Thanks to the steadfastness of Chiang Kai-Shek's still ill-equipped infantry divisions and the dashing aid lent by the small United States air forces in China, those operations failed. The Japanese are just about back to the bases from which they started last May with nothing to show for their campaign but tens of thousands of casualties and months of precious time wasted.

That has been the Japanese army's big show of the last six months. The Coral Sea, Midway, the Aleutians and the Solomons were primarily naval operations. And the Japanese army cannot be expected to accept the Kiangsi-Chekiang defeat without an early effort to wipe out the stain. Its prestige at home as well as the Empire's prestige in the Asiatic world —the "co-prosperity sphere"—calls for action.

This might, of course, take the form of a smash at Russia's Siberia. A victory there would fulfil aspirations cherished by two generations of Japanese militarists and effect a tidying up of the "co-prosperity sphere's" northern boundaries which Tokyo strategists long have considered a strategical necessity. As land as the powerful Kwantung army remains on the Manchurian border the danger of an invasion of Siberia cannot be eliminated.

New China Campaign in Offing

But the logic of Japan's immediate situation, in the opinion of some of the most experienced observers of things Asiatic, points more strongly to a new China campaign. There are signs that such may be in preparation. The forays of United States bombers and fighters against the Japanese who entered Southwestern China from Burma last spring and also against Hanoi, in French Indo-China, through which troops and supplies flow in a steady stream, probably are not without significance. Japanese divisions which were withdrawn from the Chekiang-Kiangsi theatre have been moved, both Japanese and Chinese say, to another zone of operations. That might well be China's none too well defended southern and southwestern borders.

At any rate Japan's primary purpose in what she calls the Greater East Asia War, to establish her rule over all the territory between the Sea of Japan and the Indian Ocean, is far from accomplishment as long as Chiang Kai-Shek's Free China remains in being. That is the very core of the whole adventure in international brigandage: it all fails unless China is conquered.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 28 —(CP)— Weakness in Golds persisted on Toronto Exchange this afternoon. Losses of from 4 to 10 cents were showing for Bralorne, Kerr-Addison, Macassa, Preston, San Antonio and Wright Hargreaves. Francoeur at 15, a new low for the year was off 2 cents. Lake Shore dipped 45 cents to 7.75 while East Malartic was down 12, McCleod, down 11 and Malartic Gold Fields and Sylvanite down 14 each.

Lamaque went the other way and gained 10 cents.

Ontario Nickel accounted for close to 80,000 shares in early dealings and was selling at 14 5-8, up 7-8. Other Base Metals were sligtly lower. Industrials were higher. Bell Telephone and Montreal Power added fractions and International Pete dipped 1-8.

Help Three-in-One Home Front, Salvation Army, V.O.N., and YMCA

At the present time many loyal hearted citizens are engaged in a vital war job; that of canvassing for the Belleville Community Fund drive.

From this fund will come the support for three of the most vitally needed units in the Home Front Army, the Salvation Army, the Victorian Order of Nurses, and the Y.M.C.A.

These units which are part and parcel of the maintenance of the Home Front must have the support of those of us who cannot serve in any other way, and of those of us who can afford to do it, no matter what phase of civilian or war work we are engaged in.

The Home Front must be supported because life according to our code is worth living; because it is worth fighting for and because such a structure will not stand without a firm foundation.

Down in the depths of the character of the people of Canada lie the principles on which democracy stands. Those principles call for the defence of the weak, the old and the helpless. They call for the moral support of the cream of Canadian manhood at present in the service of their country, and they call for assistance to the unfortunate, the injured and the erring.

These principles are what is fundamentally the difference between the Anglo-Saxon way of life and the dreaded Hitlerian system, in which mercy is weakness, and sympathy and love but evidence of degeneracy.

The home front must not suffer in these dread lays of war; it must be held unimpaired because it is the foundation of the Allied cause. It is also the foundation on which we hope to build the post-war world. The hopes of the world depend on the maintenance of these principles.

Do all you can to help. It is urgently, vitally needed. The Salvation Army, the V.O.N. and the Y.M.C.A. are the bulwarks of morale, mercy and sympathy. Without these we cannot maintain the home front and without the home front we cannot win the war.

4 ARE DROWNED, THREE VICTIMS ROAD ACCIDENTS

Woman is Accidentally Killed at Maple, Ont., While Cleaning Rifle

11 FATALITIES

(By The Canadian Press)

Eleven persons met violent deaths in Eastern Canada over the weekend. Four were drowned, and three were the victims of traffic accidents while a Welsh seaman was killed aboard his ship at Halifax when struck by a piece of steel. A Maple, Ont., woman accidentally killed herself, according to police, while cleaning a rifle.

A Montreal man died of injuries suffered in a fall and a shop-keeper of Moncton, N.B., died of undetermined injuries enroute to hospital after being found on the floor of his premises.

Three-year-old Arthur Waterman of Galt, Ontario, drowned when he overbalanced and fell into the Grand River Sunday. His mother and seven-year-old sister almost lost their lives in attempting to rescue him. Both were saved by Pte. S. J. Knack, who heard their cries.

Falls Into Canal

At St. Johns, Que., Wilfred Campbell, 55, was drowned Sunday when he fell into the Chambly Canal, while at Chester, N.S., Mabel Hawboldt, a school teacher, was found drowned Sunday. William Billard, her companion on a boating trip in Mahone Bay, was also believed to have been lost. The boat was found adrift, and no trace of Billard has yet been discovered.

Gordon Kenneth Damat, 30, missing from his Montreal home since Monday last, was found drowned in Lachine Canal Sunday.

York County police reported Miss Mary Beatrice Ward, of Maple, Ont., accidentally killed herself on Saturday while clearing a rifle before going out to shoot groundhogs with her sister and neighbor.

Auto Crashes Locomotive

At Windsor, Ont., Mrs. Roselina Durand was killed instantly Saturday when the car in which she was riding crashed into a locomotive.

James Dunford, three, died Sunday when hit by a truck on the highway near his home at Sackville, N.B.

At Halifax, N.S., W. J. Sunner, 29, of Wales, was killed aboard his ship Saturday when he was hit on the head by a piece of flying steel when a loading winch broke.

Raoul Gilbert, of St. George's, Beauce County, Que., was identified Sunday by military authorities of Truro, N.S., as the soldier killed in a collision there Saturday between a train and a bus.

Solomon Jake, 62, died en route to hospital Sunday after being found on the floor of his shop at Moncton, N.B. Bruises over the eye and on the cheek were the only marks visible on the body, and Coroner Dr. P. M. Atkinson said an autopsy would probably be held to determine the cause of death.

At Montreal, Henri Beland, 57, died in hospital Sunday of injuries he suffered Saturday in a fall from the second storey of a building where he was working.

immediately.

"We are told by members of the government that our armies are well-equipped, that our deplorable shipping losses are rapidly diminishing and that we have overwhelming superiority in the air," he said. "If all that is true, what are we waiting for?"

The opposite view of the situation was given by Lord Croft, parliamentary secretary of the war office, who said in a speech that Britain already has fought on 13 fronts — "Mostly against great odds" — and that she has performed great services for Russia by aerial assaults upon Germany and by delivering supplies to the Soviet in the face of great difficulties.

Russian hopes of quick aid, meanwhile, were given a boost by Georgy Alexandrov, chief of the Communist party's propaganda department in Moscow, who predicted the opening of a second front in the near future.

"The time is not far distant," he wrote in the party organ Pravda, "when our Allies will introduce their armies against the common enemy. It will be an important and real factor for the victory."

Germany's outward reaction to this second-front talk was voiced by Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop, who asserted that the Germans would welcome an Allied attempt to invade Western Europe.

Von Ribbentrop Heard

Von Ribbentrop spoke at a diplomatic reception in Berlin marking the second anniversary of the signing of the Tri-Partite Pact which linked Germany, Italy and Japan in a military alliance.

Speaking confidently of the progress of the campaign in Russia, Von Ribbentrop said glibly that Russia already had lost 14,000,000 men in killed, wounded and prisoners and was approaching exhaustion in manpower.

His figures were greatly at variance with those of Willkie, who had put Russian losses at five million men.

An echo of the second-front discussion also was heard in Ottawa, where Clement Attlee, Dominions Secretary, said in an address over a national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation that war plans of the United Nations "involves the lives of men and cannot be affected by demands made by irresponsible people."

"Those who bear the responsibility regard the battlefields of the war as a unity," he said. "They are animated by a single purpose—that of winning the war."

Willkie himself, meanwhile, is en route from Moscow to Chungking on another lap of his tour as a special representative of President Roosevelt.

The dispatches indicated the Chinese are hoping to impress him with the urgent need of Allied help, especially in planes.

and the same night unidentified planes attacked Zagreb, capital of Croatia.

On September 14, the Ploesti oilfields of Rumania were bombed and unknown raiders attacked Sofia and other towns in Bulgaria. For several nights, radios in the Axis-dominated countries went off the air at an unexpectedly-early hour.

accepted by the soldiers of Canada."

In addition to the work of the armed services, there was the great industrial effort of the Dominion. In this connection Maj. Attlee spoke of the manpower problem now before the government.

"Like us, you are having to face the difficult problem of the best use of man and womanpower," he said. "There comes a time in the war effort when the decision to the correct allocation of manpower between the fighting forces and industry is a hard one.

"Total war involves changes in the way of life of individuals often causing hardship. It is, I think, a more difficult matter for you with your less closely populated country than for us.

"It is remarkable how little compulsion has had to be used in Britain in effecting a redistribution of manpower. The co-operation of organized labor has been of immense benefit.

"In the Old Country we have really got to the stage where industry has been fully mobilized for war. We are rationing ourselves pretty severely in respect of all things which are not necessary for carrying on the war. Businesses have had to be closed down and workers transferred from their homes and from their jobs but on the whole with remarkably little friction."

Must Not Lose Day in Production Military Equipment

TORONTO, Sept. 8 — (CP) — John P. Frey of Washington, D. C., President of the Metal Trades Section, American Federation of Labor, today told its 34th annual convention here "No fighting man from Canada or the United States can be permitted to lose his life because, for a single day, his necessary military equipment was not produced and transported to him."

In an address opening the convention, Mr. Frey told delegates that "We must not depend upon mere strength of organization alone."

"The policies we adopt must carry with them a responsibility which we recognize to employers, to the nation, and to the membership. The only thing certain as to the immediate development on our industries is that far-reaching changes are certain to occur; changes in methods of production, and perhaps in methods of maintaining industrial relations."

Landing 2000 horses on the head of a pin

Far below, a mere pinpoint, lies the home field. Easily the pilot banks, glides — smoothly lands his air dreadnaught on the runway — like parking an automobile at the curb. It looks simple, but months of study, of painstaking training—countless practice "take-offs" and "landings" —went into fitting this youthful air Viking for his job. The other members of his air crew know that he can take them swiftly to their target and bring them safely home.

That is what R.C.A.F. air crew training teaches—each man an expert at his own job, each crew a closely knit team functioning as a single unit.

And these young fighting comrades of the skies are proud to devote themselves to ridding the world of its bandits—happy in the opportunities that await them when Victory is won.

R.C.A.F. training in Canada is expanding steadily. More planes, more schools, more instructors are now available. Right now applications are being accepted for air crew at R.C.A.F. Recruiting Centres throughout Canada.

If you are physically fit, mentally alert, over 18 and not yet 33, you are eligible. Lack of formal education is no longer a bar to enlistment.

WOMEN TOO — join "that men may fly." Canadian women fill vital jobs in the R.C.A.F. Women's Division, releasing men for air crew duties. Recruits are needed, age 18 to 40, physically fit, with at least High School entrance. Many useful and fascinating jobs await you. No experience needed. The Air Force will train you quickly to take your place with Canada's airwomen. Full information at any R.C.A.F. Recruiting Centre, or write address below for booklet.

ALLIES TAKE INITIATIVE IN PACIFIC WAR THEATRE

CHURCHILL WARNS OF LOOSE TALK ON 2ND FRONT

Japanese Invaders Forced to Fall Back In New Guinea

Losses Inflicted On Enemy Planes And Troops in Aleutian, Solomon Islands

SHIPS DAMAGED

By JOHN H. WIGGINS
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, Sept. 29 (AP)—A determined Allied offensive appeared definitely underway today in the far-flung Pacific war theatre causing the Japanese invaders to fall back in New Guinea and inflicting heavy losses on enemy planes and troops in the Solomon and Aleutian Islands.

The unleashing of Allied air and ground power on two of the three strategic Pacific fronts coincided with announcement of a conference of the United States navy and air force's high command somewhere at sea. The attacks brought destruction of 49 Japanese planes in the Solomons and Aleutians and damage to five ships in four days of raids.

Taking the offensive for the first time on New Guinea, ground forces hammered back Japanese troops in the Owen Stanley mountains with an infiltrating and outflanking attack about 32 miles north of the important Allied base at Port Moresby.

Making Progress

Australian headquarters announced last night the attacking forces were "making progress" for the first time since the invaders landed at Gona mission July 21 and began pushing through the heavy, crocodile-infested jungles toward Port Moresby, which, if captured, could serve as a springboard for an assault on Australia.

Meanwhile, Allied air forces continued pounding of the Japanese bases and supply lines in New Guinea. These persistent attacks, an army spokesman observed, may have stopped the invaders' progress by smashing vital supply lines.

The aerial assaults on Buna, the enemy's main southeastern New Guinea base, set supply dumps and huts ablaze. Barges were destroyed by bombs and supply columns strafed. Airdrome dispersal areas, a destroyer and a transport ship were bombed off Buin on Bougainville Island in the northern Solomons with unobserved results.

Allied Ground Troops Turn Jungle-Fighting Tactics Against The Japanese

ARTILLERY SUPPORT

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Sept. 29 — (CP) — Allied ground troops have turned Japanese jungle-fighting tactics against the invaders in the first Allied offensive ground action on New Guinea and were reported, making progress today through some of the world's worst jungle country.

Supported by 25-pounders, and other artillery, the Allied forces launched an infiltrating and outflanking attack on the Japanese Ioribaiwa Ridge positions in the rugged Owen Stanley Mountains 32 miles airline north of Port Moresby, a communique said today.

The Allied troops were using the same stealthy, deceptive tactics employed by the Japanese in their advance from Buna to Ioribaiwa starting in late July. A spokesman said today the latest word from the battlefront was that the Allies still were making progress.

Overhead Allied planes swept down the Japanese lines of communication, strafing supply columns and setting fire to munitions dumps and huts at Buna, the main enemy base in Southeastern New Guinea. The Wairopi suspension bridge near Kokoda again was attacked with cannon fire and incendiary bombs.

Ioribaiwa Objective

The immediate objective of the offensive action apparently was the Japanese position near the native village of Ioribaiwa. The Japanese had halted temporarily on the Ioribaiwa Ridge, on the Port Moresby side of the mountains, and had erected barricades on both sides of the trail leading through the mountains, a spokesman said.

The Japanese had given indications of adopting a defensive attitude there, he said. They had felled trees to barricade the trail and set up trip wires to warn them of approaching enemy. At some points, the spokesman said, they were extremely well dug in, indicating their forward momentum toward Port Moresby had been checked.

Allied patrols found camouflaged trenches from which Japanese machine-gunners could place a crossfire on advancing Allied troops. Usually these small trenches were placed under trees to give the Japanese cover.

The spokesman said it was possible the continuous air attacks on Japanese supply lines forced the enemy to halt on the ridge because of the difficulty of bringing up supplies.

While the ground forces were striking at the enemy at his most advanced positions in New Guinea, a formation of heavy bombers again attacked the Japanese dispersal areas at the Lae air base northwest of Buna on the coast.

3 Chanell Brothers Unofficially Reported As Prisoners of War

Ottawa, Sept. 29 — (CP) — Three brothers from Entry Island, one of the smallest of the Magdalen Islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, were unofficially reported prisoners of war in an (active) army casualty list issued from National Defence Headquarters last night.

They were Albert Benjamin Chanell, Bernard Leslie Chanell and George Bordon Chanell, all riflemen of the Quebec regiment.

The trio, sons of Edward Chanell, were taken prisoner at Hong-Kong.

APPOINTED DISTRICT OFFICER

Kingston, Ont., Sept. 29—(CP)—Maj. F. G. Dewolfe of Vancouver has been appointed District Engineer Officer of Military District No. 3 and will take over his new duties in Kingston Oct. 10, according to an announcement made at district headquarters this morning.

'Dieppe Was a Lot of Fun' Says Sgt. George Hickson, Hero of Raid

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Somewhere in England, Sept. 29—(CP)—"Come to think of it now—Dieppe was a lot of fun," says Sgt. George Hickson in the manner of a man who derives modest satisfaction from a difficult job well done.

Hickson was a lance-sergeant when he went to Dieppe with a picked group from the 7th Field Company, Royal Canadian Engineers.

He's a full sergeant now with his third stripe only a bare six inches above two sets of Nazi bullet holes in the left sleeve of his battledress. He's not wearing the trousers that had the right knee ripped by another bullet.

"They just about ruined my uniform, and it was brand-new too," says the 28-year-old soldier from Kitchener, Ont.

"But the experience of Dieppe was worth months of training, for me at least, and probably the rest of the boys."

(Canadian National Defence Headquarters, in a statement released by Defence Minister Ralston on Sept. 18, mentioned Sgt. Hickson, along with Lt.-Cl. C. C. I. Merritt of Vancouver, as two examples of the "manner in which Canadian officers and men maintained the traditions of the Canadian army and the honor of their country" Col. Merritt has been reported a prisoner of war.)

Hickson, who is married and the father of two small sons and has four brothers in the Canadian forces, arrived in Britain in June, 1940. He went through combined operations training before the Dieppe operation and was given a special mission to accomplish in the French town when the Canadians struck.

Described in Sentence

He would be satisfied to describe his part in the operation with one sentence: "The six hours and a half

GERMANS CLEARED FROM SECTION OF UPPER VOLGA

Russian Offensive Northwest of Rzhev Relieves Pressure On Stalingrad

BREAK DEFNCE POSTS

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

MOSCOW, Sept. 29 — (AP) — A Russian offensive northwest of Rzhev was reported today to have cleared the Germans from a bank of the Upper Volga while Soviet troops expanded flanking attacks from the Lower Volga to the Don bend in an effort to relieve the embattled garrison of Stalingrad.

A fresh German penetration from the northwest added to the gravity of Stalingrad's position. Nazi tanks pivoted and charged within a worker's settlement in an effort to hold the gains of an assault yesterday. Throughout the city victory and defeat were measured at times in yards.

While Russian street fighters struggled to hold their own, Soviet forces northwest of Stalingrad advanced somewhat and captured several heights in swift night assaults, the noon communique said. It said more than three companies of Germans were wiped out and prisoners were taken.

Field dispatches indicated that fighting flamed along a front of more than 40 miles as Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's shock troops struck down against the Axis flank across the Don-Volga corridor. A Nazi-occupied stronghold and two villages were declared recaptured.

U. S. Army Bombers Raid 2 Jap Depots

Chungking, China, Sept. 29 — (AP) — United States Army Air Force bombers with fighter escort made two attacks yesterday on Japanese installations in Wanting and Tengyueh, in Southwest Yunnan province, United States headquarters announced today.

A communique said results were excellent with all bombs striking in the target area.

All planes returned to their bases The raids marked the third assault in as many days on Japanese communications and other targets in Yunnan.

S. S. TROOPERS IN BUCHAREST

Moscow, Sept. 29 — (AP) — Tass dispatches from Istanbul said today that a large detachment of German Elite Guard troops and a group of prominent Gestapo officials had arrived in Bucharest and were met by Marshal Antonescu, Rumanian Chief of State, and Baron Manfred Von Killinger, German minister to Rumania.

Tass said the arrival of the two guards might be connected with the political situation in Rumania.

U. K. Brands as False Nazi Claim of Sinking 3 U. S. Troopships

LONDON, Sept. 29 — (CP) — The British Government branded as entirely false today an assertion by the German High Command that U-boats had sunk three American troopships in the Atlantic.

"It may now be stated that the enemy claim to have sunk troop transports in the Atlantic is quite untrue," the ministry of information said.

The Nazi claim was construed here as a combination of propaganda for home consumption plus the familiar trick of angling for information.

The brief announcement did not indicate whether the German story evolved from an actual but unsuccessful attack on a convoy en route to Britain with troops or was made from the whole cloth.

Informed persons said, however, that if U-boats did attack a convoy they were certain to have met with prompt and effective response from warships well versed in a technique which has brought dozens of big convoys safely across the Atlantic.

CANADIAN, U. S. FLIERS ATTACK KISKA ISLAND

Transport Damaged, 7 Jap Planes Destroyed, Two Subs Strafed

SECOND AERIAL SWEEP

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 29—(CP)—Canadian and American fliers combined last Friday on a big scale raid on Kiska Island in the outer Aleutians, damaging a Japanese transport, destroying seven Japanese planes and strafing two submarines, it was announced here Monday in a navy department communique.

Squadrons of the Royal Canadian Air Force have been in Alaska for several months, co-operating with American air, sea and ground units in the defence of the northwest tip of the continent, but his was the first official word of offensive action against the Japanese.

The navy communique estimated that 150 Japanese were killed or wounded in the raid which was made on the one big harbor in the outer Aleutians under Japanese control.

When the joint force of bombers and fighters wheeled for home, a Japanese transport was seen to be on fire, listed and beached in the harbor as a result of a bomb hit. Six seaplanes were destroyed on the water and a seventh, which had risen to fight, was shot down. Two submarines, evidently riding at anchor, were strafed with machine-gun fire.

Brazilian Staff Recommends 5 Persons be Executed

Rio De Janeiro, Sept. 29—(AP)—The Brazilian Army General Staff recommended today that five persons whose names were not disclosed be executed for offences threatening the security of the state.

A police and military report accused the five persons of "attempting to submit the nation to the sovereignty of a foreign state," but no details were made public.

Justice Greenshields Dies at Montreal

Monreal, Sept. 29 —(CP)— Mr. Justice R. A. E. Greenshields, 81, Chief Justice of Quebec Province since 1933 and one of the most colorful figures of Canadian Judicial Life, died unexpectedly at his home here late last night.

Although in ill-health for some time, Mr. Justice Greenshields kept up his active role in his lifetime profession to the last, carrying out his duties from the bench of the superior court here yesterday. He was stricken at his home in the evening.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed. Mr. Justice Greenshields is survived by his widow, the former Maude A. Gooderham of Toronto, one daughter, Mrs. Stephen Bateman White of Montreal, a sister, three nephews and a niece.

500 RATION BDS. TO BE ESTABLISHED ACROSS DOMINION

Consumers Will be Put Into More Direct Touch With Administration

PLAN ENDORSED

Ottawa, Sept. 29 —(CP)— More than 500 ration boards will be established shortly across Canada under local supervision "to put consumers in every locality in more direct touch with the administration of Canada's rationing system," the Wartime Prices and Trade Board announced today.

The announcement followed a special meeting of the executive committee of the Canadian Confederation of Mayors and Municipalities, at which Donald Gordon, chairman of the board, outlined the plan to mayors of Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec, Toronto, Halifax, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

Mayors and reeves of the key centres where boards are to be established will be asked to serve as chairmen of the local ration boards. Local governments will also be asked to contribute the part-time services of senior municipal officers, such as city or town clerks, to act as secretaries of the local boards and to provide office accommodation, furnishings and equipment for the operation of the boards.

Following the meeting, Mayor Stanley Lewis of Ottawa, president of the federation, endorsed the plan as meeting repeated appeals by local governments that they be given an opportunity to play a direct role in the war effort.

Composing the boards, which will include from four to eight people, will be leading citizens, chosen locally and representatives of the principal groups of the community serving on a voluntary basis.

German Raider Kills Ten Boys

London, Sept. 29 —(CP)— A German raider, diving out of the clouds this morning, bombed a boys' school in a small town near the south coast and killed at least 10 boys and two teachers. Others were injured.

Troops and townspeople who recovered the 12 bodies searched on for hours in the heaped debris for others who might have been killed or trapped. All but one of the school walls collapsed.

There were 100 boys in the school when the bombing occurred, and many still are unaccounted for.

A single raider dropped bombs on a town in the west of England, trapping a number of persons in wreckage.

Two other raiders made a short, sharp attack later on a southwest coast village, dropping high explosives and then diving over the town with their machine-guns blazing.

One man was killed and others were injured. Bombs demolished one building. Others were damaged.

HEAVY STORM IN ALASKA

Anchorage, Alaska, Sept. 29 (AP)—One of the worst storms in the recent history of Alaska battered various parts of the territory yesterday causing extensive damage from wind and waves but resulting in no reported deaths.

In Anchorage the wind blew out windows and caused considerable property damage.

CANADIAN AIRMAN IN RAID ON KISKA DOWNS JAP FIGHTER

American and Canadian Planes Strafe Enemy Sub Which Rolls Over

ATTACK SECOND SUB

Alaskan Defence Command, Sept. 28, (Delayed) (CP) — First announced success of a Canadian pilot in operations against the Japanese in the Aleutian Islands, Wing Cmdr. Kenneth Boomer of Ottawa, blasted a Japanese fighter out of the air in last Friday's American-Canadian raid on Kiska, it was disclosed today.

Wing Cmdr. Boomer, a veteran of the Battle of Britain, led the Canadian airmen who joined a strong force of United States army fighters and bombers who attacked the Japanese. Before returning to Canada he shot down a German plane in November, 1941.

Two enemy submarines in Kiska Harbor were believed damaged by the joint Allied force which caught them on or near, the surface, United States air force officers said.

Up Directly Under Squadron

One submarine came up directly underneath a squadron headed by Lt.-Col. Jack Chennault, former leader of the American volunteer group Flying Tigers who fought in China.

Chennault proceeds to strafe the submersible himself. Meanwhile he ordered his fighter squadron into a combat circle around the surprised submarine.

Each of nine planes made three strafing attacks on the underseas ship which rolled on the surface apparently afraid to dive because of a number of holes in it.

(A Washington Navy communique in announcing the Friday raid said yesterday that in addition to the submarines two transports or cargo ships were attacked at Kiska and one was beached. It said the attack was carried out by a strong force of bombers and pursuit planes.)

Sub May Have Been Hit

A second squadron of fighters led by Maj. Wilbur Miller used similar tactics after sighting another submarine. Although results of this attack were not definitely known, the submarine was seen to be sinking slowly and may have been mortally hit.

Chennault also got one of the Japanese float plane fighters which rose to greet the raiders. (The Japanese, apparently unable to carve airports out of Kiska's rocky hills, have been using fighter planes based on the water.)

Both Americans and Canadians, who have been itching for action during months of patrol and guard work over Alaskan ports, took part in the raid.

Lieut. Gerald R. Johnson of Eugene, Ore., got another fighter, shooting it down just as it came out of the clouds on the tail of the plane piloted by Miller.

Wing Cmdr. Kenneth Boomer of Ottawa, leader of the Canadians, sent a third fighter spinning into the bay. In addition the raiding force struck at seaplanes on the water. Air force reports said at least five and possibly more were destroyed.

Shore installations were also hit, with fighter planes going in low ahead of the bombers and strafing positions violently.

14 Buildings in Lumber Camp Crushed to Matchwood by Flood

Stewiacke, N. S., Sept. 29—(CP)—Irving Whitman is home with a story of a flood last Tuesday which took two lives and crushed 14 buildings to matchwood at a lumber camp at Long's Brook. The first man to reach "outside" from the flooded camp, he trekked 14 miles to the nearest settlement. Relaxation yesterday of censorship regulations about the storm permitted publication of the story.

Reuben McCabe and Robie Lively were inside one of the buildings swept away by the fast-rising Shubenacadie River, he said, and some 20 survivors were marooned when the flood waters cut a new channel, trapping them between the two streams.

"If it had kept raining like that for another 20 minutes there would have been 20 more of us go down that river," he said. But the water halted in its rise and Wallace Brown, of Eastville, swam the flood with a line across which some of the survivors, including two women, reached safety. McCabe and Lively were drowned.

Lloyd Deal, of Musquodoboit, ferried others to higher ground on his tractor.

"When you see that a 100-foot iron bridge has been buckled up and carried two miles down the river, you get some idea of the force of the water," Mr. Whitman said.

Replies to House Member's Request For More Caution

Last Remaining Port Of Madagascar In French Hands Now Captured

HARMONY AIM

London, Sept. 29 —(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill voiced emphatic disapproval of speculation on the time or place of a second front, as the subject cropped up in the House of Commons today and as the BBC broadcast to France that an Allied offensive "is in the making."

Mr. Churchill's remarks were provoked by a question from Capt. Peter MacDonald which was prefaced by the assumption that "the period of offensive operations by the United Nations is now approaching."

As parliament met for the first time since Sept. 11, a high officer of the British army broadcast in French that "today more than ever before the possibilities of a British and Allied landing on French soil must be foreseen."

The message followed the pattern of previous BBC broadcasts to France. It told the French there would be no advance warning of the day or point of attack but that "the offensive of the Allied Nations is in the making."

Capt. MacDonald, a native of Nova Scotia, was anxious lest someone with inside information indiscreetly tip off the enemy with too free talk. In response to the member's request for a word of caution, Mr. Churchill said:-

Against Speculation

"I welcome this opportunity of again emphasizing the undesirability of public statements or speculation as to the time and place of future Allied offensive operations even though such statements are based on inference and not, as the suggestion seems to imply, on inside information."

The House's applause was punctuated by the remark — which Mr. Churchill did not answer — "Will that be conveyed to Mr. Wendell Willkie?"

Mr. Willkie, speaking in Moscow Sunday, urged a second front "at the earliest possible moment which our military leaders will approve."

In addition to answering a series of questions, Mr. Churchill reported on the British occupation of Madagascar, announcing that he had been informed of the fall of Tulear, the island's last port remaining in French hands.

He was expected to make a brief statement soon bringing the House up-to-date on the progress of the war.

Mr. Churchill, who rarely has been at a loss for words, told the House "I am afraid I have exhausted the possibilities of the English language" in denouncing Pierre Laval. He declined to make any further statement on the government's attitude toward Vichy.

He also brushed aside a new suggestion that the R.A.F. bomb Rome.

Mr. Churchill told one member that his charge of "discrimination against negro troops" of the United States army in Britain was unfortunate. The Prime Minister assur-

Marine Insurance Down Second Time In One Month

New York, Sept. 29—(AP)—Marine underwriters have reduced war risk insurance rates on Atlantic Ocean voyages for the second time in a month and in doing so tossed a bouquet to the Allied navies for doing a good job in convoying ships.

The new rates will become effective next Monday and represent reductions of 16 2-3 per cent on cargoes moving between North and South American ports, 25 per cent on United States gulf port shipping and 12 1-2 per cent between the United States and India and the Middle East.

"New and improved methods of convoying and other protective measures," the underwriters asserted, "have greatly reduced the number of sinkings by enemy action."

SWEDISH RELIEF SHIPS CARRY FOOD TO GREEK PEOPLE

Large Shipments Move Steadily Across Atlantic With Safety Guaranteed

SITUATION STILL BAD

By MARK BARROW
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

New York, Sept. 29 (AP)—A thin line of neutral Swedish ships, their safety guaranteed by both the United Nations and the Axis powers is moving fairly steadily across the Atlantic with food and medical supplies to help relieve the dire conditions of war-torn Greece.

It is known that some, perhaps all, of the relief ships have got through safely to Piraeus.

The Allied governments, with the participation of the Green War Relief Association in the United States and in co-operation with the International Red Cross, are continuing to send as large quantities of food and medical supplies as they can accumulate to that tiny kingdom.

Last January a shipment of 8,000 tons of wheat moved from Britain to Greece just at a time when authoritative sources in Switzerland announced that 1,000,000 children in Greece were facing starvation. The International Red Cross aided by moving 9,000 children from Greece to Turkey and Switzerland where food supplies were available.

Many Nations Assist

In March of this year, Sweden joined the United States, Turkey, Great Britain, Switzerland and other nations in lifting part of its export ban in order to rush additional supplies to Greece. In addition to the grain and medical supplies which the other aiding countries are sending, Sweden also has been sending some salt fish and sugar.

Even with the help of bread and other foodstuffs that the United Nations relief agencies have been able to get to the Greeks, the situation there continues to be extremely serious.

An authoritative report received in Ankara said that among the Greek population there has been a weakening of the physical and mental forces caused by hunger. Also there has appeared a malady, from lack of nutrition, which causes swelling of the lower limbs and then advances up the body and on to the face. The cure is olive oil and lemon juice, but olive oil, like all other fatty food or food containing albumin, is extremely scarce.

WORKMAN SUSTAINS BROKEN SHOULDER

Suffering a broken shoulder while engaged in his occupation as laborer with the Sterling Construction Company at No. 6 A.R.D. Trenton, Mr. Celeste Truant, 40, of that town, was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital on Monday afternoon. It was reported the worker was caught in a cave-in during excavation work on the site. Dr. O. S. Cronk attended the injured man at the hospital and reduced the fracture.

BOX OF STRAWBERRIES PICKED ON MONDAY

Just when the majority of householders have started covering up their plants as protection against frost at night and others have become reconciled that summer is gone and autumn definitely arrived, along comes a guy with conclusive proof that the seasons are all upside-down.

For yesterday Mr. Fred Faulkner, Holloway farmer residing in the ninth concession of Sidney township, displayed at R. B. Hamilton's store in [illegible] a box of strawberries picked that afternoon from his garden.

The berries were perfectly ripe and of a size and quality that would defy their equal in a June's picking instead of the last of September. As a sample of the size of the berries, one specimen measured three inches in circumference and was one and one quarter inches in length. Mr. Faulkner claimed the variety of the berries to be Longfellows.

SPECIAL RATION CARDS AVAILABLE

Special ration cards for American and other visitors to Canada are now available at local offices of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

Likewise special cards for members of the armed forces on leave for a period exceeding seven days are also ready. Soldiers on subsistence allowance must produce a written statement from the commanding officer while other ranks must produce their pass before the ration card can be issued.

These cards are now ready at the local WPTB office.

LABOR TREATS PLANT BOSSES

Kansas City, Sept. 29 —(AP)— Organized labor took industry out to lunch yesterday. More than 150 heads of industrial plants were guests of the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. at a luncheon honoring Roman Catholic dignitaries here to discuss Catholic charities.

OWNER FRUSTRATES SHOPLIFTING ATTEMPT

An attempt at shoplifting was frustrated at the Albert ladies' ready-to-wear shop, 269 Front St., Monday afternoon after two women entered the store stating they wished to see some merchandise. While the one woman was on the pretext of making a purchase, Mr. Albert observed the second woman slipping a dress beneath her coat. The proprietor immediately confronted the woman and snatched the dress. Before police could be notified the women beat a hasty retreat. Later Mr. Albert informed Constable Taylor he was of the opinion, that the women were under the influence of liquor.

SPEEDING CHARGES PENDING IN CASE

Giving city police a merry chase over streets at an excessive rate of speed may prove somewhat costly to a man, who gave his name as James Farnsworth of this city, early today. While patrolling in the police cruiser on Station St., shortly before two o'clock this morning, Constables Arnott and Wright observed a motor car being driven at an alleged excessive rate of speed along Foundry St. Police say they signalled the driver to stop, but instead the driver accelerated his speed up Church Street hill with the police hot in pursuit. At the Campbell Street intersection the officers forced the fleeting vehicle into the curb and say Farnsworth, accompanied by another young man and two young ladies, was in charge. Following reports at the police station authorities stated today that speeding charges were pending.

Following a recurrent illness that had been suffered for a considerable time, Mrs. Dorothy Blair, 25, of Crookston, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Monday. The deceased had been a patient in the hospital only since the day previous to her death.

POLICE COURT

Magistrate J. L. Lloyd welcomed Chief W. R. Probert to city police court today as Belleville's newly appointed Chief Constable made his initial appearance in the local hall of justice, with Deputy Chief Harman acting as clerk of the court.

Women dominated the court docket when two were charged with intoxication and a third appeared on a vagrancy count. "It might be a good idea if you stayed on the farm the next time you decide to celebrate," suggested Magistrate Lloyd as he sentenced one of the women to three days in the common jail in default of paying her fine. The second female intoxicant paid the conventional ten and costs.

Motorists apprehended in violation of the city parking bylaws contributed fines upon being convicted of parking over the regulation period permitted. Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan, K.C., and E. O. Butler, local barrister, were the legal representatives present during the proceedings.

Oil Company Allowed to Erect Gasoline Tanks in This City

By-law Passed but Not Before Yeas and Nays Were Taken

VOTE IS 9 TO 5

An agreement will be signed today between the Corporation and the Canadian Oil Company allowing the Oil Company to erect tanks at the south end of Newbury Street to supply aviation gasoline only to Mountain View Air Station as a Wartime measure, the tanks to be removed from that location six months after the termination of the war according to a by-law passed at the regular meeting of the City Council, on Monday evening. The by-law was opposed by some members of the Council and at the request of a councillor the Yeas and Nays were taken on the by-law with Mayor Thompson, Aldermen Armstrong, Clapp, Clarke, Follwell, Potter, Marshall, Pringle and Wotten voting Yea and Aldermen Allin, Butler, Harvey, Jeffery and Rollins voting Nay.

Before the vote was taken Mr. C. R. Miller, accountant for the Oil Company, appeared before the Council to explain further the position of the Oil Company.

At a recent special meeting of the Council the Company was granted permission to erect the tanks but as Mr. Miller stated he was given to understand there were further objections being made and he was present to answer any questions, that might cause any doubt.

He explained that after permission was granted, the Company had received permission from the C.N.R. and Board of Transport Commissioners in Ottawa to erect the tanks on the property designated and that time was very short because deliveries had to start by November 1st. He also stated that Belleville was proposed so as to reduce mileage, which had been requested by the Oil Controller and in this respect the Company had cut mileage 30 per cent since the order was issued.

Manufacture in Canada

He was asked by a member if the Company manufactured gasoline in Canada and the representative stated that his Company and another were the only two that had refineries in Canada capable of manufacturing every type of gas petroleum products. He was also asked if there was not sufficient storage space in other tanks in the city to be used and Mr. Miller stated that one Company had received a larger assignment and it was necessary for the company to take over in this district. Mayor Thompson stated he was opposed to any more tanks being built in the city but as this was a war measure and a necessity he was going to vote for the by-law. Ald. Rollins said he did not wish to hinder any war effort but he was of the opinion that after the tank fire here some years ago, that it would be unwise to give permission for any more tanks. Ald. Harvey also expressed the same opinion. When the vote came for the suspension of the rules for the introduction of the by-law, it was seen that some who opposed the by-law voted for the suspension of the rules.

Sign Left for Time Being

Mr. J. M. Woods, who erected a sign advertising a feed business on Evans Street and who was notified to remove the same, appeared before Council advising the members that he had received permission from the City Engineer to erect a sign before any action was taken and asked the Council to allow the sign to remain. He presented a petition from a number of residents in the neighborhood, which stated they had no objections to the sign being placed in the area. The Mayor said, that permission had been granted but that after complaints had been received the matter was again opened before Council and the permission revoked and this statement was corroborated by the Chairman of Public Works, Ald. Armstrong.

The Council referred the whole matter back to the committee for consideration and in the meantime, Mr. Woods was allowed to leave the sign in its present location.

Ernie Ellis asked consideration of the women employees at the Trenton Air Station, who are forced to thumb rides to their work because of lack of transportation. He requested council to interest themselves in having transportation at a reasonable price for these women. The Council will take up the matter with Ottawa.

Notice of Motion

A notice of motion was introduced by Ald. Clarke after he had withdrawn his notice of the last meeting. His motion would limit the size of council to its present fourteen members, this to be ratified by a vote of the electorate at the next Municipal election. The Notice of Motion said, "That our solicitor be instructed to prepare the necessary by-law passed by council some years ago, under section 46 of the Municipal Act, sub section 1A, which fixed the number of Aldermen for each ward at three and under which the City acted until the amendment was passed under which we are now acting, such amendment to conform to section 46, sub section 1B of the Municipal Act and thus fix the number of Aldermen for each ward at two, the purpose being to forestall an unwieldy council, should our population exceed 15,000 in the near future, in which case the council would automatically become a membership of twenty-one. And if this proposed by-law amendment receives two readings in this council, that it be submitted to the electors at the coming Municipal election for their approval, which is necessary under section 46(4) of the Municipal Act".

Letter Received

The answer to a question by the Council of the Hydro Commission as to where the $15,000 received from the Commission came from, the Commission stated in a letter tabled that it was in accordance with Section 44 of the Public Utilities Act and part of the accumulated surplus, which the Commission decided on May 5th was not needed for the immediate use of the Commission in carrying on the Water Works business. The letter was signed by O. H. Scott, secretary of the Commission.

No Action Taken

The City Solicitor sent a letter to Council respecting the Corbin Lock Company and a petition of G. W. Reid and others and stated that the petition does not disclose the ownership of the lot, the surface of which is being raised. It is assumed however, that the title is vested in the Corbin Lock Company of Canada, Ltd., and that the company is proceeding to improve its own property. The petitioners allege that by virtue of the improvements the Corbin Lock Company of Canada, Limited, is creating a menace and a nuisance from which the petitioners will suffer damage. Under the circumstances set forth in the petition, it is the petitioner's privilege to take action to restrain the Corbin Lock Company of Canada, Limited. The Council voted that no further action would be taken by the Corporation.

A number of by-laws transferring property to those who had purchased same from the Corporation were passed through the various stages and there being no further business the council adjourned.

Sunday morning, October 11, a Unit from the No. 5 I.T.S. (R.C.A.F.) under Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger, will parade to the Citadel for divine service.

Given Wing, Gets Commission And Married on the Same Day

Saturday proved to be a great day in the life of 21-year-old W. R. Clow of Northport. He graduated as top man in a class of air-gunners from the R. C. A. F. No. 1 Bombing and Gunnery School at Jarvis, received his commission as a pilot officer and was married, all on the same day.

Pilot Officer Clow enlisted with the R. C. A. F. approximately two and one half years ago and was posted to Manning Pool and to Camp Borden for training. He was then stationed to the R.C.A.F. recruiting centre at Hamilton for two years where he won his corporal's stripes while serving as clerk.

Although born in Northport, Pilot Officer Clow has always termed Belleville his native city, his sister, Miss Marion Clow, a member of the local C.W.S.F., being employed with a local news firm. The airman was married to Miss Edith Hastie of Hamilton, on Saturday.

Belleville Man Lauds Heroism Of Survivors of "Charlottetown"

"There was no thought of fear or heroism in the minds of the boys," he said simply. "All they thought of was trying to help one another. We sang all the old and new popular songs to keep our spirits up during that three hours on the raft. One of the lads died while we sang."

This simple yet impressive tribute was paid to his shipmates of the corvette "Charlottetown" sunk by enemy action in the Atlantic, by Leading Seaman Jack Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jackson, Albert Street, in a dramatic story of the sinking and other experiences during his long tenure in the Royal Canadian Navy, given to the Rotary Club Monday.

Stern Blown Off

Referring to the sinking of the Canadian corvette, he said he and his watch were seated at breakfast. "Suddenly we heard an explosion and felt a heavy shock. We dashed on deck and saw that the stern end of the corvette had been blown clear away. So severe was the force of the explosion that the corvette was turned into the opposite direction to which she had been sailing."

"The ship started to sink slowly. Two minutes later the second torpedo struck amidships. Our skipper gave orders to abandon ship. In two minutes she was gone. Meanwhile we had taken to the boats, but one had been badly smashed and the others damaged. So we plunged into water that was about 42 degrees in temperature."

"Realizing the danger of exploding boilers we swam away from the ship as fast as we could. Then her depth charges began to explode. The concussion hurled us clear out of the water. Some of the boys never knew what hit them."

In Water Two Hours

"We swam in the water for over two hours then managed to clamber aboard a raft. Here we sat for another three hours before a minesweeper which had heard the noise of the detonations came to the scene and picked us up."

Likewise he paid a gallant tribute to the commanding officer of the sunken corvette. "He was a fine fellow and a gallant sailor. He was the last man to leave his ship and during the time the ship was slowly going down he walked forward and aft looking after his men. He was one of the greatest men in the navy, cool, courageous, and a typical Canadian sailor."

Praises Red Cross

He and his shipmates were taken to a Canadian port and shipped to hospital. "The Red Cross is doing a splendid work for the sailors" was his tribute. "We lacked for nothing after we reached shore. It must be said they are doing a swell job."

Leading Seaman Jackson was on convoy duty when the Bismarck was sunk. His ship was escorting a large convoy about 150 miles from the great Nazi battleship, "but we had orders to remain by the convoy, so we couldn't go get her."

Nazi Seamen Surprised

He told of another experience in the Caribbean Sea that took place after his ship had captured the big Nazi freighter "Hanover."

"We were taking the crew as prisoners on board our ship when one of them suddenly jumped overboard into the shark-infested sea. We lowered a boat, and the sharks swarmed around the splashes made by the oars. Luckily for the Nazi we were able to reach him a split second ahead of the sharks, and even at that he didn't want to come. He thought he was going to be shot as he was one of the crew which unsuccessfully tried to scuttle the German ship and failed. He nearly died from shock when we fed him, clothed him and treated him well."

The young sailor is well known in Belleville and is spending a well-earned furlough with his parents. He was a popular member of the Y.M.C.A. prior to enlisting in the Canadian Navy, and is popular in church circles here.

He was introduced by a former Sunday School teacher Rotarian "Pink" Pinkston while Rotarian Joe Shortt, who was also associated with Jackson in Y work expressed the appreciation of the club. President Lloyd Hicks was in the chair with Leo Riggs at the piano and Harry Moorman acted as song-leader. Jim Boyle was sergeant-at-arms.

DIES SELLING WAR BONDS

Waltham, Mass., Sept. 29—(AP) —Mayor Arthur A. Hansen, 52, died last night while he was selling war bonds at an auction attended by 5,000 persons. The mayor, winner of the Distinguished Service Cross for heroism in the First Great War and father of six children, had been undergoing treatment for a heart ailment.

GOOD WHEAT YIELD

Lethbridge, Alta., Sept. 29 —(CP) —W. T. Hill, district farmer, has threshed a 10-acre patch in a 120-acre wheat field. It returned 670 bushels—an average of 67 bushels to the acre. He estimates the balance of the field—with a heavier stand—will average 70 bushels to the acre.

Rev. H. N. Griffin

newly appointed assistant home director for North America, and Mrs. Griffin will be the speakers.

Mrs. Griffin will Address a Women's MEETING at 3 p.m. Mr. and Mrs. Griffin will both speak in the evening at a general meeting ALL ARE WELCOME.

DANGER!

Yes, that's what we said — DANGER! It might not be staring you in the face today, but it is there. The danger of invasion by Axis hordes. It has happened in other countries, why not here? What can YOU do to protect your own home, your own family, your own business? Give it a thought, mister. It warrants serious thinking. The reserve army in Belleville is prepared to teach you how to handle a rifle—how to protect yourself against gas—how to use a Bren Gun. All you need to do is turn out for a couple of hours a night, two nights a week. It's pleasant—it's interesting—it's VITALLY NECESSARY. Apply at the Belleville Armouries or Phone 1499.

IT'S TOUGH JOB BILL COLLECTING —BUT OFTEN PAYS

Most Canadians Are Honest Says Man Who Had Some Experiences but There Are Funny Excuses

Written For The Canadian Press
By FRANK HASKY

Toronto, Sept. 29. (CP)— Right from the outset Charlie Buchanan will have you know that he does not like to be known as a wolf at the door—he would not think of evicting widows into the cold—he has never forced money from orphans. He's the head of a medical audit agency and this year he'll try to collect 200,000 overdue doctors' bills from taxpaying citizens in every province of Canada.

Buchanan, 58, is a bluff, cigar-smoking businessman and he'll stake his 20-year-old collection business on the principle that the average Canadian is honest. He believes that western farmers rank as aces in paying ability.

Hanging from the wall in Buchanan's office is a chart of Canada dotted with thumb tacks. These represent agents that Buchanan has located in every Canadian district, men whose ordinary jobs vary from bank managers to policemen in various Canadian provinces. As super sleuths their job is to investigate and report the finances of overdue clients.

A Good Summer

Despite increased taxes, Buchanan believes this summer has been the best ever for bill collectors. Bumper crops have given extra dollars to farmers while booming war industries in eastern provinces are handing out pay envelopes to former jobless Canadians.

In a general way Buchanan has a lot of fun collecting bills, but now and then something comes along to annoy him. For instance an old fellow in British Columbia died after a doctor had nursed him along for two months. When Buchanan tried to collect the bill, the man's family answered, "Well, you didn't cure him, and because it's not our fault that he died, we won't pay". Incidentally, this bill still is owing.

More honest was the widow who opened her mail one morning and was surprised to learn her husband owed a dentist's bill when he died. Not knowing what work had been done, she wrote and asked Buchanan, who replied that it was for a set of false teeth. Next day the woman came down with her teeth. "I'm not able to pay the bill", she explained, "but my Alf was buried without his teeth and I'll be giving them back to you. Maybe the dentist can sell them over again". She has the teeth still.

These Fellows Paid

One of the toughest dental customers Buchanan ever encountered was a farmer who lived in the Peace River country. For months Buchanan sent him letters reminding him about his debt for a set of false teeth. And for months the farmer haggled bitterly refusing to pay. It was only after the farmer got a letter threatening to sue for the outstanding debt that Buchanan received the cash plus a note which read "Since my son and I both use the same teeth and since we are both helpless as babes without them, we have decided to remit enclosed check. Thank you".

'DIEPPE WAS FUN'

seemed to take only about an hour."

But from persistent questions it develops that he led a party made up of a lance-corporal and five sappers who were to be covered by a party of infantrymen while their assignment was carried out.

Three members of Hickson's party and a number of the covering party were cut down by German fire as they landed from an assault craft on the beach in front of Dieppe's Casino.

They raced through barbed wire half-way up the beach, crouched for a moment behind a seawall two feet high at that spot and then broke through a gap that had been made in barbed wire above the seawall by troops from the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry preceding them.

Wiped Out With Grenades

"A pillbox sitting on the esplanade was in our way to the Casino and we had to wipe it out with grenades," says Hickson.

Lieut. John Webster of London, Ont., who commanded the infantrymen protecting the party of engineers, was wounded and Hickson took charge.

Hickson says when his party got inside the Casino they found Canadians and other units were racing about knocking out Germans and taking prisoners.

"We took 28 prisoners," says Hickson. "Some of them gave up easily, but one particularly fought like hell. He had a little spot in a doorway surrounded by sandbags and he kept rolling grenades at us across the floor.

Looked Like Tops

"The Grenades looked something like tops and the Germans made them roll around us in a semi-circle from behind the sand bags.

"Every time one went off it lifted us about a foot off the floor."

"The German was well-concealed all this time and safe from our fire so cold steel was the only solution. We got our bayonets out but he saw them and that was enough —out he came."

Hickson said at no time during the operation did he see any Nazi use a bayonet — "of course, if they had we would have cleaned them up with ours."

After helping get the rest of the Germans in the casino out of the way, the four remaining members of the little engineers party split up.

Ignores Wounded Foot

The lance-corporal — ignoring a wounded foot — took one sapper with him while Hickson took the other and they set out from the casino with a covering party now made up of men of various infantry units.

"They had been at work in the casino and I picked them up as they came along," explains Hickson. "They made a formidable little platoon.

"We scouted the edge of the casino and worked our way into town about two blocks almost to the cathedral. We had to stop because our ammunition was getting low and the town was full of snipers.

Damaged Communication Lines

"But we destroyed telephone lines and electric cables as we went along to damage their communications as much as we could."

Hickson says the while his party was on its way back to the casino, he heard a signal for the re-embarkation. In the casino, his party and other Canadians placed their packs in a pile with an explosive charge and a time fuse.

They boarded an assault craft, bailed with their helmets when it started to sink and then a number transferred to another craft which came along.

"We manned the guns for a while as our craft went about to others to help get wounded to destroyers. Another fellow and I volunteered to accompany a party returning to the beach to pick up wounded but were refused permission."

On the way home aboard a destroyer, Hickson says Nazi aircraft machine-gunned and bombed them wounding a number more.

"I think the raid taught us a lot—things that can't be learned by just training," says Hickson reflectively.

"I hope I get another one."

JAPANESE

42 Jap Planes Downed

The greatest blow to the Nipponese air forces during the activity starting Sept. 25, was struck in the Solomons where 42 planes were shot down and three others damaged, the navy department said. Navy and marine corps fighters bombed four ships, setting a cruiser on fire and probably sinking a transport and ruined Japanese gun emplacements.

Without loss of a plane, the American forces bombed a Japanese cruiser and a seaplane tender, and shot down three seaplanes at Tonolei harbor Sept. 25; destroyed six more enemy seaplanes, damaged a seventh, hit a cruiser and probably sank a transport near Shotland Island Sept. 26. The following day they blasted four bombers and five fighter planes of an attacking Japanese squadron over Guadalcanal.

Continuing their attacks yesterday, planes successfully intercepted 25 Japanese bombers, accompanied by 18 Zero fighters, headed for marine installations on Guadalcanal. The navy and marine fighter planes destroyed 23 of the enemy bombers and one Zero and forced the others to jettison their bombs into the sea.

The marines meanwhile strengthened their hold on Guadalcanal by destroying several small enemy detachments still on the island with the aid of dive-bombers.

About 6,000 miles northward Canadian and American fliers raided Kiska Island in the outer Aleutians last Friday. Seven enemy planes were destroyed, a transport left in flames, two submarines strafed and an estimated 120 Japanese killed or wounded in a low-level attack on Kiska.

Canadians in Action

Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons have been in Alaska for several months, co-operating with United States air, sea and ground units in defence of the northwest tip of the continent, but this was the first official word of offensive action against the Japanese. It was not clear in the navy communique whether the Canadians flew fighters or bombers on the raid and the communique made no allusion to Canadian or American losses in the raid.

The Canadian force, including ground units, are under American command in Alaska.

Direct bomb hits on one of two transports or cargo ships in the harbor set the vessel on fire and it was beached and listing badly when last observed. The attack pushed the total of Japanese ships sunk or damaged in the Aleutians to 33 since the enemy raid on Dutch Harbor, June 3.

The conferences of the top strategists of the Pacific fleet and the army airforces were disclosed in a terse navy announcement. While the navy did not reveal the nature of the discussions, military and naval circles noted that it was attended by a stepping up of activity on the Pacific fronts.

Those who met were Admiral C. W. Nimitz, Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific Fleet; Vice-Admiral Robert L. Ghormley, Commander of the South Pacific area, and Lt.-Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander of the army air forces.

GERMANS CLEARED

Changed Hands Four Times

Volga River gunboats supported Red army infantrymen in a local attack which hurled back Rumanian riflemen, Red Star said.

Typical of the street fighting was an engagement for an area 30 yards by 250 yards, which was declared to have changed hands four times before Russian troops, though hammered by Nazi dive-bombers loosing explosives periously close to German ground forces in their efforts to wipe out Soviet vanguards, finally won it.

Craters in the asphalt became foxholes; broken telephone poles were used as barricades.

As the siege of Stalingrad entered its sixth week, the Soviet high command announced that Russian troops slashed through Nazi defences northwest of Rzhev, killed about 2,000 Germans and captured 25 inhabited points in two days of fighting.

This resumption of the initiative in the Upper Volga Basin northwest of Moscow paralled counter-attacks declared to have accounted for more than 1,200 Germans and Rumanians and recovered some western Caucasian territory lost to the Axis in the fighting retreat down the Black Sea coast from Novorossisk.

The Russians said they dislodged Germans from an important height in the Sinyavino battle area near Leningrad, killed about a company and wrecked five Nazi armored machines.

Fortifications Broken

It was Stalingrad's 36th day of siege.

Rzhev sector fortifications which the Germans were 11 months building have been broken to a considerable depth in a two-day-old Red army drive taking up where the recent central front offensive left off, the Russians said.

Soviet information Bureau communiques announced the capture of a strategically-important height — subsequently held against five counter-attacks—25 villages, munitions and prisoners in the Upper Volga Basin northwest of Rzhev, itself 130 miles northwest of Moscow.

About 2,500 Germans were declared killed in this theatre, of whom some 500 fell in fighting for the height, and the Russians were pressing the issue in two other areas as well, hitting back with ground-gaining vigor in the Sinyavino sector and the western Caucasus. Sharp battles presisted in the Voronezh area, on the Upper Don midway between Moscow and Stalingrad.

The battle for the height north of Rzhev, already squeezed by a Russian pincer, cost the Germans 18 tanks and eight guns, the information bureau said.

Fight For Single Streets

Heavy fighting was noted in the confused struggle for Stalingrad, where regiments locked in death grips for the possession of single streets. Soviet artillery was said to have damaged eight German tanks and dispersed a column of 200 trucks.

A motar battery commander was cited officially for drawing the lethal fire of automatic riflemen upon himself so that his crews were freed a few seconds to loose explosives which wrecked three tanks and killed more than 30 Germans.

The communique gave no details of the shifting lines within the city, but the army newspaper Red Star said the Germans had occupied some favorable positions.

CANADIAN, U. S.

The navy communique made no allusion to American or Canadian losses on the raid, the normal practice here.

Whether the Canadians flew fighters or bombers on the long jump along the chain of islands jutting out from the southern tip of Alaska, was not made clear in the communique.

Used for Patrol Work

It has been understood here that the Canadian force in Alaska has been used principally for patrol work on the northern front but they were hand-picked men, qualified to turn a hand to any aerial work.

Many of the top-ranking officers saw service in Britain and over Europe and are veterans of air warfare.

The Canadian force—and this applies as well to the Canadian ground units—were put under American command in Alaska.

Since the Japanese gained control of the outer Aleutians they have lost 13 ships in sea and air actions. In addition, 19 others have been damaged, one of them believed sunk.

Friday's attack was the second aerial sweep against Kiska in as many days. A smaller force of army heavy bombers, said the communique, had attacked the enemy installations Thursday, but apparently this attack was made from a high altitude, since the results were not observed.

Raided Two Weeks Ago

Two weeks ago Monday a large force of army heavy bombers, accompanied by pursuit planes, carried out a similar low-level attack at Kiska, sinking two mine sweepers, damaging three large cargo ships, three submarines and several small craft, firing storehouses and supply dumps, shooting down four Japanese zero fighters and a smaller plane, and destroying one large enemy patrol plane on the water. The navy estimated 500 enemy troops were killed or wounded. There was no indication that Canadians had any part in that raid.

The communique Sept. 16, announcing the attack, also said that Sept. 4 a single army heavy bomber, accompanied by two long-range pursuit planes, had carried out a strafing attack on the enemy at Kiska. A four-engined flying boat was believed destroyed, and numerous casualties were inflicted on enemy forces aboard ships and on shore.

Fifteen Killed In Plane Crash

Sao Paulo, Brazil, Sept. 29 (AP)— A Pnair Do Brazil plane crashed in the mountains between Santos and Sao Paulo in southern Brazil yesterday, carrying to their deaths 15 persons.

Among those killed was Lineu De Paula Machado, possessor of one of Brazil's greatest fortunes and the country's most famous racehorse owner.

Reports from the scene said bad weather caused the accident.

ARMED BANDS REPORTED RAIDING FOR RATION CARDS

Vichy, Sept. 29 (AP)—With the distribution of food tickets for October, armed bands again are raiding town halls in small communities of the German-occupied zone for the purpose of making off with the ration cards.

These bands are believed in some circles to be attempting to sabotage the food control system, and in others are regarded merely as food racketeers.

PO. Gardiner Is Reported Missing

Ottawa, Sept. 28.—(CP)— Pilot Officer John Edwin Gardiner, son of Agriculture Minister Gardiner, is missing after air operations overseas, the Royal Canadian Air Force reported Saturday in its 380th casualty list of the war.

The operation from which Pilot Officer Gardiner failed to return took place about five weeks ago. That length of time is allowed to elapse before men are named as missing in air force lists.

The young flier for many years has been intensely interested in aviation. He learned to fly at Regina Airport before the war, and it was his ambition then to be a Spitfire pilot. Overseas he achieved that goal.

He was born in Saskatchewan began an engineering course at Toronto University in 1939 but transferred to two-year course in aeronautic engineering when war began.

In August, 1940—two years after he got his private pilot's license in Regina—he enlisted in the R.C.A.F. He trained at Yarmouth, N.S., Regina, Fort William, and Yorkton, winning his wings last Oct. 7.

WIFE AND SON OF GENERAL REPORTED KILLED IN CRASH

Vichy, Sept. 29 (AP)—The wife and son of Gen. Jean Barrau, Vichy Commander for Dakar and the rest of French West Africa, were among 25 persons killed Sunday in the crash of an air France plane near El Affroun, Algeria.

They were among 15 persons bound for Dakar. Twenty-one passengers and four crewmen perished in the flames that swept the wreckage.

Gen. Auguste Nogues, commander for French Morocco, was to have taken the plane on his way from Vichy back to Rabat. His luggage was aboard the airliner but at the last minute he had switched to another plane flying Gen. Jean-Marie Bergeret, former Vichy Air Minister.

ONLY NEGRO GENERAL ARRIVES IN BRITAIN

London, Sept. 29 (CP)—Brig-Gen. Benjamin Davis, only Negro General in the United States army, has arrived in Britain, United States army headquarters announced today. He will serve as adviser to Maj.-Gen. J. C. H. Lee concerning Negro troops in this theatre.

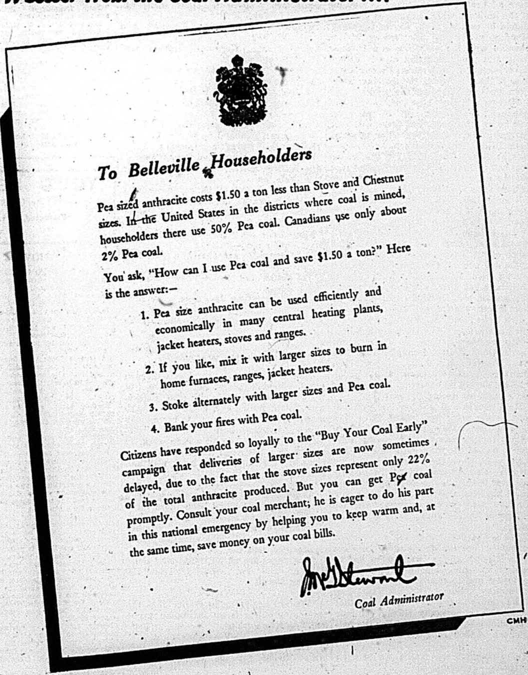
SAVE ON YOUR FUEL BILL!

A Letter from the Coal Administrator....



To Belleville Householders

Pea sized anthracite costs $1.50 a ton less than Stove and Chestnut sizes. In the United States in the districts where coal is mined, householders there use 50% Pea coal. Canadians use only about 2% Pea coal.

You ask, "How can I use Pea coal and save $1.50 a ton?" Here is the answer:—

1. Pea size anthracite can be used efficiently and economically in many central heating plants, jacket heaters, stoves and ranges.
2. If you like, mix it with larger sizes to burn in home furnaces, ranges, jacket heaters.
3. Stoke alternately with larger sizes and Pea coal.
4. Bank your fires with Pea coal.

Citizens have responded so loyally to the "Buy Your Coal Early" campaign that deliveries of larger sizes are now sometimes delayed, due to the fact that the stove sizes represent only 22% of the total anthracite produced. But you can get Pea coal promptly. Consult your coal merchant; he is eager to do his part in this national emergency by helping you to keep warm and, at the same time, save money on your coal bills.

On the Home Front

Every effort which is made for the relief of some condition at home helps to serve in time of war. Belleville has just recently had a campaign for the Canadian Institute for the Blind which serves a most important place in the national economy in that it helps those who suffer from loss of sight and are able to find a place for themselves, even in Canada's war effort. At this time, too, the campaign for three services of the Y.M.C.A., the V.O.N. and the Salvation Army, has focussed interest on the work of these three great organizations. They have a vital service to perform in the maintenance of the home front at its peak of efficiency and service.

Such efforts serve the home front but not that alone for the very maintenance of this home front is a factor in the efficiency of the war front. What is needed is a healthy home front and such organizations help to make that possible.

Dominion Day Set for Mondays

The change "for the duration" of the date of observance of Dominion Day from July 1st to the first Monday in July is one that will undoubtedly meet with the hearty accord of the entire Canadian people. This decision of the government has meant the suspension of the Dominion Day Act "for the duration." Next year Dominion Day will be on July 5th.

Government officials state that this means that there will be no break in midweek under the new rule because labor and production will not thereby be so affected as if the celebration were held on July 1st, which next year will be on a Thursday. Such would cause a real break in the week's production.

While this change concerning Dominion Day is for the duration of the war it may be that it will find lodgment in the laws, or probably not. A number of people have advocated that as many as possible of the holidays which have been observed should be on the first day of the week, Monday, so as to interfere as little as possible with the working and business week and production and also to extend the weekend without otherwise disrupting it as in the case where this holiday moves from day to day through the week.

However, in the case of the dates of religious observance, of course, there will be no likelihood that there will be a change at any future time. For instance, Good Friday will continue to be observed on a Friday. Good Friday is the second day before Easter. Easter is the first Sunday after the full moon that falls on or next after the 21st of March and if the full moon falls on Sunday, Easter is a week later. It is not to be thought of that Good Friday will be affected by any change in the calendar if such should at any time be contemplated because of the deep religious significance of the day and of the Easter Day which follows two days later. Not only to Christians but also to the Jewish people this season has especial significance. To them it is the time of the Passover.

It is to be noted that Victoria Day is not listed in the new list of statutory holidays, which are now limited to the six, New Year's, Good Friday, Dominion Day (the first Monday in July), Labor Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas Day, which it is said should be observed by employers and employees during the war.

Most people will no doubt regret that the Government has seen fit to omit Victoria Day (May 24) as a statutory holiday for the reason that it comes in the spring, one of the most enjoyable seasons of the year, when everyone enjoys getting out in garden, on lawn, in field, following a natural instinct at this budding time and that it has been a patriotic holiday as long as almost everyone can remember and has its lessons for the adult, particularly the young.

This is the decision of the government announced Monday on statutory holidays in the interests of the war effort and to promote uniformity among employers and employees and to remove any uncertainty of statutory holidays.

The order-in-council provides that "reasonable opportunity should continue to be allowed to employees for the performance of their religious duties."

Good manners are made up of petty sacrifices.—Emerson.

DIEPPE

The Nazi guard cannot have heard
How Wolfe scaled Abraham's Height!
How Montcalm's eyes saw, with surprise
In the pale morning light,
That British Foot, with guns to boot,
Now drawn up in array,
In darkness deep, had climbed the steep
High cliffs, to win the day!

Has no report of Agincourt
Made them feel ill at ease?
Do they not take account of Drake,
Who swept the Spanish seas?
Or heard no talk of Admiral Hawke,
Who, at Quiberon Bay,
Dared seek a path through seas of wrath,
To win a glorious day!

Still steeped in crime, as in the time
Of Attila's fierce men,
They think, perhaps that time's elapse
Has cooled our blood since then!
Though years have flown, Dieppe has shown
Our lads still know the way
They have been taught, by sires who fought
On many a glorious day!

WORLD SERIES TIME IN OUR OFFICE

The air is heavy, outside it's wet.
They sit at their 'writers—and forget,
Forget the fun they might have had,
Forget the desert and Stalingrad.
Forget their share of the war's large brunt,
Forget about that Second Front,
Gone are the thoughts of the pesky Axis,
Weekend bills and income taxes.
Careless are they of which way we're heading,
One forgot his silver wedding.
Little they reck of the war's dark pall,
They'd jump like a stag if they heard "Play Ball."
The fever's got 'em, these newspaper bards,
They mumble and moan about "Yankees" and "Cards"
They think that they vision a baseball mirage,
Uniformed spectres, (they call 'em "DiMag,
Twinkle Toes Selkirk, Hemsley and Walker,
Rolfe, Flash Gordon, Marion and Slaughter,)
In ghostly parade has us whirling and giddy,
We tired of hearing of Keller and Priddy,
They sing of the praises of Gomez and Chandler,
With a consistency equalling a Front Street panhandler,
Their musical murm'rings continue all day
They hum of a Jimmy, not Rosy O'Day
The office now rings to a basebally clatter,
"Who's on first—What's on second,"
Oh, shucks, does it matter?
If a convoy's torpedoed, or scattered or sunk,
"Elementary, dear Watson," this baseball's the bunk
Their faces will wreathe in a smile or a frown,
If the Yanks are up or the Cards are down,
We hope that four days sees the end of this caper,
And the lads come to earth—and to work on the paper.

TO HIM WHO WAITS . . .

Nature has a strange way of recompensing human beings. For instance, last week a resident of this city who is somewhat in the public eye, made the remark that never in his career, to use a slang phrase, "have I been given the 'bird'." Yesterday morning on his way to work, he picked up a partridge that a minute previous had flown against a brick wall and killed itself.

A boy went to work in an engineer's shop, and after he had been there three weeks announced his intention of leaving. His employer asked the reason, whether the hours were all right and the money satisfactory, and the boy replied:

"Yes, those are all all right, but I don't like it, and I'm sorry I learned the business now."

Big maskinonge are being caught in Hay Bay and fishermen come from far and near to try their luck. Yesterday Mr. Duncan Struthers of New York City caught and landed a 'lunge which weighed 46 pounds. The fish was 53 inches in length and 26 inches about the body, and is one of the finest specimens we have ever seen. Mr. M. B. Mills who is an expert in mounting game of all kinds, is mounting the fish for Mr. Struthers, who will take it home, to show his friends.

MOVING LIPS IN READING

Reading by moving the lips is a relic of the days when all persons who read did so aloud.

We often smile at old codgers who read by moving their lips.

It is looked upon as an old-fashioned practice and it generally irritates and excites the ridicule of the younger generations.

But the practice is the survival of a tradition.

In ancient times very few people knew how to read and those favored few who could read were expected to impart the treasures of their books and manuscripts to their less fortunate brethren.

Reading aloud, even in private reading, seems to have been the rule rather than the exception in those days.

Reading manuscripts, and even printed books after the invention of printing, was treated as serious and grave business. Few if any in those times read merely for the fun of it for their private satisfaction.

Even a generation or two ago the schoolmaster in many European villages read the newspapers to the illiterate for a small fee.

We are told that Saint Ambrose had to renounce reading in his latter years because of a throat ailment, which clearly indicates that he did not think it possible to read without using his throat.

The Ethiopian eunuch, who was a man of great authority and treasurer under Queen Candace, must have been reading aloud in his chariot on the way from Jerusalem to Gaza, for it is related in Acts 8 that Philip "heard him read the prophet Esaias."

Nearly all early, references to reading are to reading aloud.

The person who moves his lips while reading is reading in the only way that our distant fore-fathers knew.

Some elocutionists today say that reading in a whisper is a good training for a public speaker. This method, it is said, develops the muscles of the throat, trains the vocal cords and requires greater concentration as well as understanding of what is being read.

Theodore Roosevelt was one of the first public men of prominence to practice what he called scanning. He acquired a great deal of knowledge rapidly by reading sentences and even whole paragraphs and pages at a single glance. His system of reading was the forerunner of modern "page-reading."

The average American reads only about 250 words a minute.

Many Men Undergo a Noticeable Change of Life

Physicians are often asked why it is that men do not undergo a change similar to the menopause in women. Women undergo the menopause and in practically all cases there are some symptoms aside from the stopping of the monthly period. In some cases the nervous and emotional disturbances are so severe that care in an institution for months becomes necessary.

As a matter of fact, men pass through a similar period but as there are few outstanding symptoms, such as with women, the 'change' in men is so gradual that it is not suspected by the individual nor perhaps by his family. The average age for the beginning of the change in men is about fifty but may be years later, and may last for years just as with women.

One common symptom in men is the increase in weight, particularly in lower abdomen and often a loss of fat and muscle also about the chest and shoulders. Instead of wide shoulders and narrow or medium hips, he becomes pear shaped in appearance.

Other symptoms noted are excessive perspiration, nervous instability, failing memory, irritability, gradual lack of interest in business, lodge, sport and other affairs in which he has always been interested.

Just as women at the menopains than before, so also do men painse than before, so also do men although there is not as many cases of crippling arthritis as in women.

Other symptoms of the "change" in man are dizziness, headaches, rapid heart beat, increase in blood pressure, chilliness alternating with excessive perspiration, lack of confidence, lack of concentration, anxiety states, insomnia, mental and physical fatigue, disturbance with urine and bladder due to enlarged prostrate gland.

In regard to treatment, just as gland extracts help women to overcome some of the symptoms of the menopause, so also is gland extract helpful in man in studying his nerves, helping him to concentrate better, postpone fatigue and regain self confidence.

However, taking gland extract without a physician's supervision is always unwise. Only physicians are competent to prescribe the brand to use, the dosage to be used in any individual, and to observe the effects over a period of time. Fortunately most men require little or no treatment for change of life.

Benefit of Censorship

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Sept. 29—(AP) — Complimenting American newspapers for "striking a balance in handling was news within limitations of the censorship code," Byron Price, United States Director of Censorship, urged them to explain to the public why some information has to be withheld.

"The American people cannot be expected to fight the war in a vacuum," he said in an address prepared for delivery at the annual convention of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association here.

"Neither should they, nor will they when properly advised, want to see in print any disclosure which would endanger the life of a son or brother."

Pointing out that the basic consideration behind censorship was "that none of us shall provide the enemy, by design or inadvertence, with information that will help him kill Americans," Price gave the publishers examples of the benefits derived from voluntary censorship and disasters possibly resulting from apparently "unimportant" violations.

Censorship withheld from publication for more than a month news of the sinking of the aircraft carrier Lexington in the South Pacific last May 8, he recalled.

"Surely there is sense in the belief of naval experts that Japanese ignorance of the loss led Japan's admirals to overestimate the American force from which they turned tail and ran at Midway," he added.

"On the other hand, he told of a case in which the details of movement of a special train of oil cars was publicized for advertising purposes although the code asked that such information be withheld."

"A few days later a similar train bound for the same destination was wrecked and burned," Price related. "No direct evidence of sabotage was discoverable. Maybe it was a mere coincidence. Maybe not."

BIRTHDAY

Tinkle the glasses and bang on the plate!
Sing "Happy Birthday" both early and late!
Order ice cream and then fashion the cake;
Send for the prettiest candles they make.
Here is a festival. Let it be gay!
Ellen Elizabeth's two years today!

Come on you grandmothers, sing a few staves,
Hurry to purchase new permanent waves.
Buy yourselves bonnets and afternoon gowns,
This is a morning when nobody frowns!
Get yourselves manicures! Grandpas will pay.
Ellen Elizabeth's two years today!

Come on you uncles and aunts, one and all!
Come on you cousins, with gifts large and small!
Come on you neighbors and friends to the feast,
Welcome the greatest and welcome the least.
Here's an occasion for shouting Hurray!
Ellen Elizabeth's two years today!

FAITH for a Blacked-out World

Has your husband or son gone to war? Are you sick or discouraged? This revealing letter from a famous woman novelist is addressed to you

DEAR FRIEND:

IF YOU are rich—this is not for you. If you are successful—this is not for you. If you are healthy and happy and have everything in the world that you want—this is not for you. If you are in love and your man is not in the Army—turn over the page. This is not for you.

This is for those who are troubled and discouraged. This is for those who are lonely and blue. This is for those who have lost their faith—and are looking to find it again.

Maybe I can help a little, for, not so long ago, I myself lost it. What was the use of living? I asked myself. What was the use of working? What was the use of anything? I looked at my life through a pair of dark glasses.

All I could see was the pile of bills on my desk—the play that had been rejected—the appendix operation that was staring me in the face—the leak in the roof that had to be mended—and the hearts that had to be mended because our wedding had to wait until after the war.

I reached the end of the rope the night I saw my Certain Someone off to camp. My heart told me I would see him soon again. But my mind said never. This was the end.

It didn't comfort me to know that there were millions of others in the same boat. At the moment, I didn't care about the others. I just wanted what belonged to me. I had worked hard all my life. I had never been in love before. I would never be in love again.

I came back to an empty apartment—alone. It was like coming back to an empty life in which the sun would never shine again.

"Why shouldn't I have faith? Had I forgotten the hundreds of minor miracles with which the past was bright?"

I flopped on my bed and I wept. It was four in the morning before I finally stopped. I lay in the dark, looking up at the ceiling. Suddenly I found myself looking back over the years I had come.

They had been difficult years. I had been ill. I had been broke. I had I had been lonely. I had come to the end of my rope many a time. Yet something had always saved me. There was one thing that always pulled me through. It was the only thing that ever worked. It was faith.

As if I were looking at another person, I again saw myself at the beginning of my career. Point Pleasant. I was living there because I had to leave New York. It was only in the country I could get room and board at twenty-five a month.

I wrote day and night but my words were bitter. I used to argue with God. I had talent and I demanded a place in the sun. It wasn't wrong to shine in the world. But everything I wrote came back. Finally I was down to my last dollar. I decided that this was the end. Nobody cared for me—not even God. I wrote my letters of farewell, locked my door and turned out the light.

At that moment the neighbor's boy cycled up the gravel path. He called my name. It seemed New York was phoning long distance. A producer had tried Pleasant Valley, Pleasant View and Pleasantville. He was just about to give up when he got me.

Did I want a job? Could I come right away? Of course, I answered. I was crying softly, humbly. I I couldn't get over the miracle of this man calling a dozen small towns to find me. But it wasn't the man who had called in answer to my great need. It was God.

No, God never lets you down.

That experience taught me a lesson. It taught me to believe the impossible—but not that it is impossible. It pointed out to me that God is in Point Pleasant as well as in New York. He is wherever you need Him—no matter where you are.

Lying there in the dark, I recalled another instance in my life. A front tooth had come loose.

Now this may seem like a trifle to you, particularly if you are a man. But ask any woman what a front tooth means to her—and she will fill a volume.

My front tooth hung by a hair—or whatever it is that a front tooth hangs by when it's about to come out. I ran to the dentist. He recommended removing it pronto. There was nothing else he could do. I protested hotly. No, I told him, I won't give up my tooth. I needed my front tooth more than he did. If he didn't mind—I would try to keep it.

He said it was impossible. He said a lot of other things. But I went home and I prayed. I don't know what I said to God. I said a few things to my tooth, too. I told it a story about an organist who refused to have his leg amputated, declaring he needed it for his work. To the physicians' amazement, he actually grew new bone. I reminded my tooth of the invalid poet, Elizabeth Browning, who, summoned to life by love, virtually picked up her bed and walked. I reminded my tooth of my aunt whose faith had removed a tumor. And I fell asleep, firm in the conviction that a miracle would happen for me, too. It did.

The next morning when I awoke there was my tooth firmly fixed in place—where it is to this very day.

All things are possible to one who believes. Everything in this world is faith solidified. Even a skyscraper of steel and stone begins as a mere idea floating about in a man's mind. But the man holds to his dream. He has faith it will materialize. And, somehow, the bricks that are necessary to its building are eventually provided.

So with all YOUR dreams. You can make them come true—provided you are firm in your conviction.

Paul said: Faith is the SUBSTANCE of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. See your dream finished—and it, too, will rise to the skies like a skyscraper.

Why shouldn't I have faith? I told myself this dark night as I looked at the ceiling. Had I forgotten the night I nearly drowned—the time my car hung by one wheel over a canyon—the Hollywood contract that came when all I had left in the world was two cents and a Canadian dime—the mortgage that was lifted by a kindly banker—the pocketbook I lost and found in Woolworth's the day my little dog ran away—the night my mother passed the crisis when all had said there was no hope—the book that sold after seventeen rejections and is still selling today—the hat I admired in a window, that sailed through thin air and came home to roost on my head—the hundreds of minor miracles with which the past was bright?

God never failed me. But I had sometimes failed myself...

As for the young man in khaki—I wanted him safe home again, didn't I? Well, I must be faithful to my prayer—and faith would bring him back to me.

If you have faith—nothing can stand in your way. No one can keep you from coming into your own. Faith can change your whole life. Faith can give you life—even in the face of death. There's nothing that God cannot do.

What is your trouble? No matter what—let go. Pray. Believe.

Just remember that man's extremity is God's opportunity.

If man will listen and wait—God will answer.

I know.

Sincerely, BETH BROWN.

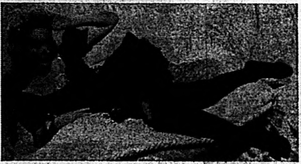
You'll be seeing more of—



KATHARINE BOOTH. One day Katharine was walking down Hollywood Boulevard. A professional photographer caught a glimpse of her, went running after her, and requested that she pose for some stills with a young man named Don King who was trying to get into pictures.

Katharine consented. Don got his contract—and Katharine got one, too.

So now she is a Paramount starlet, and her latest picture is "Take a Letter, Darling."

She was born in Minneapolis, June 20, 1919. Four years ago she moved to Los Angeles where she finished school and became a popular photographic model. She is extremely lovely to look at and should go a long way in her picture career. Her studio claims she has the smallest waist in Hollywood, it being a mere 21 inches.

Strictly PERSONAL

HOLLYWOOD NOTEBOOK

Judy Garland

★ When Judy Garland was in New York, recently, she went out for an evening of fun with a group of friends. She spied a lonely soldier walking down Fifth Avenue and asked him to join the party. Of course he had a marvelous time. But when he returned to camp, no one would believe his story about meeting Judy Garland and spending an evening with her party. So Judy is writing the soldier a letter on her personal stationery, hoping it will stop the jeering from his fellow soldiers.

★ Martha Raye is the latest Hollywoodite to take to the pigtail fashion.

★ Jean Gabin sends roses, every day, to Ida Lupino's dressing room. But it is, he says, merely because he thinks she is the finest actress in Hollywood.

● Wanted—a Flash Gordon type. He must be at least six feet, six inches tall, or more—and should be built in beautiful proportion. He need have no previous training or experience in acting. Arthur Hornblow, who is producing "Quo Vadis," wants him to impersonate Ursus, the mighty figure who wrestles bulls and performs other feats of legendary strength.

● Bob Hope's stand-in Len Hendry, has been praying for a chance to start a screen career of his own, and Bob has been trying to help him. Now, at last, he makes his acting debut in "They Got Me Covered." They needed a shot of Bob Hope's leg sticking out from behind a couch. Len Hendry supplied the leg.

● Sixteen-year-old Dorothy Gilchrist, daughter of Connie Gilchrist, veteran actress, has set out for New York in search of fame and fortune. She wants a movie career, but she is wise enough to approach it by first knocking on the doors of theatrical producers and managers.

● Susan Peters' car disappeared. She notified the police and within a few hours they located the automobile near a studio. Attached to the steering wheel was the following note:

"Dear Miss Peters: You are a young actress just starting on a career. Please understand. I got my first studio call today and had only forty-five minutes to make it and not enough money for taxi fare. The keys were in your car. I borrowed it. It may mean a movie career for me. Believe me, as soon as I get my check I'll send you the money for the gasoline I used.—Hopeful."

● Jack Benny will himself produce his next three pictures for United Artists at the rate of one a year. We don't see why so many actors insist upon being producers as well. Generally, the combination makes a dismal failure.

● No matter who escorts Hedy Lamarr to the night spots, these evenings, it seems that the French actor, Jean Pierre Aumont always shows up to dance with her.

● This really happened. A young soldier named Jerry Worstell got leave from his California barracks and journeyed to Hollywood. His main idea was to try to see Ruth Hussey. He considers himself her greatest fan. She is his personal pin-up girl, and wherever he is stationed, pictures of Ruth go along. He writes to her at least once a week. In Hollywood, he was given a lift by a pleasant-looking woman. The talk turned to movies and he told the lady behind the wheel about how he hoped he could meet Ruth Hussey. The next thing he knew, he was driven to somebody's front door—the door opened, and there stood Ruth Hussey herself. Then he learned that the lady who had given him the lift was Ruth's private secretary.

● Although Ginger Rogers has never won any "best-dressed" honors from experts, she receives more fan letters about her clothes than does any other star. Perhaps this is because Ginger does not go in for the more extreme fashions on the screen, and her feminine fans do not consider her costumes far beyond their own pocketbooks.

● Speaking of fan letters—Susan Hayward got an offer from a man who wanted to set up housekeeping with her because her cooking on the screen looked so appetizing.

● Carole Landis entertained 20 visiting firemen, last week. Her brother, Lawrence, is a member of the San Bernardino Fire Dept. That's how she happens to know so many firemen.

● Jean Gabin sends roses, every day, to Ida Lupino's dressing room. But it is, he says, merely because he thinks she is the finest actress in Hollywood.

● Hollywood cowboys are sporting sterling silver-plated revolvers, now, instead of the usual nickel plate. Reason: there isn't any nickel—except for war purposes.

● Edgar Bergen took Charlie McCarthy and Mortimer Snerd with him when he took off for what military authorities termed a "secret mission." His itinerary calls for 14,000 miles of travel in 18 days.

● The actor was saying: "You work hard to become a success, get your name in lights—and what happens? A blackout!"

● Director Alfred Hitchcock searched high and low for a pig-tailed, bespectacled moppet to play Teresa Wright's younger sister in "Shadow of a Doubt." The company went to Santa Rosa to prepare for production, and Hitchcock noticed, among a group of school children waiting for a bus, just the girl he was looking for. She turned out to be Edna May Wenacott, the town grocer's daughter. And now she has a movie contract.

● Lucille Ball's sister, Cleo Manning, is being tested at MGM.

WEDDINGS

SINCLAIR—POLLARD

The marriage of Ruth Gardiner Pollard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Pollard, Napanee, to Arthur Sinclair, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sinclair of Kingston, was solemnized at St. Mary's Magdalene Church, Kingston, at seven-thirty, Friday evening.

Archdeacon R. J. Dumbrille officiated at the ceremony and Mrs. Harold Denison sang "I Love You Truly", accompanied by the organist, Prof. W. R. Eppes. The altar was decorated with gladioli and other flowers.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a soft blue sheer street length dress with a shoulder length veil of blue net and matching accessories. Her corsage was red roses and lily-of-the-valley. The bridesmaid, Miss Pearl Denison, was in pale pink sheer, and wore a corsage of red roses and lily-of-the-valley with matching accessories. Mr. William Hogan of Kingston, was the best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Mrs. Pollard received in a dress of royal blue transparent velvet with black accessories and a corsage of red roses, assisted by Mrs. Sinclair wearing a dress of black sheer and red roses. The groom's gift to the bride was a wrist-watch, and to the best man, cuff links. The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold locket. The happy couple left for a camping trip at Treasure Island near Kingston.

Among the out of town guests was Mrs. Earl Pollard of Belleville.

Pity Wasted on Pint-Size Girl

Posture is often improved by riding.

By HELEN FOLLETT

PINT-SIZED GIRLS do a lot of talking about how they hate their abbreviated dimensions, but we don't believe a word of it, nor does anybody else. Being little has no disadvantages. There's no difficulty in finding cute clothes that fit. One can wear juvenile dry goods for y'ars and y'ars.

Let them consider the tall girl who hates to dance with men shorter than she is. And the plumpie who fears that she will burst her seams, and has to patronize the "stylish stouts" department, not to mention having to close her eyes when the chocolate eclairs are passed.

No, my little chickadees! the girl who is only a half portion of a hug is not entitled to bawl because of lack of inches or poundage.

If growth has not been fully attained, the teen-age girl can assist this process. She can increase stature by drinking a quart of milk a day—calcium is what she needs—and by increasing the intake of protein which is found in meat, eggs, and cheese. The more vigorous exercise in the fresh air, the better. Whatever stimulates circulation will help build bone and muscle. She should swim, play tennis, ride a bicycle, swing Indian clubs, skip a rope.

Most important is good posture. She must, at all times, keep her backbone extended, stand as tall as she possibly can. Stretching exercises are favorable to expansion. Stand facing the wall, up on the toes, see how far the finger tips can creep up the wall.

As for the small-sized adult, she can wear silly hats and not look as if she had lost her senses. She will appear smart and piquant when she is long past middle age. Her cunning feet and hands will excite admiration.

Too Much Rest Can Harm Elderly Heart Disease Victim

In elderly persons the heart is the organ that is expected to show signs of breakdown. The reason for this, of course, is that with advancing age the human machine is wearing out.

The heart muscle is supplied with blood by arteries known as are coronary arteries. If hardening of these arteries occurs, the flow of blood through them is decreased, and scar tissue forms in the heart muscle. In the opinion of Dr. C. Bruce Perry of the University of Bristol, England, this is practically the only cause for heart disease in patients over sixty years of age.

The first sign of heart disease occurring in old age is the gradually increasing shortness of breath when exercising. If the disorder progresses, the heart is unable to keep up the circulation and fluid collects in the body tissues, particularly in the feet and legs. The liver becomes swollen, and there may be fluid within the abdomen.

The chief idea in the treatment is to give the patient rest. However too much rest may be just as harmful as not enough. If the patient is kept in bed too long, the slowed circulation of the blood, together with shallow breathing, may make it easier for pneumonia to develop. While some rest is needed, the patient must be carefully observed from time to time so that he can be allowed to be up and about for a period each day and thus help in combatting the developing of pneumonia. It is well for the patient to rest for an hour after each meal.

The elderly patient frequently suffers from sleeplessness and this may also interfere with recovery. Hence, drugs for the relief of sleeplessness should be used as the physician prescribes. Every effort should be made to have the patient asleep in a sitting position. If the patient tends to be too active it may be well for him to spend a day or two each week in bed. If any symptoms of blocking of the arteries develop, then a period of at least three weeks of bed rest is necessary. Each case must be studied individually, and the physician must decide how much rest is needed.

The second part of the treatment is exercise. If the patient can take mild exercise, of course, must be stopped whenever any symptoms such as pain or shortness of breath appears. Exercise should be prohibited in cold weather or when it is very windy since, in such cases, shortness of breath is more easily produced.

The meals should not be too heavy nor contain too much food. There is no advantage to be gained by reducing the proteins in the diet, such as are furnished by meats, milk and eggs. Plenty of fresh fruit and fruit juices should be included in the diet. The one drug which is especially helpful is digitalis which slows and strengthens the heartbeat. The physician will decide on the dose when it is needed.

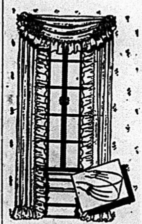
Lovely Curtains Are Easy to Make



Spring Style Wears Corsage!

What could be more charming than these fresh, flowing curtains of white organdie, crowned with artificial flowers!

You can make them easily yourself—ruffles, swag and all!—with a few professional hints.

Your swag is nothing but a straight piece of goods about one and a third times the length of your valance board, and twice as deep as the finished swag.

You snip off its ends on a slant and cut the lower edge in a broad scallop. Sew the ruffle to this lower edge and stitch tape to the top edge; then drape swag and tack tape to valance board.

Measuring the side draperies, add 2 inches for shrinkage and take them up in a tuck near the top. When you sew the ruffles on allow plenty of fulness at the corners to prevent "hooping."

Simple, with our 32-page instruction booklet to guide you! Shows with diagrams and pictures how to make swags and cascades, fitted valances, French pleats, cornices and many lovely curtain and drapery styles.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "New Ideas in Making Curtains and Draperies" to Ontario Intelligencer, Home Service, 166 Front St, Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of the booklet.

WANTS HOME FOR CAT

New York, Sept. 29 — (AP) — A young man who's gong into the army wants a home for his cat. He put this public notice in the Herald Tribune: "Will some kindly old lady give a good home to my young, gray and white tom cat, affectionate and intelligent? Am inducted into service."

The New Zealand government has assumed control of the manufacture of agar, extensively used as a laxative and as a culture medium by bacteriologists, from seaweed.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Parents Object to Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

It certainly seems to us—the victims—that it's a case of pot calling the kettle black. My parents, now American citizens, were born in a much-hated country. It's the same with his parents, also American citizens, but having deep roots in a country from which they came and now at war with us.

My fiance and I are both devoted Americans. But our two families are opposed to our marriage because each family blames the ancestral country of the other for getting us into the war. You can't imagine the horrors we live through in our homes. We both have excellent jobs and are considering getting married without our parents' consent.

American-born.

I can well imagine how unhappy conditions must be in your respective homes, each family blaming the war on the other family's old country.

As you both have good jobs I sincerely hope you'll go off, get married and continue to be the good America's you've always been. My best wishes to you.

Youth Causes Disagreement

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Is there any possible way to get along with a man who won't try and doesn't seem to care? We've been married two years, and although we quarrelled before, I thought that our love would be strong enough to overcome it.

I don't argue with him, but it seems he wants to quarrel over nothing and it goes on for days. We're still young (only 21) and I do want to make a go of our marriage. More than ever now because he's in the draft and we may be separated any time. It can't be the war that bothers him because he's been that way for years. I just feel as if I've failed and need someone else's advice, and that's why I'm writing you.

He has even told me to go home, but after a while he gets over his "mad" and everything is all right. I don't like to think of having children, because it would be unfair to any child to be raised in such an atmosphere of discontent. I still love my husband enough to want to stay with him as long as I live.

W.

If your husband has reached the age of 21 years and he is a perpetual and perennial grouch, it's pretty difficult to know how to handle his case.

One correspondent told she cured her complaining husband after two years of quarrelling. She sat with a smile on her face as he indulged in a Blitzkrieg, and when he had run down from sheer exhaustion, she said sweetly, "Yes, dear, is that all?" Never once did she reply, and lacking the stimulus of "sassing back" he'd run down like an unwound clock. Takes genius but she cured him.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Broke One Engagement, Now Betrothed to Another

Dear Mrs. Beeckman.

In January of this year I announced my engagement, but a short time afterward we decided it was a mistake and the engagement was broken by mutual consent.

Now I am planning to be married to another young man. I am at a loss as to how to go about announcing this engagement, since not all of my friends know that my previous engagement has been broken.

I remember reading a newspaper announcement that an engagement had been broken "by mutual consent". I wonder if you would think this announcement would be the correct procedure for me.

Or do you think that even if I receive an engagement ring, I could wear it and just tell my friends, as I meet them, about my engagement?

What would you think about my announcing my engagement publicly for the second time?

Peggy

Although it is proper to insert the announcement of a broken engagement (always with the words "by mutual consent") in the newspaper, this would be, in your case, not the thing to do. First, it's too late; and second, you are already engaged to another man.

But you should do something, very soon and very definitely, to inform your friends that your engagement to Mr. A was broken and that you are now engaged to Mr. B.

To save yourself and your fiance from any possible future embarrassment, I suggest you write notes explaining the situation very clearly. Then, if your mother and father think it advisable, they could send a formal announcement of your engagement to the newspaper. Before writing these notes you may wait until you receive your ring, but if your "if" concerning the ring means that you may not have an engagement ring, then write the notes at once.

Gift to Soldier "Graduate"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Is it proper for a girl to send some kind of congratulations—a congratulatory telegram or a card or a little gift—to a soldier who is going to graduate soon from an official school? He and I have been sweethearts for two years, and are planning to be married if he comes back after the war.

Margaret

Yes, please send your soldier a message on his important graduation. He will be looking for your important words of congratulation, and you must show him your happiness and your pride in his fine achievement.

Why not be especially generous with your message of congratulation? Write him a warm-hearted and very enthusiastic letter. Then on the day of his graduation, send him a telegram. Also, if you wish, you might send him some thoughtfully chosen keepsake as a memento of this significant milestone in his life.

Courtesy Tip

Do you think your family find you "easy to live with", comfortable to have around? If you, are, they'll be a lucky family!

PRESENTATION

Bonarlaw, Ont.—The large farm house of Mrs. Beatrice Storms in the Spry Settlement was filled to overflowing on Thursday evening, when the friends and neighbors gathered to present a miscellaneous shower of useful and beautiful gifts to her daughter, Ruth, and the bridegroom Mr. Laird McGee.

Rev. Rural Dean A. B. Caldwell acted as chairman in his usual capable manner and after an address was read congratulating the groom and wishing the couple every happiness and success all sang "For They are Jolly Good Fellows" and gave them three hearty cheers and a tiger.

Both Mr. and Mrs. McGee replied, thanking their friends for the splendid gifts and their expression of esteem and good wishes.

A bounteous lunch was served by the ladies and a very pleasant hour was enjoyed by all.

Miss Mary McInroy entertained the guests with piano solos and Mrs. McGee and Miss Eva Casey with piano duets.

She Raises Worms --Not For Fishing But Beauty Lawns

Columbus, O., Sept. 29, (CP)—It rained so hard one night that little streams jumped out of their banks, including the ditch that runs through Bernice Warner's back yard.

Miss Warner yanked off her shoes and stockings and in the black of the stormy night hurried down the broad terrace to see if her worm pit was flooded. Worms, driven from their burrows by the drenching, wiggled and squashed beneath her feet with every step, but Miss Warner minded not at all.

She raises earthworms. She says there are several million scattered around her half-acre suburban residence, and those worms explain why her lawn and gardens and trees are the finest you'll find anywhere.

Big Producers

Hers aren't the big ones you associate with fishing; they're little things about an inch or two long. They're called solution worms and are what Miss Warner describes as a cross between the native dugworm and the brandling or manure species. They multiply amazingly fast (50 of them will produce 7,800 in one month!) and for them Miss Warner has a 10 by 25-foot pit down by the ditch. Millions of worms answer the call as she sprinkles sugar on the ground.

Miss Warner—she's a slightly grey and [illegible] credit manager of a large wholesale paint company —once heard that worms in sufficient quantity took such good care of soil that it never was necessary to fertilize or water lawns or gardens or trees. She bought 25,000 worms and proved it. That was eight years ago.

Aerate the Soil

Worms, she explained, aerate the soil by their constant tunnelling, pulverize the natural minerals deep in the earth so as to make them more readily absorbed by plant roots, and through their castings create an unusually rich top soil.

Miss Warner had nothing more than beautification of her home in mind when she got her first worms. Multiplication changed it to a hobby, and further multiplication gave that hobby a business complexion. She sold more than $700 worth last year, shipping them throughout the country.

'HOPPER LANDS IN WINDPIPE

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 29—(AP)—A grasshopper which plotted a foolhardy course sent Herman Stock to the hospital. It jumped into Stock's mouth and lodged deep in his windpipe. The hopper was removed by a doctor.

With Women Out Britain's Fight Would Collapse

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 29. (CP)—Champion of equal pay for equal work irrespective of whether it is done by a man or a woman is Miss Anne Loughlin, new president of Britain's Trades Union Congress. She wants women to play an ever more important part in war work, "such a part they will be able to demand a voice in reconstruction", she said.

This woman from Leeds, fine-featured and in her 40's, viewed her election to the T.U.C. chairmanship as "the finest tribute that has ever been paid to women. If women were to be withdrawn from industry the war would collapse. My election just happened at a critical moment in the war and I hope it will break down all the prejudices against women".

Miss Loughlin is not one to mince words. She speaks with some heat on some subjects, such as whether or not she believes a woman's place really is in the home or at work. Her reaction to this is "Who's business is it?" Whether a woman wants to be at home or go to work is her own choice.

Organizer For 20 Years

The new president is the living symbol of what a fighting, battling woman Trade Unionist can do in her own job. She has been an organiser of the National Tailors and Garment Workers' Union for more than 20 years. She dresses now as neatly as the women of her union would desire.

Her own life has been a hard one —bringing up four sister when her father died—so she has a natural sympathy for the working girls she represents. Her friends call her "Annie". She talks in brisk, clipped manner; has little time for gossip.

Miss Loughlin was only 16 with her hair in a braid down her back when she led a strike against conditions in a factory where she worked for three pence an hour. It was then she discovered she was an orator.

For After the War

"There is bound to be disorganization after the war but it will be easier to deal with women's problems if they are organized", Miss Loughlin said, speaking of present-day and future conditions. "I believe women must not take advantage of the fact they are doing the work of men called up.

"The women now being introduced into industry must not keep the place of the conscripted men and, at the same time, those women who are being conscripted, must have their jobs restored to them."

Winter Comes To N. Y. Shops

New York, Sept. 29. (CP)—You'll be wearing 'em, said a Wide World observer after a run around the shops of Gotham. Here's what she saw:

Short dinner dresses, usually in black, glittering with sequins, lame, braid or passementerie above the belt.

Long evening gowns, if you prefer, shealth slim, also-bedazzled with glitter.

Dramatic gloves, made to match or contrast with your costume, some length, made of everything from fur to velvet.

Enormous muffs, flat and long, of all the foxes, with hats to match, worn with untrimmed cloth coats.

One piece wool dresses, that look like twopiece, often with polka-dot pallettes for glitter.

Low-heeled shoes for working hours, of comfortable, long-wearing calfskin or alligator, right with suits.

Ribbed cotton or wool stockings, like you used to wear when you were six. For sports, country wear.

Hats that fit on the head, need no elastic bands. High crowns are important, so are bicornes, berets, cloches and the "jeep" hat.

Evening hats are fanciful as possible, complete with old-fashioned passementerie, feathers, jewels and bead embroidery like grandmother's party purse.

Chesterfield coats, cut just like a man's, double or single breasted, in black or navy, with velvet collar.

Do You S'pose This Could Happen Here?

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 29.—(CP) —The train was scheduled to leave in two minutes and a handsome young soldier tenderly embraced a beautiful girl as they stood at the track gate.

Time: 30 minutes later. The same soldier and the same maid stood at another track gate where a train was scheduled to leave in two minutes. Again they embraced tenderly.

Time: 30 minutes later. The handsome soldier and the beautiful girl stood at a third track gate where a train was scheduled to leave in two minutes. Again they embraced, very tenderly.

Then the soldier squared his jaw and his shoulders; pushed the maid aside, reluctantly climbed aboard the departing train and waved from the rear platform.

"KILL" NAZI U-BOAT

Navigator of a Royal Canadian Air Force Hudson bomber which polished off a Nazi U-boat somewhere in the Atlantic off Canada's east coast is Pilot Officer G. E. Francis, of Stellarton, Nova Scotia, ABOVE. Details of four such attacks on U-boats have been revealed by Air Minister Power as typical examples of the work being done by coastal patrol squadrons.

Squadron Leader Norman E. Small, A.F.C., of Hamilton and Vancouver, who was "skipper" of a Royal Canadian Air Force bomber credited with "killing" a Nazi U-boat somewhere in the Atlantic off Canada's east coast. Squadron Leader Small caught the U-boat full surfaced and his crew rained depth charges on it.

German Claims Wholly Lacking In Factual Basis

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

The circumstances under which Berlin made its first claim of U-boat successes against United States troopship convoys in the Atlantic render it especially subject to suspicion.

As an off-set both to the grief the Nazi attackers are getting before Stalingrad and to the storm of Allied second-front agitation penetrating the German radio black-out, such a claim was to be expected. If it proves wholly lacking in factual basis, which is possible, or turns out to be another example of extreme exaggeration, that Nazi out-giving must be set down as an admission that German nerves are getting jittery.

The most significant thing about the German claim is that it followed so closely upon the von Ribbentrop assertion in Berlin that Germany would welcome an Allied attempt to invade Western Europe. That is an admission that the second-front talk, now amplified by the Willkie and Wavell remarks, is reaching the ears of the German people.

For Home Consumption.

Von Ribbentrop's remark was coupled with so fantastic a figure on Russian war losses that both statements were clearly intended for German home consumption rather than for the diplomats of his immediate audience.

They were offered in lieu of Hitler's unfulfilled hopes of announcing the capture of Stalingrad at the second anniversary celebration of the signing of the Axis tripartite pact. Both the Japanese and Italian diplomats present at the gathering were fully aware that the German campaign in Russia is off schedule and that there is a bridge of ships from North America to the British Isles for troop movements.

The very fact that Hitler sent a spokesman, even a high ranking one, to speak for him to the Axis diplomatic love feast is significant. Hitler appears to have been in Berlin at the time on another mission. Lacking any decisive Russian developments to report, he preferred to leave it to von Ribbentrop. It suggests that he realized he would see doubt and questioning in the eyes of his diplomatic audience.

Meantime, the second front discussion tends to add to the doubts and uncertainties that may be arising in the German people's mind.

Aside from the odd wording of part of the Willkie statement in Moscow urging prompt Anglo-American second-front operations to ease pressure on Russia, both he and General Wavell were careful to say it should be done only when feasible. That is a purely military question. It is certainly one that neither President Roosevelt nor Prime Minister Churchill would attempt to decide against the counsel of their professional soldiers. At whom, therefore, Willkie aimed his comment that perhaps "some" Allied military leaders would need "public prodding" into second-front action is not clear.

There are so many problems involved in determining both the time and the place for a major Allied offensive in any war theatre that public "prodding" is apt to have little effect. It cannot be too often noted, as both British and American officials have repeately said, that once the decision is taken, it must be carried through to success, whatever the cost Failure could only increase Russia's peril and prolong the war beyond calculation. It can, therefore, be argued reasonably that both Willkie and Wavell were primarily doing their bit on the war-of-nerves front, a front that is growing more and more important in Germany as time passes.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop before supper and I said, G pop, I'm hungry, I wish I had an ice cream cone.

I wish I had your appetite, pop said. I assure you I'd know what to do with it. I'd nurse it and coddle it and wouldn't leave it out of my sight a second. I most certainly wouldn't think of beating it to death with an ice cream cone just before dinner time. You study fizziology in school, dont you? he said, and I said, Sure, lots.

Well it's all wasted on you if you dont season your nolledge with a liberal sprinkling of common sense, pop said. I'd rather be a man who speaks in dezes and dozes and knows enough to come in out of the rain than a composer of dictionaries who stands in the downpour wondering which is the shortest direction to shelter while his flannel suit contracts two sizes and he himself contracts newmonia, Like Prof. Pozzloffer, for instance, he said.

Who was he, pop? I said, and pop said, he was a man who spent most of his time in books because of his high forehead and low arches. One night he woke up shaking and shivering from cold, and he murmured, "My, how interesting. How wonderful nature is to take this means of warning me that my bodily temperature has been reduced to a dangerous degree." His muttering awoke his wife, who warned him that his blankets had slipped off, but instead of pulling them back again Prof. Pozzloffer just lay there shivering and marvelled at nature's cleverness, and the next day his wife divorced him to show how she felt at being roused from her slumbers, and Prof. Pozzloffer developed a nasty chronic cough that was so irritating to his friends that they all forsook him and he was doomed to a lonely and neglected old age all because he had no common sense, pop said.

The result being I didn't mention ice cream cones again and ate 3 helpings of dessert for supper, proving pop was probably right.

Mrs. Frank Brennan has returned to Kingston after spending a short time at her home here.

Mrs. Harold Lee has returned home after spending a few days in Kingston Hospital.

Mrs. Herbert Atherton and son, also Miss Ina Elmy spent a day recently with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Elmy.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Cummins of Marysville, spent Sunday in Niagara.

There was a fairly good attendance at the first dance of the season held at the Parish Hall, Marysville on Tuesday evening.

The prize winners at euchre were as follows:—ladies—Mrs. J. Brennan, Mrs. R. Kennedy; men's 1st, Leonard Hawley, 2nd, Justin McGurn, 3rd, Mr. J. Brennan. The music was furnished by a local orchestra.

Madoc

Madoc, Sept. 29. (Special)—The September meeting of the Madoc branch of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Arthur Parks on Friday the 18th at three p.m. The President, Mrs. Moon presided and the meeting opened with the Institute Ode, The War Work Committee reported three quilts ready and upon motion it was decided to donate them to the local Red Cross branch. The "Bingo" was laid over until a later date. Mrs. Warren Hill was appointed to act as local leader for girls' work, the project this term 'Cottons May be Smart' open to all girls, 12 to 26 years of age. Arrangements were made for assistance in Exhibit Building and Booth on Fair Day. The Society especially asks each member for a donation of pies as no cake will be served at the fair.

The meeting was under the Department of Social Welfare and the Roll Call "A Healthful Habit" gave some simple but splendid ideas for health.

Mrs. F. J. Nickle addressed the meeting on Social Welfare and dealt with War and Reconstruction after the War. The Speaker stressed Russia, her condition before Sovietism and her progress under the Stalin regime. The address was most instructive. Misses Barbara Nicol and Phylis Beatty played a piano duet which was appreciated by those present. The National Anthem closed the meeting.

Mr. Don Foote has received word that his brother (Hon.) Captain John Weir Foote, padre in the Hamilton regiment, who was reported missing after the Dieppe raid, is now a prisoner of war.

Chas. Johnston, Madoc, druggist, held the annual theatre party on Saturday afternoon in the Empire Theatre. Although the crowd was not as large as usual due perhaps to gas ration, a fine crowd was in attendance. Prizes of War Savings stamps were given. Mr. Johnson is to be complimented in providing this treat every Autumn for the boys and girls. The winners of prizes were: Longest distance—Mary Joyce Daniel Coe Hill; First Lucky Number prizes F. Smith; second Elda Brough, third, Ted Pigden, fourth, Marie Stevens, fifth, Harry Phillips, sixth, Gerrard Lahey, seventh, Barbara Stevens, eighth, Ronald Doig.

Miss Yuill of Oshawa spent the weekend with her sister, Mrs. Johnson and Mr. C. Johnson.

Messrs. Tom Hawthorne, Newton Kincaid R.C.A.F., Trenton, spent the weekend at their homes in Madoc.

Mr. Ted Poulter spent the weekend with his parents at the Parsonage.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Jeffrey and little daughter of Tweed, spent Sunday with Dr. and Mrs. Beatty.

Misses Gwen Scrutton and Lou Wickens are spending their holidays in Toronto.

Marmora

Marmora— Mrs. Lloyd Bailey and baby daughter of Toronto, are visiting Mrs. Margaret Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Jules Ethier are spending the week with relatives at Tavistock.

Under auspices of Marmora Agricultural Society a dance was held in the Exhibition Building on Wednesday evening with Austin's Orchestra in attendance. Members of Marmora Women's Institute were in charge of refreshments.

Mrs. S. Agnew of Peterboro, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sopha.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Matthews spent last week with friends in Toronto.

Mrs. Ted Bedore is visiting relatives in Winnipeg, Man.

Victor Neal, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis in Belleville General Hospital has returned to his home here.

The Board of Directors of Marmora Agricultural Society have decided to postpone Marmora Fair until Tuesday and Wednesday, October 13, and 14. The chief reason for this action was the fact that so many other fairs in close proximity to Marmora were bunched around Marmora's original dates October 2, and 3.

Cards Appear in Top Condition After A Tough Stretch Drive And Hold Last Practice Session

Mort Cooper and Ernie Bonham Likely to be the Opposing Hurlers in First Game

NOT AFRAID OF YANKS

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

St. Louis, Sept. 29 (AP)—St. Louis remained extremely calm and collected about the impending World Series as its Cardinals took their final workout today and the renowned Yankees closed in from the east.

Unless one read the newspapers, there was nothing to indicate that the two flag winners were due to start belting each other at Sportsman's Park tomorrow afternoon. There were no banners; no hoarse talk in hotel lobbies about "our Cards." In short, the so-called World Series atmosphere of other years appeared to have taken a leave of absence.

The local explanation of the seeming apathy toward the series is that the town wore itself out rooting the Cardinals home in their amazing September drive to the pennant. The fans needed a couple of days' rest before taking up the big assault on the Yankees tomorrow. All reserved seats to the first two games here were sold a week ago.

The Yanks—not riding a special train this time but occupying uppers and lowers like everybody else—were due to arrive shortly before dark tonight, too late for a workout. They will not see the field until tomorrow, but the fact is of no importance because they played the Browns 11 times at Sportsmans Park this season and know its every shadow.

Hold Long Practice Session

Shouting and carrying on much as they have all season, the flambuoyant Red Birds held a long practice session yesterday, then attended a barn dance in their honor last night and were scheduled to hold another workout today. It was obvious that Manager Billy Southworth meant to keep his scrapping youngsters at razor-edge. He didn't want them to relax and start thinking too much about the series.

As a matter of fact, the Cards still are in a happy daze about capturing the pennant, and the full impact of the World Series probably will not strike them until about 1 p.m. tomorrow, when the Yanks start hitting practice drives into the bleachers and generally trying on Sportsmans Park for size.

Yesterday the Cards' best batter, Country Slaughter, sat on the steps of the dugout and mused: "It still doesn't seem possible we've really won it. Seems like only a few days ago the Dodgers were leading us by 10 games." Others made similar comment. There was almost no talk about the Yankees, though this is not to be construed as a respectful silence on the subject. The Cards do not stand in awe of man or beast.

Look Full of Fight

So far as the naked eye can discern, little if anything was taken out of Southworth's hellions by their sensational stretch drive, in which they won 43 out of 52 games. They look full of fight, and every regular will be at his appointed post when the shouting begins. Captain Terry Moore still has one leg tightly taped, and second baseman Jimmy Brown might be a trifle tired, but otherwise the National League champs came out of it in remarkably good shape.

Perhaps the most important development of the past 24 hours was Manager Southworth's more-or-less announced intention to start Johnny Beazley, his 23-year-old rookie pitching star, in the second game against the Yanks. At least, he said he "would like" to start Beazley in the second heat before a home crowd. This occasioned some eyebrow-lifting, as managers usually lean toward their experienced flingers in a World Series and it had been assumed by everybody, including the Yankees, that lefthander Max Lanier would follow Mort Cooper to the hill for the Cards.

Whether Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yanks will start his ace, Ernie Bonham, or his 37-year-old World Series specialist, Red Ruffing, in the opener might not be known until the pitchers start warming up tomorrow. Out here they feel certain it will be Bonham vs. Cooper.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, Sept. 29—(AP)—Serious stuff: off his National League Record, Mort Cooper ought to win a couple of world series games, but don't count on it too much . . . . .Since the Yanks started their series winning streak in 1927, no pitcher has been able to beat them for the big money just by throwing the ball past the batters . . . . .They're lost four games in eight series—two to Carl Hubbell, one to Hal Schumacher and one to Whit Wyatt. . . .

Looks as if Whitey Moore had grabbed the "luckiest" title from French Bordagaray. He cut in on the series swag twice with the Reds and then landed with St. Louis this year because he hollered about being sent to the minors.

Prediction

After giving the Cardinals the benefit of as much doubt as we can muster, this department's world series choice is the Yanks in five games. . . .The Cards ought to win one, but we don't know when or how, since they can't match the Yanks at the plate and in pitching and fielding about the best you can give them is an even break.

Guest Star

Samuel B. Cohen, Meriden (Conn.) Daily Journall: "The Athletics ended the season a week early, which wasn't good enough . . . . .The Phils moved into Ebbets Field in the midst of a scrap drive and had quite a battle to prevent themselves from being included in the salvage."

Two days before War Secretary Henry Stimson called of the Louis-Conn fight Mike Jacobs handed his resignation as promoter to war boxing (Red) Inc. He didn't want any part of a suit over the broadcast. . . . .The Dodgers' pennant "fight" carried right on after the season ended—into a mild "rhubarb" between Bobo Newsom and Leo Durocher and a livelier row between Ducky Medwick and Ed Head. . .

When Maury High of Norfolk, Va., went to Alexandria for a football game recently, co-Captain Carl Haggard discovered at the last moment that his football shoes still were in Norfolk. . . .When a pair finally was located, they were a couple of sizes too big and Carl muffed several chances for good rains when he couldn't manoeuvre in the oversize footwear.

SCALPERS BUSY AT ST. LOUIS AS ALL SEATS SOLD

"Brokers" Asking as High as $50 for a $6.90 Box Seat

SELL STANDING ROOM

By CHARLES DUNKLEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 29. (AP)—A sellout of all reserved seats for World's Series games starting at Sportsman's Park tomorrow sent scalpers prices skyrocketing today with "brokers" asking as much as $50 for a $6.90 box seat and $20 for $5.75 reserved seat.

The scalpers or "ticket brokers" are required under Federal Law to register with the collector of internal revenue and must pay the government taxes of 11 per cent of the excess over the established price of the tickets. They also are required to obtain a $100 license from the city.

Five "brokers", two from Philadelphia, one from New York, another from Chicago, and one from St. Louis have registered.

As St. Louis prepared for its sixth World's Series in 17 years, the ticket problem became the perplexing subject. All of the 22,879 reserved seats and 3,168 box seats were quickly sold and the ticketless fan faces the problem of rising early and standing in a long line in an effort to obtain one of the 10,900 tickets that entitle purchasers only to standing room.

Three large national business organizations had scheduled conventions here a year ago, with no thought of the series at the time, and their delegates are now occupying rooms for which the fans are clamoring One large hotel received such a flood of applications that the management had to engage three extra employees just to refuse them.

Sid Keener, in charge of press arrangements said today that for the first time in years baseball writer from Pacific Coast Metropolitan dailies would be missing, undoubtedly because of the war transportation problems.

There will be 350 writers, plus telegraphers, crammed into the regular press box and the emergency one built in the middle section of the upper grand stand.

BATHING AT HOME

Purley, England. (CP)— People in this Surrey town took the holiday-at-home advice literally and Councillor F. T. Q. Mason reported he had seen as many as fifteen people at one time bathing in an emergency water supply tank.

SHOCKED

U. S. Secretary of War Henry Stimson, ABOVE, announced in Washington that he is shocked over arrangements for the Louis-Conn championship fight and is making a personal investigation. He refuses to discuss what details of the fight shocked him, but they are said to concern guarantees which will enable Louis and Conn to pay off debts owing to Promoter Mike Jacobs. Louis is now a sergeant and Conn a corporal in the U. S. forces.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, Sept. 29 — (CP) — Paul Thompson, coach of Chicago Black Hawks, has told western scribes that his main worry for this National Hockey League season is to find a goalkeeper ... Sammy Lo Presti, the large one who fended pucks for Hawks last winter, is in the United States forces ...... Thompson's worry is a small one compared to that faced by the Montreal Canadiens' brain trust .. Canucks were none too good last year, but they're plenty worse now ... a deal for Gordon Drillon would fix a lot of problems, but it's a difficult one to make. Toronto wants a good player in exchange for Drillon, and Canadiens haven't much in trading material ...Leafs probably wouldn't accept anyone short of Toe Blake, and for Montreal that would be like taking money out of one pocket and putting it back into the other ... it's doubtful they could get any more out of Drillon, if as much, as from Blake ... Irvin wasn't offering anyone like Blake in his dealings with Leafs' Hap Day last week ... the cagey one was using as bait a large assortment of people named Joe, and Leafs wouldn't go for it.

Incidentally:

George (Edmonton Journal) Mackintosh reports that 61 players from the Edmonton Maple Leaf Athletic Club have entered the armed forces since the war's beginning .... word also comes from Edmonton that Ken Cox and Jim Fleming, Edmonton juveniles last season, will attend Eddie Shore's Buffalo Bison training camp at Midland, Ont. ... juveniles, yet! That means they are no more than a few months over 17 years old.

High school football leagues across the country are swinging into action ... Montreal's is one of the best-developed, with Toronto and Winnipeg well up there ... a few years ago the Winnipeg Scholastic League outdrew the Blue Bombers ... here's a slightly ancient yarn about the Vancouver Norvans, who haven't been around the boxla scene for several weeks now ... at one point this season Norvans were at the bottom of the coast league, and Tommy Thompson, the club president, decided to throw a stag party for the players ... Norvans went out after the party and won six straight games ... then they lost another couple, so Thompson ordered another party ... this time Norvans ousted Vancouver Burrards from the league semi-final ... guess the supplies ran out, because they lost to New Westminster in the final.

Toronto, Sept. 29 (CP)—The boys of a Royal Canadian Air Force bomber squadron Somewhere in England put on an East vs West softball game recently—with no holds barred.

The East won 27-24 and an enthusiastic station correspondent says "there were so many home runs the scorekeeper lost track after the first 20."

Anyhow, the East took the name of Montreal Beaus while the western boys played under the title of the Western Gentlemen.

From Ottawa we hear that Thain Simon of Brockville, formerly with Brantford Lions of the Junior Ontario Hockey Association and Dominion sculling champion in 1941, has joined the R.C.A.F. and now is stationed at one of the air force's Manning Pools.

Bobby Jones, a prime favorite with Moose Jaw boxing fans and one-time Saskatchewan bantamweight champion, is stationed with the R.C.A.F. at Prince Albert.

Bill Snider, who started playing hockey with the Brandon Wheat Kings and then switched to sextets in Regina and Nelson, before transferring to the North Sydney Victorian in the Cape Breton League, is with the R.C.A.F. stationed at Winnipeg.

A correspondent writes us that Bill is 24 and last season was rated the best centre man in the aforementioned league.

Art Walker, who starred on Queen's University football and basketball teams and was one of Toronto's best sandlot ballplayers is a pilot officer in the R.C.A.F. overseas.

Cpl. Henry Jones, centre for the Truro Bearcats when they won the Nova Scotia junior hockey championship in 1936, is in the army overseas.

Phil Gold, one of the University of Toronto's outstanding basketball players from 1930-36 is a lieutenant in the United States Army Medical Corps now.

Lieut. Jack Hughes, with a west coast regiment overseas, is a former New Westminster Salmonbelly lacrosse star.

COLUMBUS NEEDS ONLY ONE GAME TO TAKE SERIES

Syracuse Chiefs Beaten in Fourth Game by 10-5 Count

PLAYER EJECTED

Syracuse, N.Y., Sept. 29. (AP)—Columbus Red Birds, one game removed from a successful defence of their Little World Series title, are pinning their hopes of making it four straight over Syracuse tonight on the strong right arm of a hurler who grew in the Chiefs' backyard.

Manager Eddie Dyer whose American Association Club leads the International Leaguers three games to one in the 26th annual minor league classic, will face Jewel Ens' club in the fifth game with Ted Wilks. Columbus broke out with 13 hits to defeat Syracuse last night 10-5.

Winner of 12 games while losing nine with Columbus this year, Wilks is a native of nearby Fulton, and formerly was with Rochester of the International League.

Ewell Blackwell, winner of 15 regular season games and four play-off contests is slated to pitch for the Chiefs.

Chill weather kept the fourth-game crowd to 4,601 fans, making the series total attendance 18,903, and the player's share [illegible] series gate $8,927.91. The winning club will split $5,356.75, the [illegible] showing $3,571.16.

Big Clayt Lambert, who beat Columbus in the opener on five hits, yielded ten hits in eight innings last night.

John Antonelli, Columbus third-baseman, and Jim Gleeson, centre-fielder, led the attack with two singles and a double each. The Chiefs reached Preacher Roe for five hits and three runs in the first four innings. Ken Burkhart, who came in at the fifth and got credit for the victory, scattered five hits among the Chiefs.

Wally Cazen, who went in to pinch-hit for Lambert in the eighth, and was ejected from the game for protesting a second called strike, was fined $25 by the Series Commissioners.

3 TEAMS ENTERED IN OTTAWA LOOP

Possibility Kingston May Make Fourth Team in Football League

Ottawa, Sept. 29 (CP)—At least three and possibly four teams will compete in an Ottawa City Senior Football League schedule opening Oct. 10, it was announced following a league meeting last night at which a third entry was signed on.

Ottawa Civil Service Recreation Association will be the third team in the league, officials said. Definite word was expected from Kingston, Ont., today as to whether that city would enter an army team.

An exhibition "Football Day" at Lansdowne Park next Saturday will feature the two teams whose entry in the league was previously announced. These are the Ottawa Rough Riders and Uplands Air Station of the R.C.A.F. Entire proceeds of the game will be turned over to the navy, army and air force.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 29—(CP)—Even in wartime boxing in Britain doesn't have to worry about the future as long as the British army championships are held.

Decision to stage the bouts in 1943—possibly next March—means that more than 10,000 fights must be held before champions are declared. More than 20,000 service boxers are involved, including Canadian army champions who advance into the British army three-day finals.

Eliminating contests are about to start now with the finals under the auspices of western command. Last season northern command had the finals at York and Pte. Bobby Docherty of Toronto's 48th Highlanders emerged as British army featheweight king after previously winning the Canadian title.

There isn't much room for flukiness in winning a British army title. Platoon contests come first, followed by company, battalion, brigade, division and commad championship. There are eight British commands.

Volleyball champions of the Canadian army overseas are a bunch of lads from a western Canada Field Regiment of the R. C. A. representing a Canadian division, they defeated another division made up of members of the Seaforth Highlanders in a best-of-five game series.

Pete Kane, former World's Flyweight Boxing Champion and now a sergeant in the R. A. F., gained a clear decision over Hugh Cameron at Liverpool, but he failed to beat the Scales.

He came in overnight and thereby renewed old doubts regarding his challenge for the title he once held and renounced because of an increasing girth. A few weeks ago he defeated Joe Curran in an eltiminator for the northern area championship and immediately challenged dynamite-fisted Jackie Paterson, British and Empire Champion.

Casual Comment by K.J.C.

Twenty years ago this season two names flashed across the old Central Ontario Baseball League horizon in meteoric splendor. It was the first season these two players, whose names still are fond memories, appeared in C. O. B. L. line-ups. The boys were Al Heckman, blonde righthand pitcher for Peterboro and Jack "Chief" Williams, Belleville's pitching find from Verona. Heckman came to Peterboro early in 1922 from Easton, Pa., but at that time many were of the opinion that Heckman, still considered one of the best righthand pitchers ever to grace Ontario baseball mounds, had been sent to Peterboro by Tris Speaker, then manager of the Cleveland Indians. The C.O.B.L. employed a split season schedule that year with Heckman pitching the Petes to win the first half and Williams doing yeoman mound work to pitch Belleville into the play-offs by winning the second half. In the league finals Williams beat the Petes 3 to 0 here and Heckman blanked Belleville 2-0 in the Liftlock City forcing a third and final issue in Oshawa.

It was just 20 years ago yesterday that the old Grand Trunks and Petes squared off in Oshawa. However, let Fred Craig, the Peterboro scribe, tell the sad story as he related it yesterday. Fred reminisced as follows:

"Belleville were first to bat and they opened right up on Heckman. Wicky Ross started with a single to left and Verne Weir doubled past third to score him. The rout was on. The Bay of Quinte team scored two more runs in the first, got three in the third and another trio in the fourth. By that time we remember calling Jake Solomon's attention to the fact that Peterboro automobiles were already beginning to pull out for home and Jake replied fervently, "I wish we could go with them." Anyway it wound up 13 to 0 for Belleville. Heckman who had been carrying the pitching burden all season had weakened under the strain and the Petes had gone with him. He allowed 16 hits, with Harry Mills getting four, and the Peterboro club had ten errors. Meanwhile Chief Williams, fanning 15 of the Petes, held them to two hits and was never in trouble. After the first two batters for Belleville had hit safely to score a run, the ball game was practically over then and there for Petes were helpless before Williams.

However, that will be the last reminiscing for Mister Craig for 1922, as this corner will have to carry on with memories of the great Belleville-Toronto Hillcrest series, to be followed by the disappointing Belleville-Galt Terrier round, but let's take these in their stride next week regardless of the world series.

Remember when the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Newark Bears 9 to 7 on the strength of three home runs early in the sixth game of their International baseball league playoff two years ago today, to force a seventh and final game? Newark won the deciding contest and the Governor's Cup the next day.

When the New York Yankees clinched their thirteenth pennant by defeating the Indians in Cleveland, September 14, as Ernie Bonham gained his twentieth victory, it was the fourth earliest date on which a New York club had nailed down its last rivet in the A. L. championship. The earliest clinching by the Yankees during their 21-year pennant-winning era since 1921 was last season, when the twelfth flag was tucked away on September 4. The first flag won by Miller Huggins' 1921 crew was deferred the longest—until October 1.

Since 1921, Yankee pennants were clinched on the following dates:

1921—October 1.
1922—September 30.
1923—September 20.
1926—September 25.
1927—September 13.
1928—September 28.
1932—September 12.
1936—September 9.
1937—September 22.
1938—September 18.
1939—September 16.
1941—September 4.
1942—September 14.

IN HIS EARLY DAYS OF wrestling when he came out of the coal mines of Alberta, John Katan, the Calgary eye-opener, was at one time sparring partner for Ed (Strangler) Lewis some years ago when the headlock expert was training to defend his world's heavyweight crown. "I learned more about wrestling from Lewis than from any one else in the business", admits Katan, who meets Earl McCready here tomorrow night. Of course the feature of this week's show will be the appearance of the two Burns brothers, Jake and George, from Omaha, the Nebraska tornadoes.

THIS AND THAT—IT'S QUITE a hockey team the R.C.O.C. is lining up in Ottawa. . . . .Neil and Mac Colville and Alex Shibicky of the Rangers, Ken Readon of the Canadiens and Jack McGill former Boston Bruin star, are all headed toward Ottawa, and have joined the Ordnance Corps. . . . .These, and others who have trained in Kingston, won't be any to welcome when the Combines hear of their exodus. . . . .The Boston Bruins have changed their fall training grounds for the second time this year. . . . Now Art Ross and Dit Clapper are calling training at Montreal, instead of Port Arthur. . . . Ted Lyons, veteran Chicago White Sox pitcher, enlisted in the United States Marine Corps yesterday . . . . At 41 he signed up as a private, but that won't be for long. . . The umpires named for the World Series are—American League (Wm. Summer, Cal Hubbard and Steve Basil) National League (George Magerkurth, George Barr and Tom Dunn.). . . In past World Series the American League is somewhat up on their senior circuit rivals. . . .Actually the American League has won 24 to 14 series and the standing of games is 126 to 92 in favour of the junior group. . . .The Yankees with nine and the Giants with four lead their respective circuits. . . Take that one up.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Drums of the Congo"

Playing the role of Ona Munson is a new experience for Ona Munson. The noted character actress is essaying her first role "as herself" in the romantic lead of Universal's "Drums of the Congo" which comes next to the screen of the McCarthy Theatre.

Famous for her exciting character portrayals such as "Belle Watling" in "Gone With the Wind" and "Mother Gin Sling" in "Shanghai Gesture," Miss Munson has heretofore been seen on the screen padded and heavily made up.

Described as a distinct surprise is the actress' appearance in "Drums of the Congo." A slender, youthful figure, Miss Munson actually weighs only a hundred pounds.

For her debut on the screen as she really is, Miss Munson's wardrobe contained a riding habit made for her when she was fifteen.

Stuart Erwin, Peggy Moran, Don Terry, Richard Lane and Jules Bledsoe are Miss Munson's companions on the cinematic African adventure.

Weaver Brothers

Moviegoers of the city will also enjoy the added feature which opens next at the McCarthy, not only because it is a musical comedy, but more important is the fact that it brings back to Belleville those three famous funsters Leon, June and Frank Weaver (better known as the Weaver Brothers and Elviry). The title of their new hit is "The Old Homestead" and advance reviews rate it one of the most entertaining films of the year.

AT THE BELLE

"This Above All"

The big moment in Joan Fontaine's life arrived recently after she completed work in 20th Century-Fox's "This Above All," the Darryl F. Zanuck production which co-stars Tyrone Power now on the Belle Theatre screen.

It all happened the day after Joan won the Academy Award. She was awakened by a telephone call from her sister, Olivia de Haviland.

In what Joan described as a "sepulchral tone" Olivia announced, "Well, it's happened."

Then Olivia proceeded to read a newspaper column which dealt with Joan's winning the Academy Award for the best performance by an actress in 1941. There was a slight reference in the article to Olivia as "Joan Fontaine's Sister."

There is really no animosity between the two outstanding actresses, for both realize that there is plenty of work for each in Hollywood. But, as anyone who ever had a brother or sister will recognize, there is bound to be a certain amount of rivalry between such relatives—especially in such a highly competitive field as acting. And as Olivia had gotten off to a head start with her work at Warner Bros., Joan was anxious to make up for lost time.

For years Joan had always been referred to as Olivia's sister, which was the reason she changed her name to Fontaine. This allowed her to establish a career free--from family comparison. All of her work has been directed toward having people regard her as a distinct individual rather than another movie star's sister.

Olivia's reading of the newspaper clipping over the phone is considered by Joan as the highest peak she has reached in her movie career.

Featured in the cast of "This Above All" are Thomas Mitchell, Henry Stephenson, Nigel Bruce, Gladys Cooper and many others.

The Belle News of the World described by Lowell Thomas, and "All About Dogs," a clever color fun cartoon complete the program. The Belle is warm and comfortable.

AT THE CAPITOL

"I Killed That Man"

A recent newspaper analysis poll showed that among the favorite Hollywood characterizations were those of attorney and newspaper reporter. Both of these arts are written into the script of "I Killed That Man," the feature attraction now on the screen of the Capitol Theatre, starring Ricardo Cortez with Joan Woodbury and Iris Adrian. This thrilling newspaper yarn tells the stry of how a crusading district attorney and a sob sister tracked down a ruthless racketeer who terrorized a city.

"The Awful Truth"

Three complete sound systems, an almost unprecedented number were needed to record the vocal highlight of Irene Dunne's latest picture, "The Awful Truth," in which she is co-starred with Cary Grant.

Some singing stars first record a number, then later "mouth" it for the camera. This procedure, however, could not be followed in "The Awful Truth," which is now showing at the Capitol Theatre. The star, while attending a party, turns on a radio, then goes into a song and comedy routine so spontaneous in nature it had to be recorded and photographed at the same time.

Accordingly, a 36-piece dance orchestra was brought on the set. Because it had to be placed out of sight, a separate sound channel had to be assigned it. A second channel picked up Miss Dunne's voice and from this line a third ran to earphones on Morris Stoloff, head of Columbia's music department, so he could hear the singer while conducting the orchestra.

"The Awful Truth" features Ralph Bellamy, Molly Lamont, Joyce Compton, Alexander D'Arcy, Robert Warwick, and Cecil Cunningham. Leo McCarey directed from a screen play based on Arthur Richman's famous stage play. Vina Delmar, author of "Bad Girl," wrote the adaptation.

4th Sidney

4th Sidney—A few from this line attended the shower on Thursday evening in honor of the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ketcheson, held in the Wallbridge Town Hall. After a very enjoyable time was spent with Rev. L. W. Scott as chairman, and the presentation made, a number gathered outside and a rousing old charivari was showered to them. Jack responded to their noise with a nice sum and ice cream and chocolate bars were enjoyed by a good number, all wishing the happy couple bon voyage.

REMEMBER WITHOUT WANTING

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER SIX

Home Town Admirer

In the mirrored, modern cocktail lounge there were five couples in Harriet's party. Judith knew them all, though Harriet's seniority had given them a different set of friends. In a flame-colored frock with her long, sleek black hair in a knot at the nape of her neck Harriet looked animated and lovely and more slender than usual. Larry, an auburn-haired, rather sharp-featured young man, was content to let his wife steal the limelight and looked at her with unconcealed admiration. It was a big night for them. Judith wondered what had prompted the generosity on the part of Larry's uncle Bill, an elderly frugal bachelor, until she remembered that they had named their second son for him.

In recent years in Harriet's first frank glance at Judith' sparks of envy had flown from her dark eyes. But only briefly. . . . .There was no animosity, no sharp jealousy between them. To Harriet, Judith was beautiful and clever. To Judith her sister was generous, lovable and honest. Though they had never shared each other's innermost thoughts, a deep and genuine affection existed between them.

Judith was embraced and kissed. "I'm so glad you came, darling! You know everyboy, don't you? Larry, order another round of drinks." She put her arm through Judith's arm and looked up at Stephen. "I think you were beginning to doubt I had a little sister."

"I don't doubt it now."

"And I hope you're going to be awfully good friends. I've been long enough pulling strings to have you meet."

Judith smiled. Stephen looked again as though he were about to blush.

Cocktails, cigarettes, conversation, the latter frivolous and meaningless. Sitting beside Harriet, Judith said little. Harriet and Larry and their friends were enjoying themselves so much that nothing she could say was either desired or important. Moreover, she felt odd in a married group, her life, her interests, her work were so different from theirs.

She was thinking of Max and how commonplace he would think this little party when she realized that Stephen was looking at her through the smoke of his cigarette, his eyes clear and innocent. When their eyes met, he smiled with boyish charm and then looked away, frowning as a small boy does when he is embarrassed to find himself caught off-guard.

When they entered the dining-room, Harriet moved to her side. "Don't you like Steve? Everybody does. And he's going to be important."

"I think he's very nice."

Though the dinner lasted endlessly, conversation did not languish. When the music in the ballroom began, Judith knew that Stephen was trying to make up his mind to ask her to dance.

Harriet and Larry went in first and the others followed.

"May I?" Stephen asked.

"Of course."

He danced extremely well, she thought.

"You belong to the club?" she asked.

"No. But I hope to some day."

He hoped to do a great deal. He probably would, for behind his good looks, his innocence, his gentleness was a driving ambition. And something else. . . .A sense of inferiority with girls. He wasn't sure of himself.

"I feel honored being with you tonight."

"Honored?" She looked up and laughed. "What has Harriet been telling you about me?" She wanted to put him at ease. "Do your friends call you Steve?"

"Some. My family doesn't."

"Then I won't. But what has Harriet?"

"About your work and your success."

"I'm not as successful as that."

"You're just modest."

"I hope I am."

"You're going back tomorrow?"

"Yes, tomorrow afternoon."

He said no more then, and soon the music ended and they returned to the table. For some hours after that she danced with Larry and the other young men of the party, remaining away at rather long intervals to speak to the people she knew. But on returning to her own party she was conscious that only Stephen was acutely aware of her presence. It was amusing; it was also rather uncomfortable. "He's such a big little boy," she thought, "a little boy at a party who wanted a second helping of ice cream and is afraid to ask for it." Once when the music was sweetly sad and her thoughts flew to Max, she saw Stephen looking at her thoughfully.

Midnight found them in the cocktail lounge together, Stephen apparently delighted to have her alone at last and Judith, weary of dancing and the talk of the young-married set, grateful for the quiet of the dimly-lighted room and his friendly presence. What was it that one man stir pulse, another steady it? There was a flame to Max's touch; Stephen's gave her a feeling of security.

"Tell me about yourself, Stephen."

"There's not much to tell."

"There's always something to tell in any life."

He smiled. "Well, I have a swell family, three brothers and two sisters. Two brothers and one sister are married. My father is dead and my mother lives to see all the children and grandchildren come home and sit around the dining-room table. It's quite a mob when we all get together. We've all worked our way through school which was tough going at the time, but good for us. Then I was sent here. Larry and I work for the same company."

"But you're more advanced than Larry."

"Well, yes. I'm next in line to be office manager."

Office manager, she thought. Then a pretty, vivacious wife who will encourage you and share with you and keep your house in beautiful order and give you one or two lovely children you'll be crazy about. A membership here where you'll dance on Saturday night, play golf on Sunday and bowl on Monday. That's your life, Stephen. That's your neatly-charted life.

He said, "You. . .No, I don't suppose you would. I mean I'm driving home tomorrow-it's only about a hundred miles-and I thought if you weren't doing anything. . . ."

"Not this time, thanks. I'd like to be with my family and I must get an early train back tomorrow." A train not to the apartment, not to the office but to Max. . . .

"I didn't think you would."

She smiled. "Could."

When they left the club Stephen suggested a sandwich and they drove to a small restaurant. There were awkward gaps of silence which Judith tried to fill my talking at ramdon about the workings of a large department store, the high cost of living in New York and current world problems. On the latter subject Stephen was extremely well informed and, to her surprise, his opinions were definite and carefully thought out.

A small light burned in the hall of her home when she opened the door and stepped inside and Stephen stopped in quietly beside her.

She held out her hand, finding his handclasp firm and masculine.

"Thank you, Stephen, for taking care of my little sister."

Though he smiled, he looked embarrassed again. "My pleasure. I . . . .Will you be coming home soon?"

"I don't know just when." Because of Max. . . .

"I'd like to know. I'd like to see you again if--"

"I usually let my family know. Harriet will know. Good night."

"Good night."

She forgot him as soon as the door was closed and he was gone.

But in the morning Harriet, though busy with the feeding and care of her two small sons, would not let her forget him. In the big old-fashioned kitchen where Bessie, the colored cook, was trying to get breakfast for the family, Harriet talked while she tried to pour orange juice into the reluctant mouth of Walter, at the same time trying to keep Bill's fingers out of his cereal.

"Did you have a good time last night, Judith? Larry is still asleep. Poor dear. It's so seldom he has a chance to sleep on Sunday morning at our home. I'm dead. I tried to keep the boys quiet so as not to awaken Mother and Dad and you. Wait'll you have yours."

Taking the task of feeding Bill from Harriet, Judith looked at the two sturdy little boys. She thought, "I love both of you, but not the life that goes with you, the responsibility, the illnesses, the giving up of freedom. It's never occurred to me to want to have a child of my own."

"Did you like Steve?" Harriet asked hopefully. "He's a wonderful boy, Judith. And he has great potentialities in business. Everyone who has met him likes him. Of course he's ahead of Larry at the office, but when Mr. Forbes, the office manager, is transferred elsewhere, Steve will step in his place and Larry will be his assistant. We resented first Steve's being sent. Larry thought he'd be made assistant, but Steve has done so much, weeding out dead wood and organizing so efficiently, that we can't resent him. He has a wonderful head for business. He's smart. He has Forbes afraid of his own job."

"He isn't sure of himself with the opposite sex."

Harriet laughed. "You know, I think he's shy. I don't think he's ever been serious about any girl or even very close to one. It's refreshing, isn't it? He's sweet and unspoiled. He was interested in you."

"I'm afraid you built me up too much."

"No, I didn't. I really didn't. I had a feeling . . . .well, that you were the right girl for him." She straightened her aching back and looked at Judith soberly. "With the right girl, Steve Larrabee will go far. The right girl will realize his shortcomings. Inflate his ego, make him realize how smart he is. He needs a girl stronger than he, someone to direct his ambition, his capacity for work and smooth off his rough edges."

"But why do you think I'm the girl for him?" It was funny, Harriet's serious matchmaking.

Harriet looked the kind, concerned older sister. "Because you need someone like Stephen to give you a normal woman's life. You're just kidding yourself, Judith, that you've chosen the better way."

"But people aren't made the same. They don't want the same things."

"Women do. All women want the same things."

Judith spent the remainder of the day with her parents in the comfortable living-room where a great fire roared in the old brick fireplace. And so languid was she, so contented, that it was with reluctance she left them that afternoon, knowing as she threw a kiss to them that some of her roots were still in Clinton and that those roots were indestructible.

$2,862,000,000 For Navy Planes

Washington, Sept. 29. (AP)—President Roosevelt asked the United Congress today for $2,862,000,000 additional funds now for the navy to construct airplanes which the Budget Bureau said were necessary for "the prosecution of the war".

The request, bringing to $5,593,154,308 the extra funds sought for the Navy within the last two weeks, was among nine estimates for additional funds the President requested for various departments. The total requested today was approximately $3,460,000,000.

Miss Harriet Young Celebrates Her Ninetieth Birthday

Picton, (Special.) —Miss Harriet Young celebrated her 90th birthday on Monday of last week at the home of Mrs. Braden, Centre St. She had many callers during the day, who were treated to a lovely birthday cake, prepared by Mrs. Braden. She also received many cards, letters and gifts, on this occasion. Miss Young is a direct descendant of the pioneer Col. Henry Young, and retains all her faculties and is a very interesting person to visit with. Her brother Mr. Archie Young, formerly of Kingston, also resides at Mrs. Braden's Rev. J. B. Creeggan was among those who called during the afternoon as Miss Young is a faithful adherent of the Anglican church.

Entertains For Daughter-in-Law

Mrs. Wm. Brown entertained at a tea at her home on Queen Street, on Monday afternoon in honor of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. M. B. Brown.

Miss Ruth Francis has gone to Belleville where she will take a business course.

Laval Gov't. Sets Up 'Local Councils' To Rule Possessions

Vichy, France, Sept. 29 (AP)—The Laval government today established a system of Vichy-appointed "local councils" to rule France's western hemisphere possessions, replacing the elective general councils which were dissolved in October, 1940.

Affected will be Martinique, Guadelupe, and French Guiana as well as Reunion Island in the Indian Ocean.

DEFEAT OF GANDHI PLAN NECESSARY FOR SOLUTION

London, Sept. 29—(CP) The defeat of M. K. Gandhi's "campaign of mass sabotage" is essential to the final solution of the Indian problem, L. S. Amery, Secretary of State for India, said today in a luncheon talk.

"It would seem that as a mere matter of practical convenience and advantage by far the best policy for India during the period before she can afford to stand completely alone is to retain her association with the free partnership of the British commonwealth," he said.

300-Pound Bell Stolen From York Road School

Trenton —(Special)— A 300-pound school bell was stolen during the night on Sunday from the belfry of the York Road schoolhouse. Mr. Fred Poole, caretaker of the school, reported to the police stating he traced where the bell had been rolled down from the belfry across the roof and dropped to the ground where it made quite an impression in the earth. It was later dragged along the highway for about a mile and a half to the farm of Mr. Fred Little, where apparently the thieves were tired and there they hid the bell. Constable Morgan of the Trenton police force, who lives near by, stated the bell would weigh at least 300 pounds and was made of solid brass.

This should serve as a warning to caretakers of schools and churches to be on the alert and notify the police should they see anyone loitering in the neighborhood.

Brian Almey Injured

Brian Almey, 16, son of Sergt.-Major Almey, was seriously injured at noon on Monday when he was struck by a car while riding along Dundas Street West on his bicycle.

The driver of the car, William E. Bibby, of Brighton, apparently was passing the bicycle at the time, when the lad swerved directly in front of the vehicle. The bicycle was caught by the front fender and bumper of the car and the boy was thrown up over the hood and through the windshield. He received severe lacerations of the face and head. He was attended by Dr. Farncombe who stated that an artery had been severed this resulting in severe loss of blood. Dr. Johnson also arrived on the scene as did Dr. Clarke of Brighton and the lad was rushed by Northey's ambulance to Belleville Hospital. It was later learned that it had been necessary to give the boy transfusions.

SATURDAY MARKET

Saturday's market took on a definite appearance of early fall, fruits and vegetables being much less plentiful than for some months past. Apples of several varieties were offered and sold all the way from 20c per basket for cookers to $2.25 per hamper for MacIntosh. One or two vendors sold crab-apples and these went at 20c per basket also. Pears at 50c and 60c per basket were not plentiful and the plums were apparently finished except for the blue damson. These were 25c per basket.

Eggs reached a new high with Grade "A" selling at 50c even. Other grades from 42c up. Chickens were also higher and sold up to $2.00 with broilers going at $1.30 per pair. Butter mostly was 35c to 37c.

Potatoes held at 50c per peck.

Mr. Tom Baker who is attending University at Toronto spent the weekend with his mother, Mrs. W. E. Baker, York Road.

Petty Officer Gordon Hartman of the Canadian Navy is spending a leave with his mother on Dundas Street West.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lindsay of New York who have been visiting Chief Constable and Mrs. Bain, Shuter Street, have returned to their home.

Mr. J. Thompson of Brooklyn, N.Y., spent a few days last week visiting relatives and friends in Toronto and Trenton.

Mrs. Ralph Weaver, King Street, spent a few days last week visiting in Torinto.

William Spencer, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Spencer, Henry Street, left on Saturday for the Royal Canadian Naval College at Hatley Park, B.C.

2 Navy Officers Are Decorated

Ottawa, Sept. 29 — (CP) — The Navy Minister, Hon. Angus Macdonald, announced last night the award of the Distinguished Service Cross to two officers in the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, and added that a third has been mentioned in dispatches.

The announcement said the King had approved the award of the D. S. C. to Lieut. Gordon W. Stead of Vancouver and Lieut. George F. Duncan, who enlisted through the Montreal Division of the R. C. N. V. R. Sub-Lt. John Alan Powell of Ottawa was mentioned in dispatches.

PURGE BY HITLER OF HIS GENERALS SEEN UNDER WAY

List Said to Have Replaced Von Bock — Von Leeb Out on North Front

LIST ARDENT NAZI

By WES GALLAGHER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 29 —(AP)— A new purge by Hitler of Nazi generals along the lines of last winter's wholesale dismissals following the failure to take Moscow was reported today with Field Marshal Fedor von Bock ousted from command of his stalled army at Stalingrad and Field Marshal Wilhelm Ritter von Leeb replaced on the Leningrad front.

The German-inspired Vichy radio reported that Field Marshal Siegmund List, who directed the Balkan campaign, replaced von Bock with Col.-Gen. Hermann von Hoth second in command.

In London meanwhile a military commentator confirmed reports that Field Marshal Georg von Kuschler had replaced von Leeb on the Leningrad front where the Germans have been driven back slowly in a series of Red army counter-attacks.

Exponent of Lightning war Tactics

List is regarded as a leading exponent of lightning war tactics and if, as reported, he is in command a new savage assault on Stalingrad is expected with total disregard for losses. This 62-year-old commander is known as an ardent Nazi and a ruthless tactician.

While in the Berlin war office from 1926 to 1930 he was the "terror" of his subordinates, informed sources here said. He was removed from his Balkan command over a month ago following reports that he had severely criticized von Bock's tactics and the Stalingrad drive in general. It was believed here that Hitler, in casting about for someone to break the costly Stalingrad stalemate, recalled him to active service.

Von Kuschler commanded the 18th Army under von Bock during the campaign against France and was made a field marshal for his services on the Leningrad front early in the Russian campaign.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 29. (AP)—Scattered favorites attracted mild bidding in today's stock market but many leaders struggled unsuccessfully for buying attention.

Among stocks Santa Fe recorded another new top since 1937, although other rails, with the exception of a fairly-firm Canadian Pacific, were virtually unchanged. Resistant were American Telephone, Goodyear, Union Carbide and Westinghouse. Occasional losers included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Consolidated Edison, United Aircraft, Kennecott and Texas Co.

The darker labor diversion outlook continued to depress such gold mining stalwarts as Homestake, which added a substantial minus sign to Monday's setback of 2 1-8 and was near the 1942 low. Dome Mines, also a soft spot in the preceding session, met support in the forenoon but failed to follow through. Lake Shore eased 3-8.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Sept. 29 — (CP) — Continued softness in golds, especially higher-priced issues, was noted in later morning and early afternoon stock trading which continued at the slower pace set in morning dealings. Bralorne and Hollinger both extended their losses to 30 cents while Wright Hargreaves doubled its opening drop and around 1:30 P. M. was selling 10 cents lower. Chesterville dipped 8.

Ontario Nickel, with 29,000 shares, held close to yesterday's closing level of 15 and sold around 14 7-8 in early afternoon dealings. Falconbridge added 10 cents and Smelters a minor fraction. International Nickel and Steep Rock were softer.

Industrials continued on the dull side with most interest in utilities which were irregularly higher.

Volume at one o'clock at 81,000 shares was 74,000 below yesterday's turnover at the same time. The noon gold index showed decline of a full point.

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results your druggist will gladly return your money.

CLIMBING TO THE ATTACK

Here troops at an eastern seaboard training centre in the U.S. engaged in the military problem of dislodging Axis troops entrenched on a section of the coast, climb up the perpendicular wall of a moat which stood between them and the enemy. Smoke screen laid down by the attackers lends reality to the picture.

Parents Asked to Co-operate In Improving School Attendance

Although there has been a marked improvement in the attendance of pupils at city public schools following an appeal from the Board of Education in Belleville, Secretary Administrator L. A. Kells is making further appeals for co-operation from parents in this regard.

"Reports to the Board of Education from school principals and Attendance Officer F. D. Wiggins show an improvement in school attendance which is gratifying. However, the Board is anxious that the city become even more school-attendance conscious in order that our record may soon excel that of other cities in the Province, as attendance is regarded by the Department of Education as essential and also assists in increased grants from the Department," explained Secretary-Administrator Kells today.

In a recent circular sent to parents of public school students Mr. Kells outlined the basic twelve reasons for school absence and also pointed out seven others that result in demerit marks being registered against pupils absent. The latter seven points that include demerit marks for absence include malingering, illegal employment, parental neglect, physical obstacles (such as weather conditions), truancy, privation and other reasons not listed as legal. Parents are urged to advise school principals of reasons of absence of pupils as soon as is possible under the circumstances.

THE WAR TODAY

(By GLENN BABB)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

An optimistic but anonymous Yugoslav official in London has likened today's frenzied situation in the Balkans to that of 1918 on the eve of the collapse of the satellite members of the Hohenzollern-Hapsburg Axis. That Autumn Turkey, Bulgaria and Austria-Hungary one by one raised the white flag and the German surrender followed quickly.

But hopes built on any imagined parallel between that September and this almost certainly will prove illusory. Undoubtedly Hitler, like the Kaiser, is having trouble keeping his lesser allies of the southeast on the mark. There can be little doubt that it requires the strongest kind of pressure to keep the Rumanians and Hungarians fighting side by side against the Red army, not to mention the Italians.

But the parallel ends about there. In 1918 the British army already had conquered large sections of the Turkish empire; Bulgaria had been invaded by the Allies. The polyglot armies of the Austro-Hungarian empire were simply melting away.

Today the threat of invasion is far away from Hungary and Rumania. The armies they have contributed to the Russian campaign are fighting from 500 to 1,000 miles from home and the promises they are to share in the spoils of conquest, or at least have favored places in the Hitlerian new order, have the appearance of fairly sound currency. Then, too, the ties with which the Nazi conqueror grapples his satellites to his cause are of far tougher fibre than those of 1918, far more ruthless terrorism, greater thoroughness of political control, the all-pervading fear invoked by the Gestapo.

But signs are appearing that the one-sided alliance is suffering increasing stresses. Fear was the primary force that brought the Balkan states into the combination, fear and greed. Now fear is being exerted from the other side and the costs are rising alarmingly.

Although the battlefronts are far away the war has been brought home to Bucharest, Budapest, Sofia and Zagreb by the long-range bomber, British, Russian, American.

Meanwhile the costs of the new order are mounting frightfully. Allied officials in London say Rumania's contribution, in the sieges of Odessa, Sevastopol, and now Stalingrad, have reached the appalling total of 300,000 in dead alone. The evidence is strong that Hitler has allotted his allies a place of honor in the front ranks of those songuinary operations. And the Nazi pressure continues for more generous contributions. There is little doubt that that was the meaning of last week's meetings at Hitler's headquarters on the Eastern front, whither he summoned the premiers of Rumania and Croatia to tell them what more was expected of them.

TOMATOES DAMAGED BY HEAVY FROST

With canning factory officials estimating only slightly more than 50 per cent of the total tomato crop now packed Monday night's frost will considerably shorten tomato packing season in immediate Belleville district, it was stated this morning.

Reports of frost damage reaching the canning factories was quite general, it was reported, although owing to the lateness of the season, no hopes were held out for a complete 100 per cent pack. Had the frost not struck tomato canning operations would have been continued at the Belleville plant for the next two weeks.

Although the lowest temperature recorded at the Belleville Water Purification Plant was only 31 degrees, one point below freezing, the thermometer fell much below this mark whenever the moderating influence of large bodies of water was not felt. Reports of ice being seen on water troughs at an early hour this morning were quite general, while one Sidney township resident found a slight crust on the ground when he dug potatoes to attend Belleville market.

Late garden vegetables will be affected by the sudden drop in temperature, it was maintained by market gardeners.

Obituary

MRS. WM. HENRY INSLEY

(Picton)

Picton (Special)—Mrs. Wm. Henry Insley passed away in Prince Edward County Hospital on Friday, Sept. 25th after a very brief illness. For many years she has resided with her son Ralph Insley on Mill Street, and although past eighty years of age was very active about the home.

The funeral service on Monday was held under the auspices of the Salvation Army of which the deceased was a member.

Frankford Church Holds Anniversary Services

Frankford (Special) — Frankford United Church held its anniversary services on Sunday, Sept. 27th with a good attendance for both services. The guest minister for the day was Rev. R. Bick B.A., of the Seymour charge. His morning theme was "Something Which Cannot Be Measured" pointing out that a church is measured by its people, its people by their achievements, that spiritual things cannot be measured by things material.

Under the leadership of Mrs. Sidney Martin the choir sang several beautiful anthems with special parts taken by Miss Phyllis Slingerland, Mrs. J. A. Warren, Mr. Floyd Ketcheson and Mr. H. Slingerland. At the evening service Mrs. Wm. Gault of Belleville sang a solo number "Like as a Father."

Owing to the wartime restrictions on the purchase of sugar and tea it was decided not to have a fowl supper this year. The members are being asked for a donation in lieu of the basket of good things.

REPLIES TO HOUSE

ed another member that harmony in Allied war planning was "our constant aim and there certainly is no lack of machinery to achieve it."

Mr. Churchill said the "success of the initial landings in Madagascar and the fact that they were accomplished with only the lightest casualties to both sides was due in a great measure to the efficiency of the Royal Navy and the speed with which they ferried the troops onto the beaches at the right time".

The Prime Minister made his statement on the Madagascar campaign, the latest phase of which started Sept. 10 with landings on the West Coast, as the house reconvened after being in adjournment since Sept. 11.

The Prime Minister reviewed the progress southward of the King's African rifles against "slight opposition" and said the French Governor-General, Armand Annet, broadcast an appeal for an Armistice Sept. 16 and that his representatives were received at Majunga the following day.

Mr. Churchill said the occupation of Tananarive was greeted by the populace "with strong demonstrations of good will and even enthusiasm".

"Operations against the remaining Vichy French forces south of the capital are proceeding", he said.

The Prime Minister said it is "all quiet" now in the northern part of the island.

Asked about the extent of Vichy French resistance to British forces generally, he said it was "mainly symbolic".

Question Raised by Members

The question was raised by T. O. M. Driberg who implied that the alleged discrimination was introduced by the Americans themselves.

Replying, Mr. Churchill said "the question certainly is unfortunate and I am hopeful that without any action on my part the points of view of all concerned will be mutually understood and respected."

Driberg then argued it was wiser to air the problem of discrimination and Emanuel Shinwell, Labor, commented that Brendan Bracken, Minister of Information, publicly had opposed discrimination.

"This is not the point of merit," Mr. Churchill replied to this. "It was on a point of representation being made."

Driberg, an Independent who writes a column in The Daily Express under the name of William Hickey, brought the matter up with a request to Mr. Churchill to make friendly representation to American authorities asking them to instruct their men that the color bar is not the custom in Britain and that its non-observance by Britons should "be regarded with equanimity."

William Gallacher, only Communist member of Commons, joined the discussion, saying he had received a copy of a letter sent to Mr. Churchill by a number of soldiers stating an officer had given them a lecture "advising them of the necessity of discrimination in connection with Negroes in London."

The Commons discussion followed by one day the announcement that Brig.-Gen. Benjamin Davis, only Negro general officer in the United States army, had arrived in Britain.

WELL-KNOWN CITIZENS JOIN RESERVE UNITS

From now on they will be known as Private Harry Rollins, Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) and 2nd Lieutenant R. D. Arnott, 34th Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery.

For this week these two prominent citizens signed their names on the dotted line and are now members of the city Reserve Army units.

Thus a member of the Belleville City Council and the member for Hastings West in the Ontario Government have shown a fine example in doing an additional duty in furtherance of the war effort.

For two nights a week they will forego civic and legal duties and take their places with other members of the reserve army units now in training here.

Army life will be new to both of them. But the conviction that they are doing something for the nation in its hour of emergency will tend to offset any difficulties experienced at the hands of the traditional sergeant-majors.

Recruiting is going on apace at the Armouries where the Argylls, the Artillery and the Belleville Company of the Canadian Women's Service Force have their headquarters.

Many men are needed and officers of all units are issuing a special appeal to all eligible people to join one of these units immediately.

CANADIANS WARNED OF INCREASING "HARDSHIPS"

Must Organize People for Total War Says Little

National Plan Of Action Pictures Only Producers And Fighters in Canada

MUCH LABOR WASTE

Seigniory Club, Que., Sept. 30 — (CP)—Warning of increasing "inconvenience," "dislocation", and "hardship," Elliott M. Little, Director of National Selective Service, said in an address today that "from now on every Canadian must fit himself into a national plan of action. . . which envisages only fighters and producers."

"There has been an inexcusable waste of manpower in this country through needless labor turnover," he said in an address prepared for delivery to the annual convention of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Excessive Absenteeism

"There has been an excessive amount of absenteeism on the part of many workers," he added, outlining means by which these problems would be overcome, "through failure on their part to realize what effect their absence from work may have on the outcome of this war."

National Selective Service was the machinery through which Canada proposed to organize all the people in the country for one purpose—that of total war, Mr. Little said.

"Total war means that all the people—not just a few—and all the things—not just a few—must be pitted against the emergency."

Stressing "the growing acuteness of Canada's manpower situation," he estimated Canadian industry could "usefully absorb at this moment" an additional 100,000 workers. National Selective Service officers throughout the country had received applications for that many workers which they were unable to provide.

The National Selective Service director listed Canada's manpower needs in particular industries.

At Sudbury, Ont., he said, a blast furnace, producing copper and nickel, had been forced to close down because of lack of men.

The coal mining industry was producing less coal than Canada is using and considerably less than the expected demand. "We are actually living on our coal storage reserves," Mr. Little warned.

Production of airplane spruce in British Columbia, was "considerably below requirements" due to lack of men.

The base metal mines, producing copper vital to the war effort, are undermanned, with tonnage in some instances down to half of what it was two years ago.

Steel plants in the Niagara Peninsula are below potential production due to shortage of men.

Farm Labor Shortage

Finally—"our farmers, producing the food without which neither our armed forces nor our munitions workers could continue, are doggedly trying to maintain and even expand production—with far less than adequate help."

These conditions could not be permitted to continue as long as Canada had hundreds of thousands of people engaged in jobs or industries which have little or no relation to the outcome of the war.

Thus curtailment of less essential industry was necessary even though two other methods of solving the problem were being employed — the introduction of women into war work and increased efficiency on the part of present essential industries.

"More and more people will be inconvenienced through the dislocation occasioned by this war. There will be some hardship. Some will be hurt more than others. There cannot be equal sacrifice or hardship in wartime," Mr. Little said.

Gordon Outlines Program for Cutting Non-Essential Production to Minimum

MORE RATIONING

Seigniory Club, Que., Sept. 30.—(CP)—Manpower demands of Canada's armed forces and war industries must be met by a planned and rigid control exercised in the light of the national interest, Donald Gordon, chairman of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, said in a speech here today.

In an address prepared for delivery to the annual convention of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Gordon said that "selfish consideration of immediate or long-term advantage cannot be permitted to influence decisions.

"This is organization for total war", the Prices Board chairman declared in outlining plans for the curtailment of unessential industries, "and the casualties involved are the price for victory".

Highlights of the program for curtailing less-essential industries would be rationing of essential goods, standardization of products, adjustments in quality and elimination of waste.

The curtailment would involve the complete elimination of non-essential production, and the cutting of essential production to the minimum requirements to sustain the Dominion's home front, Mr. Gordon said.

Features of Program

While full details of the curtailment program could not yet be made public, the questions involved would include:

1.—Rationing of essential goods. The government would be assisted in this problem by local rationing boards now being organized in municipalities to apply the principles and policy to be decided by the Board with regard to specific commodities.

("I should like to emphasize that hoarding of supplies and overbuying will be regarded as serious offences.")

2.—Standardization of products, prohibition of new style lines and elimination of waste in varieties of goods.

("Consumer choice can no longer be permitted to dictate the production of most supplies.")

3.— Adjustments of quality, through use of substitute materials.

'LINE OF FUEHRER' AT RZHEV BROKEN BY HEAVY BLOWS

Counter-Blows Take Toll of Hitler's Forces From Mozdok To Leningrad

HOLD AT STALINGRAD

By EDDY GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Sept. 30 (AP)—Stalingrad's weary garrison battled off German tanks and motorized infantry in their 37th day of siege today and, while fresh hundreds fell within the ruined city, it was announced that two Nazi divisions had been routed by relief attacks against the invasion flank.

A hardened defence and counter-attacks took their toll of Hitler's forces from Leningrad to Mozdok.

Field reports declared the Red Army's revived Kalinin front offensive, bolstered by bombing of several German air bases, had smashed through defences northwest of Rzhev which the invaders called "the line of the Fuehrer".

In addition to the rout of two German divisions in the Don-Volga corridor fighting northwest of Stalingrad, the Russians said a third enemy division—the Rumanian 12th Mountain infantry—had been battered back by Red Marines in the battle for the Caucasian Black Sea coast south of Novorossisk.

Repulse of enemy attacks was noted in the Mozdok area.

A Red Star dispatch said the immediate objective of the Germans attacking Stalingrad is control of a northwest industrial sector, but declared they had been repulsed after wedging into a Workers' Settlement Monday.

Conditions Remain Serious

"Conditions in the city remain serious", the Army newspaper said. "The Germans have big losses, but the attacks do not lessen and violence grows".

The Press published photographs of Stalingrad. The views resembled a battered and burned section of the City of London after the big fire raids. (The writer formerly was stationed in London). Corners of buildings stood in the air like charred chimneys.

Soviet Information Bureau communiques told of the death of more than 1,500 Germans in vain efforts to widen the northwestern penetration yesterday. A defence mortar detachment was said to have wiped out 800 more. Red artillery-

Air Transport Auxiliary Delivers 100,000 Planes in Three Years of War

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Sept. 30 (CP)—Air transport auxiliary, the vast pool of civilian men and women who ferry aircraft from factory to airfield halfway around the world, celebrated its third anniversary with a record of more than 100,000 planes delivered and 225,000 hours flown, equivalent to 30,000,000 miles.

The A.T.A., unofficially designated as "Anywhere to anywhere," had delivered aircraft to and from North America, Africa, the Middle East and Malta. About 117 types of machines have been handled by the organization, from the smallest trainer to the greatest bomber. A quarter of the pilots are qualified to fly them all.

Women pilots from a tenth of the total and many are capable of flying fighters and twin-motor bombers.

Almost 100 of the company, including some women, have lost their lives.

The total of 100,000 in the course of three years represents an average of more than 100 aircraft for every working day. On that reckoning the daily traffic of A.T.A. has been the equivalent of many a channel sweep. During the critical times in France the day's work of certain ferry pilots involved much danger, for they were delivering machines in the front line and some of them got out of the airdromes only just in time to avoid capture.

Mixture of All Sorts

Ferry pilots are a mixture of all types. Among them are old commercial pilots, former circus and joy-riding pilots, stunt fliers who broke records and ought to have broken their necks on pioneering flights, old R.A.F. pilots, and a great body of men and women who never until now had won any particular distinction in flying. But this last class gave the ferry system its start and imbued it with its own special character. They were the devotees, gathered together by Commodore Gerrard D'Erlanger from the clubs and civil flying schools to do work which the small air force of 1939 could not spare pilots to do.

Has Own Flying School

There is a focal point at the headquarters of one of the groups of R.A.F. maintenance command. Into that office daily come two sets of reports. The aircraft manufacturers announce that they have certain aircraft available for delivery on the morrow. The R.A.F. units declare they need such and such aircraft and request that they be delivered to them on the morrow. The group passes on that information to the pools nearest the factories concerned, making allowance for the possibility of sending pilots on from one destination to another so that they ferry successive aircraft and arrive ultimately somewhere near home.

A.T.A now has its own flying school for the training of pilots and undertakes the work of "converting" its pilots to the more advanced

Churchill Says Unexpected Strength of Defence Blocks Cause of Dieppe Casualties

London, Sept. 30 —(CP)— The Canadian-led invasion test at Dieppe met tank barriers of unforseen strength and the attackers' losses were "very nearly half the total" of the troops involved, Prime Minister Churchill said in the House of Commons today.

The Prime Minister declined to give figures on the strength of participating forces in addition to the Canadians, who, forming the bulk of the expedition, suffered 3,350 casualties out of 5,000 officers and men taking part.

As at the first meeting of the reconvened House yesterday, when the Prime Minister emphasized the undesirability of speculation on the time and place of a second front, his reports were in answer to a battery of questioners.

He is expected shortly, however, to make a more thorough report on the war situation.

For the third time since the war began, the House received a government bill for a one-year extension of its own life. Thus the government rejected repeated demands from critics of the present Commons for a general election.

Elected in 1935

Most of the members were elected in 1935 for the normal term of five years but have sat on under a political truce aimed at keeping the parties' numerical representation fixed for the duration.

Mr. Churchill said that tanks were held up by the "altogether unexpected strength" of defence blocks placed at the ends of Dieppe's streets by the Germans.

It had not been anticipated, he added, that the barriers could not be destroyed by British guns.

Making a statement in response to questions, Mr. Churchill said the military force commander at Dieppe (Maj.-Gen. J. H. Roberts, Canadian Army) had described the support given by the air force for the operations there as "faultless."

The air force fought the greatest air battle of all time over the coastal town, destroying nearly 100 German planes for certain and

P.M. DEWAN URGES DRESSED BEEF PRICE CEILINGS

Minister of Agriculture Says it Would Stimulate Production

SPEAKS AT MITCHELL

Mitchell, Ont., Sept. 30 —(CP)—Hon. P.M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, today said "In my opinion the answer to the beef situation is adequate dressed beef ceilings—prices that will encourage beef cattle men and stimulate production," in an address prepared for delivery at the opening of the Mitchell Fair.

"Recently restrictions have been placed on shipments to the United States," he continued. "We have not been keeping faith with the U.S. quota agreement. We should remember that we shall not always be at war. We shall not always experience domestic demands at present high levels."

Mr. Dewan said for this reason "it is the part of wisdom to retain wider markets."

"More attractive prices—it will require only a few cents—and less seasonal variation in prices may well bring forth sufficient volume to fill home demands and meet the U. S. quota as well."

Against Ceiling on Live Animals

He declared he believed "it would be a great mistake to impose ceiling prices on live animals as was hinted by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board a few days ago."

"In practice, it would require a multitude of appraisers, and everyone will agree that increase in the number of public officials must be avoided in every way possible."

Mr. Dewan said his suggestion of increasing the price of dressed beef might be taken as "no way to avoid inflation."

"But it is a fact that wage earners have been receiving a cost-of-living bonus. Why should not the farmer receive more as his costs of production advance—and this they have done within the past year."

Ralston, Howe Reach Britain

London, Sept 30—(CP CABLE)—Col. J. L. Ralston, Canadian Minister of National Defence, and Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Munitions and Supply, have arrived in Britain, it was announced today.

Ottawa, Sept. 30—(CP)—Departure of Defence Minister Ralston and Munitions Minster Howe for Britain was made in greatest secrecy and for all but a very few high officials their arrival in Britain today came as a surprise.

LITTLE FORECASTS BROADENING OF CALL-UP GROUPS

Possibility Youth of 18 and 19 and Married Men Will be Called

NEED FOR MORE MEN

Montreal, Sept. 30 — (CP) — Speculation on Canada's tightening manpower situation was heightened today by a statement from Elliott M. Little, director of national selective service, that there was a "distinct possibility" that 18 and 19-year old youths and married men would be called up for compulsory military training.

Mr. Little made his statement in an interview here yesterday and added that the present supplies of manpower for the Dominion's armed forces are far from exhausted, however.

But his suggestion of an extension of the call-up age limits brought to the fore speculation current for some time across the Dominion, especially since announcement of the heavy casualties suffered at Dieppe.

Predictions from unofficial circles in Ottawa, for instance, have been that army manpower requisitions may be increased.

There was a decrease in the army's requirements in September, when 20,000 men were called against 25,000 in July, but this was not interpreted as an indication that there would be any decrease in the army's needs.

Mr. Little's statement came a short time after a similar disclosure by war services minister Thorson, who said it would become necessary in the near future to call 19-year-olds. It is expected that an additional 100,000 would be made available for compulsory army service by such an extension.

The call-up age limits were widened in July to make single men and childless widowers of 20 to 40 liable for service. Until that time, the regulations had applied to men aged from 21 to 35.

EDITORS MEET CHURCHILL

JAPANESE FORCED TO HURRY RETREAT IN NEW GUINEA

Allied Fighters Recapture Ridge, And Pursue Japs Toward Nauro

EQUIPMENT SEIZED

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Sept. 30 (CP)—Allied mountain troops, sifting through the difficult jungle and mountain country of the Owen Stanley range, have captured the first objective of their New Guinea offensive, sent the Japanese into a hurried northward retreat and seized quantities of abandoned equipment, a communique said today.

Consolidating their positions on Ioribaiwa Ridge, which was retaken from the enemy, the Allied troops are pursuing the Japanese toward Nauro, 10 miles north of the ridge, where the Japanese have established new positions.

With the conquest of Ioribaiwa Ridge, which the Japanese had prepared for defence with barricades and field trenches, the Allies have started the difficult and perilous task of driving the enemy back over the 88-mile trail to Buna along which he advanced to threaten the Allied advance base at Port Moresby.

"Our advance continues," a communique said.

It is expected that strong resistance will be encountered near Nauro village and the creek at the base of the next mountain ridge north of Ioribaiwa.

The fact the Japanese abandoned many supplies, a military spokesman said, could not be taken as an indication they are in rout.

Rear Positions Pounded

Flank attacks by Australian troops presumably forced the Japanese to leave precipitately without a chance of wrestling equipment and supplies over the difficult terrain, he said.

Hitler Breaks 5 Months' Silence

Berlin, (From German Broadcasts), Sept. 30 — (AP) — Hitler told the German people today that "We believe that we shall continue to defeat our enemies until final victory is ours."

He assured the German nation that Stalingrad is bound to fall.

Hitler's address, his customary winter relief campaign speech to the Nazi party, was made in the packed Sportspalast and broke a five-months' silence.

(On the same occasion last Oct. 4, Hitler told the Nazis that "now it can be declared that the enemy already is broken and will never rise again."

Erwin Rommel and 10,000 German wounded assembled to hear Hitler. Cheers greeted Rommel. (This was the first disclosure that Hitler's desert commander was not with his army in North Africa.)

Missed Chance To Cripple Japs' Drive To Java in Luzon Battle Says Admiral

Philadelphia, Sept. 30 — (AP) — Admiral Thomas C. Hart, former Commander of Allied Naval Forces in the western Pacific, believes that United States army air fighters failed in the first day of the battle over Luzon and thus missed a chance to cripple Japan's drive to Java.

Hart, in an article in the Oct. 3 issue of the Saturday Evening Post, released today, also said that "fighters based on Oahu airdromes missed their big chance" during the attack on Pearl Harbor.

The navy "erred" at Pearl Harbor, he added, "in presenting so many targets in such small space, under the tense conditions prevailing in early December"

The former commander of the United States Asiatic fleet, now a member of the navy's policy-making general board, said the Japanese had to conquer Luzon as the first step toward Java because it was the strongest island in the Philippines and "the Japs could not leave this power unimpaired on their flanks."

"This was the place and the time to have beaten our enemy in the air," he wrote. "That first day or so was our chance in the air, and we missed it. From there onward it was backward all the way, on the sea, on the land, under the sea and over both."

Discussing the Pearl Harbor attack, he said:-

". . .It is to be expected that the supposedly best defensive weapon, the fighter plane, will interfere with such an attack and at least punish it severely. The fighters which were based on Oahu's airdromes missed their big chance. . ."

"No one should have given high valuation to such old and very slow capital ships" as were lost in the raid, he added, but "the losses in large planes. . .were very serious. . .

"When it comes to assessing fault for Pearl Harbor, whose fault was it that fifth columnists were able to send out communications with such freedom?"

He wrote that American submarines are inflicting heavy losses on the Japanese in the Pacific and commented, "not so much can be said about. . .it."

Navy Minister Declares 2 Others Probably Sunk

Charlottetown And Raccoon Sunk in St. Lawrence River Says Macdonald

48,000 IN NAVY

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Sept. 30 — (CP) — Ships of the Royal Canadian Navy "this summer" have sunk four enemy U-boats, probably sunk two others, and taken part in "many other promising attacks," Navy Minister Macdonald told a press conference today.

The four submarines known to have been sunk include the one destroyed by the Canadian destroyer Assiniboine in a spectacular action described a little over a week ago in a lengthy press release from naval service headquarters.

The minister also said:

The Royal Canadian Navy now has a strength of nearly 500 ships and about 48,000 men, including 1,100 officers and men serving with the Royal Navy.

Occurred in St. Lawrence

The recent sinkings by enemy action of the patrol vessel Raccoon and the corvette Charlottetown occurred in the Gulf of St. Lawrence;

There has been no confirmation of rumors that submarine parties have made a landing anywhere on the Canadian coast.

One third of the convoy work between Canada and Europe is being borne by the Royal Canadian Navy.

"This summer the Royal Canadian Navy has sunk four U-boats, two are probably sunk and there have been many other promising attacks," said Mr. Macdonald.

He gave no details of the sinkings except to say that they include the exploit of the destroyer Assiniboine in sinking a submarine and capturing survivors of its crew.

Ordinarily the navy does not announce sinkings of enemy vessels until three months after the incident occurs in order to keep information from the enemy, he said.

A departure in this rule as made in the case of the Assiniboine because it was certain the Germans had already received the information. The prisoners were taken to a port in the United States and seen there by the Swiss consul, representing the protecting power for German interest in the United States. The Swiss consul would report the name of the prisoners to Germany and the Germans would know which submarine they were from.

Crew Ejected From Conning Tower As U-Boat Sinks

London, Sept. 30. (CP)— One more Nazi submarine rested today on the bottom of the Bay of Biscay, its day of preying on United Nations' shipping at an end, thanks to the work of two British planes which accomplished what the Air Ministry News Service called "one of the most spectacular U-boat kills of the war".

Included in the crew of one plane was FO. D. Wright of Edmonton, Alta., navigator of a bomber command aircraft.

A coastal command plane sighting the sub, straddled it with bombs, disabling it. The bomber command plane then attacked the undersea craft, picking off the gun crew.

Additional bombs were dropped, sinking the sub. As it sank, air from within the hull poured from the conning tower like a geyser, ejecting the crew into the water.

Men of 19 Years, Aliens Called Up

Ottawa, Sept. 30 (CP)—Men of 19 years of age and aliens who are within all callable age groups are made liable for compulsory military service in a proclamation announced today by War Services Minister Thorson.

The regulations are also extended to make liable for call men who have been divorced or judicially separated since July 15, 1940, or who have become childless widowers since that date.

These extensions of the scope of the calls issued under the National Resources Mobilization Act of 1940 will tap a group of about 107,000 men in the 19-year-old class and about 30,000 aliens in the various age groups subject to call.

The number of men actually obtained however, will be lower since some will be found medically unfit and many will be already in the armed forces by the voluntary enlistment route.

The calling of aliens to the colors puts Canada's compulsory service law in line with that of the United States.

Intention to call aliens for military service was announced in the House of Commons last spring but it was explained at that time that the international angle of such action would take considerable time to straighten out.

The 20-year-old class was included in the callable age groups on July 7 and a further extension has been anticipated for some time. The choice was between calling 19-year-old men or married men — and the decision was to take the 19-year-olds first. The top limit of the callable age group is 40.

As a result of today's extension all men who were unmarried or widowers without children July 15, 1940, and who were born between the years 1902 and 1923 inclusive, are liable to compulsory service in Canada or Canadian territorial waters.

The men born in 1923 will not be called until they reach the age of 19. Enemy aliens resident in Canada are not subject to the call under the new extension which brings non-British subjects within the scope of the compulsory service plan for the first time. Thus, the alien group will include non-British subjects who are citizens of neutral or Allied nations.

CYCLIST KNOCKED FROM BIKE BY CAR

Riding his bicycle from behind the city bus at the intersection of West Moira and Yeomans Street, Bert McCaw, 27 Wallbridge Street, was knocked to the pavement by a motor car driven by J. B. Black, 15 Alexander Street on Tuesday. The cyclist sustained lacerations on the back of his head and minor bruises. Mr. Black assured P.C. Taylor, who investigated, that he was proceeding westerly on Moira Street when the youthful cyclist rode out from behind the bus, which had stopped to take on passengers, giving Mr. Black no opportunity to avoid the collision. The front wheel of the motor car passed over both bicycle wheels damaging them to such an extent it was impossible to ride the cycle.

SET OF HARROWS REPORTED STOLEN

Provincial Police today are investigating the theft of a set of harrows reported stolen from the farm of William Maines, near Stirling. The harrows had been placed beneath a haystack in order to protect them from the weather, but on Tuesday when Mr. Maines went for his harrows the complete set was found to be missing. Provincial Constables McKenzie and Kellogg investigated.

SMUDGE POTS USED IN DISTRICT ORCHARDS

Smudge pots burned in orchards of the district Tuesday in a defensive measure against an expected onslaught of frost.

Orchards lining the Belleville-Napanee highway gleamed with the fires, and heavy rolling smoke of the smudges rose in dark curling clouds over the tree-tops.

The weather man, however, outguessed the orchardists, and temperatures rose during the night, with the sky threatening rain during the early morning hours.

Frost, however, has got in its destructive work in the fields of the district. Tomato patches are now blackened areas shrivelled vines, and corn is frost-tipped in many instances.

Graduation Exercises Held for Nurses

Picton, Sept. 30 — The successful advance in the work for prevention of or control of diseases, was stressed by Dr. Ronald Burr of the staff of Kingston General Hospital, speaking at the graduation exercises of Prince Edward County hospital here last night. Ontario now has the lowest death rate from tuberculosis in Canada. Success attending control measures has made it seem worthwhile to X-ray every Canadian soldier joining the army. Control of other diseases has also made splendid progress, Dr. Burr stated. He paid tribute to nurses as liaison officers between doctor and patient.

There were three graduates, Miss Greta Marvin, Wellington; Miss Margaret Maxwell, Ottawa, and Miss Nora Reilly, Picton.

E. B. Purtelle, chairman of the hospital board, presided, F. E. Walden provided organ music, Rev. J. B. Creeggan gave the invocation, S. G. Lockyer contributed a cornet solo, Rev. W. H. Wallace presented the Florence Nightingale pledges to the graduates, Mrs. Harold Thompson gave a vocal solo, while Miss Margaret McNeill, Reg. N., superintendent of the hospital, presented the pins and diplomas.

Other presentations included: — operating room technique prize, given by Dr. C. A. Publow, presented by Judge E. H. McLean to Miss Marvin; prize for proficiency in nursing care of mothers and babies, given by Dr. J. H. Walmsley, presented by S/Ldr. Bergin to Miss Reilly; prize for highest marks in theory for three years training, given by Pr. Edward County hospital, won by Miss Maxwell, presented by Dr. D. S. Lighthall; prize for general proficiency, given by the I.O.D.E., won by Miss Reilly, presented by Mrs. W. G. Grothier.

Prizes won by intermediate class were highest marks in obstetrics, given by Dr. D. S. Lighthall, won by Miss Patricia Juniper, Picton, now affiliated with Ottawa Civic hospital; highest marks for two years, given by Dr. K. McQueen, won by Miss Juniper; highest marks in gynaecology, given by Dr. Lighthall, won by Miss Doris Rowe, now affiliated with Ottawa hospital.

Prizes won by junior class were, highest marks in bacteriology, given by Dr. C. A. Brownson, won by Miss Arlie Hughes, presented by Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon; highest marks in first year, given by Dr. J. H. Cryan, won by Miss Hughes, presented by Mrs. C. H. McGibbon.

Following the exercises, a reception was held for the nurses and their friends at the Nurses' Residence, where a profusion of flowers and other gifts were presented the graduates.

Small Boy Escapes Serious Injury When Knocked Down by Car

Trenton, Sept. 30 (Special)—Two-year-old Richard Cooke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Cooke, 207 Front Street, suffered severe skin abrasions on Tuesday when knocked to the pavement by a car owned and driven by Claude Westlake, Frankford.

Mr. Westlake was driving north on Front Street at the time and when in front of McNab's terrace, the child ran directly in front of the car and was knocked down by the left front fender. Dr. Bryne was called and attended the lad and he was found to have no apparent injuries except skin abrasions.

Police Court

Police court was presided over on Tuesday by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd with County Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., prosecuting.

Gerald Mainprize was charged with being in possession of a dangerous weapon, to wit a hunting knife, for purposes dangerous to public peace and was given two years' suspended sentence and ordered to make restitution and pay the costs of the court. He was also ordered to sign over $10 per month of his army pay to his mother. Mainprize ran amuck with the hunting knife in a local restaurant recently threatening the occupants as well as breaking a plate glass door and doing other damage.

N. Murphy for consuming liquor in an unlawful place paid $10 and costs as did James O'Brien for being intoxicated.

Albert Brooks charged with stealing a bicycle was given suspended sentence for two years.

Tom Smith on a charge of vagrancy, being able to work and thereby support himself and refusing or neglecting to do so, was given suspended sentence of six months on terms that he would support himself and report to the nearest Government employment office immediately.

CHURCHILL

possibly bringing down many more, Mr. Churchill said.

No Inconsistency

James Henderson Stewart asked the Prime Minister to reconcile his announcement of Sept. 8, that most of the Dieppe force returned and Col. J. L. Ralston's statement that of 5,000 Canadians participating there were 3,350 casualties, including 2,717 killed or missing.

"In my statement on Sept. 8," Mr. Churchill answered, "I was referring to the assaulting forces as a whole, the greater part of whom were, in fact, brought back by the Royal Navy.

"There is no inconsistency in this with the statement of the Canadian Minister of National Defence who was referring only to casualties among Canadian troops who took part".

He declined to give the Germans the benefit of precise figures but said that the losses "were very heavy and went up to nearly half of the total".

(In his earlier reference to "the assaulting forces as a whole", Mr. Churchill presumably included naval forces as fell as all land forces besides the Canadians in the storming of the Dieppe Beach.)

Noting that the tanks which attacked at Dieppe were "Churchills", a British type named for him, the Prime Minister declared in response to Emanual Shinwell, Labor Member for Seaham that they showed no lack of "distinction" but were being tested constantly for improvements.

Mounts Six-Pounder Guns

The Churchill, heaviest and newest tank which Britain has announced having in operation, mounts a six-pounder gun.

Mr. Churchill told the House that the government of Northern Ireland is satisfied that the situation created by Irish Republican Army outbreaks is "well in hand".

The Prime Minister rejected the suggestion of Sir Ronald Ross that he establish an "effective boundary under military control between Ulster and Eire" in view of what the Member called armed raids from neutral territory and "the ease with which enemy agents could at present get information as to British and United States forces in Northern Ireland".

Effective measures already have been taken, Mr. Churchill declared.

Lt.-Col. A. B. Gribble Outlines History of the Reserve Army In Appealing for Recruits

An earnest plea for members of the Kiwanis Club to join the Reserve Army, represented here by the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) Regiment was made at the weekly luncheon on Tuesday at the Quinte Hotel by Lt.-Col. A. E. Gribble and who was introduced by his close friend Lt.-Col. P. H. (Fay) Wills. Kiwanis appreciation for the splendid address was made by Ernie Finkle, a veteran of the last war and a former member of the Regiment.

Lt.-Col. Gribble, in a most concise way, gave a detailed history of the Non-Permanent Active Militia or as now known "The Reserve Army" especially marking the part played by the old Fifteenth Regiment now known as the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) Regiment. "Although the Regiment has not been called into active service either in this war or the last, members of the regiment have distinguished themselves on many battlefields and in many wars with distinction to themselves and the regiment they came from" said the speaker. "During the last war the different regiments were numbered but in this war the regiments are named and it has not been our lot to be called up as a unit although we were close to it at one time but something happened before mobilization took place."

History of Militia

At the end of the last war continued the speaker, the militia prospered because everyone was war-minded but as time went by the war-mindedness wore off and so did the militia activity and in 1930 the militia was strugging to keep its head above water with the officers paying for their own uniforms and donating their pay to the mess fund.

In this war at the opening of hostilities, the militia played an active part and after the fall of France, there was a cry for a Reserve army. Early in 1941 the enthusiasm again wore off but with the Jap invasion and the occupation of Malaya, the Reserve Army again took its rightful place in the scheme of defence of Canada. At one time in 1940 the local regiment was up to strength but many jumped to the active service and in this respect the Regiment has sent some 450 men and 75 officers into the conflict.

Formed in 1862

"The Regiment" said Lt.-Col. Gribble "was formed in 1862 by Lt.-Col. Archibald Ponton and its members served in the Fenian Raid in 1866, the Northwest Rebellion of 1885, the South African War, the First Great War of 1914-18 and the present conflict and now it is the aim of the Regiment to bring the Reserve Army up to strength and to give those joining a working knowledge of training so that they can be better prepared to defend their homeland if necessary. Those who are eligible to join are men between the ages of 17 and 19 years and this particular class is very essential because the training this boy will get before he joins the active force will stand him in good stead in the battles, that are to come. Men between the ages of 19 and 35 with a medical category lower than "B", men, who have been granted or would be entitled to postponement of compulsory training under the Mobilization Act, single or married men between the ages of 30 and 50 with any category lower than "C".

Training Outlined

Mr. Gribble outlined the training stating that discipline and drill were the first essentials and without these no person could properly defend his home or his country. The care, cleaning and handling of revolver, rifle, and Bren, Lewis and Vickers machine guns and possibly the anti-tank rifle and the 2-inch mortar, anti-gas, map reading, signalling, visual training and judging distance, bayonet fighting, fieldcraft, first aid and field engineering.

This only requires the attendance of the man for two nights a week, stated Lt.-Col. Gribble, "and two or three hours each night. The training is as extensive as equipment will permit but it must be understood a lot of equipment is going to the active forces of our allies."

Only "A" Category Needed

He told his listeners that members would not have to go if the unit was mobilized for active service because only "A" category men would be required but if the unit was called to the coast, the member would certainly have to go because the enemy would be at the gates of the country and it would be in his interest to go to defend his homeland. The training being given is for just such an emergency. A man must know how to handle a rifle or machine gun because a weapon of this kind put in the hands of an inexperienced man would not be of as much help as a broom.

Lt.-Col. Gribble explained, "that surprise was the great tactic of battle and if we are "surprised" then we are in a difficult position but if we are prepared there can be no element of "surprise"." He praised the Kiwanis Club for the service it had rendered the community with its Blood Donor Clinic but that he would like to see the Club lead in the recruiting drive by every member becoming a recruit in the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) Regiment.

Mobile Canteen, Gift of Two Belleville Chapters, O. E. S. Will Be Presented to British Gov't

A mobile canteen, the exclusive gift of two Belleville chapters of the Order of the Eastern Star, will shortly be presented to the British Government, according to a cablegram received from the Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner to Britain by Mrs. Essie M. Nayler, district convener of the O.E.S.

The cable stated that the canteen will be ready shortly and its allocation made known to the Belleville organizations. A formal presentation will take place with high ranking Canadian officials taking part.

The canteen is the second to be presented to Britain from this district through the efforts of the O.E.S. Funds amounting to $2,462 have been raised and forwarded by the chapters here to purchase and fully equip the vehicles.

But the work of the O.E.S. chapters here has not stopped with the raising of funds for mobile canteen purposes. They have given $1,440.19 to Russian and Chinese relief societies, as well as contributing to Canadian war charity organizations. Hundreds of knitted articles and pieces of clothing have been made and collected and forwarded to the proper authorities. Boxes have been sent overseas and 120,200 cigarettes sent to members of the armed services.

Mrs. Nayler today expressed her sincere appreciation of the generous response of the residents of the city to the Tag Day appeal of the O.E.S. "Your people are to be specially commended," she said, for their fine reception of tag days. Thousands of dollars have been raised this way, and I am sure all organizations must be as grateful as we."

Belleville Chapter 55, and Minerva Chapter are the two O.E.S. organizations of the city which have done the fine work of contributing two fully equipped mobile canteens to the British Government.

FLT. SGT. FRANK ALFRED C. MACAULAY

Wooler, Sept. 30 (Special)— The news of the death of Flt. Sgt. Frank Alfred Conway Macaulay while on active service overseas, has brought much regret to friends of the family in this district. He enlisted at the beginning of the war in England where he was living at the time with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Macaulay, and at the time of his death he was a Flt. Sgt. in the R.A.F. He was twenty-one years of age and was born in Toronto. His father was well known in Wooler and district, having been born in Brighton Township. He remained in England when his son enlisted and his wife and daughters returned to Toronto.

Surviving him are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Macaulay; two sisters (twins); and numerous uncles, aunts and cousins. Mr. J. P. Macaulay of Wooler, and Mr. P. L. Macaulay of Trenton, are uncles of the deceased.

HERBERT BROWN
(West Lake, P. E. County)

Picton, Sept. 30—There passed away suddenly at his home at West Lake a well known and esteemed resident in the person of Herbert Brown. He had not previously been ill, death following a heart attack. Born May 29, 1876, in Hastings County, he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Brown. For the past 25 years he had lived in Prince Edward County. He followed farming and also conducted the popular tourist home, "Maple Haven." He was known by hundreds of summer visitors, who, along with many friends and relatives, will miss his friendly greeting and helpful acts.

Mr. Brown was a member of the United Church and of the Orange Lodge at Bloomfield. He was a lover of the outdoors and each year joined a party of deer hunters going north.

Mr. Brown is survived by his wife, formerly Florence Curtis; two children, Wallace, of West Lake and Mrs. H Boss of Kingston; two brothers, Will of Trenton and Walter of Sulphide; three sisters, Mrs. Will Christie of Sulphide, Mrs. George Gibson, Belleville, and Mrs. James Bowers, Picton; four grandchildren, Mildred and Muriel Clark, Kingston, Pauline and Eleanor Brown, West Lake.

The funeral service was held at the church of Christ, with Rev. Mr. Buttars and Rev. Cavender officiating. Interment was in Church of Christ cemetery; pallbearers being Rudolph Kleinsteuber, Harold Kleinsteuber, Manuel Deline, Sherman McQuaid, Henry Brown and Charles Kellar.

THOMAS HERBERT MOUCK

Thomasburg — The funeral of the late Mr. Herbert Mouck was attended on Saturday afternoon by many former friends from a distance as well as friends and neighbors in this immediate district where he had spent his entire lifetime.

Rev. F. C. Beazer, Rector of Christ Church was in charge and conducted a short service at the home, after which the funeral proceeded to Christ Church where he was assisted by Rev. O. S. Doggett, pastor of the United Church, who read the lesson. These two ministers had charge of the burial service in Thomasburg cemetery.

Rev. Mr. Beazer delivered a comforting message. The hymns sung were "Rock of Ages", "Unto the Hills Around do I Lift up my Longing Eyes" and "Abide With Me."

Members of Tweed Masonic Lodge of which the deceased was a life member, were also present and took part in the service.

Acting as bearers were: Messrs. Edward Carter, William Webb, Sim McCrea, Richard Graham, George Meiklejohn and Mr. Nobes.

Six members of Tweed Lodge A. F. and A. M. acted as flower bearers.

The many beautiful floral tributes bore silent testimony of the esteem in which the deceased was held.

The sympathy of the community is extended to Mrs. Mouck and all the bereaved ones.

JAMES McAVOY
(Arelee, Sask.)

James McAvoy of Arelee, Sask. passed away at his home on Thursday evening, September 17th., after a lingering illness.

The deceased, who was in his 70th year, was born near Stoco, Ontario, and went west in his early twenties. He spent three years near Brandon, Manitoba, and in 1900 moved to a ranch at Medicine Hat Alberta, where he stayed until 1908. He took up homesteading at Arelee, Sask., where he has farmed very successfully for the past thirty-four years

Funeral services were held on Saturday morning in the Roman Catholic Church at Arelee with interment taking place in the Catholic Cemetery.

Rev. Father Sexsmith celebrated the Requiem High Mass assisted by the Reverend Fathers Fitzgerald and Corbert. Father Sexsmith spoke of the [illegible] in which the deceased was held as shown by the very large attendance at the funeral. It is estimated that five hundred people were present at the service.

The deceased leaves to mourn his loss his wife, formerly Marion Murphy from Erinsville, Ontario, 3 sons, Jack, Reginald and James, and four daughters, Madeline, Marie, Teresa and Marguerite. Three children pre-deceased him. He also leaves three sisters, Mrs. William Collins, of Port Hope, Ontario, and Mrs. James O'Sullivan of Cobourg, Ontario, who were with him at the time of his death, and a third sister, Mrs. William King of Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Pall bearers were: E. L. Cowell, Michael McAvoy, Ed Guinn, M. E. Currie, Floyd Winacott and Wm. P. Smith.

The spiritual and floral offerings were many.

MR. GEORGE HENRY PEARSON
(Trenton)

Trenton, Sept. 30. (Special)—The funeral of George Henry Pearson, residence, 106 Ontario Street, Trenton, who died in the Belleville General Hospital on Saturday, Sept. 26th., took place from the Salvation Army Temple here on Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 29th. The service in the Temple and at the graveside in Mount Zion Cemetery was conducted by Capt. P. Hewitt of the Salvation Army.

The bearers were Messrs. Albert Smith, James Downs, Corp. H. Knight and Corp. H. Tomlinson, the two latter being members of the R.C.A.F.

The late Mr. Pearson was born fifty-two years ago near Mount Zion, and he was a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Pearson. His father died some time ago and his mother now lives near Wooler. He was a faithful member of the Salvation Army and was well esteemed.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Clara Smith; three daughters, Mrs. Harry Girouard, Trenton; Mrs. Floyd Sexsmith, Trenton, and Miss Grace Pearson at home; two sons, Gunners Everett and Wesley Pearson, both with the Canadian Artillery overseas; his mother; one sister, Mrs. James Downs, Frankford.

HENRY VESTERFELT
(Trenton)

Trenton, Sept. 30. (Special.)—The funeral of Henry Vesterfelt, 92 Hanna Street, Trenton, took place Monday afternoon, Sept. 28th., from the Northey Funeral Home, Trenton. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in Mount Evergreen Cemetery, was conducted by Capt. F. W. Hewitt of the Salvation Army.

The late Mr. Vesterfelt, who died on Saturday, Sept. 26th., was ill for about one year. For the past year he lived in Trenton and prior to that time he resided in Belleville and Picton. He was well esteemed.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Jessie Francis; one step-daughter, Mrs. Ethel Green, Belleville.

CAREER ENDED

Chief Justice R. A. E. Greenshields of Quebec who died suddenly in his 82nd year. His death ends a long and colorful career in judicial life. He resided in Montreal.

34th Battery, R. C. A. Offers Fine Army Training

"The right of the line; the left of the paybook, and the pride of the bloomin' army" is the familiar slogan of the British artilleryman.

In a new phase of warfare, the gunners are doing a fine job and proving themselves true to the traditions of hundreds of years service handed down by gallant gunner sires.

As in other wars artillery is playing an important part in today's epic struggle. Among the efficient trained troops in Canada's divisions overseas are some of the finest gunner soldiers in the world.

At home here in Canada, artillery units are living up to the traditions of the guns. In many parts of Canada reserve army batteries are carrying on to train men for not only home defence but for overseas service should they be called up as individual soldiers.

In this city the 34th battery, Royal Canadian Artillery is doing work along these lines. Proud of the many gallant men who have gone before them, members of the battery here are training faithfully to uphold the fine record of artillery service established by the parent battery.

Today the battery needs recruits. Its establishment calls for some 205 men and a number is needed to place the unit on a war footing.

Training is being held every Monday and Wednesday night and there is every possibility for advancement for those men who show aptitude ability and a willingness to learn. Efficient instructors are now available and special course of instruction will be starting in the immediate future.

Captain S. Sword, officer commanding the battery and his staff extend an invitation all to eligible men to join the unit, one of Belleville's own army institutions.

GORDON OUTLINES

This would "cause many difficulties in relation to established prices".

4.—Curtailment of non essential industries in favor of essential work. Essentiality must be tested "in terms of what will win the war". Production not contributing to the health and maintenance of the community must be ruled out.

Expect Much of Industry

"We shall expect each industry, after we have informed them of the curtailment necessary, to work out their own proposals", Mr. Gordon said.

"We shall profit from the United Kingdom experience in this connection which means that we will shy away from proposals involving government compensation schemes".

"We can win this struggle", Mr. Gordon concluded.

"We shall win this struggle, but when we do it will be because our efforts have been such as to deserve it".

Food for Greek People

The democratic world will be pleased when they learn that the foodstuffs are safely arrived and in the hands of the Greek people to whom they are proceeding across the Atlantic. Germany and Italy were the cause of the great tragedy which has come upon the Greek nation whose people were wantonly deprived of their food-stocks by the Germans and Italians when they overran Greece and later. It was not enough for these aggressors to invade Greece and disrupt every phase of her life and war upon this people, but the enemy characteristically seized upon the food, knowing full well that Greece was suffering not only from the wounds of war but by the desolation of her commerce. It has been left to the United Nations with some other nations not engaged in the war to arrange to ship food and medical supplies for the Greeks and with the aid of the International Red Cross, and the guarantees of the Powers of both United Nations and the Axis, the shipments are proceeding in neutral Swedish ships.

The plight of the Greeks, heroes of many a hard-fought field in the present war, and descendants of the valiant men who have all through the centuries upheld the torch of freedom of society and of the body, the mind and the intellect has been keenly felt by the Allied peoples and by Switzerland, Turkey and other nations. At this time they are doing their utmost by this noble and great people.

Nazi Claim Untrue

The German claim that three American troopships on the Atlantic had been sunk has been declared by the British Government as quite untrue. As usual the Germans in making this false statement had several thoughts in their mind, to try to disturb the democracies, to feed the Axis peoples with false propaganda, the usual fare the Germans, Italians and Japanese receive, and also to do some "fishing" or angling to try and secure some vital information in any reaction which might appear or be expressed. Wisely the Allied information has been withheld as in other cases, until the appropriate time when the Ministry of Information can say "It may now be stated that the enemy claim to have sunk troop transports in the Atlantic is quite untrue."

German communiques have been notoriously astray from the truth as might be expected from a government such as that of the Reich which has a distorted attitude towards every phase of life and has made the art of lying and exaggeration and twisting of the truth one of its weapons.

Air Pictures Tell Story

Photographs taken by British airmen of the devastation caused in German centres is undeniable evidence of the havoc which has been smiting the important cities of Germany which are associated with German industry and communications. Pictures of Mainz are a revelation of the havoc of the powerful bombs of the Royal Air Force. The areas destroyed by the burst of bombs and the fires give these cities the appearance of ghost cities which have been.

'Will Get Back' on Continent

General Sir Archibald Wavell gave the confidence he felt expression the other day when he said that while it will be a biggish problem starting on the Continent a second front "but we'll get back."

General Wavell declared at New Delhi that British and American troops would fight their way on a second front onto the European Continent.

Clement Attlee, Deputy Prime Minister and Dominions Secretary, uttered the same assurance of a second front and noted that the battlefields of the war are seen as a "unity" by the men of the United Nations who have the war plans under their decision. Attlee says these plans "cannot be affected by irresponsible people."

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

"BRAVE CANADA"

Notes the Ottawa Journal: Across the eight-column top of its editorial page of September 21 the Detroit Times prints in large type:

> You keep hearing about the gallant British, the brave Russians, the courageous Chinese—and then you see a headline that stops you cold—
> 3,350 CANADIANS KILLED, WOUNDED OR CAPTURED AT DIEPPE.
> 3,350 Canadians out of a total population of 11 million—about as many persons as live in New York and Chicago.
>
> Suppose the headline read:
> NEW YORK AND CHICAGO LOSE 3,350 IN ONE BATTLE
> You know what they say in Canada about their loss? "It was necessary to secure information vital to the United Nations."
> They lost another thousand men at Hong Kong and took it the same way.
> Thought for the day: Brave Canada!

THE AVERAGE MAN

The average man, remarks a trade journal, is five feet, ten inches in height, weighs 150 pounds, has enough fat to make seven bars of soap, enough iron to make a nail of medium size, enough sugar to fill a shaker, enough lime to whitewash a chicken coop, enough phosphorus to make 2,200 match tips, enough magnesium for a dose of magnesia, enough potassium to explode a toy cannon, water for one Saturday night bath, sulphur enough to rid a dog of fleas, and at current market rates worth about 98 cents.

THEN COMES HIS CHANCE

Armed with his trusty stiletto, says the Winnipeg Tribune, there would still be nothing for the Duce to do until someone opened a second back.

—V—

THEY HAD A SENSE OF HUMOR

Looking through the files of fifty years and more ago, we discovered that the newspaper lads of those days had a funnybone. One editor remarking on farmers' complaints that the potato crop was a failure tersely described it as "a lot of rot."

Another points out the polite gunman in a southern state who murmured "I trust I am not boring you" as he pumped six shots into his victim. He goes on to tell of the murderer who, asked by the sheriff, as he stood on the gallows, if he had a last favor to request replied, "Yes, keep your trap shut."

Tucked away in a yellowed corner is the story of the Sunday School teacher who asked one of her budding pupils, "What is a Pharisee?"

"A horse," promptly replied the B.P.

"What makes you think that?"

"Because the Lord said, 'Woe ye, Pharisees'".

Away back in 1892 the City Fathers argued long into the night, according to an editor of that era. Here is what he said about the meeting:

"The Council kept up the same old pace on Monday night and the everlasting talk, talk, talk, went on until midnight and then that personification of verbosity adjourned with half the business completed."

"And next Monday night they will meet again in another long session and probably the wind will again blow and rage till the early hours of the morning."

"What on earth some of the aldermen want to talk so much for when they have absolutely nothing to say is a puzzle beyond our solution."

How times have changed — or have they?

Small in size and unshaven of face, the man entered the labor exchange to register in his age-group.

"House painter, I suppose?" said the clerk, eyeing his paint-splashed overalls.

"No," said the little man. "I'm a dictator, but it's taking me a little while to work my way up."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

September 30th., 1922.

Mr. L. C. Pattrick of this city has returned from Hastings where he visited Mr. and Mrs. G. W. H. Pattrick.

Mr. Bruce Gillespie spent yesterday in Hastings.

Mr. James V. Lapum spent yesterday in Napanee.

Police Constable Wilbur Johnson has resigned from the Belleville police force. He will succeeded by Mr. George Stitt, who will enter upon his duties shortly.

Col. W. G. Ketcheson and wife of Sidney Township, have returned home after an extended visit to Western Canada and California.

Rabbi Fredman of Toronto will shortly visit the Jewish congregation in this city.

30 YEARS AGO

September 30th., 1912.

The new public school on Pine Street was opened this morning for the reception of pupils. Every room is filled with boys and girls and it is probable that an additional teacher will be required. A number of the members of the Board of Education were present at the opening. The principal is Ms. C. A. Wilkin.

Sergeant Arthur Harman, when passing the office of the Trenton Electric and Water Company on Bridge Street, noticed the odor of gas and upon investigation found that a gas jet was on full in the office and the place was filled with gas. He did was was necessary to set things right.

Fire occurred at the residence of Mr. W. H. Baker on Albion Street, early this morning, but was extinguished before serious damage was done. The house is owned by Mr. Timothy Daly.

40 YEARS AGO

September 30th., 1902.

Mr. James Williamson has returned to Chicago, Ill., after visiting his family here.

Mr. W. H. Gill and wife left today for their home in Wellesley, Mass., where Mr. Gill will resume his duties on the staff of Rockridge Hall.

Mr. John Sutherland, son of the late William Sutherland, has left for his home in Vancouver, B.C., after spending two weeks in his native city. He left here ten years ago to reside in British Columbia.

Messrs. H. Guss Porter, M.P., J. Parker Thomas and George Denmark, all Belleville lawyers, left today for Rochester, N.Y., on legal business.

Mr. Eric Sutherland will leave tomorrow to resume his studies at Queen's University, Kingston.

50 YEARS AGO

September 30th., 1892.

PRECISION BOMBING— HERE'S WHAT IT MEANS

The marshalling yard, in railway centre of Rouen, France, vital nerve centre of Nazi supply system, is the target for some very neat bombing of American Flying Fortress bombers. Using the U. S. secret [illegible], the bombardiers plant their deadly eggs just where they will do the most good. Bursts tell where the bombs cut rail lines, blasted freight sheds and wrecked trains.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Reflections on Exhortations

New York, Sept. 30—Within the week two high authorities of the armed forces, Ralph A. Bard, Assistant Secretary of the navy, and Lieutenant-General Brehon B. Somervell, head of the Department of Supply, have said harsh things to the United States people. They have said in so many words that we are losing the war to date, because of smug complacency and deceptive optimism.

Some editors have rushed to the defense of the American people, objecting to the use of the word "we." Everything, by the inference of such editorials, is the fault of the Administration.

I think we should accept the word "we." For in this war the inherent faults of our civilization are being ruthlessly exposed. I say our "civilization." And that is "us."

Our Administration cannot be anything except a reflection of our whole civilization. For every special task that has to be done, the Administration is taking in leading members of our society, and there is no evidence that the moment they enter the Government they become different human beings to those they were before.

A "Business" Civilization.

Our civilizaton has been a "business" civilization. Its basis has been ruthless competition for power, prestige, and success. If then we draw on this world, as we must, for our officials, why should we expect that, by some miracle, ruthless competition for power, prestige, and success suddenly evaporates from their mentalities? They carry into government all the characteristics of private life.

The means of attaining power, prestige, and success in private life has been to build up the personal sphere by smartness, shrewdness, salemanship, and the creation of pressure blocks and alliances for the same purposes. Our civilization has been in a constant state of war, of one corporation against another, one product against another, one labor group against another, and all corporations and workers against each other.

Translated into government, this means the fight of one branch of the armed services against the other, the fight of one agency against the other, inside every agency the fight of one department against the other, each resorting to pressures and alliances to try to widen its power, and each trying to "sell" itself by salesmanship methods.

Now if Mr. Bard and General Somervell complain about complacency and optimism, they are only seeing the results of a generation of supersalesmanship.

Extravagant Demands.

We have been "sold" a lot of false ideas. We have, for instance, been sold a ridiculous concept of economies. Our "business" economy has been based on the rapid turnover of quickly obsolescent goods in order to promote the heaviest bulk of sales and the rapid circulation of money. For a generation we have been encouraged to buy what we don't need and throw away what is still good. Wastefulness has been promoted as though it were moral virtue.

The whole system of "promotion" has created the most extravagant demands in every field of life, and the fulfilment of those extravagant demands has been called "the American standard of living." We, therefore, have a population which thinks that without silk stockings and permanent waves love will vanish from the universe; that without an electric refrigerator, our children will get ptomaine poisoning; that unless we drink a glass of orange juice every morning, eat meat two green vegetablees, one starchy vegetable, and a dessert at least once a day and probably twice, with some vitamin pill snacks in between we will suffer from malnutrition and be unable to fulfil normal human functions.

The whole promotion tactic has been based on instilling fears and then suggesting remedies. Fears that our teeth will fall out; fears that our neighbors will despise us; fears that our children will suffer; fears that no one will employ us—unless. Unless what? Unless we spend more than we have, or more than we should.

No Overnight Reform.

Now, we cannot change mental habits overnight. Neither Mr. Bard, nor General Somervell, nor I—who, the Lord knows, have fought a long fight on this subject—can change such mental orientations with words.

The world is being given a shellacking by Japs who live on a handful of rice and a little fish; by exactly that generation of Germans who were undernourished in their childhood; and is being most heroically defended by the Russians, who for twenty years have sacrificed consumers' goods in order to build a great industry.

We have been systematically taught to believe that luxuries are necessaries, and for the procuring of these luxuries, which we call "a standard of living," we have sacrificed the standards of life. And we have made our civilization anarchic, false and tawdry, cherishing success instead of achievement, publicity instead of solid fame; spending power instead of national strength and wealth; leisure instead of creative work; sports instead of exercise; color in the home instead of the home; glamour instead of love; tolerance with conviction; credulity without faith; pacifism without peace.

Now the war brings into the open the truth about our civilization — and the best thing we can do is to confront this truth — and change.

If we don't confront the truth it will be shoved down our throats.

WASHOUTS IN BRENNER PASS FLOOD DAMAGE IN N. ITALY

Berne, Switzerland, Sept 30 (AP) Washouts along the Brenner Railway line will interrupt traffic from Germany to Italy for several days and floods have caused extensive damage in Central and Northern Italy, the Swiss Telegraph Agency reported today from Milan.

Five bridges along the line were swept away by swollen rivers, dispatches said. Numerous houses were destroyed.

BLUE JEANS AND DENIM

It is surprising how many fabrics in common use took their names directly or indirectly from places where they were first manufactured.

Take, for example, "jeans," the twilled cotton fabric widely used in making overalls. This homely, old-fashioned-sounding name suggests that it may be of native American origin, but the authorities believe it is a corruption of an Old French form of Genoa, the Italian city, where such cloth was first made.

When you dig down into your blue jeans you are really digging down into your Genoas. James Douglas Williams, a famous Democratic governor of Indiana, was known as "Blue Jeans" because he was a farmer and always wore home-made blue jeans.

Centuries ago the natives of Calicut, a city on the southwestern coast of India, produced a simple variety of cotton fabric on such a large scale that the name of the city modified to Calico became the name of the product.

Fatigue clothes called "dungarees" by our sailors, received their name from Dungri, a suburb of Bombay, where a coarse kind of blue cotton cloth was first manufactured.

A similar coarse cotton drilling used in overalls, cushions, wall hangings and carpets is called "denim," which is from "serge de Nimes," serge of Nimes, the latter being a manufacturing town in France.

Muslin is from Mosul in Mesopotamia, where it was first made. The Italian name Mussolini originated from the fact that the founders were muslin merchants.

Damask arose from Damascus in Syria, once the manufacturing centre of such fabric.

Worsted, often pronounced "woosed," comes from Worstead, a town in Norfolkshire, England, where in the 14th century Flemish weavers made a fine fabric of firmly twisted yarn spun of long-staple wool combed to lay the fibres parallel.

Fez, the skullcap formerly worn by Turkish men, was suggested by the fact that the felt of wool used in making it was colored with a red dye obtained in the vicinity of Fez in Morocco.

A brindle or striped cat was called Tabby from Attabieh, a quarter of Bagdad, noted for its manufacture of a rich-colored watered or moire silk.

Lisle, the name of a lace, thread and fabric, is merely an old spelling of Lille in France.

Three Drowned When Canoe Hits Stump, Overturns

Maniwaki, Que., Sept. 30 —(CP) —Thrown from their canoe when it struck a stump during a storm on Baskatong Lake, 38 miles north of here, two United States sportsmen and one of their two Indian guides, were drowned last week, according to word reaching here.

The victims were:—

James Ward and Harry Ward, brothers, of Delhi, N.Y., both aged about 60 years.

Joe Tolley, 35, Indian guide of Baskatong Point, father of seven children.

Second Guide Survives

Sole survivor of the tragedy was Pierre Carle, 40, a second guide on the party, who struggled for three hours before reaching a small island. He was rescued two days later—last Friday—and now is being treated in Maniwaki hospital for exposure.

The men were returning to the camp of Fred Paquette at Baskatong Point, their headquarters on a moose hunting trip, travelling in a canoe equipped with a small outboard motor. About four miles from the point the waters became choppy. In the section of the lake through which they were travelling there were a number of stumps.

The canoe struck one of them and overturned. The Ward brothers managed to grab a gasoline can which was thrown close by them while Carle reached a five-gallon can. Tolley disappeared immediately.

Tried to Swim Distance

Carle knew there was an island within a few miles and partly supported by the can, tried to swim the distance. By shouting he was able to guide the Ward brothers in the right direction.

Three hours later, Carle made shore, still guiding the Wards by shouting. They were answering him and appeared to be only a short distance off, but soon the shouting died away as the men sank.

Carle remained on the island through the night and next day found a log on which he paddled his way slowly from one small island to another. By Friday noon he reached an island only a short distance from Baskatong Point and his shouts for help were heard on shore.

Bodies of James Ward and Tolley were found Monday and yesterday the search was continuing for the body of Harry Ward.

Dr. J. T. L'Ecuyer, Maniwaki coroner, is investigating. The wives and other relatives of the drowned New York men have arrived here.

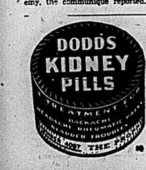
LIBYAN PORTS ATTACKED

Cairo, Sept. 29. (AP)— The R.A.F. successfully attacked Axis landing grounds at Bengasi, Tobruk and Sidi Haneish Sunday night, a joint British headquarters-R.A.F. communique said today.

Activity on the El Alamein Desert front was confined again to patrol skirmishes, in one of which casualties were inflicted on the enemy, the communique reported.



CARRIER-BASED PLANES ARE SEEN AS IMPORTANT

Lt.-Cmdr. Thatch of U.S. Navy Air Arm Stresses Need of Carrier Craft

HORIZONTAL BOMBING

Washington, Sept. 30 —(AP)— Lt.-Cmdr. John S. Thach, thrice decorated for his exploits as lead of a squadron of United States Navy fighter planes in the Pacific, declared yesterday that only carrier-based airpower can clear the way for invasion and defeat of Japan.

Horizontal bombers, whether operated by the army or navy, cannot do this job nor can they stop any force of enemy warships directed against American objectives, he said.

He declared that "not one major ship in this war has been sunk by horizontal bombing," and when asked whether that included the Haruna, Jap battleship which the army reported sunk by a Flying Fortress in the Philippines, he repeated his assertion.

"But with a couple of dozen aircraft carriers and supporting task force units, Thach continued, "and with enough marines to carry out landings, I'm convinced we can cut a path across the Pacific—and cut it quickly,—right to Japan. And we can make it tick."

What Midway Revealed

Thach, who fought in the battle of Midway, told a press conference at the Navy Department that carrier-based dive-bombers and torpedo planes, with carrier-based fighter protection, had dealt the decisive blows which routed the enemy.

Army Flying Fortresses, famed for their high altitude horizontal bombing participated in that fight and Thach was asked whether he was saying in effect that the part played by the big bombers there was "insignificant."

"You heard my story" he replied.

At another point he summed up: "The story of Midway shows that horizontal bombers cannot stop ships, high speed manoeuvring ships. Not one major ship in this war has been sunk by horizontal bombing."

"Does that include the Haruna?" asked a newsman.

Thach's crisp reply was:—

"Not one major ship in this war has been sunk by horizontal bombing."

His Awards

Thach has won the Navy Cross, the Gold Star in lieu of a second Navy Cross, and the Distinguished Service Medal.

The citation given with the D.S.M. credited him with creating "a unique system of fighting plane combat teams" which contributed materially to the Midway victory.

Thach said that a "popular theory is being passed around that we can win this war in an easy way, get something for nothing," by building what he called "colossal bombers" and using them as a striking force without fighter protection against distant and "obscure targets."

Under this theory, the flyer declared, "the big bombers then fly home and wait for the enemy to radio his surrender."

But he declared that the war cannot be won that way. He said that in order to defeat the enemy it is necessary to reconquer territory by landing men and that they will have to be preceded by fighter planes and other aerial weapons which come from carrier bases.

SWEDEN'S VEGETABLE OILS

Stockholm (CP)—About 7,000 tons of edible oils from domestic plant crops will be obtained by the margarine industry in Sweden during the current year and the production is expected to be doubled in 1943.

Boys Overseas Appreciate Work Of Kinsmen Club

Appreciation that Belleville has a Kinsmen Club is regularly being expressed by the lads on active service in the United Kingdom who periodically receive their quota of "cigs" from the local social body. Chairman of the Kinsmen's "Fag Fund" Matt Currie reveals that this week saw the number of cigarettes sent overseas mount to over the 600,000 mark with letters continuing to be received from the boys expressing their appreciation. Those to whom cigarettes were shipped this week through the Fag Fund included:

C. D. Ashley, Robert Boomheur, Arthur Carleton, Harold Carleton, G. E. Carter, John Coxon, Henry S. Crowen, D. J. Dell, H. N. Denaru, T A. DesCote, J. M. Donaldson, J. R. Gillis Purcell Given New Post

Toronto, Sept. 30 —(CP)— J. A. McNeil, general manager of The Canadian Press, announced yesterday that Gillis Purcell, general superintendent of the Daily Newspapers' Co-operative, has been appointed assistant general manager.

Purcell, 37, joined The Canadian Press in 1927 and worked successively in Winnipeg, Ottawa and Toronto bureaux. He was appointed general superintendent in '934.

In December, 1939, he went to ngland with the 1st Canadian Division as irst war correspondent with the aCnadian army, returning in February, 1940.

Granted leave of absence to enter the active army as a captain in December, 1941, he went overseas as press relations officer at army headquarters. He returned to Canada in January, 1942, after suffering the loss of a leg in the course of a manoeuvre, and resumed work with The Canadian Press. In March, the army gave him his discharge and placed him on the reserve of officers.

Born at Brandon, Man., Purcell is a graduate of the University of Manitoba.

Port Facilities At Tobruk Bombed

CAIRO, Sept. 30 — (AP)—Allied medium bombers started fires in an attack on shipping and port facilities at Tobruk Monday night, and on the same night successfully attacked Axis landing fields in North Africa, British headfuarters announced today.

Other medium bombers, operating in the Ionian Sea, attacked on Italian merchant vessel and forced it onto a beach, while torpedo-carrying planes scored a direct hit amdiships on an Italian destroyer off the Cape of Spartivento, a communique said.

Air activity over the El Alamein desert front was reported as "moderate." Concentrations of Axis armored vehicles were attacked and one Junkers-52 was shot down in flames.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WITH THE R. C. A. F. SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, Sept. 30—(CP)—First class teamwork between the Canadian captain and Australian rear gunner of a Halifax returning from a raid resulted in the probable destruction of a Junkers 88 over the Netherlands coast.

The rear gunner sighted the enemy fighter and watched it approach to beneath tht bomber's tail. It remained there four minutes despite the evasive action taken by the pilot, Sgt.-Navigator C. Cobb Student of Tillsonburg, Ont. All the Aussie could see was the enemy's tail sticking out from below the tail of the Halifax. "I can't get at it," he yelled through his intercommunication system.

"Watch out," Student shouted back, at the same time climbing steeply to starboard to enable the gunner to train his sights. The Aussie got in a one-second burst and bullets crashed through the nose of the Junkers. It rolled over and dived towards the sea. The plane was seen falling by Sgt. W. P. Trask of Yarmouth, N. S., wireless operatos in another Halifax.

Sgt. Gnr. Scotty Scotten, a former Trans-Canada Air Lines' fitter of (395 Albany Street) Winnipeg, is luckier than most rear gunners, many of whom complete their tour of operations without firing a shot at an enemy fighter. He got a crack at a JU88 on his fourth operational bombing trip and he hopes he damaged the Jerry.

Scotty, who flies with five other Canadians and a Newfoundlander in a Halifax of a Canadian squadron, got a clear view of the Junkers about 60 miles from Frankfurt. "I got in three burst at him when he was about 200 yards away, closing in and firing as he came," Scotty recounted. "He was very clearly silhouetted against the sky. He broke off and didn't return to the attack but I can't say whether my bullets hit him or not."

Four other fighters approached the Halifar during the trip but evasive action by the pilot, Sgt. Bill Webb of Broadview, Sask., shook them off. The crew included Sgts. Ed. Gervain of La Passo, Ont., navigator, Earl Mitchell of Souris Man., air bomber, Al Drennen of (242 Eastwood Road) Toronto, wireless operator, Jim Rankin of Paddockwood, Sask., flight engineer, and V. R. French of Clarke's Beach, Conception Bay, Nfld., mid-upper gunner.

King Haakon of Norway has awarded the War Cross to two Norwegian squadron leaders of the All-Norwegian squadron and one Danish flight commander for heroism during the Dieppe operations in August. The War Cross was awarded also to Wing Cmdr. Scott-Malden, an Englishman, for having commanded Norwegian Air Force units with courage and resourcefulness and for having contributed greatly to the result achieved by Norwegian airmen in the battle.

NOW SANTA CLAUS DON'T LEAVE IT TILL TIME IS UP

Deadline for Parcels Overseas is Nov. 10 but Post Office May be Piled Up Then So It's the Early-Bird . . .

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, Sept. 30 (CP) — The Canadian post office hopes devoutly that Santa Claus will be almost finished his chores for the Canadian forces overseas by the end of October.

Postal Authorities expect him to be busier than eveer. Theey expect him to send a flood of parcels roaring into the base post office at Ottawa They expect him to challenge their ingenuity in getting Christmas gifts to Canadians on almost all the fighting fronts of the world. But they'll do everything he asks if they can have a little time.

The actual mailing deadline is Nov. 10. After that there can be no assurance the Canadian soldier, sailor or airman overseas will receive his parcel in time for Christmas. But there will be no benefit in the deadline if everyone postpones mailing until the second week in November.

"What we hope is that Canadians will mail their Christmas gifts in October—as early as they can," one official said.

"We are strong advocates of the 'Don't Open Till Christmas' system. It is far better that the man overseas should receive his parcel ahead of Christmas than that he shoul bed without a gift from home when the day arrives."

P.M.G. on Spot

Postmaster-General Mulock has been in the United Kingdom, and facilitating the movement of Christmas mail was one of the purposes of his visit. But the post office department has to thing of moving mail in volume not only to the men stationed in the United Kingdom but to sailors all over the world, to airmen with Canadian squadrons in the Middle East and Ceylon, and to Canadian flyers with Royal Air Force units wherever Spitfires, Hurricanes, Wellingtons and Lancasters spread their wings.

"If we get the parcels in time we'll get them to the men—unless, of course, enemy action affects the transport services we must use," a spokesman said.

The post office handled a record amount of mail last Christmas. With more men overseas this year, and with Canadians in more scattered parts of the world, the task will be more difficult.

"As everyone knows there is only a limited amount of shipping in wartime, and this is one of the factors to be kept in mind when considering when a parcel should be mailed," said an official.

"If everyone postpones mailing until November, it is quite probable there will be a massive pile of parcels at the coast about Nov. 10. The weaons of war, food for our allies, and other supplies must have precedence.

"If there are too many parcels which have been mailed too late, then some of them will have to be left behind for lack of space and the men overseas will be disappointed." The post office reiterated the plea to Canadians to address their overseas parcels properly. A person who obeys the early mailing recommendations still may fail in his purpose of getting a gift to the man overseas for Christmas by careless addressing.

NH4 va..-CwUl4Wieh

During the fiscal year 1941-42 about 42,236,750 letters, 27,575 parcels and more than 104,000 items like newspapers and other publications passed through the redirection section of the base post office at Ottawa. Improerly addressed, they had to be laid aside until officials could make a check of official numbers, names or units to find where they should go.

"Mail improperly addressed entails extra work, extra expense and delay which causes anxiety and disappointment when some expected letter or parcel fails to arrive on time," an official said.

How to Address Them

For the sailor outside Canada, the envelope or parcel label should give his rank, his surname followed by initials, his official number, and show whether he is Royal Canadian Navy, Royal Canadian Naval Reserve, Royal Canadian Navl volunteer reserve or attached to the Royal Navy. The name of the ship should then be given, if it is known. The mail should then be sent in care of fleet mail officer at Halifax, Esquimalt, B.C., or, in cases where no details are known, in care of naval service headquarters at Ottawa.

For the soldier overseas, the address should give his regimental number, rank, and surname followed by initials. It should give the details of his unit, starting whether it is a company, squadron, Battery, holding unit or other organization. Then should come the regiment or branch of service, [illegible] the final line of the address "Canadian Army Overseas."

For the airman overseas, the number, rank, and surname followed by initials and the name of the unit, if known, should be given. Where applicable, the address should say "attached R.A.F." The final part of the address is "Royal Air Force Overseas."

If addresses made out in this fashion are firmly attached, the mail will get there, barring unforeseen special circumstances.

War Analyst Now in Britain

London, Sept. 29 — (CP) — De-Witt Mackenzie, Associated Press war analyst whose daily articles on the war appear in 800 newspapers in the United States and Canada, arrived in Britain today to begin a tour of the British Isles, the Middle East, and other war areas.

The first of Mackenzie's articles from abroad will appear tomorrow and continue daily thereafter, except when travel to a distant point in the war zones or other unavoidable circumstances prevents.

The writer, who joined the Associated Press in 1910 returns to familiar surroundings. He began his career as a foreign correspondent by covering the 1916 Easter Rebellion in Ireland and went on to become the "Big Seven" war correspondents attached to British General Headquarters in France during the First Great War.

After the war Mackenzie was present at the Versailles peace conference and for many years was Chief of the London Bureau of The Associated Press. He began writing his daily foreign affairs article in 1936 and was in Munich at the time the 1938 Munich Pact was negotiated.

I.R.A. ARMS CAME FROM 'COUNTRIES OVERSEAS'

London, Sept. 30. (CP)—Osbert Peake, Under-Secretary for Home Affairs, said in the House of Commons today that the outlawed Irish Republican army in Northern Ireland was known to have been receiving weapons from "countries overseas" in recent years.

He said authorities "had no information to confirm" reports that a recent I.R.A. attack on police officers was carried out with British-manufactured weapons.

PERSONALS

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

The engagement is announced of Aletha Grace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Chapman to Mr. William Brand, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Brand of Windsor. The wedding is to take place, October 10th., in Deer Park United Church, Toronto.

Sgt. (Doug.) R. Brown, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Brown has returned to Victoriaville, Que., and Bill Brown, R.C.A.F., has returned to Toronto.

A very delightful shower was held at the home of Mrs J. Lickfold on Monday evening, in honor of Miss Mae Dafoe, bride-to-be of next week, the shower being arranged by Mrs. Bernard LaMorre and Mrs. Frank LaMorre. The evening was spent in dancing and singing with Mr. James Corradi providing the music at the piano. The main attraction of the evening was a mock wedding with the following persons taking part: bride, Mrs. Bernard LaMorre, groom, Mr. Jack Boyd, bridesmaid, Mr. James Sopha, groomsman, Mr. Reg Dracup, minister, Mr. Frank LaMorre. Following the mock wedding the bride-to-be was presented with gifts for which she thanked her friends graciously. Lunch was then served by the hostesses and the evening came to a close with everyone joining in singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow".

WEDDINGS

BURTT—EDISON

On Saturday afternoon, a quiet wedding was solemnized at Christ Church, when Mary Elizabeth, second daughter of Mrs. Grace Edison, was united in marriage to Frederick Bruce, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Burtt, of Trenton. Reverend G. G. Wright officiated.

The happy couple were attended by the bride's sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Martin.

After the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served at the home of the bride's mother to their immediate relatives. The bride and groom left on a short trip; on their return they will reside in Trenton.

WHITE —ASHLEY

A quiet wedding took place in Christ Church on Tuesday afternoon, September 22, when Rev. G. G. Wright, united in marriage, Anne Ashley, only daughter of Mr. F. Ashley and the late Mrs. Ashley to Frederick James White, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. F. White.

The bride was becomingly attired in a street length dress of rose crepe and wore a corsage of pink roses.

After the wedding a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. White, parents of the groom.

McQUAID—MARTIN

A quiet wedding was solemnized at St. John the Apostle Church Presbytery, Kingston, at six o'clock, Saturday evening, Sept. 19, when the Rev. Monseigneur L. J. Byrne united in marriage Kathleen, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Martin, Collins Bay, and John Norman, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William McQuaid, Kingston.

The dark-haired bride looked lovely in her wedding gown of shell pink imported embossed organza over satin, fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and long full skirt. Her long flowing veil of shell pink embroidered silk net was held in place by a coronet of white roses. She carried a white and gold prayer book with white satin streamers caught with bouvardia. Her only ornament was a cameo pendant, a gift of the groom.

Miss Eleanor McQuaid, sister of the groom, the bride's only attendant, looked lovely in a long pearl grey sheer gown with white accessories and carrying an arm bouquet of pink roses. The groom was attended by Mr. Albert Martin, brother of the bride. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a flower brooch and to the best man, a brown morocco leather billfold.

A reception for the immediate friends was held at Morrison's tea room, where the bride's mother received in a lovely gown of teal velvet with black accessories and a corsage of red roses and baby's breath. Miss Ethel McQuaid of Belleville, sister of the groom, assisted, wearing a most becoming gown of navy blue and white printed sheer with black accessories and a corsage of red roses and baby's breath.

Later Mr. and Mrs. McQuaid left for Ottawa and points east, the bride travelling in a chocolate brown crepe dress with matching accessories and camel hair coat. Upon their return they will reside at Collins Bay.

CONVOYED MACARONI

A New "Get-Together" Dish

THE addition of the right sauce means the difference between the family asking for more or turning up their noses at your efforts.

To make "Convoyed" Macaroni, cook 1 cup of macaroni in boiling, salted water and then drain. Pour 1¼ cups of scalded milk over 1 cup of soft bread crumbs. Add ¼ cup of melted butter and 1 tablespoon of chopped pimento, 1 tablespoon of chopped onion, 1 tablespoon of parsley, 1½ cups of grated cheese, ½ teaspoon of salt, ⅛ teaspoon of pepper and 1 tablespoon of H. P. Sauce. Then add 2 well-beaten eggs and mix thoroughly. Add drained macaroni and mix again. Pour into a well-buttered casserole and bake in a slow oven for about 50 minutes.

Also use H. P. Sauce for a richer flavour in stews, meat dishes, gravies, soups, fish and salads.

Personality in Good Looks

Alexis Smith has both personality and beauty.

By HELEN FOLLETT

"YOUNG GIRLS all look alike these days," remarked the young man, "Hair-dos of the same style, clothes as if they were made from the same pattern. What one wears, they all wear. It takes a woman in her forties to look distinguished and different. She's more interesting too, if you ask me. She has the courage of her dress convictions, develops ideas of her own on how she'll get herself up. Not all of them, of course, but many.

"I think the middle-aged woman of the period an attractive person. She's peppy, has humor, dresses smartly. The youngsters can't see that. They aren't individuals, they're just members of a flock."

Land's sake forever more! And there are thousands of girls of sixteen who look upon their mothers as duds and has-beens.

Young girls should not be as much alike as red apples in a barrel. In the formula of good looks, there should be a flavor of personality, a carrying-out of one's own ideas as to what constitutes a charming coiffure, a smart frock, a becoming chapeau. That sets a girl apart from the crowd. Cultivating the dress sense is fun. One can't start too early to learn the charm of beautiful colors and graceful lines.

One must mind one's step, of course. Not wear anything freaky, or anything that is conspicuous, but those having that smart touch that is plainly one's own.

There's no fun marching in the style parade if one looks exactly and precisely like the girls who walk ahead and behind.

So, pets, don't be wholly influenced by what your dearest friend buys and wears. Strike out on your own. Be yourself.

Purchase of Stoves a Burning Question in Nation's Capital

War has accustomed people to strange sights but there's nothing stranger than women going to Washington's department stores and asking, "On what floor are the stoves?"

"We have no stoves, Madame," answers the embarrassed clerk.

"What, no stoves?" demands the lady. "How am I going to keep my husband and children warm this winter?" She then reels off her husband's imposing title in the Army, Navy or one of the alphabetical departments which are harder to decipher than Egyptian hieroglyphics.

She seeks the manager of the store, or maybe the proprietor himself, if he happens to be available, and she demands: "Do you remember the song, 'Keep the Home Fires Burning,' that everyone sang during World War No. 1? How am I going to keep the home fires burning?

How am I going to keep my husband, head of the X. Y. Z., one of the most important of the government agencies, warm and comfortable this winter? How am I going to keep my little children, one of them only two years of age, free from influenza and pneumonia if I can buy no stoves? Where is your patriotism? Stoves are no luxury, they're not a gadget; they're a burning necessity." And the matron flounces out of the department store.

On the sidewalk she met her friend, whose husband reigned supreme in another government agency. It may be the F. O. B., though it's impossible to keep abreast of these alphabetical riddles.

Mrs. F.O.B. coos sweetly to Mrs. X. Y. Z.: "Such luck, my dear. I was worried crazy how I am going to keep my family warm this winter when I heard of two lovely old Dutch stoves made almost entirely of antique tiles, in Leesburg, Virginia. I was so terrified that someone else would get them that I just used my husband's emergency gas card and motored right up there and had them put it in the back of the car."

"Indeed! Is that how you use your husband's emergency gas, buying antiques and he at the head of the F. O. B.? I think Mr. Ickes should look into that."

"But they were not antiques; they were to keep us warm this winter—and please remember I have four children and a husband who's absolutely necessary to win the war. I think it's very unkind of you to refer to the stoves as antiques."

The ladies glare. They are joined on the sidewalk by Mrs. P. D. Q. whose husband is also at the head of an important government agency.

"Well, have you succeeded in getting any stoves?" they both ask breathlessly.

"Out of the question, William is going to a hotel and I'm going to take the children to Honduras, which I hear is not only cheap but warm."

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Difference Between "Formal" and "Informal" Gowns

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me what makes a long gown "formal"? I am always doubtful about the difference between a formal evening dress, and informal long dress.

Kay.

With the "cover-up" and "costume" vogues so popular in the last few years, there isn't as definite a difference between a formal evening dress and a long "dinner dress" or "Sunday evening dress."

Formerly, a formal evening dress was one made of an elaborate fabric — low-cut, no sleeves. Now, a formal evening dress is still one made of a more or less elaborate material, but it often has a high neck and long sleeves. It may even be an ensemble — long dress and matching or harmonizing jacket or bolero, giving it a formal "costume" look. It is proclaimed "formal" by the dressy fabric and by the accessories worn with it, and, especially this season, by the elaborate trimming.

A long, informal dress worn in the evening—a "dinner dress," a "Sunday evening dress," an informal dance dress—is made of informal fabric; it is often an inch or two shorter than a formal evening dress and may have short or medium-length or long sleeves. It may be (and very often is) worn with a matching or harmonizing short jacket or bolero) and is either untrimmed or conservatively trimmed. A dress of this type is not appropriately accompanied by formal accessories. It has the casual look that immediately suggests informality.

New Divorcee

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have just received my divorce, and I am entirely uncertain what form of name is correct for me to use, Should it be Mrs. Mary Carter Brown, or Mrs. Mary M. Brown? How should I sign my name?

Mary Brown.

A divorcee should, if she really wishes to be correct, drop her husband's first name and use her maiden surname in its place. So, if your maiden name was Mary Carter (you don't tell me what the "M." stands for in the alternative form you suggest), the correct form for your name is Mrs. Carter Brown.

Do not use your first name after the "Mrs."; this is never correct. Your informal name (the correct form for the direct signature to your letters) is Mary Carter Brown.

HEALTH CHATS

Cathartics Not the Way to Cure Constipation

Constipation has been said to be the most widespread disorder in the United States. To treat the symptoms by taking habit-forming cathartics is not the way to solve the problem. Treat the cause to get permanent relief.

What are the causes? First, not enough exercise; second, not enough water; third, too much or too little roughage in the diet, and fourth, not taking a definite, regular time to eliminate waste. These are the chief reasons.

Constipation may be present without causing any particular symptoms. However, in most instances there are definite troubles. There may be headache, dizziness, bad odor to the breath and a coated tongue. Other symptoms consist of poor appetites, sickness to the stomach and sleeplessness. Sometimes there may be swelling of the abdomen, excessive gas formation and colicky or dull pains.

We hear from Dr. Asher Winkelstein of New York that chronic constipation sometimes produces symptoms affecting the stomach, such as pain in the pit of the stomach, heartburn, belching and vomiting. These symptoms which occur in constipation are not due to the taking of poisons in the body but, rather, seem to result from pressure and nervous causes. Perhaps some of the symptoms occur because the movement of the intestine reverses itself, forcing food materials backward through the bowel toward the stomach instead of away from it.

When chronic constipation occurs, the first thing that should be done is to have a careful examination to be sure that there is no blocking of the opening through the bowel. It is well to have X-ray plates taken to determine how fast food materials move through the intestine.

According to Dr. Winkelstein, in all cases it is advisable to begin the treatment by giving the patient what is know as a bland diet. This kind of diet is free from foods which form bulk or roughage. For example, it contains such foods as tomato juice, strained vegetables, stewed fruits and well-cooked cereals without any bran. Raw vegetables and raw fruits, as well as spices and highly seasoned foods, are omitted from the diet.

In some patients, it may be necessary to give some substance to furnish bulk. Refined psyllium seed preparations or Karaya gum in a glassful of water, one to three times a day, usually proves satisfactory. If roughage foods are given they tend to irritate the lining membrane of the stomach and bowel, and may make the condition worse instead of better.

When the constipation is due to spasm or contracting of the bowel muscles, such drugs as phenobarbital or atrophine may have some benefit.

One of the most important things, however, in treating constipation is the formation of regular bowel habit. The best time is after breakfast. If no bowel movement occurs, a glycerine suppository may be used, or an injection of from one to three ounces of warm water may be given into the lower part of the bowel. This procedure may be continued for about two weeks, after which the proper habit is usually established.

Fashion Flashes

COLOR RISES to new delights as the autumn millinery picture becomes more clear. A typical success is a model of deep red jersey combined with forest green skilfully draped to a pyramid turban.

A BIG JUMP lands the rabbit, known in furrier circles as lapin, back into the news. A splendid all-occasion coat is in parchment-dyed lapin cut on double-breasted lines with big patch pockets and a vent slit in back.

THE CHAMPION in the dinner dress field seems to be the long, slim model with casual shirtwaist top. These are the specifications of a charming dress with shirtwaist top of pink crepe, twisted belt of chartreuse crepe and skirt, which has a slash in front, in black crepe.

IT'LL BE EASY to find plenty of comfy clothes this winter, since every shop has them in every price bracket. Grand for the country gal is a suede front waistcoat in tan crisscrossed with green and red stripes with knitted back of brown wool.

IT'S SURPRISING how much beige, usually a spring color, is used this autumn. A wearable daytime frock is in light beige wool jersey made with a group of tucks from the high, rounded neck to the hem. Bright red velveteen arrows accent the shoulders and the hipbone line and there is a matching red calf belt. Front tucks conceal fly fastening.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Is Saccharin Safe to Use Instead of Sugar?

As sugar is one food that is forbidden in extreme cases of overweight, many overweights now use saccharin to sweeten drinks or foods as it is many times sweeter than sugar and does not get deposited as fat in the body.

The rationing of sugar during the war has caused many of us to use saccarhin for sweeting our tea and coffee.

A few years ago some overweights took large doses of saccharin and cases of severe stomach irritation and even poisoning by saccharin were reported. Today physicians are finding a few cases of dyspepsia where saccharin is used in half teaspoon doses instead of in one-half to 1 1-2 grain tablets to sweeten tea and coffee.

As a matter of fact saccharin does interfere with digestion in that it slows up the flow of the digestive juices Research workers also state that it slows up other body processes also such as the oxidation or purifying of the blood in the lungs and in the tissues. Some individuals report that the use of saccharin causes headaches.

Cases of poisoning by saccharin are rare. The symptoms resemble those of alcohol intoxication — rapid pulse rapid breathing, unconsciousness. Artificial respiration is the treatment.

What about the use of saccharin for tea, coffee, lemonade, or other drinks, cooking and other uses?

While large doses may cause indigestion, headaches and poisoning, small doses are safe.

There have been many inquiries regarding the danger to health and to life of saccharin that the Journal of the American Medical Association recently carried an editorial of advice and reassurance to physicians and the public.

"Sugar rationing and new emphasis on weight reduction have doubtless increased the use of saccharin for sweetening purposes. Renewed interest in the possible harmful effect of this substance is therefore only natural. Earlier investigations of saccharin, however, have failed to reveal dangerous side-actions except from extremely large doses. Likewise, the evidence does not reveal any reason why saccharin cannot be used continuously in average sweetening doses for any length of time. Many patients have taken saccharin for years without harmful effects".

The above information from such high authority should remove all fear of saccharin, if taken in usual doses, that is 1-2 to 1 1-2 grains.

THE CRAZE for quilting seems to have affected everything from slacks to suits and accessories, not to mention linings and trimmings. A swell little box coat in oxford gray alpaca fleece with revers and double-breasted panel of black wool is lined with quilted red satin.

ARGENTINE VOTES TO BREAK WITH AXIS COUNTRIES

Resolution Laid Before President Castillo for His Action

VOTE VERY CLOSE

Buenos Aires, Sept. 30 (AP)—The Argentine Chamber of Deputies laid before President Ramon S. Castillo today a resolution recommending an immediate break of diplomatic relations between Argentina and the Axis countries.

Pushed through the Chamber by a Radical-Socialist coalition by a 67-to-64 vote the measure was opposed solidly by the Conservative party members, whose leader is President Castillo. It is expected to bring a rejection from the President who returned from a trip to the northern provinces recently and declared he is convinced the people are behind his "policy of prudence."

Pro - Democratic deputities charged during debate on the measure last night that Argentina's present foreign policy made the country a refuge for Nazi-Fascist propagandists and caused the United States and other American countries to be "suspicious" of Argentina's intentions.

The government's speakers contended that neuthality made it possible for Argentina to aid her neighbors should she care to do so.

Radical Deputy Raul Damonte Taborda, declaring the vote a victory for the Radical-Socialist cause, said that "despite the stage of siege, the country has pronounced its opinion and nobody is able to deny it."

The chamber approved 77 to 36 a bill calling for the immediate lifting of the state of siege proclaimed by the government which prevents criticism, or even discussion, of Argentina's foreign policy. The government is expected to ignore the bill as it did a previous measure. The Senate has approved the siege

Satisfied with U.S.-Built Aircraft

Washington, Sept. 30—(AP)—An investigation into the quality of American-built army aircraft was reported authoritatively today to have left a house of representatives military subcommittee satisfied with both the performance and protection of the planes. Details of the committee's findings will be made public in a week or two in answer to charges that the army aircraft are inadequate.

Building Permits For September Total $20,305

Headed with a factory addition at the Graham Dried Food plant on Pinnacle Street, the September building list in Belleville is one of the biggest for any month of the present year, it is revealed by records of the building inspector, City Engineer Charles Mott. Total value of construction for the month is $20,305.

The $7,000 brick addition to the present Graham food plant on South Pinnacle Street will be one of the largest industrial expansions in the city this year. The construction details call for a one storey building with approximately 7,500 square feet of floor space.

Permits for four dwellings helped considerably to swell the building total, while the installation of coal bunkers at the Dominion Entomological buildings on Dundas Street added $1,800 to the total.

Permits issued for dwellings included one to O. W. Quanty for a two storey building on Cannifton Road at a cost of $2,000; to Mrs. R. F. Bowden for a two storey house on Sinclair Street at $3,400; to R. A. Shipman for a bungalow on Parker Street at $1,000 and to Roy Johnston for a brick dwelling on Herchimer at $3,000.

Minor permits included one to Lyle Mason for a coal shed at $500; to R. Batty for a kitchen addition on Frank Street at $200, B. J. Black, office addition to Front Street store at $200; P. J. O'Neil for garage on Albion Street at $75; J. Weymark for verandah at 218 Church at $380; Leonard Reid, garage and chimney at Reid's Dairy at $250; to Shelly Anderson for sun porch on dwelling on Albert Street at $150; C. Clarke verandah addition Ann St. $100.

POLICE BLOTTER

Residents in the vicinity of the corner of Dunbar and Catharine Sts., have registered complaints regarding a large dog causing continued disturbances in that area. The complainants stated to police that the canine is permitted to wander at large at night resulting in surrounding residents' slumber being disrupted. Police turned the matter over to County Constable Thos. Thorne, who is also city dog pound custodian and under whose jurisdiction such complaints are received.

Radiator Damaged

Radiator damage resulted to a motor car at the intersection of Coleman and West Bridge Sts., on Tuesday when a truck driven by Frederick R. Thompson, 73 Lewis St., was in collision with a motor car driven by Percy Dulmage, R. R. No. 1 Belleville. The vehicles were proceeding in opposite directions on Coleman St., when the collision occurred. Upon the arrival of P. C. Taylor the matter was amicably settled without charges being necessary.

Asked to Find Daughter

Henry Little, Shannonville farmer, asked Provincial Police to assist in the finding of his 15-year-old daughter, who ran away from home earlier this week. The little girl's Christian name was not given to the authorities, but Mr. Little intimated she might be proceeding towards Prince Edward Island to visit relatives.

THE WAR TODAY

(Editor's note: DeWitt Mackenzie, Associated Press war analyst, now is in London after a Transatlantic flight and the following is his first article on wartime Britain. He will proceed to other war zones, when governments and news developments permit.)

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

LONDON, Sept. 30 — The most important thing your correspondent can report from his initial glance at this wartime Britain is that John Bull and his wife and youngsters—that is, the civilian rank and file—not only are amazingly fit but grimly anxious to get speedily ahead with the bloody work before them.

The spirit of offensive is everywhere.

This is the first chance I have had to size up Britain at close range since January, 1939.

One had expected to find changes, of course, but here is a great metamorphosis of the man in the street.

New John Bull

Here is a new John Bull — and I know my Briton, having been with him in war and peace through long years in many parts of the globe.

Small things often signal big developments.

At the risk of being called fanciful, I'm going to confess to being mightily impressed during the short time I've been here by an odd circumstance: I haven't seen a single fat, or even plump, person.

Now, that is a matter of importance when you figure out why it is so, for while Britons as a whole don't run to avoirdupois, there always have been plenty of stout persons about, and the traditional John Bull is ample of waist.

Trained to Fineness of Athletes

I don't mean to picture a people gaunt from hunger. They're well enough fed, though on pretty tight rations. But we have here a whole population which by the exigencies of war has trained down to the fineness of athletes.

I get the impression the people have reached the point where there might be a danger of overtraining. They have been so long set, tensely waiting for the word to go get Hitler, that they are beginning to suffer a bit from the strain like a runner who is poised for a tardy starting gun.

That is a condition which can only be cured when the Allies are ready for all-out offensive action.

Everyone a Soldier

In their hearts, the British people already have started the big drive to finish off Hitler. They are as eager as anyone else to slash through any possible delays.

You begin to understand this when you know that here in Britain every man, woman and child is a soldier. They've only one idea—to beat the Boche. They've reached the point where their money and other possessions of price don't mean much anymore. Their all-consuming purpose is to hang, draw and quarter Adolf Hitler.

LED CANUCKS

FIRST HUNTING ACCIDENT

Flin Flon, Man., Sept. 30. (CP)—The first hunting fatality of the season in Northern Manitoba was reported yesterday. Police were advised that Clement McNichol was shot and killed in the Lac Du Brochet district, 200 miles north of here.

BERLIN RAIDED 12 TIMES

Moscow, Sept. 30.— (AP)—Russian bombers raided Berlin 12 times in the last year and dropped "thousands of bombs" on twenty other German cities and thirteen cities in Hungary, Rumania and Poland, the Moscow Radio said today.

The Russians used two and four-engined bombers capable of flying more than 12 hours and covering from 1,300 to 3,300 miles non-stop, the broadcast said.

WOMAN CYCLIST FATALLY HURT

Winnipeg, Sept. 30 — (CP) — Mrs. Robert Stewart, 53-year-old cyclist, was fatally injured when she crashed into the side of a motor truck in St. Vital, a suburb. She died in hospital last night.

MRS. B. F. FAIRLESS DIES

Massillon, O., Sept. 30 — (AP)—Mrs. Benjamin F. Fairless, who married her childhood sweetheart and watched him rise to the presidency of United States Steel Corporation, died at their home here last night after a six-months illness. They attended school together, became sweethearts and, when Fairless was a steelworker, they were married.

STRUCK BY CAR FOUR TIMES

Kitchener, Ont., Sept. 30—(CP)—Roy Schell, 15, of Kitchener, apparently bears a charmed life. His right leg was slightly bruised when he was struck by a car here. It is the fourth time he has been involved in similar accidents.

PROPOSES SPEEDERS BE FORCED TO SELL TIRES

Detroit, Sept. 30—(AP)—Sentencing a speeder for going 60 miles an hour, Judge George T. Murphy proposed yesterday that such violators be compelled to sell their tires to the government for resale to war workers. "Taking tires from people like you would be fully justified in this national emergency," he said.

TAKE OVER LIGHT WORK

London, Ont., Sept. 30 — (CP) — Six overall-clad London women have begun work in the Canadian National Railways' car shops as the first female workers classed as "laborers" in the city. Plant officials said they had been unable to get men to fill the jobs. The women have taken over light work in the shops.

Speaks of Hog Market

Speaking of the hog market, Mr. Dewan said it was unfortunate that dressed hog prices have declined from 80 to 75 cents per cwt. during recent weeks because the condition "is not conducive to stability in hog production." The decline was caused by the bacon board's instruction to Canadian packers to reduce their kill for domestic consumption and "it is well known that packers' profits have of late been on domestic trade and not on export shipments."

"It is to be hoped that the board will find some way of taking care of such a condition without allowing prices to decline—especially when increased volume is required for shipment to the United Kingdom."

Concentrated milk production has increased 22 per cent since the start of the war and fluid milk consumption has increased 18 per cent since the beginning of the war. Flax production in Ontario has trebled since 1936.

JAPANESE FORCED

Allied bombers pursued the retreating Japanese relentlessly, pounding their rear positions at Menari, four miles north of Nauro.

At the same time heavy bombers moved down the trail to Buna and destroyed six barges used to transport supplies down the coast. Other enemy installations on the beach and airdrome also were attacked

Another Allied air unit struck at Salamaua, large Japanese base up the New Guinea coast from Buna, bombing the airfield and dispersal areas. Results of the attack could not be observed, the communique said.

Village Also Taken

The exact distance covered in the Allied land advance could not be determined because of the rugged Country. The recaptured ridge is approximately 32 airline miles from Port Moresby and 55 miles by trail. The village of Ioribaiwa, as well as the ridge, was taken.

The Japanese radio broadcast a claim last night that Japanese naval units had made landings in the Tanimbar, Kei, Aru and Barbar Islands between Australia and New Guinea.

For some time it has been conceded the key points in these islands were in Japanese hands and Allied communiques have mentioned attacks on Japanese shipping around the islands of Tanimbar and Kei.

men were credited with the destruction of 71 German trucks and several tanks.

Germans Fear Dark

Red Star said that German rockets looped through the night sky and floated down by parachutes to light areas in the north-western outskirts. The Germans there fear the dark, suspecting sudden red army attacks, the newspaper said. Dry grass of the steppes was ablaze.

The Russians were reported to have overcome German bomber attacks in this sector, although how was not specified. Revising assault tactics, the Germans are moving up their tommy-gunners in armored cars.

The mid-day communique said that artillerymen of one unit in the region had killed about 600 Germans, disabled or fired 15 tanks and destroyed five field guns, 35 machine-guns and 27 supply trucks.

A sidelight of this battle of the steppes which rages westward to the Don Bend was reported by the communique, detailing an attack by German infantry and tanks upon a [illegible] held by elite Soviet detachments.

Five Axis Trawlers Sunk

"When the enemy tanks approached within a close distance," it said, "our anti-tank fighters opened fire and burnt four tanks. About a company of enemy infantry was wiped out."

Other war developments were varied.

Soviet Black Sea aerial forces were credited with sinking five Axis trawlers, six barges, four power boats and seven torpedo boats in a week in support of the Western Caucasian ground forces battling to hold the invaders from Tuapse.

(A Berlin radio broadcast quoted a Nazi military spokesman today as asserting that German troops had reached the suburbs of Tuapse, a Black Sea naval station about 75 miles south of Novorossisk.)

The mid-day communique said that, following the rout of the Rumanian mountain divisions, Red marines captured a height, destroyed 45 dugouts, seven blockhouses and four headquarters and killed about 500 German and Rumanian troops.

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda said that light Russian forces had spread panic among the Germans by a bold raid upon the outskirts of Novorossisk.

One machine-gunner was reported to have killed or wounded the personnel of two Nazi artillery batteries in this foray against the supply base for the forces striking down the coastal road.

Part of Army in Russia

(A Russian source declared in Ankara that two divisions of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's African corps and 14 divisions from occupied France had been transferred to the Stalingrad area.)

Russian fighter pilots, disregarding long odds, dived, looped and zoomed in dogfights with German squadrons over wreckage-strewn Stalingrad to give what help they could to the ground troops.

Sailors of the Red Navy's Volga flotilla, who have matched their rocking batteries repeatedly against firmly-based land guns, were credited with cutting up and dispersing two battalions of enemy infantry in a sector unidentified.

7,000 Killed in One Area

Field dispatches said 7,000 Axis troops had been killed in five days south of Novorossisk, where Russia's army of the Western Caucasus is hitting back hard after a long retreat.

A temporary stalemate was indicated in the see-saw battle of the central Caucasus, where Russian detachments are putting their skill and fire-power against growing herds of Nazi tanks.

The German command was said to have sacrificed 11 tanks and 350 men in futile assaults upon a Red Army position in the Mozdok area and gained ground in another sector only to lose it again before a Soviet counter-attack.

Northward, Russian snipers and scouts were credited with killing 200 Germans and destroyed four enemy tanks and several heavy machine-guns within 48 hours on the Leningrad front.

Experts Predict World Series Between Yanks and Cards May Be Bitterest Fought in Years

Mort Cooper and Red Ruffing Will be Opposing Pitchers

CARDS ARE FAST

By GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30 — (AP) — It was Mort Cooper, peerless 22-game winner of the St. Louis Cardinals, against Rufus (The Red) Ruffing, 37-year-old right-hander of the New York Yankees, when the champions of the National League and the champions of the American League, respectively, tie into each other in the opening game of the 1942 world series at Sportsman's Park.

A crowd of just under 35,000, the utmost capacity of the park, was sure to be on hand when the two league champions inaugurate the annual playoff at 1:30 P. M. Every reserve chair was sold more than a week ago, and speculators were getting handsome premiums for the seats that had come into their possession — up to $50 for choice locations.

In the opinion of old stagers, it promised to develop into one of the bitterest world series in history, probably to be fought right down to the last gasp. Nobody would be surprised if it went the limit of seven games. While most of the experts thought the Yankees would win eventually, few of them predicted it would be an easy victory.

Cardinals Have Class

The Cardinals have too much class for that. Those who have been following Billy Southworth's bravos as they made their sensational stretch drive to beat out the Brooklyn Dodgers declare unanimously that they are capable of beating anybody — including the Yankees. Those who have seen the most of the Cards lately are highest in praise of the wild-running kids, and are the ones who like their chances the best against the resplendent Yankees. Which might, or might not, be significant.

There was, to tell the truth, an agreeable surprise in St. Louis last night when the word arrived, in advance of the Yankees themselves, that Ruffing had been named by Manager Joe McCarthy to hurl the first game for the Yanks. The American League champs did not pull into town until nearly dark — too late for a workout — but the word that Ruffing was McCarthy's choice arrived by telegraph some hours earlier.

For some obscure reason, the locals decided the Cards were getting a big break in facing an old-timer like Ruffing in the first heat. They suggested, actually, that McCarthy was "conceding" the opener to the Cardinals. He realized, they said, that he couldn't lick Cooper, so he was sacrificing Ruffing.

Wait! Joe McCarthy does not play baseball that way. If McCarthy did not think that Ruffing, old as he is, had the best chance of trouncing the Cardinals today, he would have nominated the biggest winner on his staff, Ernie Bonham, to toss his fork ball at the Cardinals. The Cardinals had thought they would face Bonham, winner of 21 games this year, in today's starter.

Ruffing knew two weeks ago to the writer's knowledge, that he would be given the opener to win or lose. The veteran has won only 14 games this year, while losing 7. He isn't anything like the pitcher he was a few seasons ago. He has to "pace" himself these days. But the buxom redhead still can bear down and make a batter acutely uncomfortable in the pinches. He still has the complete confidence of his Yankee teammates.

That was why McCarthy picked him to face Cooper today. Not because McCarthy believed Cooper could not be beaten. Baseball managers, one notes after a time, invariably start a world series with the pitcher who has the best world series record. Bonham will be entrusted with the second game here tomorrow against Johnny Beazley, the Cardinals' great rookie righthander.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30 — (AP) — Just to give you an idea what the Cardinals are up against, they came from 10 games behind on Aug. 5 to take the pennant by winning 43 of 52 games . . . during the same stretch the Red Sox won 35 out of 42 and gained only 3 1-2 games on the Yankees . . . Joe McCarthy says the Yanks haven't bothered about scouting their world series rivals, but they've been taking lessons from Buddy Hassett, an ex-National leaguer . . .

Add travel troubles: funnyman Al Schacht, who has just opened up a restaurant here, didn't make the trip to St. Louis but he'll perform at the three games in the stadium.

Sportpourri

Akron U. is considering an early-morning football game against Eastern Kentucky teachers for the benefit of war workers who can't see the regular night contests . . . Marshall Field has sold all his race hosses . . . Leonard Ott, the Denver golf pro, finds that a sharp hook isn't always troublesome. Recently he went out on the Gunnison river and hooked a six-pound trout; next day he returned to the same spot and hooked a 7 1-2-pounder . . . presumably they had to be sliced to get 'em into a frying pan.

Wide Awake

Earl Minneweather, who works in the shipyards and plays football for the San Francisco Bay Packers, had a hard decision to make the other day . . . he got off shift at eight A. M. the day the Packers were scheduled to play the coast squad . . . Earl was afraid that if he went to bed he'd oversleep and miss the game, so he stayed up long enough to spring 79 yards for a touchdown that gave his team a 7-6 decision.

SKEET CHAMP

Rufe Watson, Washington sharpshooter, ABOVE, is winner of the coveted high over-all title at the North American skeet championships at Lordship, Conn. Watson captured the preliminary all-bore crown, the .410 and the 20-gauge races and missed a tie for the all-bore crown by only one target.

Toronto, Sept. 30 —(CP)— New Westminster Salmonbellies can't have any too great an opinion of the competition they'll meet in the east in lacrosse semi-finals and finals. . .They passed up their privilege of bringing a western referee to keep the eastern whistle-tooters on the bit. . .Coach Jack Wood of the Salmonbellies is allergic to referees, it seems. . . Commenting on the decision not to take a western sports flatfoot with the club, he said: 'We've been used to bad refereeing all season here, so I guess we will get by okay in the east." . . . A highly uncharitable attitude, what?

Item number two in Salmonbellies' disregard for the brave lads representing upper and lower Canada is that they set out for the east minus a couple of good players. . .Bill Tyler can't get leave from the navy and Pete Meehan will be married in Vancouver Oct. 6. . .The club couldn't do anything about Tyler, but perhaps could have talked Meehan into honeymooing in the east. . . What a honeymoon that would be! . . .No-one could blame Meehan for being strong-minded about the thing. . .Lacrosse and confetti don't mix.

Incidentally:

The fuss stirred up a few days ago around the report that Bill Cowley might play hockey in Halifax apparently has subsided . . .The cagey one will be back with Boston. . .There is considerable interest here and there regarding what individual interpretations will be placed on passport regulations this winter. . .Hockey men hope there won't be a repetition of last winter's chaos, when most Canadian players had trouble getting permission to cross the border for league games . . . There hasn't been any definite announcement yet whether Terry Reardon will return to his owners, Canadiens. . .Reardon was one of Boston Bruins, or will stay with the players affected by the passport ban last year. . .Bill (Ottawa Journal) Westwick reports that Dave Sprague isn't promising anything for his Uplands R. COLUMBUS TAKES SECOND STRAIGHT JUNIOR TITLE

Stop Syracuse Chiefs With 4-2 Victory in the Fifth Contest

TOO MUCH POWER

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 30—(AP)—Columbus Red Birds—winners of the 1942 Little World Series—reign for another year as nominal Monarchs of two of baseball's highest-calibre Minor Leagues.

The American Association Club, a farm of St. Louis Cardinals, National League Champions, captured their second straight junior series last night by defeating the International League Syracuse Chiefs, 4-2.

The victory gave Manager Eddie Dyer's club, which finished third behind Kansas City and Milwaukee in the regular season standings, the series four games to one. They battled their way through 16 play-off games to vitcory and a series "pot" of $5,356.75.

The western team's triumph gave the American Association a 14-11 edge in the annual post-season diamond finale with the east's International League, dating back to 1904. The Red Birds walloped Montreal for the title last year.

Columbus roared to their fourth straight victory over Syracuse last night behind the masterful, eight-hit hurling of righthanded Ted Wilks.

With the score tied 1-1, the Birds erupted in the eighth for four hits and three tallies. Centrefielder Jim Gleason, who led the Columbus batters with seven hits and a .368 average for the series, started it all with a double. Augie Bergamo, Pep Young and Rae Blaemire hit successive singles to chase the runs home.

The Chiefs who also finished third in their league, behind Newark and Montreal were handicapped in a bid for their first series title by the illness of their ace hurler, Ewell Blackwell. In hospital with a cold, Blackwell did not appear in the classic.

Total attendance for the five encounters was 21,229.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

(By ALLAN NICKLESON)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Sept. 30. (CP)—The Canadian bantamweight champion, a game little guy from Montreal, still has to win a fight in Britain but he's among the most popular boxers over here.

That paradox is because Pte. Eddie Petrin of the Royal Montreal Regiment has gained recognition as a tenacious and clean boxer who never quits trying even when he's taking a beating.

Eddie lost his second London fight to LAC. Joe Davis of the R.A.F., an accurate-punching speedster, by a decision but it was the Canadian who received most of the cheers. Petrin relied on spasmodic onslaughts to pile up points.

The Montrealer doesn't pick any setups. For his first London fight he met Jolting Jackie Paterson, British and Empire flyweight king who is recognized unofficially as world champion. Eddie was flattened in the early rounds.

One London sports writer suggested the French-Canadian "took to the ring for the big contest too soon after his arrival without therefore giving himself sufficient time to settle down and become acclimatized", and that he "also started may I suggest, a little too high up the ladder".

Stocky Jimmy Wilde, that former hammer-fisted world's flyweight champ, is sports organizer to troops stationed in a western area of England. It's a popular appointment and milk-drinking Jimmy is proud of the job. Already he believes he has uncovered some future ring stars.

The Welsh cyclone of other days—like a postman going for a walk on his day off—seldom misses a big boxing tournament and he's always willing to help a young battler. At the British Army boxing championships at York last spring Jimmy gave Pte. Bobby Docherty of Toronto's 48th Highlanders what Bobby called "some valuable pointers". Docherty went on to win the featherweight title.

Boxing Bits: All this resin dust reminds that the rumor which said Joe Louis was coming over with the American forces in the near future is stronger than ever around London. . Jackie Paterson, whose fight training mostly was made up of hard work in the Glasgow shipyards has joined the R.A.F. . . . Colin Symons, 52, who introduced from the ring every champion since 1921, including Jack Dempsey, died in Essex. . . He formerly was M.C. at the National Sporting Club.

YANKS' MANAGER CONFIDENT TEAM WILL WIN SERIES

Manager of Cards Played With Team That Beat Yankees in 1926

SCALPERS ACTIVE

By CHARLES DUNKLEY
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

St. Louis, Sept. 30. (AP)—Joseph Vincent McCarthy, kindly 56-year-old manager of the New York Yankees, leads his players into the World Series against the rip-snorting St. Louis Cardinals with supreme confidence —and a memory.

Last team to conquer the Yankees in a World Series was the Cardinals of 1926, who had an outfielder named Billy Southworth, now the 49-year-old manager of the current Cardinals.

Since then, the Yankees have won eight world championships, defeating every team in the National League with the exception of Boston and the Phils. They have registered 34 triumphs, taking four series in four straight.

If McCarthy is letting the memory bother him, he's keeping strictly to himself.

Yet McCarthy expresses admiration for the Cardinals, declaring they must be good to have won 106 games and lasted through such an amazing stretch drive. He had a word of commendation for Mort Cooper, the 22-game winner who [illegible] day against the Yanks, but he declined to be drawn into any prediction [illegible] the series outcome.

"We'll be in there fighting from the first pitch", McCarthy said. "That's all I care to say. I hope the best team wins and I hope it will be us".

World Series tension and excitement is nothing new to McCarthy. He's won six and has been on both sides of the fence, having piloted the 1929 Chicago Cubs, who lost four out of five to the Philadelphia Atheltics. When the Bronx Bombers smothered the Brooklyn Dodgers last year it was the seventh championship club managed by McCarthy—the sixth to a world's championship.

St. Louis Fans Furious

St. Louis fans loyal to the Cardinals are furious over their inability to get World Series tickets except through scalpers.

They are bombarding the newspapers with letters and telephone calls. Explaining the Cardinals' policy, Sam Breadon, president of the Club, said approximately 17,000 seats were available to the general public.

Breadon said more than enough applications were received the first day the sale opened to swamp workers. Names meant nothing, therefore, in the final selections. Clerks just grabbed handfuls of letters and filled the applications until all grandstand seats were gone.

"There are 22,879 seats in the grandstand and 3,168 in the boxes", Breadon explained. "Of this total, 2,000 go to baseball officials—Commissioner Landis, Club owners and members of the Baseball Writers' Association. Another 500 are used for the overflow press box. Others go to holders of season books.

"I sincerely regret this situation, but we couldn't help it. We were swamped", Breadon added.

Twenty-eight thousand pavilion seats at $3.45 each and 3,900 bleacher seats at $1.15 each went on sale at 7 a.m. today. Hundreds stood in line all night to buy them.

Scalpers are doing a land-office business with $5.75 grandstand seats bringing from $10 to $20 each. The demand exceeds the supply. It's the greatest thing for scalpers in fifteen years.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

IT HAPPENED AT THE TRAINING camp of a major league baseball club last spring.

Said the Gatekeeper (to the manager) "The umpire for today's game is at the gate with two friends. Shass I pass them in?"

Manager (gasping)—"An umpire with TWO friends? Sure!"

DID YOU KNOW—THE ST. Louis Cardinals is the youngest team ever to win the National League pennant?....The average age of the Cards' players is 25 and a fraction....The youngest player on the team is Howard Pollet, who was only 21 last June....The oldest is Jimmy Brown who was 30 last April 25th....They are really a team of youth and speed, but can such players of tender years hope to cope in baseball's classic against the power and experience of the Yankees..However, players around the National League circuit say St. Louis as a city does not rate a pennant as their attendance was under 5,000 a day as the courageous Cards were staging their drive for a pennant....Since Billy Southworth took over the reins of the Red Birds on June 14th, 1940, the Cardinals have won more games than the high and mighty Yanks... From June 19th, 1940 until the end of the current season the Cardinals have won 272 and lost 146 games; while over the same period the Yankees have won 266 and lost 149 games in the American League.... Both teams finished third in 1940, the Yanks won and the Cards finished second last year and this year the St. Louis squad won three more games than the Yankees....These figures are all very well, but can the Cardinals steal the Bronx Bombers' thunder in a series classic —we doubt it.....The feud between Deacon William McKechnie, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, and Larry MacPhail, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, rages anew.... MacPhail criticized McKechnie for not using Pitcher Johnny Vander-Meer against the Cardinals so McKechnie wired the Dodger boss as follows....Congratulations on your appointment as lieutenant colonel. Please accept this as my application to become your private orderly.

REMEMBER WHEN THE ALL-time major-league home run record of 59, set by Babe Ruth in 1921, was smashed by the Babe himself at New York eleven years ago today when he connected for his 60th dound tripper? From 1914 until his retirement early in 1935 Ruth hit 714 home runs.

FROM NOW UNTIL INTER-scholastic football opens local sport fans will have to take portions of professional wrestling for their sports diet. Skipper Frank Tunney will introduce four brand new faces from the Hume arena tonight when the Burns' brothers, Jake and George, will tangle with Walter Sirois and Jack Connelly respectively before the main scrap between Katan and McCready with a new referee tossed in for good measure. Promoter Tunney has additional new faces in his wrestling stable to present later in the season.

ALL BELATED OFFERS OF Uncle Mike Jacobs and his cohorts to contribute their services along with Conn and Louis fell on the deaf ears of U.S. War Secretary Stimson. The scrap is definitely off, which means Conn and Louis will not be heard from in a pugilistic way for the duration.

The hurried offer to fight for nothing didn't strengthen the position of Jacobs or the two fighters. If, as it is claimed, Louis was offered a tax fight and went ahead on that assumption a war department official spoke out of turn.The first tip that all was not as it should be came when Grantland Rice quit his post as head of the sports writers' committee.

The turn of events hasn't redounded much to the credit of Jacobs, though there is no reason to suspect that a character of his type will spend much time weeping into his handkerchief. The two fighters won't suffer. Most people with a knowledge of the workings of professional boxing know the fighter personally takes a small part in the arrangements for any fight. There are exceptions such as Tunney, but in the main they just do as they are told.

IT WAS TO BE OLD RED Ruffing and young Mort Cooper as opposing pitchers in the 1942 opening world series game today. Throughout the season Cooper has won 22 and lost 7 for the National League pennant winners, while Ruffing won fourteen and lost seven for the defending champions. Of Cooper's 22 victories, ten were of the shut out nature. Ruffing has undertaken the majority of Joe McCarthy's most important mound assignments having pitched and won the opener for the champions in their last four ball classics. Much depends on today's game simply because if Cooper can beat the Yankees today the Cardinals stand a good chance to win, but if Ruffing chalks up another series victory to his credit the Bronx Bombers should win in not more than six. And regardless it's the Yanks.

THIS AND THAT—BUFF HORton takes his Trenton R. C. A. F. senior "B" mushballers to Oshawa today for a third and final O. S. S. Picadilly Circus Flower Girls May Disappear

London, Sept. 30 (CP)—London's picturesque flower girls, whose main bastion is Picadilly Circus, may be forced from the capital scene by the restrictions of war.

Beginning Nov. 1 there will be no more shipping of flowers by rail.

The flower girls stand to lose their livelihood because, though still called girls, most of them are 60 or more and too old or otherwise unable to take new jobs.

Many have been selling flowers since the turn of the century, carrying on through the last war and braving some of the worst air attack periods of this conflict.

TURKEY SIGNS AGREEMENT

London, Sept. 30 (CP)—The Turkish government has signed a contract with the Krupp Munitions Works of Germany for the delivery of approximately $12,000,000 worth of armaments to Turkey in 1943, an Exchange Telegraph Dispatch from Ankara said today.

Under the terms of the agreement, Germany will receive quantities of Turkish chrome.

RELAX ARMISTICE CLAUSE

Moscow, Sept. 30 (AP)—Tass reported from Geneva today that Germany had agreed to relax the French armistice clause limiting the French army, to the extent of permitting the formation of three infantry divisions, two artillery regiments, a tank regiment and an air unit to be sent to stations in Tunisia and Algeria.

CHILDREN SHOW THE WAY

Albuquerque, N. M., Sept. 30—(AP)—Officials will have to scrap that plan to postpone the scrap salvage drive. They had decided to delay the start of the drive a week because it conflicted with the state fair. The children had another idea. They showed up with 1,730 pounds, one day's haul.

PUBLIC CONCERT SERIES CANCELLED

Detroit, Sept. 30—Dr. Fred T. Murphy, President of the Detroit Symphony Society, announced today that because of impeding gasoline rationing and a decline in season ticket sales the 1942-43 Public Concert Series has been cancelled. A program of sponsored radio broadcasts still is on schedule, however.

VISCOUNT BENNETT ON WAY TO TORONTO

Winnipeg, Sept. 30 — (CP) — Viscount Bennett, former Canadian Prime Minister, is en route to Toronto today. He left here last night after a 24-hour visit to Winnipeg.

AT THE BELLE

"The Magnificent Ambersons"

The graphic story of a young man who found his real self only after he had broken his mother's heart, wrecked the family fortunes and brought unhappiness to the girl who loved him is dramatically depicted in RKO Radio's "The Magnificent Ambersons" coming to the Belle Theatre.

Based on the Pulitzer prize-winning novel by Booth Tarkington, adapted, produced and directed by Orson Welles, the story covers the period from 1885 to 1913 during which Mid-west America was being changed from a rural to an industrial community by the advent of the automobile.

The six top roles, all of equal importance, are portrayed by Joseph Cotten, Tim Holt, Dolores Costello, Anne Baxter, Richard Bennett and Agnes Moorehead.

"The Falcon Takes Over"

Bringing a new heroine in the famous Falcon mystery adventures to the screen "The Falcon Takes Over" the second feature attraction, is hailed as one of the year's most gripping offerings, with an exceptionally suspenseful plot as its base, and highlighted with exquisite romance and comedy in contrast to its four murders.

Lynn Bari who appears opposite George Sanders (The Falcon) and James Gleason and Allen Jenkins have their usual roles of Inspector O'Hara and "Goldy" Locke. The plot is based upon the character created by Michael Arlen and a story by Raymond Chandler.

The Falcon clears up the mystery in suave style just in time to avoid the entangling feminine alliance. Miss Barri plays the newspaper girl and Helen Gilbert, an attractive blond menace, with Ward Bond as the giant Malloy, and Ed. Gargan, Anne Revere, Selmer Jackson, Hans Conreid, and Turban Bey in important supporting roles.

"T-Bone for Two", a funny Walt Disney Pluto color cartoon completes the program.

The Belle Theatre is warm and comfortable.

"This Above All", Leaving

Tyrone Power and Joan Fontaine are co-starred in the film version of Eric Knight's outstanding novel, "This Above All", the greatest love story of our generation, now on the Belle Theatre screen. The Belle Latest News from Home and Abroad, described by Lowell Thomas, and "All About Dogs", a comic color cartoon complete the program.

AT THE McCARTHY

AT THE McCARTHY

Universal's spectacular production "Drums Of The Congo" now on the McCarthy Theatre screen, will give you thrill after thrill. It's the most breath-taking adventure drama of the year, featuring a cast of thousands, headed by Ona Munson, Stuart Erwin, Peggy Moran, Don Terry and Richard Lane.

The second feature brings back to Belleville the entertainment favorites The Weaver Brothers and Elviry in their latest musical-comedy "The Old Homestead." It's their most laughable adventure and a picture which will steal into your heart. On Foto-Nite this week there are two offers, first $175,00 and second $15,00. Mrs. E. J. AT THE CAPITOL

"Romance on The Range"

Exciting entertainment is promised patrons of the Capitol Theatre when "Romance On the Range", the new Republic Western starring Roy Rogers, opens there next.

The picture boasts some of the most spectacular action ever to come to the screen, being crammed from beginning to end with hard-riding and furious fighting. It also boasts the tops in cast, for in addition to George "Gabby" Hayes, ranking comedian in all the Rogers westerns, the film presents such well-known performers as Linda Hayes, Sally Payne, Edward Pawley, Glenn Strange, Hal Taliaferro, and the popular songsters of the airwaves, the Sons of the Pioneers.

"Fast and Furious"

Murder mystery and glamour girls, sinister deeds in the dark, and spotlighted beauty in a great seaside beauty carnival mingle amid thrills, laughs and spectacle in "Fast and Furious" the added attraction in which Franchot Tone makes his return to the screen. Tone is teamed with vivacious Ann Sothern, for whom plaudits are still ringing for her work in "Maisie". Tone plays a business man cavoting amid bathing beauties while trying to solve a sinister plot in the background.

A Popeye cartoon and the thrilling serial "Spy Smasher" completes the bill.

APPOINTMENT

Appointment of Colonel Wilfred Mavor, M.C., of Ottawa, as deputy master-general of ordnance (B) in succession to Brigadier A. R. Macfarlane, D.S.O., is announced by Defence Minister Ralston. He has also been promoted to the rank of brigadier. Brig. Mavor has been director of ordnance services (technical stores), since Nov., 1941. He has an international reputation in industrial circles.

REMEMBER WITHOUT WANTING

by MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

CHAPTER SEVEN

Max Again

"I had a marvelous time over the week-end," Emily said Monday evening as she sat opposite Judith in the small dinette of the apartment and Fannie shuffled slowly between them. Emily's brown eyes fairly danced and her happy smile was perpetual. Her appetite scant, she merely nibbled at her food. "Tim and I want dancing Saturday night and then we took a long ride later. I've learned something, Judith. I've learned there's fear in love, the fear of loss. You can't see ahead and it scares you."

Judith wore a simple brown wool business frock. Her head was dark and shining in the candlelight. "But Tim loves you. I saw it in his face."

"I'm sure he does. He has said it so many time I mustn't doubt it. But I want to marry him, Judith. Seeing each other, dancing, having fun isn't enough. It's still a man's world, isn't it? You have to wait for them to ask you and if they never do. . . .You see, I'm terribly serious about this. I was just romantic about the others. Even if Tim would disappoint me, I'd still love him.

Was she just being romantic about Max? Judith wondered. But Max's personality had struck her heart like a blow and all at once she had wanted to be only what he wanted her to be.

After Fannie had brought in the coffee Judith said, and there was an appealing little-girl look of guilt in her eyes, "I haven't told you about Max Worthington." What could she say about Max? She thought, "I could explain Stephen Larrabee so well, but Max defies description. He isn't a type."

"Who is he?" Emily asked.

"I met him Saturday a week after Phyllis and Ames sailed. He'd met Bob Kennedy before. Max and I had dinner on Friday last and I'm to see him again tomorrow evening. He's a combination of so many things I can't explain. He seems to have seen everything and to know everything. He makes me feel terribly young." She looked at Emily steadily. "He's exciting, but not in the way Tim is exciting. Max has lived violently, he said, and yet he's gentle and tender and thoughtful."

"I couldn't cope with a man like that."

"Perhaps I can't. I don't know enough."

"You seem more than usually interested."

"She nodded. I am. I'm very serious about this, too."

Emily was sewing and Judith reading when the telephone in the bedroom rang.

"Maybe it's for you," Emily said.

Max? Judith tried to be casual about putting the book aside and leaving the living-room.

"Judith?" Max asked.

"Yes." That voice, she thought, robs me of strength and resistance. I grovel and hate myself, but I can't help it.

"I am sitting in this hideous hotel room wishing there was a picture of you here to cheer me. Do you suppose you could manage to have some new ones taken? No old ones, mind you. I want one A. M.-after Max."

"Is there any particular pose you prefer?"

He laughed. "I remember your left profile because you were sitting in the car the way. That, however, isn't all I remember. I remember everything. Did you have a pleasant week-end at home?'

"All my week-ends at home are pleasant. And yours?"

"Hectic. They usually are. I don't know why I let myself be dragged to places that bore me with people who are so inferior to you that the comparison is painful. You haven't said anything that matters. You know what I want you to say."

"No. Max, I don't."

"Say, 'I love you very much' . . . ."

He laughed. You won't? I'll make you say it tomorrow evening at 7.30. Good night, my darling."

The lamps were dim gold and the apartment seemed to be in a state of waiting as tense as she. That he was late was forgiven with tender amusement. She was grateful that Emily was out. But she could not think. All her forces had joined into the common one of eager waiting.

When, finally, she opened the door, he stood there, smiling, a smile that made her weak and wordless. Then the door closed and the small foyer received them. Max drew her close, his hands as demanding as his lips that kissed hers.

"Will you say it now, Judith?"

"It's past 7.30."

"You're a vain, obstinate darling."

"I love you very much, Max."

"And I love you very much." He held her off and looked at her, his eyes narrowing. "And ten years from now you'll still be to me what you are tonight. We'll still be-us. I've ruined your hair, but hair like yours was meant to be ruined. Are you happy?"

"Very. But it's a new kind of happiness for me that eliminates the other things I thought made me happy."

"You're so small and young to have so many big ideas."

"Not now. Not this minute. ."

His second kiss was neither fierce nor demanding, but very gentle. "Get your silly hat, darling."

Max took her to a place where the lights were dim gold—a place she would never forget. Whenever she heard its name in years to come it would always recall this night.

Potted palms, murals depicting the scenes on southern beaches, and the men in the orchestra in white, transported them to the tropics.

Max looked at her across the table. "If you think I spend my evenings in places like this, you're sadly mistaken. I've never been here before."

"Bob Kennedy said that you came on the ship at the Canal Zone when he met you. I asked him about you."

"I'd been in South America on a job that was chiefly all work and little play. Now I'm in the New York office."

She was afraid to ask, "Permanently?" Of course he was permanently in New York. Of course.

She did not know why it had not occurred to her before to ask, "Are you married? Have you ever been married?"

He answered slowly as though he were answering the question of an inquisitive child. "No. I was very nearly once, but that was a long time ago. She died."

"I'm sorry."

"But if she had lived, a man I know, slightly, sitting behind you, would not be thinking what a handsome couple we are that probably we've been lovers for a long time. We should have been. I'm very crazy about you, Judith. You know it, don't you? I want to give you what, heretofore, I've always taken. Let's dance so that I can put my arms around you."

No thoughts, only feelings mounting and receding, and the fear that was in love, the fear of loss, and the instinct to keep and possess. The songs they played that night became their songs never to be thrown into discard when newer ones replaced them. And dancing became not the mere keeping in step to music and idle chatter, but Max's embrace, the living, breathing closeness of him.

His smile was to make her mood lighter. "We're naturals, darling. Your head reaches my shoulder exactly where it should and you have the great gift of silence when silence is needed."

She looked up, smiling. "I believe he likes me."

Max laughed, low. "It's something like that that he's trying desperately to convey."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was shaving his face and I was combing my hair, and pop said, For Peet sake how long does it take you to comb your hair? You were at it when I started to shave and I'm half shaved and you're still at it.

Well G wizzickers, pop, I'm trying to get a perfect part in it, I said. I've done it over eleven times now, and I got it almost perfect about 3 times, but not exactly quite, I said, and pop said, Well, it's true that the most harmonious life estretically speaking, is the one that's composed of the most perfect parts, but unfortunateely the comparative shortness of the human life span imposes a limitation on the perfecting of the individual details. Do you follow me? he said.

Kind of, I said, and pop said, Too much ambition in any one direction tends to develop a one sided personality. It happened in the case of the Scrawley twins, he said.

Who were they, pop? I said, and he said, They were Lennie and Hennie Scrawley were twins who looked so exactly alike that they spent their whole time trying to actually be exactly alike. Lennie was left handed, so Hennie practiced and practiced until he became left handed too. Hennie stuttered a little wren he talked, so Lennie worked and worked until he couldn't talk without a stutter either. It took them years and years, but finally there wasn't a living sole who could tell Lennie from Hennie, or vice virtue, pop said.

Well G, that sounds great, I said, and pop said, You haven't heard the sad part. The sad part is that this one sided interest in life made them both so thoroughly untalented and uninformed and uninteresting that after all that work nobody even tried to tell them apart because it just didn't seem to be worth the effort. And now leave your hair the way it is, no matter how it is, before you start getting like a Scrawley twin, he said.

The result being I went down to breakfast with such a bum part in my hair ma made me do it over before I went to school.

Home of Hundred Enemy Aliens In Rochester Raided

Rochester, N.Y., Sept. 29 (AP)—Kenneth M. Piper of the Federal Bureau of Investigation reported today homes of more than 100 enemy aliens in Rochester and vicinity were raided during the night resulting in the seizure of a "considerable quantity" of contraband articles.

Piper who termed the raid "the biggest in Western New York since the outbreak of the war", said 20 persons had been ordered to report for further questioning.

Piper said contraband articles seized included cameras, radios, guns, ammunition, swords and binoculars.

IN MEMORIAM

RUSHLOW — In loving memory of our dear daughter, Roseleen Rushlow who died September 30, 1941.

We are sad within our memory,
Lonely are our hearts today;
For the one we loved so dearly
Has forever been called away.

We think of her in silence,
No eye can see us weep;
But many silent tears are shed
When others are asleep.

RUSHLOW — In memory of a dear daughter, Roseleen, who passed away September 30, 1941.

You oftimes said we'd miss you,
Your words have proven true.
We lost the best and dearest pal,
Dear Rose, when we lost you.

—Ever remembered by Mother and family. S30

RUSHLOW — In loving memory of a dear sister, Mrs. Rose Rushlow, who passed away September 30th., 1941.

When shades of night are falling,
And we are all alone;
There always comes a longing
If you could just come home.

So suddenly you were taken —
The blow was hard to bear,
But still we know you're sleeping
In God's own loving care.

—Always remembered by Sister Marguerite and family. S30

RUSHLOW — In loving memory of a dear sister, Mrs. Roseleen Rushlow, who passed away September 30th., 1941.

Far and oft our thoughts do wander
To a grave not far away,
Where they laid our darling sister
Just a year ago today.

POLICE FIND 3 BAGS OF GRAIN ON STREET

Mystery surrounds the finding of three bags of grain on North Front Street here on Tuesday night. The grain, weighing about three hundredweight in all, was found lying on the street pavement by Constables Arnott and Wright, who were patrolling that part of the city shortly before midnight Tuesday. The finding of the three bags of grain at such a late hour somewhat puzzled police, as the hour was long after the closing of feed stores or grist mills. The grain is being held at the police station pending reports of such a quantity of fodder being reported missing.

CARDINAL FANS FILL PARK EARLY

Team Receives Standing Ovation When They Take Batting Drill

Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, Sept. 30 (AP)—Red-hot Cardinal fans, many of whom had waited in line all night, swarmed into the park and quickly filled every available unreserved seat several hours before the Yankees and the Cards were scheduled to clash in the opening World Series game at 2:30 p.m. E.D.T. today.

Several thousand paid their money for standing room in the lower section of the grandstand, but still many were left to mill around on the narrow streets outside the field. St. Louis finally had put on its World Series clothes and there was excitement in the air.

A band seated itself behind home plate and began whipping up a series of popular tunes to keep the early comers entertained.

The Cards received a standing ovation when they began strolling out from their dugout at 11 a.m., led by Coach Buzzy Wares. The batting cage was wheeled in behind the plate and the Red Birds immediately began their batting drill.

For the first time in years, Al Schacht, baseball's favorite clown, was not on hand to entertain the customers with his antics.

Looking their usual calm and confident selves, the Yanks finally ambled across the field to their dugout just as the noon whistles were tooting.

The Yanks in their gray road uniforms looked much bigger men than their youthful series opponents and the crowd greeted them with a sort of silent awe. There scarcely was a peep from the bleachers as the World Champions began warming up.

Artillery Regt. Discusses Training At Napanee

Discussion of a special syllabus of training for special courses which will get under way immediately featured a meeting of the 44th Field Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery, Reserve Army, at the Napanee Armouries Tuesday night.

Colonel Mooney, Gananoque, officer commanding the regiment, presided at the meeting which was attended by officers commanding the Kingston-Gananoque, Napanee and Belleville batteries, and their officer personnel.

Courses will start for officers and non-commissioned officers of the regiment in the various armories of the batteries in the near future. Special instructors from the Administration and Training Staff will give lectures at least two nights weekly. Examinations will be written on or about Dec. 13th.

Plans for a regimental dinner to be held in Napanee for officers and their ladies were made, the date to be announced later.

Representing the 34th Battery from Belleville were Captain Steve Sword, officer commanding, Lieut. G. H. Carver and 2nd Lieutenants J. Andrews, R. D. Arnott and H. Keller.

FULL BLACKOUT PART OF S. SHORE OF ST. LAWRENCE

Effective From L'Isle Verte, Along Gaspe, Around Chaleur Bay to Douglastown

5 MILES INLAND

Montreal, Sept. 30 (CP)—A complete blackout of the south shore of the St. Lawrence will go into effect "immediately," it was announced today by Provincial Civilian Protection Committee heads.

The blackout will be effective from L'Isle Verte, 40 miles up-river from Rimouski, down through the entire coastline of the Gaspe Peninsula bordering on the St. Lawrence, and around the bay Chaleur shore as far as Douglastown.

The darkened area will extend inland for five miles.

The announcement said the blackout had been ordered "to guard against the possibility of bombardment by enemy submarines."

Maj. Gladstone Murray Of CBC Resigns Post Says Ottawa Paper

Ottawa, Sept. 30. (CP) — The Ottawa Citizen said in a newspage story today that Maj. W. E. Gladstone Murray, general manager of the Canadian Broadcasting corporation, "has tendered his resignation to the government".

The newspaper said it was given this information "by a high authority on Parliament Hill".

The story added Maj. Murray himself would not confirm the report, saying in response to an inquiry: "This is the first I have heard of it".

The report came a short time after the Board of the Governors of the CBC had considered the question of high executives of the organization. It was understood that the Governors, following their meeting of Monday, had recommended a new scale of salaries to the government.

Under this scale, Maj. Gladstone Murray would receive $12,000, with no living allowance, in a new post as director-general of broadcasting. His present salary is $13,000 with $3,000 living allowance.

Manager to Get $11,000

Rev. James Thomson of Saskatoon, whose appointment to be general manager, effective Nov. 2, has been recommended to the government, would receive the same salary he received as head of the University of Saskatchewan, plus a living allowance. That would make his income from the CBC around $11,000.

It was understood Dr. Auguste Frigon, assistant general manager, would get $12,000, the same as at present. But a living allowance of $3,000 would be discontinued.

The Board of Governors reconsidered the question of salaries after the government referred back an earlier recommendation of the Board, presumably on the ground that the salaries proposed were too high.

Previous salary recommendations, it was learned, were for a salary of $15,000 for Dr. Thomson, $14,900 for Dr. Frigon, and $14,000 without living allowance for Maj. Murray.

Believe German Ship Set Afire

Folkestone, England, Sept. 30—(CP)— A huge column of smoke surged hundreds of feet into the air today near Boulogne, leading observers on this English south coast to believe that the R.A.F. had set a Nazi ship afire off the French shore.

In the clear autumn morning, watchers on the cliffs saw British fighters hovering over the smoke area which at times obscured buildings on the French shore front.

British sources said three German planes were shot down by the R.A.F. during the morning.

British Town Machine-Gunned

London, Sept. 30 —(CP)— An East Anglian town was machine-gunned today by a German raider which attacked out of the clouds. Other scattered raiders were heard from time to time during the morning over the south coast.

22 Known Dead

London, Sept. 30 —(CP)—Twenty boys and two teachers including Charlotte Marshall, 27-year-old headmistress, were known dead and rescue workers toiled on today in the belief others might be buried in the debris of a boys' school in southern England which was wrecked yesterday by a heavy German bomb.

Eighteen other boys are reported missing.

The blast injured 34 boys. The victims were among about 70 students doing arithmetic and composition work in the wood and brick building when the Nazi plane attacked.

Boys who escaped told police the bomb which destroyed the school fell into the fireplace and did not explode immediately. Miss Marshall shouted to the boys to run. Those who did so escaped, but the teacher stayed behind.

British Bomb Suda Bay

Rome, (From Italian Broadcasts), Sept. 30 —(AP)— British planes have bombed Suda Bay and Canea in new raids on the island of Crete, the Italian High Command said today.

WALL STREET

New York, Sept. 30. (AP) — Stocks gave up a little ground today as the market awaited final action of Congress on the Administration's Anti-Inflation Bill.

For a time in the early proceedings a fair number of leaders held small gains but many of these were erased before the fourth hour by light selling. A few specialties were in demand at higher prices.

Santa Fe, which was buoyant yesterday, slipped back with industrials. Other rails were lower as a rule.

A bit soft most of the time were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Westinghouse, Dow Chemical and Homestake Mining.

Laclede Gas Pfd. pushed up about five points at the best while the Common backed off a point or so. Receiving support were American Airlines and Goodyear.

Bonds and Commodities were steady.

Canadian stocks were weak. McIntyre Mines slumped 2 1-4 points, Distillers Seagram 5-8, Dome Mines, Canadian Pacific, and Lake Shore 1-8 each.

BULL FLOWN TO ALASKA

Anchorage, Alaska, Sept. 300 —(AP)— Three years ago an airplane carried a cow to McGrath, deep in Alaska's interior. It was ordered by Dave Clough, a roadhouse operator. Yesterday an airplane left for the same address with a male of the species.

RUSSIANS WRECK CHERISHED AIMS OF HITLER IN 1942

Nazis Fail to Achieve Victory Because of Stout Russian Resistance

NAZIS LIMIT AIMS

By NOLAND NORGAARD
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

London, Sept. 30 (AP)—As September ends confidence rose in both Russian and British quarters today that the sturdy Red army resistance at Stalingrad and the Caucasus has wrecked Hitler's two most cherished aims of 1942—a new onslaught on Moscow and the conquest of Russia's rich Tiflis-Baku oil region.

The Russian attitude was demonstrated in "Soviet War News", published by the Russian Embassy in London, which noted that the Germans hurled 100 tank and infantry divisions against the southern front about 100 days ago.

"Having lost several dozen picked divisions, having squandered several thousand tanks and planes and having strewn every captured mile with their own dead, the Germans have failed to achieve victory," it said.

The organ asserted that Hitler, by concentrating the greater part of his war equipment, had hoped "within two or three weeks" to seize the whole northern Caucasus and "set up a front stretching from Stalingrad along the Volga and Caspian Sea."

Achievement of this aim, the publication pointed out, would have released troops for other tasks. And, it added, "the Nazis have not yet abandoned their hope of organizing a new offensive against Moscow."

See Nazis Abandon Idea of Caucasus Break

Competent British observers regarded the latest German manoeuvres as a sign that the Nazis have been compelled to abandon any idea of breaking through the Caucasus mountains and now are striving for the more limited objective of the Grozny oil fields.

One well-posted source, who may not be mentioned by name, said the Germans were trying to work their way up the Terek River toward Ordzhonikidze. (This would be a back-tracking move from the Mozdok area following a loop of the Terek.)

This source said the shift in plan came after the Nazis had failed to advance southward or eastward from Mozdok.

"By advancing up the Terek River," he said, "the Germans could reach the vital Ossetian Pass and, through it, the Georgian Pass which leads to Tiflis.

"But these passes would be impracticable for any large body of troops after mid-October.

"It seems more likely, therefore, that the German idea is to try to make headway along a loop line of the railway which runs from the upper Terek through Beslan to Grozny and, at the same time, renew their effort to advance along the direct Mozdok-Grozny line."

(Reports from Russia today said the snow line in the high Caucasus ranges was moving further down the mountain sides, foreshadowing the dangers and difficulties of any large-scale winter mountain operation.)

Summing up the past month's Caucasus fighting, this British informant said that the progress of the Nazis, among whom were the crack 1st armored army, "can hardly come up to the expectations of the high command."

Obituary

ABRAHAM LUTHER DAFOE

The funeral of the late Abraham Luther Dafoe took place from the Martin Funeral Home on Tuesday afternoon with Rev. B. Bullock, Bethel Hall, conducting the service. During the service Mrs. Riley sang "Good Night and Good Morning" accompanied by the staff organist Prof. E. Wheatley. The committal service at Foxboro cemetery was conducted by Rev. Bullock, assisted by Rev. Kenneth Stewart of West Huntingdon.

The bearers were Thomas Elliott, Elija Sarles, Clayton Hagerman, Claude Thompson, J. L. Gerow and Morley Dempsey.

SAYS CAR MUST HAVE RUN OVER FOOT WHILE HE SLEPT

Kansas City, Sept. 30 —(AP)— Thomas Smith, 55, sat on a downtown curb to rest—and fell asleep. Awakened by a sharp pain in his foot, he was taken to hospital where examination revealed a fractured bone. "I guess a car must have run over me," he speculated.

Allan Mills Friends Pay Tribute To Memory of Sgt.-Pilot A. Rowe

Allan Mills — Stanwood United Church was unable to accommodate the huge gathering on hand to pay tribute to a gallant R.C.A.F. lad who gave all. Bathed in the bright sunshine and amid a profusion of the seasonal glories of a Canadian autumn afternoon, Stanwood United Church on Sunday last was the scene of a most impressive memorial service for one of the community's noblest sons, Sergt.-Pilot Arthur Milton Rowe, who left his native soil to offer his all on behalf of his country in the R.C.A.F. Sergt.-Pilot Rowe, a lad of unusual popularity, lost his life in Egypt, three weeks ago, at the age of 24.

A remarkable tribute to this valiant young airman in itself was the fact that so many attended the service and that a number were unable to gain entrance to the country church. Relatives, friends and soldiers gathered from far and near at the picturesque little place to honor the memory of a youth of ambition and courage.

LAC. Russel Rowe, R.C.A.F., of St. Eugene, Quebec, was present and occupied on honored position along with his parents and other members of the immediate family. The setting for the service in the interior of the church included at the front of a great Union Jack on which stood a large colored portrait of the late Art Rowe. A full choir was on hand, with Mrs. P. M. Rutherford at the organ, to render sacred selections. The altar decorations were artistically arranged by the Canadian Legion, Branch No. 103, Campbellford, Major J. M. Bygott acting as representative of that body at the memorable event.

The speakers for the occasion, Rev. J. R. Holden and Rev. M. L. Hinton, of Springbrook, and Colborne, respectively, both gave splendid and informal talks on the many noble qualities of Sergt.-Pilot Rowe. Mr. Hinton, who had left the Stanwood charge some years ago, remembered well the boyhood days of Sergt.-Pilot Rowe, and his verbal tribute glowed with praise for the departed young man.

Mr. Ed. Anderson offered a vocal solo, "Some Day We'll Understand." Many a tear-dimmed eye and bared head bore silent tribute as Cornetist Walter Lowe sounded "Last Post" and "Reveille" which re-echoed in plaintive note a last earthly farewell throughout the shaded solitudes of the tranquil countryside and little school yard hard by where, amid the beauties of nature, the late Art Rowe had spent his happy boyhood days in peace and contentment with those who were closest to him during his fleeting years of life.

Probably Second Front Nearer Than Suspected

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

If the Churchill ban on the second-front speculation has any meaning at all for German ears it must be that the event itself is closer than Berlin might otherwise have deemed possible. And that, possibly, is exactly the effect Mr. Churchill aimed at. He has been an apt pupil in the school of Nazi war-of-nerves technique.

If the Churchill comment is taken literally, it could not be aimed at the recent remarks of Wendell L. Willkie or General Wavell. Neither dealt at all in the when or where or how. Nor could reiterated British broadcasts warning French nationals in Nazi-occupied regions across the Channel that an Allied offensive was "in the making" give the Germans much information they did not already have.

Big Force Mustering

Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt have both said the same thing repeatedly. They have been anxious for the foe as well as the home folks to know that a joint force geared and trained for attack is mustering in the British Isles.

And now comes convincing evidence that the knowledge, far from helping Nazi strategists fathom its place or timing, is harassing German nerves. It prompted the Berlin assertion that American troopships had been sunk in the Atlantic. London now has dismissed that with the words, "quite untrue".

These Nazi sea success claims, whether blown up as in the case of Arctic convoy happenings or made-in-Berlin out of whole cloth like the American troopship sinking fake, are strong evidence of increasing public uneasiness over the war outlook in Germany. Their purpose must be to bolster German nerves against second-front apprehensions or to obscure the clear evidence that Hitler's "victory" campaign in Russia is perilously close to bogging down for another winter.

Renewed reports from many European sources of shake-ups in the Nazi High Command both in the south, where Stalingrad still balks its foes, and in the north before Leningrad sound increasingly credible. Knowledge of any such purge of generals as is indicated cannot be concealed from the German people. It would not ease the tension with which they must await another war winter, possibly a winter of two-front war.

Winter of Dread

Certainly it will be a winter of dread for German cities. Its long nights offer Anglo-American air forces opportunities to repay in kind what Britain suffered in past winters. There is no slightest indication that German nerves are approaching a breaking stage; but they are fraying. The propaganda whoopla made over arrival of one Japanese submarine at a Nazi-controlled European port is another indication of that.

The reason for a High Command reshuffling by Hitler in Southeastern Russia is obvious. He must have Stalingrad for prestige reasons now, even if its strategic values, as General Wavell pointed out, are all but lost due to the delay and approaching winter.

The reported shift in command before Leningrad is less easy to understand. London speculation runs to the notion that a new German effort to take that Baltic bastion of the Russian line may be in the making. There have been whispers of that elsewhere, but Finnish insistence that she is fighting a sort of status quo war now raises some doubt and the approach of winter also makes it unlikely.

Landlords Must Supply Information to Lessees And to Rentals Office

It is now possible for every person renting any type of accommodation for one month or more to find out the maximum rental and what services are provided by the landlord.

Under Board Order 108, since April 30th, 1942, the landlord must give the tenant a signed statement on a form provided by the rentals administration and known as R. C. 40 and forward a copy to the nearest regional rentals office within ten days whenever a new lease or a renewal of a lease for any commercial or housing accommodation is made involving a change in tenant, a change in rental, a change in the services or accommodation supplied by the landlord or for premises which have been untenanted for some time.

D. H. Marshall, Local Representative of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, points out that the form must be filled in whether the lease is written or oral. But it is not required from landlords of boarding or lodging houses where there are three or more guests in addition to the members of the operator's family or by landlords renting for less than one month. Special provision is made for them under another section of Order 108.

This form lists not only the maximum rental on the basic date but also gives a statement of services which were supplied at that time and those being given under the lease.

In this way the public is given protection against an illegal advance in rent by reason of a cut in the services provided.

Forms may be secured from the regional rentals office or from any regional or sub-regional office of the Board.

COURT BEGINS SITTINGS

Toronto, Sept. 29. (CP)—A special Board of Appeal set up to hear the cases of Tim Buck, general secretary of the Communist Party in Canada, and fifteen other prominent Canadian Communists began sittings here today. Buck and the others surrendered to the authorities last Friday after being sought for some time as members of an illegal organization.
